REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

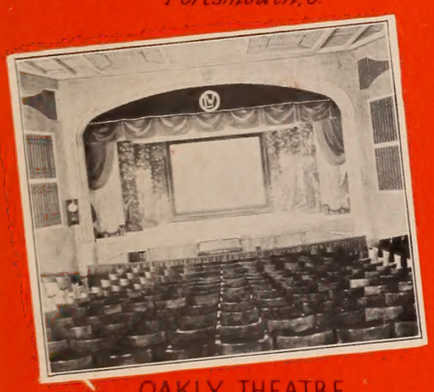
MAKES MONEY FOR SMALL-UNIT THEATRES

COLUMBIA THEATRE
Portsmouth, O.

STRAND THEATRE
Delaware, Ohio

THE outstanding leadership of the Mighty Wurlitzer Unit Organ among the fine theatres of the United States is everywhere conceded. Wurlitzer prestige now extends to all parts of the civilized world.

The Wurlitzer is built in various sizes but only one standard—the highest known—and is as outstanding a feature and box office attraction in small-unit theatres as the great Wurlitzers in the largest metropolitan theatres. As a matter of fact, the Wurlitzer in the small-unit house is such a big thing proportionately that it is actually a sensation, for it is the unusual and extraordinary that attracts at the box office.



Full particulars upon application at any of the thirty-three Wurlitzer branches from coast to coast.

THE comedy on your program ought to entertain your patrons, of course; it ought to make them laugh; it ought to put them in a good humor to enjoy the rest of the show.

The comedy ought to do all these things. But it should do more than these. It should attract patrons to the box-office and make money for you.

It WILL do this for you if you choose your comedy wisely. Few feature stars are better known than LARRY SEMON. And only the best of features are better box-office drawing cards than

Free Lighting Service for Theatres

Save 15% on Your Lamp Costs

A new $75 contract has been prepared that meets the needs of motion picture houses. It makes available a larger discount on Edison MAZDA lamps than would be otherwise obtainable.

Buying lamps on this contract not only saves you 15% but it also insures a constant supply of reliable lamps.

This contract can be made through any motion picture supply dealer selling Edison MAZDA lamps.

Light skillfully used adds to the attractiveness of any theatre. Experts can make light as flexible as music. They know how to fit light to a theatre as music is fitted to a play. They know the possibilities of light for beauty, for comfort and for effective display.

Many of the finest theatres in the country owe the effectiveness of their lighting to the skill of our lighting engineers. Now you can ask the advice of these same engineers without cost. Your theatre may be large or small, it makes no difference. Our staff of experts is at the service of everyone.

Put these men to work for you at once. They know all types of fixtures, and all kinds of lighting methods. They will plan your lighting to meet the special requirements of your theatre. They will advise you as to what sizes and types of lamps to use to get maximum lighting efficiency, and their advice will entail no obligation. Send for our booklet on theatre lighting. They are full of new ideas and suggestions, then at your request we will have a representative look over your present lighting and make recommendations for improving it.

FIFTY-FOUR FROM UNIVERSAL FOR the year 1925-26 on Universal's Second White List!

EXHIBITORS, I KNOW, WILL GREET THIS WITH UNUSUAL APPLAUSE and appreciation.

IT IS IN ANSWER TO THEIR REQUESTS, WHICH HAVE LITERALLY bombarded me, for more and more features for next year from Universal.

IT PROVES TO ME THAT THE FIRST WHITE LIST MADE GOOD IN performance on all its promises.

NOW THE SECOND WHITE LIST INSURES EXHIBITORS A GREATER amount of White Pictures for next year—the kind that lift mortgages off theatres.

IT GUARANTEES EXHIBITORS THE SAME WHITE TREATMENT AND white contracts that made dealing with Universal a pleasure. Everything above board—nothing up anybody's sleeve.

YOU WILL FIND 30 JEWELS AND 24 BLUE STREAK WESTERNS LISTED on the following pages. I won't try to tell you here about these pictures. I have not allowed my advertising director to try to sell you with copy. You will find only facts (and then more facts) listed about each of them.

YOU'LL REALIZE AFTER READING THAT THERE ARE SPLENDID titles—box-office titles—stars with drawing power and directors with records of money making pictures in the Second White List.

BEHIND THIS SECOND WHITE LIST, UNIVERSAL WILL LAUNCH A tremendous advertising campaign—the greatest and widest-spread ever attempted by this company.

YOU WANTED MORE PICTURES—I'VE GIVEN THEM TO YOU. You've praised the principles upon which we built the First White List and I've given you a Second White List.

The Sign of the best Serials

Produced and Released by Universal

1. PERILS OF THE PRIMITIVE
featuring BONOMO
with MARGUERITE QUIMBY

This is a story based on "Swiss Family Robinson." Mr. Laemmle is more enthusiastic about this serial than any serial released in many a year. There isn't a child living that can read that hasn't read this book. It's an ideal story for Bonomo, as it combines plenty of feats of strength with stirring adventures with wild animals. Directed by Francis Ford.

2. ACE OF SPADES
WILLIAM DESMOND
with MARY McALLISTER

You know what's happened with THE RIDDLE RIDER with William Desmond. This is proving to be one of the most successful serials released since Eddie Polo's. William Desmond is the serial star today. He stands alone! THE ACE OF SPADES is another fast moving Western picture, laid in Oklahoma during the last big "land rush." The coast reports the first episode is a knockout. Directed by Henry McRae.

3. THE SCARLET STREAK
featuring BONOMO

Following "The Ace of Spades" comes THE SCARLET STREAK which is Bonomo's second serial of our next year's schedule. This is a story based on the "death ray" which has consumed pages of space in the papers throughout the world. This will be a big production as we plan on making it very high class, and will probably be the most expensive serial made during the year.

4. THE WINKING IDOL

Our fourth serial is THE WINKING IDOL, stirring Western dramas of the Aztec country written by Charles Van Loan, a famous author. The cast for this picture has not been settled as yet, but will likely include William Desmond, our Western "ace."

5. THE PHANTOM ISLAND

From the stirring novel of adventure and mystery by Frank R. Adams. With a great cast, a famous director and a tremendously thrilling story, it is certain to be a tremendous asset at all box offices.

6. STRINGS OF STEEL

STRINGS OF STEEL is by Phillip Dutton Hurn and Oscar Lund, a romance of the development of the telephone. The coast is extremely enthusiastic about this story and say that it will make one of the best serials we have ever released.

You'll say it again and again—UNIVERSAL Has the Serials

The first few comedies by Puffy are a whale of a success. He's a real, joyous, compelling merry-maker, and it won't be long before he'll have one of the largest followings of any comedian in the country. His work merits our highest enthusiasm.

ARTHUR LAKE

He made a big success in "Sweet Sixteen Comedies," and every thing he has done is eagerly awaited by a faithful following. This series gives him remarkable opportunities to catch the elusive laugh and bring home the bacon.

A new star, as yet unannounced, will complete this series. Several prominent stars are under consideration, and a selection will soon be made. The result will make every exhibitor happy.

Trail Blazers!

Warner Bros. have blazed the trail of motion picture progress with new ideas and new accomplishments which have carried the industry to new and greater successes.

You remember "My Four Years in Germany"—"School Days"—"Why Girls Leave Home"—"Main Street"—"Brass"—"Where the North Begins"—"Tiger Rose"—"Beau Brummel"—Warner Pictures which gripped the public from coast to coast and filled your theatres.

It was Warner Bros. who first recognized the genius of the European master of screencraft, Ernst Lubitsch, and through him brought a new technique to the American screen. It was Warner Bros. who secured the association of David Belasco in the filming of his dramatic masterpieces. It was Warner Bros. who first discovered in best-selling books a new source of unsurpassed screen material. And Warner Bros. have always blazed the way in the aggressive exploitation of motion pictures.

These achievements are a matter of screen history and show that Warner Bros. have been the real pioneers in motion picture progress.

With ample finances, Warner Bros. today are able to carry through a pre-arranged production schedule of a magnitude heretofore impossible. The 1925-26 Warner program is by far the biggest in Warner history. It will set new standards of screen achievement—new records of box office successes.

Don't be in a hurry to make your bookings. Bigger and better things are coming—FORTY WARNER Classics—40 Winners. Wait for the winners!

The audience not only laughed until the tears came but they roared until they coughed.
F. W. Mordaunt Hall in "The New York Times"——

"Shrieks of delighted laughter greeted Larry Semon's "Wizard of Oz". B. S. Moss deserves thanks for bringing "The Wizard of Oz" to the Colony. If you have no youngsters of your own, borrow one for "The Wizard of Oz"
Louella Parsons in "The New York American".——

———and the kiddies were not the only ones who enjoyed it, either. Grown ups all around me guffawed all through the picture and I joined them whole heartedly. There's a bona fide laugh in nearly every scene and most of them are of the howl variety. "The Wizard of Oz" which is put out as a Chadwick picture is one of the best Comedies seen on Broadway in along time. You can't afford to miss this picture.
George Gerhard in "The N. Y. Evening World".——

"The Wizard of Oz" whizzes in enchanting fashion. They shrieked uproariously at this speedy version of Frank Baums quaint fantasy. We enjoyed this picture—and then some. It's different. For clean cut, novel, splendid entertainment don't miss Larry Semon in "The Wizard of Oz.
Dorothy Herzog in "The Daily Mirror" N. Y.——

Of one thing there can be little question, that is the popular appeal of the picture . The audience at the Colony enjoyed the antics of the Scarecrow and Tin Woodman loudly and emphatically.

It's good fun, well produced, and one is given all the thrills of a cyclone, ferocious lions and underground caverns. Grown ups in the audience howled just as much as the children.

Chain Stores and Chain Theatres

THERE'S an interesting article on chain stores in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post —interesting because that development has a lot in common, apparently, with our chain theatre situation.

Here are some figures: "In 1923 these chain stores did eight per cent of the retail business of the United States, and they are growing furiously. The largest has 10,000 stores and has not crossed the Mississippi. It sold $350,000,000 worth of groceries last year" (nearly as much as the total sale of motion picture theatre admissions in the United States). "The greatest of the five and ten cent chains sold some $218,000,000 worth of goods in 1300 stores. One man who was running a general store in Kemmerer, Wyoming, in 1902, now has a string of 500 general stores doing a total business of some $75,000,000. A drug store chain has 300 stores in the United States and 700 in Great Britain. A tobacco chain operates 1200 stores and 1300 agencies in this country, and several hundred in Canada. There are restaurant chains, optical, hat, shoe and shoe repair chains, candy, florist, barber shop, orange drink, haberdashery, bakery and hotel chains, etc., etc."

The writer speaks of the real estate end of these group stores. The holdings are "enormous." Some make more money in real estate than over the counter. Huge capital and much shrewdness are needed, in this connection. Another parallel with the chain theatre of today, which is so largely a real estate matter.

Referring to manufacturer-owned stores (like our producer-owned theatres), the writer says: "As early as the sixties manufacturers seeking better and more economical distribution began to sell their products more or less exclusively through their own retail stores. A sewing-machine company, with 6000 branches scattered over the world, and a firm of makers of men's clothing, are examples of these manufacturers' chains, but they are tending to decrease."

And now, what are the other stores—the department stores and independent retailers—doing to protect themselves against the chain store aggression?

They are mobilizing, for one thing, especially the department stores; and here we have the parallel of our booking combines. Eighteen large department stores, from Seattle to Boston, and doing an aggregate annual business of $200,000,000, have organized a central buying office and research bureau in New York, with sample rooms and expert buying staff. In theory, says the writer, the association should buy on even terms with the chain store; "in practice it has not worked out so well."

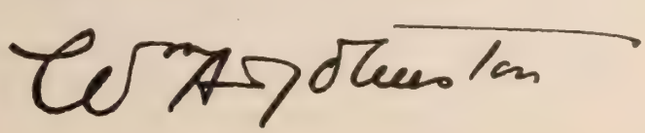
But what the independent retailer is doing interests us most. How does he hold his own—if he does —without association of any kind?



He, too, is pooling with other independent stores in the large centres, in some places with considerable success. But, mainly, and in all the smaller cities and towns, he is holding his own through his personality—so big a factor in the neighborhoods, and through giving better service to his customers.

And it seems to me that here is the answer for every independent exhibitor today. The man who is up on his toes, who gives the show, who gives the service, who counts in his community, who makes friends, who looks everlastingly after his patrons—can hold his own against any group combination.

Summing up, on how each community sticks to its own people and its own interests, the writer says: "And so with the chain stores, there's a limit to their usefulness, a point of diminishing return, and the enterprise of the independent retailer can pretty well fix that limit.

"The retailer who is worth his salt and the business worth saving will survive all the thousand-legged monsters that New York can hatch, just as long as noses come in assorted shapes and sizes, and some of us like corned beef and cabbage and others do not. Whether he is a hatter, a confectioner, a druggist or a department-store owner, he can give the public something that Unit 888 of the Consolidated Canned Stores never can duplicate.

"That something will be the flavor of his own personality."

AN EDITOR

The Week in Review

GLORIA SWANSON! We've seen Broadway mobs before, crazed by the appearance in person of picture stars, but nothing like the crowd of fanatics that assailed the Rivoli last week at the "five-dollar-a-seat" opening of "Madame Sans Gene." And it makes us ponder. Gloria Swanson, an attraction in herself, of course. But this greatly increased, for the moment, by her new name, "The Marquise;" not since the widely reputed engagement of Pola Negri and Charles Chaplin has any star publicity ever had such sweeping power. And then add this: the adept way in which Gloria has been handled ever since she reached these shores—her dinner dance at the Park Lane, her regal suite at the hotel (royalty never was so formal and aloof), the "five-dollar-a-seat" premiere. Very good, we'll say. Excellent!

As for the great stars today, and their salaries, and their pictures, and their forced prices to the exhibitor, etc., etc.,—well, realizing that the business is fundamentally one of personalities, we're not sanguine that the whole industry swings from them as it once did. Fact is, it doesn't. Stars are making fast these days. The woods are full of them. And we shall air our views along these lines, right or wrong. But anyway, that Broadway ovation was a humdinger.

THE printers took some sad liberties with our lead editorial last week. We said that the real issue today—back of booking combines, theatre chains, producer owned theatres, etc.—is "trustification"—not justification. Justification is too common in this business to incite editorials.

Talk to any independent exhibitor today, and he'll mention "trusts" in the first minute of conversation. He mentions it vaguely, but uneasily. He doesn't know what it is exactly, but he feels it as an ominous thing. He feels the lines closing in about him. Such and such a theatre group is approaching him from one side; another is creeping up from another quarter, or his competitor is already chained up. Naturally he worries—about the permanency of his business; whether he is going on as before; or whether he will or can sell out. Lots, I judge, are willing to sell, and afraid they won't. All of which is bad, if it keeps an exhibitor from concentrating on his job willingly, hopefully, happily. We ought to have the air cleared as quickly as possible. It's up to the leaders, like Sam Katz, to come out with speech or the printed word or both, and talk out like men—and like business men. If there is trustification (we use the long word, like M. J. O'Toole; it sounds worse than trust) let's say so and get it over with. If not, let's chase the monster back into his hole.

CHANNING POLLOCK'S play, "The Fool," which has created more discussion than any drama produced in recent years, becomes a vital moving picture because it has been approached with sympathy and feeling. The Fox forces have labored over a year to translate this play. Which is an indication of the sincerity behind it.

What is its subject matter? Simply that a rector refuses to subscribe to the ways of the flesh. He would conduct his life as Christ would if he lived on earth today. And the modern pharisees reject him. The picture follows the play in every detail and because it has richly dramatic elements—as well as a significant spiritual value, it will not lack in box-office appeal.

It will inspire finer thoughts. It will awaken humanities. For sheer emotional and spiritual tug no more impressive scene has ever been caught by a camera than when the rector's oppressors stand awe-stricken as the little cripple walks without her crutches. Here is the very soul of the picture. It took unbounded sympathy and feeling to make "The Fool." And Harry Millarde, who has "Over the Hill," and "If Winter Comes" to his credit, has again demonstrated that he is a flesh-and-blood director. Edmund Lowe is an ideal choice for the rector who was branded a fool by rich and poor alike. His restraint and dignity of poise in such a difficult role compel the greatest admiration. It is his best performance.

IT is always interesting to "see ourselves as others see us," through the eyes of those who come here from abroad to study the American picture industry, particularly when these visitors view us in a broad-minded and impartial manner. Such a one is Olaf Fonss, who arrived here the other day from Denmark to spend three months in studying the American stage and screen. Fonss has been sent here by the Danish government, which is desirous of building up and fostering its own cinema industry.

He brings a rich store of experience to the task. For years one of the leading figures in the Danish legitimate theatre, his talents later found expression on the screen as both an actor and a director. When the Danish film industry went into a slump, Fonss was invited by the Ufa people to Babelsberg, where he appeared in several pictures, including "The Indian Bridegroom," one of Joe May's most spectacular productions. He also appeared in the first picture to be directed by Murnau, whose latest work is "The Last Laugh." Paranthetically, he tells us that Murnau is not, as might be supposed, a German, but is of Scotch birth.

Having been here but a few days, Fonss has had little time as yet to visit our studios and see our pictures in the making, but he has seen many of them abroad and has the warmest admiration for them. The outstanding characteristic, in his estimation, of the American picture is its "tempo"—a certain dash and snap which foreign directors have failed, so far, to capture. At the same time, the European picture has certain good points of its own, and Fonss hopes, through his studies in New York and on the West Coast, to learn to combine something of American "tempo" with the already existing European characteristics. It will be an interesting experiment, and will be undertaken as soon as he returns to Denmark this summer.

DR. HUGO RIESENFELD, at a luncheon the other day in honor of Al Christie and Bobby Vernon, touched upon the evil of too-long features. He was speaking, of course, of the necessity of well-balanced programs in the theatre. They are out of the question if features are too long. This is a subject we have often discussed; it needs to be stressed again — when producers are laying out production schedules for next season.

Of the value of comedy, the Doctor also spoke. Good comedies are indispensable; they should not be considered "fillers"—are not so considered by first-class showmen. The Doctor turned to Al Christie and said: "If I can aid you in getting more recognition for the work you are doing, I shall be happy to do so. But I don't think you'll need it."

WE have attended a number of exhibitor meetings recently. They are all interesting—even if the results aimed at seem difficult to discover sometimes. But one of them impressed us mightily—the luncheon in honor of Joe Seider, President of the Jersey M.P.T.O. It was an earnest gathering, with no politics discernible on the horizon. A report was presented, showing that Jersey is a traveling organization. Instead of waiting for the individual exhibitor to come to the organization, the organization goes to him. Board meetings are held monthly in different counties of the State; the directors have traveled on the way some 2,000 miles. Ninety-three per cent of the possible membership of the State is enrolled. These are the fruits of the Seider regime—and they are worthy of comment and praise. A sincere, modest, hard-working exhibitor leader is Joe Seider.

SOONER or later the day will arrive when directors will take heed of the good-natured kidding given them for constructing sets on such a large scale. Even now some of the most discriminate directors have stopped building drawing rooms as large as the Grand Central Station. Even the homes of America's wealthiest people are never constructed on huge ball-room proportions.

We have seen pictures supposed to represent homes of moderately wealthy upkeep which presented rooms large enough to stage a circus. And these moderately wealthy dwellers employed liveried butlers.

There is too wide a contrast between wealth and poverty in the reproductions on the screen. Wealth must be indicated in fabulous figures, while poverty must be recorded as approaching the dregs of life, visualized in squalid rooms, bare of plaster and furniture.

There's a vast middle class of America which is not represented often enough.

There is too little seen of our neighbors who live modestly and comfortably. Their homes are of modest proportions—and they don't employ an English butler who answers to the name of Watkins, Bates, or good old Dobbs. Very often they have a maid and a cook. Very often the housewife or her relatives do the work.

The rule that seems to be followed is that of spending money to represent a costly production. So the director is assigned to shoot a rich estate—and advised not to miss a thing, not even the sunken garden. The result is the society picture of people, fabulously rich—who climb magnificent staircases to their exotic boudoirs—who never live on a small, intimate scale.

The Social Register and the Blue Book show very few multi-millionaires and billionaires who could afford to maintain such mammoth menages. But screen directors have erred in believing that every picture that has a Croesus for a central character must have a palace of enormous rooms. And this in a day when interior decoration has taught the little sons and daughters of the rich that average-sized rooms, neatly mounted — without excess atmosphere—are those which are the most comfortable and charming.

The big drawing-room set should go—as out of the scheme of things. And the stoic butler in knee-breeches should take a vacation.

"THE Wizard of Oz" has been held over at the Colony Theatre, New York, for a second week. A good picture, this. It was the attraction at the Forum in Hollywood when we visited that theatre last winter, and while we saw but snatches of the picture at the time, the crowds of children and their happy faces as they came out told the story. Now we have seen the picture. It needs no further review; or rather, it needs only a reporter's review. You have but to listen to the roar of delight from some thousand youngsters to know that it catches right on.

WE do a lot of talking and wondering about what the radio will do to the motion picture—for it and against it. Perhaps we have missed the big point; and, in this connection, perhaps, we might take a leaf from the book of Governor Smith of New York State. When a vital issue arose in the State's affairs, he talked to the public over the radio and sent the politicians to the woods.

The motion picture is a vital thing. As we have often pointed out it isn't merely a piece of merchandize made and sold; it is something that makes public opinion. What could be more vital?

So what we have in mind is this: if the trade politicians go too far, if the human desire to dominate in trade goes over the bounds—why somebody is going to tell the public about it. Over the radio. Already nine great

The Greater Movie Season

EVERY branch of the industry ought to get wholeheartedly behind Mr. Hays' plan for a National Greater Movie Season. It is a drive in which all can unite. Certainly, there can be no justified division of opinion on this matter.

A concerted campaign at the beginning of the new picture season is a tremendous undertaking. It means registering with the public the importance of the picture year 1925-1926, for one thing, and getting the new season away to a flying start. It also means bigger box-office returns, and a unified effort to put the industry in the strongest possible favor with the public.

Seasonal drives have been extremely successful in several localities, notably on the West Coast, where they have become institutions. Now the effort is to be nation-wide in scope—an excellent idea—a big idea, deserving of the utmost success.

An extensive advertising and exploitation campaign has been mapped out. It will shortly be put into effect. Tie-ups on a national scale; newspaper, magazine and trade paper advertising will be employed under expert direction. Nothing will be left undone, so far as the Hays organization is concerned, to make the campaign completely effective.

The participation of the theatres is vital to the success of the plan. Already a large number of exhibitors have declared themselves in its favor, and have announced that they will co-operate actively.

There will be working committees in every key city, under whose direction the plan will be put into effect regionally. The national exploitation organization, headed by Jerome Beatty, loaned to the Hays office by Universal, will have charge of the details of the drive.

It is clearly up to everybody to lend his help in the undertaking. By so doing he will be aiding the most important of all jobs—the creating of additional good-will throughout the country. Much good work has already been done in this direction. Here is a practical opportunity for every exhibitor in America to become part of a great movement, in which he will benefit locally, and at the same time contribute to the success of a national effort.

The Greater Movie Season idea ought to be made permanent throughout the year. It is a fine idea to inaugurate the new season with a big drive, but let's see to it that the campaign is carried right along for the whole season. There should be no let-down in activity.

If indications are worth anything—and they certainly are—there will be more good pictures next season than ever before. They deserve intelligent and forceful advertising, exploitation and presentation, week in and week out.

So we say: let's all get busy in the campaign to put the new season over with a bang—and then keep up the effort.

Static and Summer Business

IN VIEW of the unquestioned importance which radio now occupies in the amusement field, it seems to us that the arrival of warm weather introduces a new factor into the summer business situation, and one that should be borne in mind by the exhibitor in planning his campaign for the summer months.

The competition of the automobile is greatly increased with the arrival of warm weather — but that same weather which makes automobiling so pleasant makes radio the very reverse. Already static has begun to mingle its noisy disturbances with the incoming programs, and the radio engineers are pretty well baffled regarding a solution of the problem.

That would seem to mean that a good many families who have been sitting home evenings "listening it" will receive considerably lessened pleasure the next few months from that source. While the great outdoors will undoubtedly take up much of the time thus left free—is it not logical to assume that those folks are in the frame of mind receptive to interest in some other form of amusement?

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Having been 'most everything else in the film business, J. L. Johnston, publicity manager for Frank Lloyd, recently played a Northwest "mountie" in "Winds of Chance" (First National).

BOBBY IS ENTERTAINED

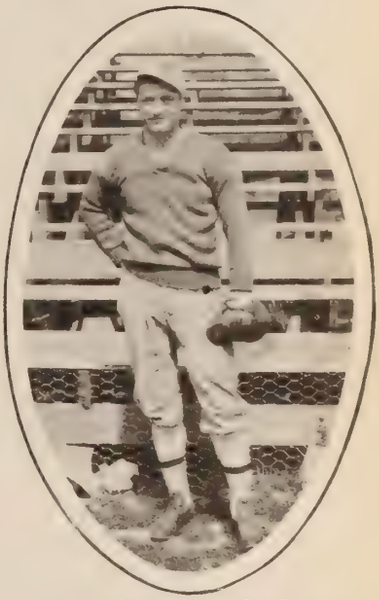
BOBBY VERNON, Christie star, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by Educational, under the able direction of Gordon White, at the Astor on Wednesday. The affair was largely attended and marked the end of Bobby's first trip to the big town. Mrs. Vernon and Vera Stedman, the original bathing girl, were also guests, as was Al Christie, who gave a humorous account of studio activities on the Coast and incidents in Bobby's pilgrimage to N'Yawk.

Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, who stressed the importance of comedy subjects in the building of a well-rounded theatre program, and Danny of Film Daily were the other speakers.

Al Christie told a bit of inside history that is not generally known. When Bobby Vernon left the Sennett forces, there was another who departed at the same time—Gloria Swanson. Both came to the Christie lot and offered their services. Bobby was accepted, because, according to Mr. Christie, he asked less salary than Gloria.

The guest of honor made a pleasing talk and created a very pleasing impression.

Eighty per cent. of her fans voted for bobbed hair, so Evelyn Brent had her tresses sheared the other day, and will be seen thus in "Flash Annie" (F. B. O.).



Ben Lyon, on location with the "Winds of Chance" (First Nat'l) company, found time for a few winter sports, for which he brought a suitable costume.

THE BOY GROWS OLDER

JACKIE COOGAN is growing up. The child movie hero has struck New York with his first pair of long trousers which in their light gray with a blue stripe become him very well. The rest of the "toot" ensemble features a light sport coat and a sport cap. When he was seen leaving the Grand Central Terminal (the interior of which is imitated quite frequently by ambitious directors) Monday morning he carried a golf bag containing a dozen clubs. And he caught a taxi for the Hotel Astor.

At noontime when the strollers are doing their heavy promenading —when the actors in from the road saunter along with press notices in hand—Jackie was caught eating his luncheon. The pedestrians stopped. And immediately a crowd formed to watch Jackie put

Just now Tom Mix, the Fox star, is in Europe, but we're running this as a reminder that he has a crack baseball team of his own awaiting his return.

Pandro Berman, son of the F. B. O. general sales manager, and an assistant director with the Evelyn Brent unit, with Alberta Vaughn, "Pacemakers" star.

Nicholas M. Schenck, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn, registers satisfaction at signing Lillian Gish to a contract to appear in M-G-M productions.

Maurice Elvey, the distinguished British director, now under contract to Fox, plans a scene with Alma Rubens for "She Wolves" (Fox).

Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor affix their signatures to a contract with Associated Exhibitors to make "Manhattan Madness," Oscar Price (centre) representing the company.

on the feed bag. The youngster was too busy putting away the strawberries and cream to pay much attention to the congested throng outside. He is here for ten days—to play golf and see the Giants. Last Tuesday he journeyed up to the Pelham Country Club to play a round.

He registers real anger if he makes it over 110. The little star has swung a mashie for several years—and knows all the fine points of the game. It's a cinch that he could give some of the entries in the film tournament a large handicap and trim them.

BETTER IF NOT BIGGER

IT'S a real artistic "lay-out" which Universal has used in the building of their new projection room at the Fifth Avenue offices. They have, seemingly, been guided by one idea—to provide—Bigger and Better chairs. And their slogan could easily be—Comfort and Service.

It's like stepping into a miniature theatre to see the indirect lighting which sheds soft colored hues on the walls and ceiling—these having been designed on an Italian motif. Gone are the days of the stiff-backed chairs—and the school room atmosphere. The reviewers, seated so comfortably, can forget for an hour the swivel chairs and the jumping keys of the typewriter.

Nothing is lacking in Universal's new projection room except a small symphony orchestra and a pipe organ. It is a pleasure to enter it and be wafted away on the wings of adventure and romance. Mr. Laemmle, Messrs. Cochrane, Mr. Gulick, Mr. Beatty, Mr. Goldstein, Mr. Bate—we thank you. The service is performed.

UNDER DIFFICULTIES

SOMETIMES it happens that stories are written under difficulties. Any good newspaper man will tell you of how he scored a scoop or two when he had nothing but a dirty cuff and a piece of black crayon to do his stuff. Balzac wrote in a garret often at a freezing temperature—and Walt Whitman dashed off his essays and poems whenever the mood overtook him—Lincoln wrote the immortal Gettysburg address on the back of an envelope while journeying by train to Gettysburg. Inspiration chooses strange places for expression.

Which brings us to John Goodwin, author of "Without Mercy" which will be the first of the series of Metropolitan productions to come through Producers Distributing Corporation. He originated a new type of sanctum sanctorum. He had been a sailor for several years and writing the story he selected a space 'tween decks on a submarine chaser where he could wrap a leg around a chair and bang away on his typewriter.

The story did not reach the reading public until two years ago, but it was written during the war and while the submarine chaser was patrolling the waters off the coast of Belgium. The strange part of it is—not one bit of so-called "war stuff" is used in the entire action.

IN MEMORIAM

DAVID POWELL, a motion picture actor, long associated with leading parts, died the other day in a New York sanatorium following a nervous break-down which was complicated with pneumonia. Dave (as he was called by all his friends) had a winning personality which made it a pleasure to know him. He was modest and unassuming—and always a gentleman.

As an actor he entered into the spirit of every role assigned him and because of his naturalness and sincerity he made his characterization into a real flesh and blood figure. His services were always in demand because he had personality and background.

Dave Powell was born in Wales and came to America about ten years ago. After several appearances on the stage he became associated with motion pictures, never leaving them once he had made up his mind to follow the fortunes of the screen.

His principal association was with Famous Players—and he went to England to act in their English productions when the producers operated a studio over there. He played in "The Siren Call," "Anna Ascends," "Missing Millions," "Glimpses of the Moon," "The Spanish Jade," "Her Gilded Cage" and a host of other productions.

PAPA HANK

HANK MANN needn't take off his trick moustache and his trick clothes when he comes off the set. He will have use for them at home in keeping little Miss Mann amused. Hank was a papa for ten days and didn't know it. The stork visited the Mann menage when Hank was on location. When he returned someone greeted him with "Hello Pop" — and he rushed home to see his newly arrived daughter — an eight pounder. When he bounded through the door — as Hank has a way of doing — Mrs. Hank said: "Here, you take the baby for a change and walk her around for a while." Hank's moustache drooped, but he obeyed."

The current issue of International News contains shots of the rum runners at work, obtained by a daring photographer. At the left is the crew of a typical Coast Guard 75-footer; center, the cameraman with the gyroscopic camera which enabled him to get the shots; and right, the runners loading a rum ship.

First photo to be transmitted across the country by telephone, received in New York from San Francisco by E. B. Hatrick of International Newsreel and Howard Dietz of Metro-Goldwyn. It shows Louis B. Mayer, presenting a make-up box to Marion Davies.

WITH AUTHOR! AUTHOR!!

WITH the cry of "Author! Author!!" Hugo Ballin steps forward and takes his bow. He has a book published by Watt and Company the title of which is "The Broken Toy." Ballin being a native of Hollywood, the studio town figures quite prominently as the background of the story. Since the director has been away from the screen for many months it's a cinch that his spare time was spent in dashing off the novel.

FOR CHARITY

ANY function which is conducted for the sake of charity is worthy of the highest tribute. So in giving a big family party with a dance, a carnival and other attractions at University City, and donating the proceeds to charity, the Universalites have done the Sporting Thing.

The party took place on the gigantic stage built at the studio for "The Phantom of the Opera," and was in the nature of a farewell to Carl Laemmle, who left several days later for New York after several months' visit in Los Angeles. The affair was called the "Carl Laemmle Centennial Jubilee" in honor of the tenth anniversary of Universal.

Stars, directors, technical workers, writers, executives, clerks, cutters, cameramen and all the other workers got together on the dance floor and rubbed sholders at the carnival. It was exclusively a "family party" with only Universal employees present. Mr. Laemmle doubled the proceeds taken in at the carnival in Universal's donation to charity.

One of the dinosaurs in "The Lost World" (First Nat'l) heard that the Rothacker Chicago Plant was celebrating its fifteenth anniversary, whereupon "Dinny" broke loose from the corral and headed west to convey regards from Earl Hudson and the rest to Watterson R. Rothacker, who is indicated by an arrow, if you can find the arrow.

SALUTING THE MAJOR

SATURDAY Evening, May 9th, Major S. L. Rothafel "Roxy" of radio fame, will be given a testimonial dinner by the New York Sojourners, Chapter No. 13—a Masonic organization comprised of officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, who are either active, retired, or in the reserve forces. Brigadier General Amos A. Fries, Chief of the Chemical Warfare Service of Washington, will be one of the principal speakers. The dinner will be given in recognition of the Major's services in supplying radio sets for wounded veterans of the World War in government hospitals.

IN APPRECIATION

IN appreciation of the splendid assistance of the technical workers in making Barbara La Marr's new picture, "The White Monkey," the star doubled as a hostess the other evening and gave the boys a party. Each worker was presented with an individual remembrance of the occasion—and employees of the studio showed their gratefulness by giving the star a silver loving cup on which was engraved a fitting tribute of their high regard for her.

Johnny Hines signs for a series of comedies to be released through first National, while C. C. Burr, his producer, and Richard A. Rowland, production manager for F. N. look on.

A BIRTHDAY PARTY

TULLY MARSHALL, one of the veteran actors of the screen, was given a birthday party the other evening—the party being sponsored by Earl Hudson and twenty members of his staff and their wives. They all motored over to the country clubhouse of the New York Athletic Club, Travers Island, and sat down to a shore dinner. When the coffee and cigars had been served a big birthday cake was brought on and the candles were lighted. As Tully wouldn't reveal his exact age Earl placed thirty-three candles on the cake.

Among those who sat in and repeated the old favorite—"Many happy returns of the day"—were Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Rowland, Marion Fairfax (Mrs. Marshall), Milton Menasco, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stanley, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jungmeyer, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Poland, Mildred Early, Raymond Harris, Eugene Clifford and Harold Hall.

FOOLING THE CRITIC

IT happens occasionally that a player who, given a characterization calling for a liberal use of make-up, presents such a realistic performance that even the critics are fooled. Take Charles Stevens for example. For the work he did in "Recompense" he was unwittingly paid the highest compliment possible by one of the newspaper critics who reviewed the picture.

Said the reviewer: "A negro actor of much power but unnamed on the program gave a fine touch to the scenes in the African trading post."

Well, the "negro" was Charles Stevens whose color happens to be white, but so thoroughly did he catch the characterization that it was no wonder the critic was fooled. He is now appearing as Don Q's servant in Douglas Fairbanks' new picture of that name—and it is safe to say that in his ability to make up so realistically his characterization promises to be one of the best in the play.

Bill Cody, star of Independent Pictures Corp., and Adele S. Buffington, scenario chief, just before starting "Love on the Rio Grande."

Balto, himself! The famous dog hero of the thrilling race to Nome, now appearing in "Balto's Race to Nome" (Educational) which Sol Lesser is producing.

One of the first photos to be released showing Mary Pickford nn her old familiar type of role in "Little Annie Rooney" (United Artists), now in production.

"LEFTY" MAURICE BATTING FOR "LEFTY"

"LEFTY" FLYNN has lost his nickname—which he acquired back in those bright college years at Yale when he booted the pigskin for long flights with a talented left hoof or tossed it to Kilpatrick, the end, with a sweeping left arm.

The sales powers of F. B. O.—who keep their commercial fingers incessantly upon the pulse of the exhibitor and his public—have decided that he should carry the dignity that comes with stardom and so will re-christen him with his rightful monicker, Maurice. He may get away with it—and he may not.

Buck Jones tried to call himself Charles for a time, but Buck was the name the fans wanted. And Buck he became in short order.

Hoot Gibson tried to call himself Ed (the name bestowed him at birth) for a time, but the name, Hoot, was too colorful to forget. And so Ed was discarded, pronto. Now "Lefty"—it's up to you.

THE VALENTINO MEDAL

THE Valentino medal for the best screen acting of the year has been awarded to John Barrymore for his performance in the title role of "Beau Brummel." The decision was made by the critics on the leading newspapers and magazines throughout the United States. Valentino donated the gold medal and announced that he would present one every year. Any player is eligible to win it with the exception of Mr. Valentino, himself.

The NEWS was requested to cast votes for first, second and third prizes. We decided in favor of Emil Jannings for his performance in "The Last Laugh." But Valentino's sheik of publicity plotters—Joe Jackson—wrote us that inasmuch as the German picture had not been shown outside of New York while the contest was being conducted Mr. Jannings could not be considered.

Our choice for second prize went to Norma Talmadge, who bore out our judgment by running an exceptional race. Not only did she finish second for first place, but she captured both second and third places with her work in "Secrets." This isn't the picture that captured us so much as "The Lady."

Our third choice was Lillian Gish for her work in "The White Sister." She captured two votes for first place and five for second place.

Seventy-five critics voted on the award—and Barrymore received fifteen votes which carried him under the tape, while Norma collected nine votes for first, eleven votes for second and nine votes for third place. Other players in the first place group included Lon Chaney, Douglas Fairbanks, and Milton Sills. The runners-up to Miss Talmadge for second place were George Billings, Lillian Gish and Douglas Fairbanks. Her rivals for third honors were John Barrymore, Milton Sills and Lon Chaney.

The also-rans included Adolphe Menjou, John Gilbert, Viola Dana, Mary Pickford, Glenn Hunter, Rod La Rocque, Willard Louis, Ernest Torrence, J. Farrell McDonald, Gibson Gowland, Betty Bronson, Richard Barthelmess, Gloria Swanson, Ben Alexander, Percy Marmont, Pauline Frederick, Lois Wilson, Ronald Colman, Charles Ray, Theodore Roberts, Agnes Ayres and May McAvoy.

THERE'S A REASON

THERE'S a good reason for Watterson R. Rothacker, the champion globe-trotter, Pullman passenger and steamship tourist celebrating the fifteenth anniversary of the Rothacker Film Company. At an impromptu party in the Chicago studio he counted up the figures on "The Lost World"—and he is willing to tell the world—and we're here to second the motion that the picture is a real financial success.

And here's a little history. The film version of Conan Doyle's novel is Mr. Rothacker's first venture in the superproduction field. His original amusement enterprise, incidentally, was the dancing movie in which Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle made their screen debut many years ago. We will also record these facts. From the Rothacker organization came the first idea of laboratory service to back up laboratory output; the fastest ultra-speeds ever made; the plan for "The Miles of Smiles" during the war; the first movie of boiling metal; the first projection of pictures on board an airship; the first movement to increase American exports through movies; and the first experimentation toward synchronization of the radio and motion pictures. Some achievement.

Vitagraph Company Purchased By Warner Bros.

Announcement of Big Deal Comes as Surprise

WARNER BROTHERS, INC., has purchased Vitagraph and all its subsidiaries. Announcement of the closing of the deal, which came as a complete surprise to the industry, was made by Harry M. Warner on Wednesday, April 22.

The deal has been quietly pending for some time, announcement said. Warners take over Vitagraph's fifty exchanges—twenty-six in the key cities of the United States, 4 in Canada, 10 in England and 10 in Continental Europe.

Mr. Warner announced that this was not an amalgamation but an outright purchase, as his company had acquired the controlling interest of Albert E. Smith, Commodore J. Stuart Blackton and the Estate of William T. (Pop) Rock, represented by John B. Rock, who were the organizers of Vitagraph twenty-eight years ago.

In taking over Vitagraph, Warner Brothers become producers in New York as well as Los Angeles, as they acquire the Vitagraph studio in Flatbush, a twenty acre studio in Hollywood and a large laboratory. They likewise come into possession of what is considered the greatest library of motion pictures in the world, consisting of the output of Vitagraph throughout its long history, its newly-purchased stories and pictures in the making, besides valuable real estate and other considerations.

In connection with the purchase Harry M. Warner gave out the following statement:

"We have bought the controlling interest of the Vitagraph Company of America. Negotiations were concluded today. It is not an amalgamation. Vitagraph passes absolutely into the hands of Warner Bros. Heretofore we lacked personal touch with the exhibitors. We are taking over Vitagraph to distribute our future product over the world through its offices. We will go ahead with the work Vitagraph has planned for this year, finishing their pictures, taking over their contract players and their other contracts.

"Warner Bros. in the last six months has gathered a roster of famous stars including John Barrymore, Lowell Sherman, 'Syd' Chaplin, Monte Blue, Marie Prevost, Irene Rich and some twenty others. It became necessary for Warner Bros. to go direct to the theatres to do business. We shall go ahead with Vitagraph's plans and our own plans just as though nothing had happened. As the deal was just completed today I can not go into further details at this time except to say that no motion picture company is as well entrenched in the mind of the public as Vitagraph. By Warner Bros. acquiring this, it will make our firm one of the most formidable motion picture organizations in the world."

The history of the Vitagraph Company of America was told in a notable series of articles recently published by MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Some of the highlights follow: In 1895, J. Stuart Blackton, then a reporter, was sent by the New York World to interview Thomas Edison, who was experimenting with "continuity pictures." When Blackton returned he told Albert E. Smith with whom he was rooming that he had learned the process of a new art. From a musty old Latin dictionary they coined the word "Vitagraph." In February, 1897, they formed the American Vitagraph Co., the initial form of the Vitagraph Co. of America, and it entered into business life.

Warner Bros. started with a small theatre in Newcastle, Pa. The Warner boys entered the production field with a program of six pictures, that grew last year to twenty and announcement has just been made that forty pictures had been planned for the coming season of 1925-26. Thirty pictures had been announced by Vitagraph for next season.

Barran Lewis, Publicity Director of Vitagraph, gave out the following announcement, signed by Albert E. Smith, president, and John B. Rock, vice-president, of Vitagraph:

"The control of Vitagraph Company of America and Vitagraph, Inc., has been turned over to Warner Brothers. The following are now the officers of the abovementioned company: Chairman of the board of directors, Albert E. Smith; president, Albert Warner; vice-president, Samuel E. Warner; treasurer, Herman Starr; secretary, Abel Cary Thomas; assistant secretary, A. I. Seigel; comptroller, Walter Bonyon; general manager and assistant treasurer, Samuel E. Morris.

"Business will continue as heretofore. You have the biggest opportunity of your lives, as you know a combination of the two companies will give you product which heretofore has been impossible for Vitagraph to deliver. It is our desire that you co-operate in every way possible with the new management. The co-operation that we have received from the whole organization is sincerely appreciated, and it is our wish that the same co-operation of spirit on your part shall continue."

Mr. Lewis has transmitted this message to all branch managers of Vitagraph, and has urged sincerest co-operation on their part.

Ontario May Lift German Film Ban

Board of Trade Working to Ameliorate Stand Taken Against German Made Features

THE combined efforts of several film bodies in Ontario are being directed toward a move to secure an ameliorated stand on the part of the Ontario Provincial Government toward German-made features. Throughout the years since the war, the Ontario Government, through its Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors, has held its hatred toward all things German. Though other Provinces of Canada, including French-Canadian Quebec, have softened toward German film productions, passing them for the usual theatre presentation with certain minor restrictions, Ontario has maintained a strict ban against pictures of German origin.

The latest picture to be refused admittance to Ontario is "The Last Laugh," starring Emil Jannings. Even though this is a film comedy, the Ontario Censors, headed by Major A. S. Hamilton, has refused to consider the picture under any circumstances and the feature has gone begging.

The Canadian Division of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association, together with the Canadian Film Board of Trade, both with headquarters at Toronto, have been working for some time to secure the lifting of the ban on German films, the issue being waged on the desired acceptance of "The Last Laugh" for Ontario.

The matter is extremely important to Canadian film distributors because the big bulk of the moving picture business in the Dominion is centered in Ontario. Moreover, in various ways, the various Canadian Provinces take the cue from Ontario to a large extent. If Ontario decided to lower the bar without restriction toward German features, then the situation with regard to pictures from that country would be more generally eased all round.

One German picture did slip into Ontario several years ago, but there was a big outcry on the part of war veterans' organizations and on the part of several newspapers, one particularly being the Toronto Telegram, which has strongly pro-British tendencies.

Hays Delivers Important Address

Asks Support for Industry's Present Constructive Policies in Address Before Philadelphia Women

TALKING to about one thousand thoughtful and influential women, at the Women's City Club of Philadelphia last Monday, Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, adopted a strongly affirmative and aggressive attitude along the lines of "What's Right With The Movies!"

Today there is very much to be proud of and very little indeed to apoligize for in regard to motion pictures, he declared.

"Everything will be entirely all right," he said, "if you and others like you will give us your understanding, your appreciation for what has been done, your sympathy with our problems and your broad-minded and constructive advice and cooperation."

Of especial interest to exhibitors was a declaration made by Mr. Hays as to motion pictures in schools and in churches. He told the women of efforts which are being made to bring about a supply of strictly pedagogical pictures for use in the class rooms of schools; and he told also of a survey which is being made by an educational foundation of religious films for possible use in churches. Then he said:

"It must be remembered, however, that the pedagogic picture and only the pedagogic picture, belongs in the schools. The strictly religious picture and only the strictly religious picture belongs in the churches. What we call the entertainment picture does not belong and in my opinion should not be shown in either church or school.

"To show entertainment pictures—the sort we see in the motion picture theatre—either free or at a low price or at whatever price, in school or church, is to set up an altogether unfair, unjust and uneconomic competition to the theatre owner whose livelihood comes from the showing of pictures, who has a large investment in his property, his building, his music and his film rentals, and who pays extra-high taxes, insurance rates and the like from all of which the churches and schools are free. Remember he is engaged in an essential business."

Speaking of the present state of the industry Mr. Hays said: "Never have the standards of artistry and wholesomeness in motion pictures been so high as they are right now. Never has the business of making, circulating and exhibiting motion pictures been on so firm and substantial a basis as it is at this moment. Never have the spoken and written comments about motion pictures been so favorable or so helpful as they are at present."

The best way for picture patrons to be assured of a continuing supply of excellent pictures, Mr. Hays told his audience, was to support the good ones which are already in existence, to make them profitable to the exhibitor and thereby to encourage the making of more good ones.

He told the women they must always remember that the making and showing of motion pictures is a business—"just as much as the making of automobiles or shoes or steel bridges. It cannot endure nor progress without proper returns upon the investments of its multitude of stock holders." He said:

"The producers and exhibitors are only too eager to provide the best quality of pictures, if they will be properly patronized. It is a sad fact that some of the most splendid and artistic motion pictures ever made have failed of commercial success because of the lack of patronage of the very type of men and women that constantly complain about 'bad pictures'."

In relation to the so-called problem of the child and the movies Mr. Hays declared that pictures are not now and never will be intended especially for the twelve-year-olds. Then he told his hearers of the "Saturday Morning Movies" which his Department of Public Relations has arranged in cooperation with exhibitors for showing in all the key cities and many other places this summer. That plan he said was a complete answer to the situation of the child and the motion picture.

Inaugurate Children's Programs at Eastman

A SERIES of special programs for the children will be inaugurated at the Eastman theatre, Rochester, Saturday morning, April 25. The purpose behind these programs, which will be given every Saturday morning, is to provide at a very low cost, pictures selected for juvenile entertainment.

These programs carry the personal endorsement of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, with which organization arrangements have been made, and they also carry Mr. Hays' guarantee to parents that they are the finest, cleanest sort of entertainment. Each performance will start at 10 A. M., and will last until noon. Special police and trolley accommodations will be in effect to facilitate handling the children.

M.P.T.O.A. to Create Trade Bureau

Action Will Be Taken at Milwaukee Convention to Advance Interests of All Independents—Committee Meets With Producers

A Trade and Commerce Bureau, for the furtherance and protection of the interests of all independents—producers, distributors and theatre owners—will be created at the Milwaukee Convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, according to present plans.

The foundation has already been laid, through meetings held by a special committee of the M.P.T.O.A. with independent national producers, distributors and state rights organizations.

The committee consists of L. M. Sagal, of New Haven, Conn.; Harry Davis, of Pittsburgh; R. F. Woodhull, Dover, N. J., Chairman of the M.P.T.O.A. Board of Directors; A. A. Elliott, Hudson, N. Y.; and Sydney S. Cohen, New York, Chairman of the Administrative Committee of the organization.

A statement issued this week from National Headquarters declares this committee "will have a definite and encouraging report to submit to the theatre owners' at the convention. "The heads of these film companies will also be present in person at Milwaukee to lend their aid in carrying out definite lines of business co-operation. In addition, a detailed report of all the film product available for the theatre owners of this country and Canada for the coming season will be presented to the convention.

"It is purposed to develop a Trade and Commerce Bureau in order that the mutuality of interests of all independents in the industry—producers, distributors and theatre owners—may be furthered and advanced and enabled to function along these lines that will bring the greatest protection to all.

"At the recent conference of the Board of Directors of the organization in New York, the Administrative Committee was vested with full and complete authority to arrange for all convention plans, and the program of arrangements which is now being completed promises to be one of the most interesting exer offered a convention."

Another statement issued from National Headquarters declared that a coalition of the independent forces would be made at Milwaukee. It continued: "The Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors will hold a convention in Milwaukee at the same time and meetings held between representatives of these two bodies indicate that definite working agreements will be perfected.

"Repeated efforts have been made in as conciliatory a manner and with as cooperative a purpose as possible to bring about better understandings between the larger Producer-Distributor forces and the Exhibtors. Not only have the agreements reached been violated but the agressions complained of have multiplied in number and increased in importance until now the integrity of the Industry is threatened.

"The patience with which these breaches of confidence and unfair and confiscatory business processes have been met, have had no mitigating effect on the instigators of these outrages but on the contrary, seems to stimulate their fanatical capacity to grasp everything in sight in our Industry and crush all who might in any way oppose their imperial sway.

"It is time that the independent forces in our Industry wrote a new Declaration of Independence."

Competition Running High For Comedy Stars

New Precedent in Laugh Output Is Predicted

By Edwin Schallert, Editor Los Angeles Times Pre-View

WATCH for the comedy output of the larger studios this year. It's going to be of astonishing proportions, setting an entirely new precedent. The fun-makers, so-called, are big headliners on the forthcoming programs,—especially with Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush" now in sight—and nearly all of the prominent feature-producing companies have been endeavoring to add one or two of them to their quota of stars.

It would appear that Paramount has gathered together the most pretentious group thus far, with Harold Lloyd and Douglas MacLean releasing through their organization, and Raymond Griffith, a contract player, groomed for a stellar place as well. The first Lloyd picture is to be made as soon as Harold returns from a trip to New York in about three weeks, and MacLean's story will be shortly announced.

Ray Griffith is already one of the most highly favored of the screen's newer personalities. He has won his spurs through a series of productions in supporting roles chiefly by his ingenious pantomime and gags, and is now consistently featured.

His experience stretches away back to the Keystone days, when he was both a director and a gag man, as well as a player. All around experience counts.

His presence is quite a contrast to that of most of the other comedians. He has made a forte of dress-up clothes, and if there is any prop in the way of garb that he uses frequently, it is the silk hat such as he wore in "Forty Winks." In fact, that silk hat may be exploited with safety since it promises to be part ofhis regular make-up.

Harry Langdon's destiny seems a little unsettled just at present, and that is rather unfortunate, since he is really one of the biggest bets. He is under contract to Sennett, and it is understood that his pictures will be released until at lease next November by Pathe.

It is reported, though, that he has received offers from various other organizations, any one of which might result in his starring regularly in feature-length films. The production that he is at present making, "His First Flame," may be released as a five-reeler. Pathe is known to be desirous of establishing him in that way.

Syd Chaplin appears to be the star comedian for Warner Brothers just now. They feel sure that he can duplicate the hit that he made in "Charley's Aunt," and though "The Man on the Box," his first starring film with them, is entirely different, it is a story of good possibilities.

Fred Neumeyer, who has directed many of Lloyd's successful pictures, will act in that capacity for Chaplin. "Chuck" Reisner is helping on the story, with Charles Logue, who adapted "Ponjola" and "The Lost World." It is to be a modernized version of the Harold MacGrath novel, and will probably have a big chase finish. Later on, it is not beyond the range of possibility, that he will do another female impersonation similar to "Charley's Aunt." It is said that a story is being considered with this in view.

It is a rather striking fact that the growing vogue for comedians is also bringing a demand for their appearance in pictures based on stage play and literary material. In the past, comedians have depended altogether on their own invention. They have never dealt in the box office value of titles. Douglas MacLean is the only one who has consistently used stage successes, and strictly speaking he did not begin as a gag comedian.

Buster Keaton has evidently found beneficial the use of adaptations. He is following "Seven Chances," taken from the Belasco stage production, with "Battling Butler," also from a New York play that enjoyed favor about two years ago. This has a prize-fight plot, and Buster is going back to his regular comedy costume, loose oversize pants and pancake hat. He departed somewhat from this routine in "Seven Chances," this picture having undoubtedly been made with a view toward building up his feminine patronage. He has nearly always been a more popular star with men than with women.

MacLean's gain in popularity is proof of what good consistent hard work will do. He has gathered together a very excellent organization. They thresh out thoroughly the picture from beginning to end, and strive to make each gag just as new and as effective as possible. From a very unpretentious beginning, he has gradually climbed up into the big-league star class.

The sort of comedies he first made at Ince's were of a very light order, but fashioned according to the feature pattern, and without any particular stress laid on the gags. They were not so successful, outside of "Twenty-Three-and-a-Half Hours Leave."

"The Hottentot" marked the real change in his style, and brought him back into the spotlight. The scene where he clung to the horse's tail during the race was his first big venture into comedy hokum, and it appeared to be significant of good fortune. Consequently he has a "horse's tail"—that is a similar touch of hokum—in nearly every picture that he makes, like the runaway auto in "The Yankee Consul," the chase in the old rig in "Never Say Die," the rolling and bounding snowball in "Introduce Me."

MacLean will probably keep right on with a similar type of picture under his new releasing contract. The recipe has proven good, and when comedians do find the right recipe they have a much better chance of sticking to it, as a rule, than the players in the dramatic features. Lloyds very consistent and high average of popularity is perhaps ample indication of how well he has been able to classify himself in the public mind through the consistent quality of his pictures. He seldom, if ever, goes very far wrong at the box office, and it is his enormous money-getting power that has been responsible, as much as anything, for the attention that is now being given to the comedians by the producers.

All but completed now is Charlie Chaplin's feature, "The Gold Rush." Nobody knows quite yet in how many reels it will be released (Charlie's plans always being subject to change up to the last minute), but ten seems to be about the settled number. Some of the final shots have been photographed on board ship near Los Angeles in the past few weeks, and practically all that remains now are some retakes and the cutting and the editing.

It has been all of a year since Charlie started the picture, but it will be a year well repaid if the comedy lives up to the anticipations that are being held for it. His method is still quite independently his own, and though he would give the efficiency experts insomnia and heart failure, his productions are always epoch-making.

If they watched "The Woman of Paris," directors and stars are going to flock to see his latest production. It may not mean so much as an influence because Chaplin's comedy style is too much his own, too individual, but anything that he offers is bound to be a tremendous stimulus. This will be particularly true of so elaborate and pretentious a film as "The Gold Rush."

Not even a dramatic story can be made today without some comedy relief, and the popularity of the majority of films during the past year has been in direct ratio to the amusement that they have afforded. Douglas Fairbanks never neglects humor in his films, and he is going to have plenty of it in "Don Q" blending with the thrilling romantic appeal. Mary Pickford, too, is going to renew the humor and pathos that established her fame in "Little Annie Rooney." It is a true old-time story with gags and gayety for her.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer appear to be giving much attention to the brightening of their features with comedy. They have used George K. Arthur's personality adroitly in pictures like "The Lady of the Night" and

WEEKS MADE DISTRIBUTION HEAD
Appointed by Paramount Chief

COMING as a climax at the end of the first day's session of the Paramount international sales convention at the Hotel Roosevelt last Thursday was the announcement by Sidney R. Kent that George W. Weeks, had been appointed general manager of the distribution department. Mr. Weeks, who has been in the Paramount home office about four years until this promotion, was divisional sales manager of the mid-west division.

Born in Ann Arbor, Mich., where his father was a prominent business man, Weeks began his career handling advertising campaigns, and at one time was associated with the tunnel project under the Detroit River, connecting Detroit and Windsor. About seventeen years ago he entered the motion picture business with John H. Kunsky of Detroit and became supervisor of five Kunsky theatres. It was in this capacity that Weeks bought from Adolph Zukor the first two Paramount pictures ever released "The Prisoner of Zenda," and "Queen Elizabeth." Later, Weeks was salesman for the old General Film Company, and following that held the Universal franchise for Michigan. He also at one time held the Metro franchise for the state and was a member of the board of directors of that company. He joined Famous Players as a salesman in the Detroit office, was promoted to manager of the St. Louis branch, and was then made general manager of the Famous Players Canadian interests. It was in this capacity that Weeks opened all the Famous Players exchanges in Canada. He left four years ago to come to the home office as divisional sales manager.

Exhibitors Must Guard Film
Albany Film Board Holds Them Responsible for Lost or Stolen Reels

UNDER a ruling last week by the Albany Film Board of Trade, exhibitors will be held responsible for all film in their possession and will be called upon to pay for any that is lost or stolen. The decision is of much importance, particularly in the Albany territory, as setting forth the stand which will be taken by the several exchanges in demanding payment for lost films.

During the past two or three months, considerable film has been stolen in Albany, Schenectady and Cohoes, and there has been a difference of opinion between the exchanges and the exhibitors as to just who would stand the loss. The situation became so acute a month ago that a private detective was engaged by the exchanges combining and meeting the expense, in an effort to apprehend the thieves.

Several months ago a number of films were stolen from the Colonial theatre in Albany. This house is one of the Berinstein chain and is managed by George Roberts. The film belonged to the Pathe exchange. Mr. Roberts was before the Film Board of Trade last week and after listening to both sides, the Board decided that the exhibitor would be called upon to meet the loss.

Almost immediately following the decision the Albany Film Board of Trade sent the following letter to the 400 or more exhibitors served by the exchanges in this city:

"There is an old saying that 'it is of no use to lock the barn door after the horse has been stolen.' You will admit that it does little or no good to lock the stable afterward, that is so far as the loss of the horse is concerned.

"As an exhibitor, you should look carefully into the manner in which your film shipments are made or handled before one or more are lost and you are forced to pay for the same.

"Examine your contract and you will see that in case of lost, stolen or destroyed film in your possession you will be obligated for its payment. You would not think of leaving other merchandise laying around as carelessly as you do film. This is why we are sending you this friendly tip to lock the stable before the horse is stolen."

Northwest Exhibitor Body Quits Board of Trade

The Northwest exhibitor organization has withdrawn from the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade. The move is regarded as a follow-up of the attacks launched at the Minneapolis convention, where several exhibitors made complaints over alleged violations of the uniform contract. An effort is being made to have the exhibitor representation on the board made up of theatre owners who are not members of the Northwest organization.

Comerford Company Buys Garden In Pittston

The Comerford Amusement Company has purchased the Garden theatre at Pittston, Pa. The house is being managed for the company by L. A. Clark, of Scranton.

Western Penn. Convention Held at Washington

Adoption of a resolution against block-booking featured the early sessions of the annual convention of the motion picture theatre owners of western Pennsylvania, held at Washington, Pa., this week. Indications were that Dennis A. Harris, of Pittsburgh, would be re-elected president at the concluding session on Thursday, which was still in progres when Motion Picture News went to press.

The exhibitors were welcomed by the Mayor of Washington, and all the city officials. Speeches were made by President Harris, Mike Rosenbloom, M. J. O'Toole, president of the national organization, R. F. Woodhull, chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. board of directors; Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the film boards of trade, and others.

Mr. Harris, in a speech against block-booking, urged exhibitors not to be alarmed over the question of product, but to give their play dates carefully. Mr. Pettijohn declared that the film companies were not trying to do what the exhibitors think they are. While block-booking was a vital issue, it was not as bad as it looks, he said.

Harry Davis charged that a clique of producers was attempting to create a theatre monopoly. Delegates were urged not to sign booking agreements but to wait until after the Milwaukee convention.

Florida Bill Provides Additional Tax

A bill has just been introduced before the Florida Legislature, that would place a tax of 10 per cent of the amount of admission charged to all places of amusement in the state. The taxes so collected would be added to the fund for county schools.

Every form of amusement would be hit by this bill should it pass, as shows, theatres, dance halls, circuses, carnivals, side shows, pool rooms and in fact every form of amusement are mentioned in the bill.

The provisions of the act do not affect the present licenses on these amusements. A penalty of a fine, not to exceed $500 or imprisonment in the county jail for a period not to exceed six months are provided for the manager of any place of amusement who fails to remit the amount of the tax to the comptroller on or before the 10th day of the month following.

Producers Association Adds New Members

THE membership of the Association of Motion Picture Producers was increased at the meeting last week when the Pickford-Fairbanks, Cecil B. De Mille and Harold Lloyd corporations were added to the list.

In addition to electing these companies to membership the coast body unanimously adopted the report of its Committee on Employment Facilities, recommending that the association maintain and operate a non-profit central casting office for the employment of extras. The committee was composed of John E. McCormick, chairman; Joseph M. Schenck, Irving G. Thalberg, Jack Warner and Fred W. Beetson.

Exhibitors Enlist In Greater Movie Season Drive

Hays Plan Gets Big Backing Throughout Country

THE announcement by Will H. Hays that the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., would sponsor a nation-wide celebration of the opening of Greater Movie Season in August has met with response from exhibitors throughout the country.

Telegrams and letters are coming in from exhibitors pledging their support in the campaign and announcing that they are ready to start at top speed the moment the opening gun is fired.

Walter Hays of Buffalo, President of the M. P. T. O. of New York State, wired Mr. Hays as follows:

"Greater Movie Season campaign has my heartiest approval but to be successful in stimulating public interest in our theatres the collective strength of the exhibitor body must back it with energy. It is our duty and for the best interest of all to concentrate our resources to make this movement an impressive one.

"The exhibitors in the State of New York without exception should bend every effort to make the Movie Season of 1925 a memorable one."

M. E. Comerford of Scranton wrote Mr. Hays:

"I have just learned of your plans for promoting a National Greater Movie Season and I want to congratulate you upon this splendid movement and to pledge by whole-hearted support.

"Such a campaign as you are undertaking is sure to be of tremendous value to every motion picture theatre owner and will build lasting good will for the industry as a whole.

"You can count upon all my theatres to join in the celebration."

From David Cohen of Binghamton, N. Y., came a prompt pledge of support in a letter to Mr. Hays, as follows:

"I want to be among the first to pledge my support of the Greater Movie Season Campaign. It is a splendid movement that will be of immense value to every exhibitor in the United States.

"Every exhibitor should get back of your organization in this campaign so as to make the opening of Greater Movie Season a tremendous success in every community."

The cooperation of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kansas and Missouri is assured by R. R. Biechele of Kansas City, President of the Kansas-Missouri organization in the following telegram to Mr. Hays:

"In my opinion the Greater Movie Season Campaign should be given complete support by all branches of the industry. I feel that exhibitors throughout the United States should take advantage of this opportunity in stimulating and creating the interest of the public which will result in benefits to all concerned.

"It is needless to discuss further the benefits that will be derived through an intensive cooperative campaign of this nature.

"I can assure you the fullest support and cooperation of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kansas and Missouri."

The Hays organization, assisted by the publicity, advertising and exploitation forces of all the member companies, is going full blast in its work of making national tie-ups, enlisting the cooperation of all national organizations and is preparing an elaborate campaign of publicity and advertising material for the use of exhibitors in their local campaigns.

First National Men in Convention

Franchise-Holders and Executives Assemble at West Baden for the Annual Session

THE annual meeting of First National was convened last Tuesday at West Baden, Ind. Sessions were to be held through three or four days, the meeting terminating with the election of officers to serve for the next year.

The home-office group were joined in New York by many franchise holders from nearby cities, the contingent starting from that city on Monday afternoon.

The assemblage was addressed by Richard A. Howland and Earl J. Hudson on the subject of production, while E. A. Eschmann talked on sales.

Others who constituted the party leaving New York were: Harry Crandall, Washington, D. C.., Count Cippico, Turin, Italy; Harry O. Schwalbe, Philadelphia; John McGuirk, Philadelphia; Robert Lieber, Indianapolis; M. L. Finkelstein, Minneapolis; N. H. Gordon and Louis Gordon, Boston; Moe Mark, New York; A. M. Fabian, Newark; B. F. Stapleton, Ottawa; Fred Desberg and E. Mandlebaum, Cleveland; D. W. Henderson, New York; James B. Clark, Pittsburgh; Irving Lesser, Dr. A. H. Giannini, R. D. Craver, Charlotte; Charles C. Burr, Paul C. Mooney of P. D. C.; D. J. Chatkin, Educational; Capt. Baynes, and Harvey Day, Kinograms.

Those who went to West Baden from their home cities were: Sam Katz, Max and Barney Balaban, Tom Boland, Oklahoma City; W. P. Dewees, Vancouver; Frank Ferrandini, Richmond; C. S. Jensen, Portland, Ore.; Abe Blank, Des Moines; Watterson R. Rothacker, Chicago; E. V. Richards, Jr., and Julian Soenger, New Orleans; Col. Fred Levy, Louisville; I. H. Ruben, Minneapolis; J. G. Von Herberg, Seattle; John H. Kunsky, Detroit; Adolph Ramish, Los Angeles; Harry T. Nolan, Denver; Thomas Saxe, Milwaukee; Spyros Skouras, St. Louis; Abe and Mike Gore and Sol Lesser, Los Angeles.

stations can be hooked up; others already can tune in, as MOTION PICTURE NEWS has demonstrated. Soon there will be a nation wide outlet for one man's voice with half the population listening in. What power is encompassed here! If one man owned all the newspapers in the land his front pages could not command such an audience.

So if a picture that the public should see or wants to see is withheld by any unfair grip upon trade avenues —say, theatres or distribution—why, the radio will pretty nearly tell the mob about it. And the mob will move till their eyes see what they would see.

What a glorious age this is! And how it does move along—over precedents and the ways and means devised from time to time by mortal man.

WEST COAST THEATRES MERGED

Bowles Acting as General Manager

THE 122 theatres in California of West Coast Theatres, Inc., formerly divided into two districts, are to be amalgamated into one complete chain with Archie M. Bowles acting as general manager of the entire circuit. The move to unify the two districts was acted upon by the board of directors in executive session Wednesday, April 15th.

The West Coast theatres heretofore have been grouped under two main divisions, the northern and southern. The Southern division included those houses from San Diego up to and including Bakersfield, while the northern link took in the theatres from Fresno to Sacramento.

Bowles, who is now in charge of the entire chain, was formerly general manager of the northern branch. The southern division was under the management of Harry C. Arthur, who has resigned to take general charge of a new organization being formed by Frank R. Wilson, president of the M. P. Capital Corporation, to purchase and finance picture theatres.

Mr. Bowles, who was born in California and is 34 years old, has had a meteoric career in the industry. He began as a theatre manager and then joined a distributing company as salesman, later becoming an exchange manager. He joined the Turner and Dahnken company, which was bought out by West Coast, at which time Mr. Bowles became associated with the latter company. He introduced the Fanchon and Marco "Ideas" in stage presentation on the Pacific coast along with other innovations in theatre management.

Kansas-Missouri Program Set

Last Minute Arrangements Are Completed for Convention in Kansas City

THE last minute arrangements of the M.P.T.O. Kansas-Missouri convention, to be held in Kansas City, Baltimore hotel, April 27-28, have been completed, the program outlined, invitations issued and, in general, a convention which will dwarf all others in the Kansas-Missouri territory is just around the corner awaiting its beckoning.

The tentative program follows:

MONDAY.—9:30 a. m., Registration; 10:30 a. m. Address of Welcome by Mayor Albert I. Beach of Kansas City and presentation of the key of the city to exhibitors.

11 a. m. Roll call and reading of the minutes of the seventh annual convention; 11:30 a. m. Appointment of committees; Noon—Luncheon in Baltimore Coffee Shop.

1 p. m. Talk on exploitation by Howard E. Jameyson of the Miller theatre, Wichita, Kansas; 1:45 p. m. Closed business session; 5:30 p. m. Adjournment; 8:30 p. m. Theatre party at Orpheum theatre.

TUESDAY.—10:00 a. m. Reports of committees; 10:30 a. m. Closed business session; 11:30 a. m. Address by Mrs. Eleanore C. Walton, chairman of the Better Films Committee of the Women's City Club of Kansas City.

Noon.—Luncheon in the Baltimore Coffee Shop; 1 p. m. Talk on parcel post shipment of films and proper methods of doing it, by post office representative; 2:30 p. m. Closed business session; 4.00 p. m. Election of officers; 5:30 p. m. Adjournment; 7:30 p. m. Banquet in Francis 1 room in Hotel Baltimore.

As to speakers, invitations have been sent to Will Hays, who was requested to send a representative in case he is unable to come; Dr. Burris A. Jenkins, pastor of the First Christian Church, Kansas City; Governor Ben S. Paulen of Kansas, Governor Sam A. Baker of Missouri, and Mrs. Henry N. Ess of Kansas City, president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Following are the subjects which will be discussed at the convention: Report on revised uniform contract; concrete facts and figures on the music tax; review of recent legislative activities; report on joint board of arbitration; the carnival and tent show situation; school, church, park and non-theatrical opposition; producer owned and controlled theatres; road showing of features productions.

Manitoba Legislature to Offer Tax Changes

Premier John Bracken of the Manitoba Provincial Legislature announced officially a few days ago that he was not prepared to abolish the Provincial Amusement Tax but that he was prepared to make some concessions in the tax.

The exhibitors of Manitoba, represented by the Manitoba Moving Picture Exhibitors Association, the oldest of the film theatre organizations in the Dominion, have been actively engaged for months past in a campaign for the removal of the amusement tax. The best encouragement that the theatre managers have received so far, however, was the statement by the Provincial premier that he was not prepared to abolish it altogether but that he would consider some changes in its enforcement.

Albany Zone Committee is Appointed

Meyer Schine, of Gloversville, Louis Buettner, of Cohoes; Uly S. Hill, of Troy, W. W. Farley, of Albany and Robert Wagner, of Little Falls, New York, have been named as a committee to devise new by-laws for the Albany Zone Committee. They will also decide on the best day of the month for meetings of the Zone Committee, and likewise how frequently the Committee should meet. They will give consideration to a proposition calling for a further zoning of the Zone.

"The Exquisite Sinner," and on the strength of his ability as disclosed in these he is soon to have a big featured lead. In"Excuse Me" Bert Roach also showed much promise, and in fact almost stole this picture with his comedy.

John T. Murray is another whose appearances are worth watching for. He was a hit in "Madonna of the Streets" in a small part of the crook, Christie's feature-length comedy, "Stop Flirting."

Murray has had a long experience on the musical comedy and vaudeville stage, and didn't imagine that he had any claim on popularity in pictures until he came to the Coast about a year ago.

If they are going to start drafting comedians from the stage, there is absolutely no telling how much the producers will be able to add to the now all-important item of laughs on the screen.

Shirley Boosts Offer for Farley Interests

William Shirley, managing director of Farash Theatres, in Schenectady, N. Y., is reported to have offered W. W. Farley, the sum of $150,000 for his share in the company. Previous to this, Mr. Farley, it is said, had made Shirley an offer of $75,000 for his share.

Farley owns 50 per cent of the stock in the company, while Shirley owns 25 per cent, and William Rafferty, of Syracuse, the remainder. The company is now operating three of the largest houses in Schenectady, with a fourth closed.

Independent Producers Meet in Los Angeles

ENTHUSIASM for the future and confidence that bright prospects are ahead for the independent producers were expressed by members of the I. M. P. P. D. A., at a Booster Meeting held last week at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles.

I. E. Chadwick, of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, president of the organization outlined the massive program on which the independents propose to operate during the coming year. Mr. Chadwick declared that the morale of the independent producers is now at the highest standard it has reached since the inception of the industry, and that in the future the produce from this field will compare favorably with the best productions of the so-called national distributors.

Jesse J. Goldburg, president of Independent Pictures Corporation, praised the work accomplished by the I. M. P. P. D. A. during the year past and stated with this cooperation he would double his production this year.

Other producers who took an active part in the meeting are Peter Andrews of Hercules Productions, Harry Cohn of C. B. C. Van Pelt Brothers, Frank Sanford and Anthony J. Xydies, President of Sunset Productions.

Samuel Bischoff, President of Bischoff Inc. and California Studios Hollywood, who is now producing comedies on a large scale became a member of the association.

Famous Adopts Bonus, Savings Plan

Will Add Twenty-Five Per Cent and Interest to Amounts Deposited With Company by Employees

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has perfected details of an employees' savings and bonus plan, which has been under consideration for a long time past. It was announced by Sidney R. Kent, general manager of the company at the closing session of the international convention of the Paramount distributing department last week.

The plan contemplates a savings and bonus arrangement covering a period of five years and by its conditions 25 per cent over the full period will be added to the weekly deposits made with the company by employees. In addition they will receive 6 per cent compounded semi-annually on amounts saved. No employee, however, is permitted to deposit with the company more than 20 per cent of his salary.

Speaking of the plan, Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation said:

"The directors of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in recognition of the faithful and efficient service of its employees, announce this plan to enable employees of the corporation and its subsidiary corporations to participate in the profits of the corporation.

"The directors recommend participation in the plan in the belief that it affords an opportunity to share in the profits of the company on terms which provide an incentive to continued loyal service on the part of its employees, and which, at the same time, offers an investment opportunity sufficiently attractive to encourage thrift and saving.

"No employee is under any obligation to participate in the plan. The present standing or future prospects of an employee will not be affected in the least degree by his decision as to the plan."

The details of the Plan, as announced by the directors, are in part as follows:

The Plan shall be in force for five years from August 1, 1925 to July 31, 1930, unless sooner terminated by the Board of Director of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who shall have the right to terminate the Plan at any time. The operation of the Plan shall be under the direction of six Trustees appointed by the Board of Directors of the Corporation.

Any employee of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation or of any of its subsidiary corporations may subscribe to the fund established hereunder any amount in even dollars not in excess of 20 per cent of the compensation paid him at the time of such subscription, provided, that such employee shall have been continuously employed for the six months immediately preceding. The amount of the subscription of each employee shall be deducted from his salary on each pay day, a receipt issued therefor and shall be paid to the Trustees and credited to his account with the Trustees. No employee will be permitted to subscribe to an amount in excess of $200 per week.

Concurrently with the making of any such deduction, the Corporation shall pay to the Trustees as a bonus an amount equal to 25 per cent of such deduction, which shall be credited to the account of the employee with the Trustees.

The amounts so deducted and the bonuses paid by the Corporation shall constitute a fund which the Trustees may in their discretion invest and reinvest in securities of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation or of any other corporation, or in securities of any municipality, state or government.

Upon the termination of the Plan, the entire fund shall be distributed to the participating employees in cash or in securities, in the discretion of the Trustees, in proportion to the amounts then standing to the credit of their respective accounts with the Trustees. The accounts shall be adjusted from time to time at such time as the Trustees may, in their discretion, determine, and at the time of each such adjustment, the net income of the fund since the preceding adjustment shall be credited to the accounts of the then participating employees in proportion of the amounts then standing to the credit of their respective accounts with the Trustees.

The Trustees appointed by the Board of Directors are: Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Elek John Ludvigh, Sidney R. Kent, Eugene J. Zukor, and Robert C. Montgomery.

Activity Continues in Theatre Field

Famous Players Canadian Corp. Adds More Houses—Rothchild, Butterfield, Lucas and Others Expand Interests

IMPORTANT developments in the theatre field were reported this week. The Famous Players Canadian Corporation is rapidly adding to its list of houses, which is approaching the hundred mark. The concern has acquired the theatres formerly operated by Theatrical Enterprises, Ltd., at Woodstock, St. Catherines and Chatham, Ontario.

F. P. Canadian Corp., of which N. L. Nathanson is Managing Director, has also acquired the only legitimate theatre in Fort William, Ontario. The company already operates the Orpheum and Royal Theatres, picture houses in the town.

Announcement has been made at Toronto that Mr. Nathanson has organized another subsidiary for Famous Players in the Trans-Canada Bookings, Ltd., virtually to take the place of Trans-Canada Theatres, Ltd., of Montreal, which is now defunct. The new concern will look after English releases and other attractions, it is understood, along the lines originally intended by the defunct company.

Two houses have been secured by purchase from the liquidator of Trans-Canada Theatres, Ltd., by Famous Players recently and more are to be acquired, thus releasing Trans-Canada from liquidation. The houses acquired were the Grand, London, Ontario, and the Grand, Kingston.

A development of importance on the West Coast is the announcement that the Herbert L. Rothchild Entertainment organization will build six or seven modern, high price picture theatres in and around San Francisco in the next year or so. One of the finest theatres in the West will be built in the business section; the others will be neighborhood houses. Construction has already been started on the house at Eighth and Irving Streets. Another will be built at 17th and Geary. The Rothchild company owns four large houses in the main business section of San Francisco. Mr. Rothchild stated that only first class pictures will be run in the new theatres and that the houses will be the last word in modern construction.

In the Middle West, Ascher Brothers have sold the Capitol Theatre, Cincinnati, to the Capitol Theatre Company which is controlled by the Libson theatre interests, of which I. Libson is president. The theatre has been operated for the last three years by Libson, under a forty year lease. The Capitol was built four years ago by Ascher Brothers, who operated it for a year.

W. S. Butterfield circuit has added to its list of theatres by acquiring the Martha Washington in Ypsilanti, Mich., from Mrs. Florence Signor. This is the largest theatre in that city, having a capacity of 800 seats.

In the South, Arthur Lucas, prime factor in General Enterprises, Inc., operating the new Egyptian Theatre, Greenville, S. C., and controlling factor in a number of independent enterprises in the Southeast, has secured control of the State and Superba Theatres at Raleigh, N. C. The Lucas enterprises now control fifteen theatres and plan to annex twenty more in the next few months.

E. J. Sparks, of Jacksonville, Fla., who recently sold a string of seventeen houses to Universal, has bought the Lyric Theatre at Gainesville, Fla. It is reported that Mr. Sparks is negotiating for the Temple Theatre, Ocala, Fla., and that he will probably close a deal for it soon. The report also is that he is in a deal for the Milane Theatre, Sanford, Fla.

When Mr. Sparks sold the seventeen houses to Universal he retained his theatre holdings at Lakeland and Leesburg and has since bought the Grand at Palatka from Louis Kalbfield.

Iowa Exhibitors Converted to Shipment of Film by Express

NUMBERS of Iowa exhibitors have been converted to the idea of sending film by express and those who have been using express in the larger towns are requesting the express shipments. In from thirty to fifty per cent of the shipments, however, the exhibitors are insisting on the parcel post method. Most of the exchanges are doing the majority of their shipping by express and sending film by parcel post only at the request of the exhibitors. "Send it by parcel post" is as a rule the request of the small town exhibitor, who does not demand the greater service of the express.

The report given to the Des Moines Film Board of Trade from the exchanges shows a variance in the experience of the different branches. Metro Goldwyn reported requests that film be sent by express. Famous Players reported that the exhbitors prefer parcel post and prefer it even without the promise of special handling. Half of the exhibitors have requested Pathe for parcel post shipments immediately with the receipt of express shipments. Universal is giving the exhibitor just what he asks for without any argument. And the majority are asking for parcel post, especially the small town exhibitor. Premier reports that the majority of their shipping is being done by express but not without some protests, probably from thirty per cent. The Educational branch seems especially besieged with requests for parcel post shipments.

It is the local understanding that the parcel post shipments will be made with a continuance of the service given before the change of the post rates and that special service will be given in handling film even when the twenty-five cent handling charge is not paid or sending the film as first class matter.

Two Bills Pass Penn. Session

Anti-Daylight Saving and Heating Measures Are Approved by the Lawmakers

OUT of about twenty bills relating in one way or another to the motion picture industry that were introduced in the biennial session of the Pennsylvania Legislature which adjourned finally on Thursday, April 16, in the capitol at Harrisburg, only two survived to pass both branches of the law-makers, the rest going down to defeat chiefly through being smothered in the committees to which they were referred.

Of the two that passed both houses the more important was the Derrick-Grimes bill, favored by the picture interests, which is designed to make really effective the existing anti-daylight saving law of 1923, and the other was the less important measure of Senator Krause, of Philadelphia, which makes it lawful to heat theatres with warm air systems, whereas heretofore only steam and hot water systems were sanctioned by law. The Krause bill already has been signed by Governor Pinchot, thereby becoming a law.

The anti-daylight saving bill, however, had not been acted upon by the Governor at the time he left Harrisburg, shortly after the close of the Legislature, for a brief vacation at his country home at Milford, Pike county. He has, however, until May 16 either to attach his signature to the measure or to reject it.

This bill was passed finally by the Senate, on April 13, by a vote of 36 to 10, the House having previously approved it. It is in the form of an amendment to the law of 1923 and prohibits the display of any except Eastern Standard time on clocks on any public highway or in any other public place within the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The 1923 law made it unlawful for any municipality of the state officially to adopt a daylight saving schedule, but this proved ineffectual in preventing the use of daylight saving time because in cities where business interests desired to do so they simply changed the clocks without any municipal ordinance approving such action. The proposed new law is designed to prevent even unofficial display of any except Standard time.

Of the more important measures that went down to defeat in one way or another, one was the bill which would have placed control of billboards containing theatrical or other advertising, under control of the State Highway Department which would have had authority to prevent such advertising along any highway, on the theory that billboards would constitute a source of danger by diverting the attention of drivers of motor vehicles from the road. This bill died in committee.

$30,000 Damage by Fire in Theatre at North Bay

The interior of the New Royal Theatre at North Bay, Ontario, was gutted by fire on April 5, the origin being due to a short circuit in the balcony of the theatre, it is believed. The fire, which resulted in a damage of $30,000, was one of the largest that has occurred in North Bay in recent years. The manager, John Blanchet, was at his summer home at Trout Lake when the blaze took place, but returned quickly to the city. A portion of the roof fell in and the balcony was destroyed. Other sections of the building were saved by the automatic sprinkler system. The theatre, which seats 1,100, is being rebuilt and will be reopened in July, according to an announcement by Mr. Blanchet.

Kleeblatt Opens New Print Plant in New York

A new printing plant, equipped with the latest type setting machines and automatic presses, has been opened at 351-5 West 52nd St., New York City, by Erwin S. Kleeblatt, president of the Erwin S. Kleeblatt Press. The plant will be devoted to motion picture work exclusively.

New Companies Chartered in New York State

Companies incorporating in the motion picture business in New York state during the past week, and receiving charters from the secretary of state, included the following, the amount of capitalization and the names of the directors being given:

The International Playhouse, Inc., $50,000, B. S. Herkimer, I. Kraft, New York; A. V. Nyholm, Brooklyn; Treadwell Productions, Incorporated, capitalization not specified, S. Treadwell, W. O. McGeehan, J. Murry, New York city; Paras Court Amusement Corporation, $5,000, S. F. Scotto, Joseph and A. N. Parascandola, Brooklyn; Weinsoff Amusement Corporation, $5,000, Borach Kessler, Jacob Weinsoff, B. Ettinger, Brooklyn.

The First Night, Inc., $10,000, Rose Rosenblum, C. F. Collins, S. R. Golding New York city; Ferri Movie Co., Inc., $5,000, Attilio and Romio Taliaferri, Max Ecker, New York city; The Grand Chrystie Corporation, $5,000, Nathan Schulman, J. Rovenger, Samuel Goldstein, New York city; The Congress Film Corporation, capitalization not stated, Alex Smith, Jr., Edward White, Joseph Clifford, New York city.

Legal Ban Removed From New S. F. House

Legal obstacles in the way of construction of the new Pantages theatre at Hyde, Market and Fulton streets, San Francisco, were swept away when the judge dissolved an order restraining Alexander Pantages and W. B. Wagnon, owner of the site, from constructing a building. Sol Levis, theatrical man, had obtained a lease upon 20 feet of the Market street frontage of Wagnon's property, to be used for a 400 seat show house, prior to the leasing of the same piece to Pantages. Levis sought to have the court compel Wagnon to carry out his prior lease contract.

The judge held that numerous decisions had held that it was part of the court's duty to supervise construction of a building to make certain that terms of a contract were being carried out. Whether Levis has been damaged and to what extent, remains to be decided later. The entire state was interested in this.

T. O. C. C. in Booking Deal, Is Report

ACCORDING to the film daily, the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York is planning to line up a big group of member theatres in a booking deal with three important distributors to combat the domination of the Producer-Allied circuits in this territory.

The story declares that the T. O. C. C. is seeking to get together 80 to 1,000 booking days for product which would be assured by the Production Alliance. This would give an asured flow of pictures for first runs in the neighborhoods, with the Piccadilly Theatre as the show-window on Broadway.

The distributors, it is further declared, would franchise the pictures for a period of years. The movement is described as aimed at the so-called "Big Three", and it is said the T. O. C. C. will propose to the Milwaukee convention that the plan be put into effect on a national scale.

Injunction is Sought by George Skinner

Preliminary hearing on the application of George A. Skinner, of New York, for a preliminary injunction against the Educational Pictures Security Corporation and the president and directors of the corporation has been set for May 1 before Chancellor Wolcott in Wilmington, Del.

The complaint alleges that a contract was entered into in 1920 with E. W. Hammans, one of the defendants. He agreed, it is alleged, to serve as president and director of the corporation and its subsidiaries and to devote all his time during business hours to the corporation's affairs.

It is charged that Mr. Hammons entered into contracts with other organizations in violations of the terms of his contract. The complainant seeks to have Mr. Hammons decreed to pay the corporation or subsidiaries such sums as may be due them to reimburse them for all damages claimed to have been sustained because of the alleged breach of contract.

Indiana Indorsers Elect New President

At the annual meeting of the Indiana Indorsers last week Mrs. Arthur Twining of Fort Wayne was elected president of the organization, succeeding Mrs. David Ross, who became first vice-president. The Indorsers are an organization of women who are opposed to censorship, but who indorse photoplays they think should be seen by the men, women and children of their state.

Close to five hundred members and guests attended last week's session, which was addressed by Robert Lieber, Milton Sills and Laurence Hitt. Sills made a splendid address on censorship and was enthusiastically received by the delegates.

Steffes Explaining Plan At Regional Meetings

The plan and operation of the Allied Theatres Circuit, new booking combine organized in Minneapolis, is being explained and outlined at a series of regional meetings conducted by W. A. Steffes, head of the organization. Meetings have been held in St. Cloud, Brainerd, Alexandria, Wadeno and Fargo.

Plan Movie Exposition for Berlin

A MOTION picture and photographical exposition is to be held in Berlin, Germany from September 25th to October 10th, inclusive, this year. Included in the exhibition will be sample studios, and theatres, fashion shows, home movies, special studios for scientific, industrial and trick films, booths for operators, fire extinguishers and studio theatre equipment of all descriptions.

German producers, distributors and theatre owners have already contracted for a large amount of space, and a number of French concerns have agreed to show their wares. Patronage is being sought from American producers and distributors. Information regarding space and other particulars may be had from Wolff M. Henius, local representative of the Lichtbilduhne at 1482 Broadway, New York City.

New Exchange Building for Albany

ANOTHER building to house motion picture exchanges is to be erected in Albany, according to an announcement made during the past week by W. W. Farley, a well known exhibitor and who will be one of the owners of the building.

The structure will be located in the business center of the city and close to Film Row. It will be seven stories in height and will have a frontage of 75 feet and a depth of 140 feet. Work will start at once. Some few weeks ago, there was another announcement from New York interests to the effect that they would erect a similar building in Albany, but whether this will now go through in view of the statement forthcoming from Mr. Farley is unknown. Albany has about thirteen motion picture exchanges at the present time, and these with one exception, are nestled together in what is generally known as "Film Row." While one or two of these occupy their own buildings, the others rent quarters and no doubt when the new building is erected, it will house practically all of the exchanges.

John H. Springer, Veteran Showman, Dies

John H. Springer, one of the oldest showmen in this section died April 16th at his home in Apthrop, 79th Street and Broadway, New York City. His death was caused by heart trouble.

Springer was born in the year of 1852 in the state of Iowa and first started his business career in the printing and lithographing business in Chicago. Later on in New York, he at one time had seven companies of the "Black Crook" on the road, as well as the other shows. After this he operated the Grand Opera House in Brooklyn and New York. He was also a pioneer in the automobile business, manufacturing the old Kidder steam car which was later made into a gasoline propelled car and manufactured by the Springer Motor Vehicle Co.

He also engaged in the early real estate deals around the Washington Heights section of New York, and at the time of his death was the manager of the Springer theatre Co. operating the 77th Street theatre, the Symphony at 95th street, and the Adelphi at Broadway and 89th street.

Montreal Will Show Free Educational Pictures

Free moving picture shows are to be presented in Montreal, Canada's largest city, during the summer months at local moving picture houses under the auspices of the administration as an educational feature for the people.

At a meeting of police and public safety officials at Montreal on April 15, arrangements were made for the free shows at various moving picture theatres in Montreal and adjacent corporations every Saturday morning during the warm weather. At this gathering several appropriate moving picture features were screened for the officials.

The police departments of Montreal and the suburban cities, Westmount, Verdun and others are behind the move as well as the Province of Quebec Safety League, all of which departments were represented at the meeting.

Henry Carr Dies Suddenly in Buffalo

Buffalo and western New York theatre men were shocked to learn of the sudden death in Buffalo on Saturday, April 18 of Henry J. Carr, manager of Shea's Court street theatre in the Queen City of the Lakes. Mr. Carr was widely known in theatre circles. Born in Lewiston, N. Y. 50 years ago, Mr. Carr went to Buffalo during his youth and obtained an appointment to the Postal Service and for several years was in charge of the old Cold Spring post office. In 1905 he was tendered the management of the Shea Court Street theatre by his brother-in-law, Michael Shea. He accepted the position and upon the incorporation of Mr. Shea's Buffalo amusement interests some years ago, he was elected to the vice presidency.

Mr. Carr is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Millicent Martin of Buffalo, three sisters, Mrs. Michael Shea, Mrs. Edward Carney and Miss Elizabeth Carr, and two brothers, John, manager of Shea's North Park theatre, and Edward. The funeral was held Tuesday morning, April 21 from his residence 33 Laurel street and later from the new Catholic cathedral on Delaware avenue. Elaborate floral pieces were sent by the Buffalo Theatre Managers' association, Buffalo Zone, M. P. T. O. of N. Y., and exhibitors and theatre men from nearby towns.

Merchants Purchase Land to Reopen House

Merchants of Perth Amboy, New Jersey consider a theatre in operation quite a business adjunct, so they purchased a tract of land adjoining Walter Reade's Majestic and resold it to him for half price that he might enlarge the present house, build an entirely up-to-date theatre and keep it in continuous operation.

The plot of land is 100 feet by 100 and the property is said to have been held at $135,000. Plans have been drawn for the new house and work on it will start about May 15th. The Majestic has been closed for some time. Reade also operates houses in Asbury Park, Red Bank, Long Branch, Trenton, Plainfield, New Brunswick and Perth Amboy.

New Film Publication to Enter Field

MOTION PICTURES TODAY, a new film publication of which Arthur James will be President and Editor, has been incorporated at Albany, with a capitalization of $50,000. Merritt Crawford, who will be vice-president and publisher and H. G. Kosch are named in the incorporation papers.

The publication, which will be a trade news weekly, will make its appearance early in May, it is understood.

Arthur James and Merritt Crawford are well-known in the industry. The former was publicity and advertising director for Metro and Fox, and subsequently editor of Moving Picture World. Mr. Crawford, who also has had wide publicity experience, was Managing Publisher of Exhibitors Trade Review and one of the founders of that publication. Mr. Kosch is a New York attorney.

Creelman Adapting De Mille Vehicle for La Rocque

James Ashmore Creelman has been engaged by Cecil B. DeMille to make the screen adaptation of "The Coming of Amos," the William J. Locke story which will be used as the first starring vehicle for Rod La Rocque.

Cast Completed for "Off the Highway"

Hunt Stromberg has completed the cast which will appear in "Off the Highway," an adaptation of the Tom Gallon novel "Tatterly," which will be made under the direction of Tom Forman for the Producers Distributing Corporation program.

Prod. Dist. Corp. Names De Lorenzo Manager

Paul C. Mooney, vice-president in charge of distribution of Producers Distributing Corporation, has appointed Frank De Lorenzo branch manager of the Omaha exchange of the company. De Lorenzo is well known in the territory, having been formerly connected with a branch in Omaha. More recently he has been in Milwaukee, where as manager for Selznick he lead that company's exchanges in sales and collections for a period of seven months.

Flinn Back From Coast Conferences

AFTER seven weeks of daily production conferences, John C. Flinn, vice-president in charge of production for Producers Distributing Corporation is back from the coast and will shortly announce the release program for the coming season.

Flinn has been in continuous conference with Cecil B. DeMille, Al Christie, Hunt Stromberg, A. H. Sebastian, Frances Marion, William Sistrom and Renaud Hoffman on stories, stars, directors and supporting casts that will contribute to the program.

Lillian Gish Waits First Story Selection

As soon as executives of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have decided upon a story for her, Lillian Gish will leave for the coast to make her initial production under her new long term contract just signed by her and the producing company. A number of important works are under discussion for her and a selection will be made in the near future. One of the staff of fifteen directors under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will direct Miss Gish.

Columbia Pictures Signs Reeves Eason

Harry Cohn of Columbia Pictures Corporation has signed Reeves Eason to direct productions for that company for the next two years. During the term of his contract he will direct exclusively for Columbia. His latest picture is "Fighting the Flames."

George Fawcett Playing Two "U" Roles

George Fawcett is playing in two Universal pictures at the same time in Universal City. He has the role of the doctor in "The Home Maker" with Alice Joyce and Clive Brook and plays the uncle in "Peacock Feathers," starring Jacqueline Logan and Cullen Landis.

"Don't" is New Title for Rupert Hughes Story

"Don't" is the new title of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the Rupert Hughes story, "The Girls' Rebellion." It was originally called "The Rebellious Girl" and is being directed by Alf Goulding under the personal supervision of the author.

Milton Sills Edits First Astor Production

Milton Sills turned film editor recently when he was engaged to edit "The Lover's Oath," first of a series of productions to be made and released by Astor Distributing Corporation. Sills spent considerable time in editing the production and cooperating with the title writer.

"The Lover's Oath" has as its featured players Ramon Novarro and Kathleen Key. It was produced by Ferdinand P. Earle under the original title of "The Rubaiyat."

Douglas Fairbanks in scenes from "Don Q," his new production for United Artists.

Newspaper Story Next for Emory Johnson

Emory Johnson's next melodrama for F. B. O. will be a newspaper story temporarily titled "The Last Edition." Much of the action will probably be taken in the plant of a San Francisco newspaper, with Ralph Lewis in the leading role. It is expected the picture will go into production shortly and that it will be about six or eight weeks in the making. The story was written by Emilie Johnson, mother of the producer.

Following the completion of "The Last Edition," Johnson and his mother will depart for Sweden, where scenes will be shot for the production to follow "The Last Edition."

Four Directors Will Make Schulberg Pictures

Four directors will work exclusively for B. P. Schulberg Productions this year and will handle all eighteen pictures provided for in the schedule. Three of these have already been signed up and a fourth will place his signature on a contract this week.

Gasnier will be assigned one group of stories. This will be his fourth year as a Schulberg director. James P. Hogan will be retained for the year and will direct at least four of the series. Frank O'Connor has also been placed under a contract which will extend through next season's activities.

Luchese Establishes a New Exchange in Philadelphia

Anthony Luchese, who recently retired from the De Luxe Film Company, a Philadelphia independent exchange, has formed the Liberty Film Corporation which will operate as an independent exchange in the Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware territory. Headquarters of the new company will be at 1339 Vine St., Philadelphia.

Jack Mulhall Signed for "Classified"

Jack Mulhall has been signed by Corinne Griffith Productions as leading man for Miss Griffith in "Classified," her next picture for First National release. It is an adaptation from a short story by Edna Ferber. Photography will start April 27th with Al Santell directing.

Mary Pickford to Make 3 Productions This Year

MARY PICKFORD plans to make three pictures this year for United Artists distribution. Upon the completion of "Little Annie Rooney," now being filmed and which she expects to finish in June, Miss Pickford will immediately start on another production of a story now being prepared by Winifred Dunn. The play it is said will provide the star another ten-year-old role. A third story is under discussion with Ernest Lubitsch, who will direct the picture.

The announcement of her plans to make three pictures this year has stirred an amount of enthusiasm equal to that which greeted her decision to return to the ragged-girl roles when she selected "Annie Rooney" as her next vehicle.

Charles Chase in scenes from "Bad Boy," a two-reel Hal Roach comedy released by Pathe.

Arthur W. Kelly Treasurer of United Artists

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of United Artists Corporation held this week, Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president, was elected treasurer to fill the office made vacant by the recent resignation of Maurice G. Cleary.

Mr. Kelly, who was formerly connected as an executive with several companies controlled by the Gould interests, made his entry into the motion picture industry as business manager of a unit producing pictures for First National under the supervision of Earl Hudson. Later he was appointed by Charles Chaplin to represent him. Mr. Kelly accompanied Joseph M. Schenck on his recent trip to Europe to investigate foreign film markets.

JOHN BARRYMORE MEDAL WINNER Is Awarded Rudolph Valentino Trophy

JOHN Barrymore for his acting in "Beau Brummel" has been awarded the Rudolph Valentino medal for the best performance by any screen actor during 1924. The decision was made by critics on leading newspapers and magazines throughout the United States.

Seventy-five critics voted on the award and their votes were widely scattered, Barrymore received fifteen votes, while Norma Talmadge received nine for her performance in "Secrets." On the vote for first, second and third choices Barrymore received twenty-seven against Miss Talmadge's twenty-nine. Among the other votes for first place Lon Chaney received six for "He Who Gets Slapped," Douglas Fairbanks four for "The Thief of Bagdad" and Milton Sills three for "The Sea Hawk."

Valentino donated the medal last year and announced at that time he would give a medal annually for the most meritorious performance on the screen. Any player is elegible to win with the exception of the doner. The medal is of gold and was designed by William Cameron Menzies. John Barrymore is at present in London where he is appearing in "Hamlet."

Laemmle Returns From Coast

Universal Chief Completes Plans for Busiest Season in Company's History

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal Pictures Corporation returned to New York last Saturday from Hollywood, where he has been for the past three months reorganizing the production staff and securing stories and players for the coming season.

Laemmle is enthusiastic over prospects and says production exceeds by thirty percent that of any other season in Universal history. There are thirty Jewels contemplated for next year, all are purchased and the great majority have been placed in production at Universal City.

In addition to the Jewels there will be twenty-six Blue Streak Westerns, six adventure stories in fifteen to eighteen episodes each, twelve two-reel Gump comedies, fifty-two Century Comedies, fifty-two Bulls Eye Comedies, fifty-two Mustang Westerns, and two International News Reel releases a week. This makes a total of between seven hundred and eight hundred reels of pictures.

The Universal chief waxes enthusiastic over "The Phantom of the Opera," which opens on April 28th at the Curran Theatre in San Francisco. Laemmle says the Phantom will surpass the "Hunchback of Notre Dame."

A number of players were signed for the Universal stock company during Laemmle's stay on the coast. These include Louise Dresser, Jason Robards, Marion Nixon, Lola Todd, Prince Youcca Troubetzkoy, Marceline Day, Josie Sedgwick, Margaret Quimby, Cesare Gravina, Georgie Grandee and Charles Puffy.

Whitman Bennett to Star Jane Novak

Jane Novak has been signed by Whitman Bennett to star in a series of five pictures for release through Arrow Film Corporation. The titles have not yet been announced but it is said the stories will be lavishly mounted

F. B. O. Studios Are Active

Productions of All Descriptions Are Under Way for the Coming Season

FEW studios on the coast are showing signs of more activity than F. B. O. Short subjects, westerns and productions of nearly all descriptions are either under way or being prepared to go into work.

Leo Meehan is preparing to start shooting on the second of his pictures from the novels of the late Jean Stratton-Porter, and Emory Johnson is finishing the script for his new special, which will be a newspaper story.

Fred Thompson is completing the final scenes for "The Bandit's Baby," a comedy drama of the open spaces, and Evelyn Brent is starting her sixth starring vehicle, a crook melodrama adopted from Bayard Veiller's stage success, "The Chatterbox." Ralph Ince is directing. Lefty Flynn has started "High and Handsome" with Harry Garson directing.

Director Wesley Ruggles has completed the eighth of the "Pacemakers" series starring George O'Hara and Alberta Vaughn. This will be followed by two two-reel series, the first the work of Sam Hellman and the second from the new Witwer stories.

Tentative plans are going forward for the filming of the first of the LauraJean Libbey stories, recently acquired by F. B. O., but no definite starting date has been set.

Yakima Canutt will shortly start work on a new series of westerns under the supervision of Ben Wilson, and Bob Custer, having finished "The Texas Bearcat," is preparing to start a new one.

Arrow Changes Title of Alaska Picture

Arrow has changed the title on its Alaska-made picture and it will be released in the immediate future as "North of Nome" instead of "The Eternal Frontier," under which title it was produced. The picture was made in its entirety along the Yukon.

The cast is headed by Robert McKim, while the leading feminine role is enacted by Gladys Johnston, selected by a group of native Alaskans as the most beautiful girl in the territory.

The picture, which is said to have been almost a year in the making, was directed by Raymond K. Johnston from a story by Harvey Gates.

Cadman Writes "A Lover's Oath" Music Theme

A special rhapsody for "A Lover's Oath," first of the product to be made by the Astor Distributing Corporation, has been written by Charles Wakefield Cadman, well known American composer. It is the general theme of the music that will go with all bookings on the film.

The composition is entitled Omar Khayyam, which is the theme of the photoplay, in which Ramon Novarro and Kathleen Key play the leading roles. Ferdinand P. Earle adapted the poem to the screen and directed the production.

"American Pluck" is Being Edited and Titled

"American Pluck," the first George Walsh picture for Chadwick Pictures Corporation, has been completed and is now being edited and titled by Ralph Spence, who also prepared the screen adaptation. It will be released by Chadwick immediately following "The Wizard of Oz," first of the Chadwick product for the 1925-26 season.

Walsh will start work shortly on a new picture under the direction of Scott Dunlop. Joan Meredith, Wampas Baby star will probably have an important role

Wilson Makes Color Films of Charity Pageant

Sering D. Wilson, president of Sering D. Wilson & Co., Inc., producers of short subjects in natural colors, made several scenes of a rehearsal for "Why Not?" a musical comedy to be given for charity by a group of Philadelphia society people at the Little Theatre in that city. The pictures were made with the Wilson-Wetherald color camera. The stunt was arranged for purposes of publicity and exploitation of the new color process.

Albert Warner to Be Married in May

THE approaching marriage of Albert Warner, of Warner Bros., to Mrs. Bessie Segal, was announced this week. The marriage will take place in May. Mrs. Segal is the daughter of Moe Levy, and her husband, who died about a year ago, was a close friend of Mr. Warner. The two families have an acquaintance dating back many years. Mr. Warner is one of the best liked executives in the motion picture industry, and his friends are showering him with congratulations.

Cavanagh Will Exploit the Neilan Productions

P. A. Powers has placed Raymond Cavanagh in charge of publicity, exploitation and advertising of Marshall Neilan Productions, the new independent producing organization recently formed by Powers and Neilan. Their first picture will be "The Sky Rocket," from the Adela Rogers St. Johns novel, with which Neilan will launch Peggy Hopkins Joyce on her screen career.

Cavanagh, who has long been prominent in the exploitation of pictures, has already started organizing his staff. He has with him Burton Rice, well known artist, and Pauline Morgan, a fashion writer.

Young Collier Signs Long Paramount Contract

Paramount has signed William Collier Jr., to a long time contract and is already considering several important parts for him following the completion of his present role as the prodigal son in "The Wanderer."

Collier, twenty-three years old, is the son of William Collier, noted playwright and stage comedian. He has already gained considerable prominence in a number of picture productions, and is said to have his most impressive role in " The Wanderer."

"Anything Once" is Ready for Release

Jack Weinberg, president of Classplay Pictures Corporation, has his first production, "Anything Once," ready for distribution. The cast is headed by Tuliy Marshall, Gladys Walton and Arko, the European police dog, and also includes Harold Austin, Francis McDonald and Mathilde Brundage.

The picture is in five reels and is a semi-comedy-dramatic romance. The film is an adaptation of Nate H. Edwards novel of the same name.

Division Managers of F. B. O. in Session

HARRY M. BERMAN, General Sales Manager of Film Booking Offices, announces that a meeting of the division managers of the company will be held at the Hotel Astor, New York, on April 26th, 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th, for the discussion of sales and advertising policies covering F. B. O.'s 1925-26 Fall and Winter program.

The division managers who will attend are: Charles Rosenzweig, Manager of F. B. O.'s New York Exchange; E. J. Smith, of Buffalo; C. E. Penrod, of Indianapolis; M. P. Weisfeldt, of Minneapolis; Cleve Adams, of Chicago; A. A. Schmidt, of Los Angeles, and P. C. Taylor of Toronto, Canada.

Berman will preside at the five day meeting. Among the F. B. O. executives and officials who will attend the meeting are:

Colvin W. Brown, of the Executive Committee; Nat G. Rothstein, Director of Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation, John Brownell, East Coast Scenario Editor, Lee Marcus, Assistant to Berman, Al Boasberg and Carl Goe of the Sales Promotion Department, and Harry Osborne, Assistant Advertising Manager.

This meeting will act as a forerunner of the sales meeting to be held in Chicago about May 1st, at which all branch managers will be present.

JOHNNY HINES IN NEW SERIES
Will Be Starred By First National

JOHNNY HINES is to be starred in a series of features which C. C. Burr will produce for First National distribution. The contract for the Hines group was signed recently between Burr and First National.

The pictures will be of the type in which the star has specialized for some time and in which he has built up a large following among the picture patrons.

Production of the first feature under the contract will begin next month. It will be made under the direction of Charles Hines, who has directed several of the star's recent pictures. The play will be based on a popular novel, the announcement states.

Mr. Hines, who is not yet thirty years old, is a native of Golden, Colo. He was educated in Pittsburgh and at the College of the City of New York. He began his screen career with Peerless-World. Among other productions which he has made are "A Scrap of Paper," "Neighbors," "Hearts of Gold," "The Little Intruder," "Eastward Ho!" the Torchy comedies for Educational, "Sure Fire Flint," "Burn 'Em Up Jones," "Luck," "Little Johnny Jones" and "Conductor 1492."

Fox Finishes Current Program

"Everyman's Wife" Last of This Season's Specials in Cutting Room—New Films Started

THE cameras at the Fox studios in Los Angeles have cranked their last scene for the current program of that company. The completion of scenes for "Everyman's Wife," which is now being edited by Director Maurice Elvey, has released all of the studio facilities to the work of making the specials and short features which will be produced for the 1925-26 schedule of Fox Film.

Only three specials for this year's list remain to be shipped from the studios. These are all in the cutting room, where in addition to Elvey, W. S. Van Dyke is working on a print of "Hearts and Spurs," a Buck Jones starring vehicle, and Edmund Mortimer is editing "Scandal Proof," in which Shirley Mason is starred.

The program which Fox will present during the 1925-26 season has not been specifically outlined as yet. It will be headed by "The Iron Horse." Other pictures for the new program which have been completed and exhibited at pre-release engagements are "As No Man Has Loved," the adaptation of Edward Everett Hale's "The Man Without a Country," and the screen version of Channing Pollock's stage success "The Fool."

John Griffith Wray, one of the most recent acquisitions to the Fox directorial staff, and who will make at least two specials for next season's schedule, has been assigned to direct the production of "Marriage," the H. G. Wells novel which will be the first work of that author to be adapted to the screen. The selection of Mr. Wray, who has an illustrious record as a director, to film the work makes it evident that the Fox officials intend giving the celebrated English writer an auspicious introduction to pictures.

In addition to these and the John Golden plays selected for filming, it is known the new program will include two John Ford productions, "Kentucky Pride," and "The Fighting Heart;" and the Tom Mix special "The Everlasting Whisper," "Timber Wolf," in which Buck Jones will star, and "Durand of the Bad Lands," also starring Jones; and adaptations of "East Lynne," and "Havoc."

The first three of the Golden Unit of Clean American Plays which are to be filmed are "Lightnin'," "The Wheel," and "The First Year."

First of Banner Series in Production

Director Ben Verschleiser started production on the coast Thursday of "The Love Gamble," first of a series of six pictures to be produced by Banner Productions, for distribution through the Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation. The cast is headed by Irene Rich and also includes Robert Frazer, Pauline Garon and Arthur Rankin. Sam Briskin of Banner is supervising production.

"The Love Gamble" is an adaptation from the novel by Mazie Greig and depicts night life in Boston. Ray H. Leason is outlining the advertising and exploitation campaign for the picture.

Holland Commissions Two to Film Flower Show

Abe Meyer, Hugo Risenfeld's assistant, and Colonel W. F. Clarke have been commissioned by the Holland government to take motion pictures of the National Flower exhibit, which takes place in Rotterdam in May. They will be guests of the government during their stay there. The exhibit is held only once in ten years.

Two pictures are to be made by Colonel Clarke and Meyer. One will be along theatrical lines and the other of an educational nature. Queen Wilhelmina will appear in these films as will a number of the best folk dancers and actors in Holland.

Metro-Goldwyn In Conference

First Sales Convention Since Merger Brings Many Executives to New York

THE first annual sales convention since the merger of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer interests a year ago, is being held this week at the Hotel McAlpin, New York. It brought together representatives from every part of the United States and Canada.

The sessions opened Monday morning with Marcus Loew, president of Metro-Goldwyn presiding, and concluded with a dinner Thursday evening. Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios came east to represent the producing organization, accompanied by Pete Smith, newly appointed director of publicity at the studios.

Extreme optimism and enthusiasm characterized the conference at which plans for the 1925-26 season formed the chief subject of discussion. The reports of district managers and branch managers were to the effect that in the past year the company has built up much good will among the exhibitors, through a consistent output of box office successes.

Louis B. Mayer discussed the "Quality 52" he will produce and stressed the necessity of complete cooperation between the studio and the man in the field. He said the present production activity at the studios was the greatest in the history of the organization, and spoke in particular of "Ben Hur," which he characterized as a new type of super production not made for the present alone, but for exhibition in years to come.

Emil Harder to Produce in Switzerland

Emil Harder has completed arrangements to produce a series of ten pictures at his new studios at Zurich, Switzerland, with American casts, technicians and writers. Harder and his staff will leave New York for Switzerland after the premiere of his latest picture, "William Tell," which follows "Charley's Aunt" into the Cameo in New York.

Among those already engaged by Harder for his productions in Switzerland are, Hoey Lawlor, scenarist, Paul A. Yawitz, who will establish a publicity bureau in Zurich; Louis Honegger, actor; and Gilda Kreegan, formerly star of "Little Jessie James," the Broadway musical comedy success.

The first of the pictures to be produced in Switzerland upon the return of the company is tentatively titled "The Danger Sign." It was written by Lawlor, who will also prepare scripts for five additional stories.

Earl Hudson A.M.P.A. Speaker

"Today's Reporter is Tomorrow's Successful Producer," He Tells Members

IN AN address before members of the A. M. P. A. at the weekly luncheon held in New York Thursday, April 16th, Earl Hudson, Eastern production manager of First National Pictures, declared that the potential film producer of the future is the publicity man with the background of newspaper experience.

"We read advertisements in the magazines and newspapers about courses in photoplaywriting, but I believe the greatest university in the training of men and women to fit them as creators of screen entertainment can be divided into three classes: First, there is the newspaper field, where one gets to know life and develops the art of writing. The next step is to the motion picture publicity and advertising departments, where one can focus his talent on the entertainment business and give play to his creative ability. From that point it is an easy step to the studio and scenario department. After that one should have had adequate experience for the production of motion pictures."

Exploitation and general advertising possibilities should be injected into a story before it is filmed, according to Hudson, who added that because of the short-sightedness of executives the efficiency of the publicity man is reduced 50 per cent when he is allowed to consider exploitation and advertising only after the picture is finished.

Attacks Daylight Saving in Canada

The second attack on Daylight Saving in Canada made in the House of Commons at Ottawa within recent days occurred April 16 when W. Black, Progressive member for the constituency of South Huron, Ontario, declared that "Daylight Saving is the greatest curse that this country has even seen.

"The Daylight Saving resolution passed by the Canadian House of Commons some years ago has done more harm and made more lazy men than anything on the statute books of the country," he declared. He favored the abolition of laws which enabled municipalities to change the clocks to summer time under a local referendum or by vote of the civic councils.

Black blamed Daylight Saving as one of the causes for financial stringency in Canada. A few days previously, A. J. Benoit, Federal member for a Quebec riding, had launched a similar attack against Daylight Saving on various grounds, calling on the Canadian Parliament to do away with any but Standard time.

"Zander the Great" Opens Los Angeles Engagement

Marion Davies in "Zander the Great," the new Cosmopolitan production, opened an indefinite run at the Criterion Theatre, Los Angeles, on April 18. Miss Davies and prominent members of her supporting cast in the picture attended the premiers, which attracted a large gathering of leading screen celebrities.

A special music score written by Victor Schertzinger and Ann Pennington in a series of dance numbers were among the special features which accompanied the first presentation of "Zander the Great."

Survey Shows 631 Theatres in Large German Cities

There are 631 picture theatres in nine of the large German cities, according to a survey published by "The Film Kurier," German trade publication. Berlin with a population of three and one half million has 351 picture houses. Hamburg has 54 theatres, or one for every 18,000; Munich, 53 or one for every 12,000; Cologne, 40 or one for every 15,000; Leipzig, 34 or one for every 17,700; Breslau, 31, one for every 17,000; Frankfort-Main, 35, one for each 13,000; Hanover, 23, which is one for each 13,500; and Stuttgart, 12, one for each 25,700.

"Human Cargo" Completed by Nicholson

Nicholson Productions has completed "Human Cargo," first of a series of special features to be made for the independent market. The story was adapted by A. Stone from his own book and deals with the activities of immigrant smuggling bands.

Robert Agnew and Gloria Grey are the featured players, and the cast includes Allen Sears, Carlton Griffin, William Orlamond, Tom Shirley, John Pringle and Dorothy Donald. Frank E. Nicholson directed.

Nina Romano Will Support House Peters

Nina Romano, who recently announced her secret marriage of some time ago to Lou Tellegen, will appear opposite to House Peters in "The Titans" for Universal. There are two of these feminine leads and the other will be played by Ruth Clifford. In the supporting cast are Jere Austin, Ray Hallor, Lionel Belmore and Gertrude Claire. Edward Sloman is directing the picture, which is one of the Jewel features of the White List.

Charlotte Merriam in Cast of Vitagraph Feature

David Smith, producing James Oliver Curwood's "Steele of the Royal Mounted" for Vitagraph, has selected Charlotte Merriam to play the role of Isobel. Miss Merriam has played leading roles in other Vitagraph productions

Cecil De Mille Insured for $1,000,000

THE Cinema Corporation of America, holding company of the Cecil De Mille corporation, announced last week that it had insured Cecil B. De Mille for $1,000,000.

Arrange Song Tieup for "Stop Flirting"

Producers Distributing Corporation has arranged a music tieup as an exploitation aid for "Stop Flirting," the Christie feature comedy soon to be released by that company. The firm of Breau and Tobias, music publishers, will soon introduce a song under the title "Stop Flirting," written in fox trot time by Russell Tarbos. The lyrics are by Henri Sloane. Under the arrangement with the music publishers the song will be featured in conjunction with the picture by means of window displays and other exploitation. The number has been cued into the musical setting written for the picture.

Gilbert Seldes Signed by Sawyer-Lubin

Gilbert Seldes, well known as a journalist and picture critic, has been engaged by Sawyer-Lubin to head their scenario department. Seldes has had wide experience as a dramatic, music and picture critic. He headed that department for the Philadelphia Evening Ledger and later became managing editor of the Dial, for which he is still dramatic critic. He is also critic for "The Nation" and a regular contributor on the pictures for Vanity Fair.

Elaine Hammerstein Has Lead in Fox Special

"Everyman's Wife," last of the Fox specials to be put into production at the west coast studios this season, has Elaine Hammerstein in the leading role, with Herbert Rawlinson playing opposite her. The production is being directed by Maurice Elvey. Robert Cain has been selected for the heavy part and Dorothy Phillips and Diana Miller are playing important character roles. The story is an original by Ethel Hill and Enid Hibbard.

Browning Starts Work on "The Mystic"

With the addition of Mitchell Lewis and Robert Ober to the cast, Tod Browning has started production on his own story "The Mystic" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Aileen Pringle and Conway Tearle have the leading roles. The picture is the first to be made by Browning under his new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"Scandal Street" Bought for Arrow

"Scandal Street," a story by Frank R. Adams which ran serially in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, has been purchased by Arrow and will be produced by Whitman Bennett for Arrow release.

Betty Bronson to Appear in "Ben Hur"

THE role of the Madonna in "Ben Hur" is to be played by Betty Bronson, whose services for the part have been obtained by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer through arrangement with Famous Players-Lasky. With Miss Bronson's selection for the madonna role the cast for "Ben Hur" has been virtually completed.

Scenes from the Ivan Abramson production, "Lying Wives."

20 In Warners' Stock Company

Have Long Term Contracts With Several Well Known Screen Players—Additions Swell List

THE Warner Brothers' stock company, which for the past three months has been steadily growing as new stars have been signed and those already under contract have been re-engaged under long-term agreements, now includes the names of twenty stars and featured players who will play in the leading roles of the pictures this company will make under the production schedule mapped out for next year.

The rate at which producers have been signing up screen players who have attained reputations as stars or featured actors has left few of the well advertised personalities of the pictures in the free lance ranks. Warners have taken a leading part in the producer activities in this direction, with the result that one of the largest stock companies assembled by any one producing organization is now enlisted under the Warner banner.

Among the male stars who have signed with Warners are John Barrymore, Lowell Sherman, Syd Chaplin, Huntly Gordon, Gayne Whitman, Kenneth Harlan, Matt Moore, Clive Brook, John Harron, Monte Blue, Willard Louis, John Roche, John Patrick, and Don Alvarado. The latter is the only newcomer to feature honors on the screen. He is a Warner "find" and officials of the company are enthusiastic concerning his future in pictures.

The feminine stars are Patsy Ruth Miller, Irene Rich, Marie Prevost, Louise Fazenda, Dorothy Devore and June Marlowe. Another Warner star is Rin-Tin-Tin, the dog actor which is to be featured in several pictures next year.

In addition to the players, directors and writers of recognized ability have been placed under contract.

Writers signed recently are Bess Meredyth and Charles Logue, and renewals for Hope Loring, Louis Lighton, Julius Josephson and Darryl Francis Zanuck have recently been signed. C. Gardner Sullivan.

Among the directors who will make Warner pictures for some time to come are Ernst Lubitsch, Harry Beaumont, William Beaudine, Millard Webb, James Flood, Roy Del Ruth and Herman Raymaker. Alan Crosland and Fred Newmeyer are specially contracted directors for one or more productions.

First National Names New Head of Omaha Branch

J. S. Abrose has succeded Leo J. McCarthy as Omaha branch manager for First National Pictures. Mr. McCarthy has been with First National in Omaha for six years as salesman and branch manager. On May 1 he will go to Chicago to begin his new work as buyer for the A. H. Blank Enterprises. The new position he will take has been created since the consolidation of the Blank interests with Balaban and Katz.

Mr. Abrose, the new First National manager in Omaha, has been with the sales force of the organization for the last two years, during which period of service he lead the Omaha First National sales staff.

Mayer In East For Convention

Head of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios Says That Production May Be Increased

LOUIS B. MAYER, vice-president in charge of production of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's studios at Culver City, who arrived in New York this week to attend the sales convention of the company there, declared that his organization is at present engaged in the greatest production activity it has yet known. "There will be no let-down of production," he stated. "We are, on the contrary, planning an even heavier schedule.

"We have increased the equipment of our studios, and added new buildings, in preparation for the biggest production program our company has known," he continued.

"When I left the coast Fred Niblo was shooting important scenes of 'Ben Hur,' King Vidor had started 'The Big Parade' and Tod Browning 'The Mystic.' Bob Leonard was finishing 'Time, the Comedian,' Alf Goulding had Rupert Hughes' production of 'Don't' well under way, as Monta Bell had 'Pretty Ladies.' Reginald Barker was shooting interiors of 'The White Desert' after a location trip to the Rocky Mountains, and Edmund Goulding was hard at work on 'Wrath,' after a location trip to the Tehachapi Mountains. Marshall Neilan had completed 'Patsy,' and Hobart Henley was completeing 'Nothing to Wear.'

"Other units were ready to start work, and by the time I return to the coast several new productions will probably be under way."

De Mille Signs Rupert Julian

First Production of New Company Starts Under Iribe and Urson

RUPERT JULIAN, whose most recent directorial work was the production of "The Phantom of the Opera," the Universal special, has been engaged by Cecil B. DeMille. According to the announcement Mr. Julian will direct at least two of the pictures which De Mille is to make this year for Producers Distributing Corporation.

Camera work has been started on the first picture to be made at the new De Mille studios. It is being produced under title "Hell's Highroad," with Leatrice Joy in the starred role. Frank Urson and Paul Iribe are directing the work.

Among the principals in support of Miss Joy are Edmund Burns, Robert Edeson, Julia Faye and Helene Sullivan.

The story is an adaptation written by Eve Unsell and Beatrice Van of a story of the same title by Ernest Pascal. It is a society drama dealing with the adventures of a girl who believes that a background of wealth and luxury is necessary to marital happiness and who schemes to make her husband rich and influential. She succeeds in the venture, but on discovering that gold has usurped the place which love once had in her husband's heart, she reverses her tactics and brings about his financial ruin.

Lubitsch to Make "Waltz Dream" for Warners

The next Ernst Lubitsch production for Warner Brothers will be "A Waltz Dream," produced on a spectacular scale, according to the Warner offices. The story will be an adaptation from the famous opera by the Viennese composer, Richard Straus. Preparations for the production are now under way and Lubitsch is at work on the scenario, which he will prepare himself.

Steps have been taken to assemble the cast, none of whose members has yet been announced. Research work is being done for the purpose of obtaining the utmost accuracy of detail and local color. A competent staff has been selected to attend to the technicalities of uniforms, costumes and court etiquette.

Tod Browning Will Direct "The Mystic"

Tod Browning's next production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be an original screen story of his own, "The Mystic," with Aileen Pringle and Conway Tearle in the leading roles. This will mark the return of both Miss Pringle and Tearle to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer banner after a lengthy absence. Miss Pringle is a contract member of the organization, but she has been loaned to other companies since her appearence in King Vidor's "Wife of the Centaur."

A. Victor Smith Recovering From Appendicitis Attack

A. Victor Smith, of Vitagraph, has almost entirely recovered from a serious illness. Two weeks ago Friday he was stricken with appendicitis and the next day underwent an operation at the Flatbush Sanitarium, on Cortelyou Road, Brooklyn. The operation was performed by Dr. H. Kalvin and the improvement in his condition has been constant.

Lefty Flynn's Next to Be "High and Handsome"

Lefty Flynn's next picture for F.B.O. will be "High and Handsome," a story by Gerald Beaumont. This will be the second of a series of six comedy dramas the star will make for F.B.O. this season. Harry Garson is producing and directing the productions.

Elmer Clifton Will Direct Barthelmess

INSPIRATION Pictures has signed Elmer Clifton to direct Richard Barthelmess in his future starring productions for First National release. He will start on the picture to follow "Shore Leave," which went into production last week with John S. Robertson directing. Robertson, who has directed eight of the Barthelmess productions will take a vacation abroad following the completion of the present picture.

Clifton has had long experience both as an actor and in the directorial end. For nine years he was an actor and a directorial assistant to D. W. Griffith. He firmly established himself as a director with "Down to the Sea in Ships." He has also directed Barthelmess in the past. What the next production will be has not yet been determined upon.

Four Warner Units Working; Four More to Start Soon

Productions on the 1925-26 program from Warner Brothers is moving ahead at top speed. Four companies are now at work and four more will soon be doing camera work on pictures to be released on the new season's schedule of forty features.

Harry Beaumont is filming "Rose of the World," the Kathleen Norris story, in which Patsy Ruth Miller and Alan Forrest will be featured. "The Golden Cocoon" is being made under the direction of Millard Webb, with Helene Chadwick and Huntly Gordon in the principal roles. Rin-Tin-Tin is being directed by Herman Raymaker in "Below the Line," an original script by Charles Logue, and "The Limited Mail," a railroad melodrama with Monte Blue, Vera Reynolds and Willard Louis in prominent roles is being filmed by George Hill.

The four pictures in preparation are "The Man on the Box," "The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted," "Bobbed Hair," and the Ernst Lubitsch production to follow "Kiss Me Again."

Corinne Griffith is to Do "Classified"

Corinne Griffith is completing "The Marriage Whirl" for First National and will shortly start work in "Classified" for the same company. "The Marriage Whirl" is an adaptation from the J. Hartley Manners stage play, while "Classified" is from the story by Edna Ferber, recently published in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. The continuity for the latter is well along in preparation and work will get under way in a few weeks.

"White Monkey" Completed for First National

"The White Monkey," third of the series of Barbara La Marr features being made by Associated Pictures Corporation for First National release, has been completed at their Fort Lee studio, and cutting and titling of this important Sawyer-Lubin production is to begin at once.

Richard Talmadge Starts in "Twenty Years After"

Richard Talmadge started work this week for F.B.O. in "Twenty Years After." The screen story by James Bell Smith is based on Dr. Samuel Johnston's story "The History of Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia."

Pete Smith in Charge of M-G-M Studio Publicity

PETE SMITH, one of the best known publicity men in the film industry, has been put in charge of publicity at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio. Smith will arrive in New York this week to confer with Howard Dietz, newly appointed director of advertising and publicity for the entire organization.

Pete Smith has been associated with the motion picture industry as a publicity man for many years. He has served as publicity director for several of the most prominent producers and distributors.

Charles Condon, who formerly handled the coast publicity, becomes one of the production managers of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company.

One of the latest of First National's eastern production s is "Chickie," from which these scenes were taken

Fox To Hold Sales Convention

Twelfth Annual Session Brings Executives From All Parts of the World

THE Fox Film Corporation will hold its twelfth annual sales convention the week starting Monday, April 27th, with district and branch managers, salesmen and special representatives present from all parts of the United States, as well as twenty-five foreign representatives from all parts of the globe.

The program for the season of 1925-26 will be announced at the sessions, as well as the ambitious plans for future years. William Fox is returning from the west coast where he has been supervising the Fox specials for the past three months, and will preside at the convention.

James R. Grainger, general sales manager, will have his first opportunity to meet the large sales force. He will discuss with the delegates the sales plan for the Fall campaign which starts next August. Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the Fox organization will also be present at all meetings.

The following district and branch managers will be in attendance: O. E. Rieffel, Albany; George R. Allison, Atlanta; Harry F. Campbell, Boston; W. C. Rowell, Buffalo; J. M. Linn, Butte; B. S. Bryan, Charlotte; George F. Dembow, Chicago; Rudolph Knoepflo, Cincinnati; Ward E. Scott, Cleveland; P. K. Johnston, Dallas; Harry Cassidy, Denver; Frank D. Drew, Detroit; Harry J. Bailey, Indianapolis; M. A. Levy, Kansas City; R. M. Yost, Los Angeles; E. T. Gomersall, Minneapolis; James F. Dermody, New Haven; B. L. Dudenhefer, New Orleans; Louis Rosenbluh, New York; Anthony Ryan, Oklahoma City; B. B. Reingold, Omaha; Edgar Moss, Philadelphia; W. J. Kupper, Pittsburgh; George E. McKean, St. Louis; A. H. Schayer, Salt Lake City; H. J. Sheehan, San Francisco; J. J. Sullivan, Seattle; George T. Landis, Washington; Ira H. Cohen, Toronto.

In addition there will be the following salesmen and special representatives: W. J. Mahoney, Albany; G. E. Dickman, Buffalo; E. Grohe, Chicago; J. Lorentz, Chicago; B. F. Broyles, Dallas; I. Hirsch, Indianapolis; D. Griffith, Kansas City; L. Miller, Minneapolis; Harry Gibbs, New Haven; Joseph Schaeffer, Philadelphia; F. C. Bonistall, Pittsburgh; C. W. McKean, St. Louis; G. H. Oayne, Washington; Max Roth, George A. Roberts.

Eight for First National Near Completion

Within the next few days photography will be completed on four new pictures for First National release, with four others in the cutting room. Those for which concluding scenes are now being shot are, "The Desert Flower," starring Colleen Moore; "Soul Fire," starring Richard Barthelmess; "The White Monkey," starring Barbara La Marr, and "The Making of O'Malley," starring Milton Sills.

The four productions in the cutting room are, "Fine Clothes," with Lewis Stone, Alma Rubens and Percy Marmont; "The Talker," with Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson; "Just a Woman," with Conway Tearle, Claire Windsor and Percy Marmont, and "The Marriage Whirl," with Harrison Ford and Kenneth Harlan.

Lon Chaney and scenes from "The Monster," a Metro-Goldwyn picture produced by Roland West.

Independent Exchanges Buying

Three New States Rights Companies Figure Prominently in Recent Deals

THREE new independent exchanges recently formed by men well known in film distribution circles, figure prominently in new territorial purchases reported by states rights operators. The newly formed organizations are the Liberty Film Corporation of Philadelphia, formed by Tony Luchese; the exchange established in Boston to distribute in the New England states, by E. A. Golden, former district manager of Metro-Goldwyn; and the Capitol Film Exchange, Inc., Chicago, organized by Henri Ellman,

The Luchese company has taken the Rayart serial "Secret Service Sanders," and the series of Butterfly Comedies offered by that concern.

The Golden Distributing Corporation was the first to acquire territorial rights for "Lying Wives," first of the four Ivan Emerald Productions which Ivan Players, Inc., will produce this year. Golden also signed up for the product which Henry Ginsberg is offering on the independent market. The rights are for the New England states.

The Capitol Film Exchange has acquired the Northern Illinois and Indiana territorial rights for the six Columbia, six Waldorf, and six Perfection, pictures from Columbia Pictures Corporation.

The Renown Pictures, Inc., of New York, has lined up several important forthcoming independent programs for distribution in that territory. The company has contracted for the entire list of the Tiffany Big Twelve, the Truart "Blue Ribbon," "Novelty," and "Cinemolodramas" series. Four other features were also acquired recently by Renown.

Lumas Film Corporation has closed contracts for the six Gotham pictures with Oscar Oldknow, acting for the Southern States Film Corp., of Atlanta; and also with Preferred Pictures Corporation of Salt Lake City. The latter company has also acquired the Phil Goldstone output for next season.

Flax Brothers' Liberty Film Exchange of Washington, D. C., will distribute in their territory the two Rayart series "Battling Brewster," and "Secret Service Sanders." The latter production has been sold for the Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas territory to Independent Film Service Company of Dallas, Texas.

Other sales by Columbia Pictures Corporation include a deal under which the Celebrated Players Film Co., of Milwaukee, will distribute the entire production program of the company for the 1925-26 season in the state of Wisconsin.

Foreign territorial deals reported include the sale by Ivan Players of "Lying Wives" to Exhibitors Alliance of New Zealand for that country and outlying territory. The Australasian Film Company has purchased the Australian and Straight Settlements rights for the Ivan production; while Max Glucksman closed for the Argentine, Paraguay, Uruguay, Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Brazil on the picture.

Glucksman also purchased the rights to "Justice of the Far North" from C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation for those territories.

A. G. Steen annouces the sale of the feature starring Charley Paddock, champion foot racer, and titled "9 3-5 Seconds," to the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation for all of the foreign territory. The foreign rights to the series of two-reel westerns, starring Tom Forman, were also sold to the Inter-Ocean company.

Independent to Film "The Test of Donald Norton"

Screen rights to "The Test of Donald Norton," a novel by Robert Pinkerton, have been purchased by Independent Pictures Corporation. It will be produced in the Hudson Bay country with Bob Custer as the star and will be one of two big specials which Independent will offer this year. Jesse J. Goldburg, president of Independent, states that $150,000 has been appropriated for the making of this production.

The Independent production program for the year calls for eight westerns starring Bob Custer, eight starring Bill Cody, eight "Big Timber" dramas, 26 single reel films to be known as "The Screen Book of Knowledge," and two specials.

Hines' "Crackerjack" Given Tryout

Johnny Hines latest starring vehicle, "The Crackerjack," was given a tryout showing at the Rialto Theatre, Whitestone, Long Island, last Wednesday night and is said to have met with the approval of a capacity audience. The picture followed the regular program of the house and was put on "cold" at 11 P.M. It was shown in ten reels and the audience is said to have remained until 1 A.M. to see the finish.

C. C. Burr, for whom the picture was produced, intends to cut it to about six and one-half reels and to have prints ready for play dates about the first of May.

Frederica Sagor to Adapt "The Plastic Age"

B. P. Schulberg has engaged Frederica Sagor to make the adaptation of "The Plastic Age," the Percy Marks novel which he will produce. The picture will be directed by Gasnier, who will start camera work as soon as he completes "Faint Perfume," the Zona Gale work which he is now filming.

Miss Sagor was formerly Eastern Scenario Editor for Universal.

Schulberg Signs Powell for "Faint Perfume"

B. P. Schulberg has signed William Powell to play the leading male role in "Faint Perfume," which Gasnier is now producing from the Zona Gale novel. He will play opposite Alyce Mills.

Three Series Planned for Truart

TRUART FILMS INCORPORATED, of which M. H. Hoffman is general manager, announces three series of four pictures each for the coming season. One of these will be known as the Blue Ribbon series and its four features are already under way. They are, "Marrying Money," "Salvage," "Age of Indiscretion" and "The Hurricane."

A second group will be the Novelty Series, in which will be featured Louise Lorraine, Rex, the wonder dog, and Black Beauty, the horse. The first of this series, "Wanderers of the Desert" is now being filmed. The third of the group Truart Cinemelodrama will consist of four thrill pictures.

Exhibitors Service Bureau

When the Bischof Department store in Crawfordsville, Ind., held a style show at the Strand theatre in connection with the run of "Fifth Avenue Models" (Universal), the store gave this attractive window display to advertise the show.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Teaser Placards Posted on "He Who Gets Slapped"

The Jefferson theatre in Springfield, Mass., recently put over a snappy campaign on "He Who Gets Slapped," handled by Louis W. Richmond of the Jefferson.

One week before the opening Richmond posted the city with placards reading "He?" and succeeded in arousing curiosity among the public. He then covered the Jefferson with these cards, thereby revealing the connection between these signs and the theatre. A ballyhoo consisting of a clown in an automobile decorated with gay circus banners announced the showing with great effect.

This clown passed out circulars among children at the schools for a face drawing contest which proved enormously popular among the kids. The circulars bore the outline of a clown's head above a wide Elizabethan ruff and announced that cash prizes and free tickets would be given to those who draw the missing features most skillfully. So much interest was aroused by this campaign that the local newspaper made a special news item of it.

Good "Lincoln" Display at Reasonable Expense

An attractive and business-pulling window display that ranks with the best sent in on "Abraham Lincoln," was that arranged by the management of the Home theatre, Oblong, Ill.

Two large, crossed American flags, with a portrait of Lincoln formed the background of the display. Against them were placed framed lithos, a special sign and a miniature log cabin. Small figures, cut out of the stills and lithos led from the log cabin to an "Abraham Lincoln" poster across the window. A trail of Lincoln pennies also led from the cabin to the poster, across the foreground.

"Daddy's Gone a-Hunting" Given Extra Ad Space

When "Daddy's Gone a-Hunting" played at the Tower theatre in St. Paul, Minn., recently, Morris Abrams, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, popularized the showing by taking extra space in all newspapers, by arranging for several window displays, by distributing 2,000 heralds, and by setting up a special lobby display which featured cut-outs. A trailer was also used, and the town was literally posted.

The window displays featured Dunhill pipes, pearl necklaces, hand bags and traveling grips. All of these displays were in prominent locations and exhibited stills from the picture mounted on artistic announcement cards.

New Orleans Campaign for "Lincoln" Well Planned

"Abraham Lincoln" had a recent premiere in New Orleans, where it was given a brilliant presentation at the Liberty theatre by the Saenger Amusement company.

Three weeks in advance the groundwork for the campaign was laid out and supplemented at regular intervals with a definite release schedule.

Three units were the "drive theme" for the work: Educational, Industrial and Entertainment. The first embraced a tie-up with the schools; the second, with the various manufacturing plants employing large numbers of people; and the third, the public with its varying slants of a civic, patriotic and entertaining nature.

Five thousand bookmarks were printed up a week in advance for distribution at the Public library; a Drawing Contest in which embryonic artists from schools and other institutions participated brought thousands of answers and made page one position in the New Orleans States for eight consecutive days. Wayland Taylor, First National exploiteer, visited the Industrial plants and enlisted the aid of foremen and department heads in Americanism among their foreign employees as typified with the Democratic and humane spirit of Lincoln—the man.

Art and antique collectors were looked up to prepare an exhibition in relics, letters and souvenirs of the Lincoln period, which brought to light a dignified and startling collection. A preview five days in advance, to which were invited school teachers, editors, historians and the leading citizens of the city, was the medium for direct "opinion blanks" which were written out immediately after the picture was run. These were localized in the newspaper advertising and carried the personal recommendation of worth-while people.

Effectively arranged music window display on "The Great Divide" (Metro-Goldwyn) by Morris Rosenthal for the Majestic theatre in Bridgeport, Conn., in connection with the engagement of that picture.

Lighted 3-Sheets on Stage for "Love's Wilderness'

The outstanding unit of Manager Harry Hardy's campaign on "Love's Wilderness," at the Liberty, Greenwood, S. C., was the use of illuminated three sheets. One placed on each side of the stage with light thrown on during running of slides proves an excellent way of announcing a coming attraction to patrons, especially if this is done in advance. Manager Hardy displayed this paper on his stage five days prior to opening date.

The usual newspaper and billing campaign was started well in advance with distribution of heralds in the residental section by special carrier two days before opening.

Two excellent window displays were accured on the attraction with photos and stills from the picture.

A special lobby with a twenty-four sheet over entrance of theatre completed campaign.

Radio Night Put Over for "The Rag Man" Showing

When "The Rag Man" played recently at the California theatre in Los Angeles, Cal., the picture was popularized by H. D. McBride, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, and Publicity Director Ray Coffin of the California theatre, who held a special California theatre night over the radio, during which it was announced that free passes would we mailed to the writers of letters received commenting on the program. These letters had to be addressed to the California, and the winners were required to call at the theatre for their tickets. More than 1,500 replies were received.

Three thousand five hundred heralds were distributed and fifty pictorial 24-sheets were used as posting. Window displays also helped exploit the showing.

Illuminated lighthouse, cut-out, and ballyhoo on "The Lighthouse by the Sea" (Warner Bros.) at the Central theatre, Jersey City

Throwaway Card Issued on "Tornado"

W. T. Murray, manager of the Rialto theatre, Atlanta, staged a clever stunt in exploitation of "The Tornado." He had distributed a large number of neat little cards on which were printed on one side: "Nail Down Your Roof—'The Tornado' is coming." And through the card was stuck a long, sturdy nail.

On the other side was printed: "Leave the Baby with a Neighbor; Lock every door securely; See that the fires are banked properly; Then proceed to the Rialto theatre and see House Peters in that great sweeping melodrama, 'The Tornado'.

The cards, which were broadcast all over the city, in both business and residential sections, attracted a great deal of comment.

Heavy Posting Campaign on "So Big" in Nashville

Loew's Vendome theatre, Nashville, Tenn., which recently booked "So Big" put over the picture in the following manner. One week in advance of the screening, a film trailer was started. The interior lobby was decorated with various styles of posters, along with an attractive cloth banner, some ten to twelve feet long, hung just above the main entrance door. There were also a few cut-outs placed in the outer lobby entrance. The cut-outs were of heavy beaver board and contained a picture taken from a three-sheet of Wallace Berry and Colleen Moore.

Out in the front entrance, all three-sheet frames, along with two one-sheet frames, carried posters. Both of the three-sheet frames, were appropriately arranged with an attractive line of photographs in them. Just before the pictures screening, medium sized teaser ads were run in both of the Nashville papers. The Sunday edition of both newspapers, carried larger sized ads.

Just across the street from the theatre, facing Capitol boulevard, a large three-sheet sized cut-out was placed. This is the most conspicuous corner along Church Street, where hundreds pass throughout the day. The poster got its share of recognition. There were also several empty windows obtained on Church street, in which the advertising man for the theatre had one-sheets placed. The various sized billboards over the city, even in the outskirts, were properly taken care of.

An ample supply of window cards were also distributed, some being tacked, others going in merchants store windows. All street cars moving over the city carried quarter-sheet posters advertising the picture. There were also something like three to four thousand heralds distributed. Manager Wallace and W. P. Arnold, exploiter, handled the campaign.

YOUR IDEA

IN THE MAIL

RAY L. NILES, manager of the Unique theatre at Mitchell, S. D., writes that he is mailing a photo of his lobby display on "The Sea Hawk" and remarks that he awaits the book each week for the ideas in the exploitation department. The photo has not yet arrived, as frequently happens when they are mailed separately, but will receive attention as soon as it does.

The management of the Orpheum theatre, Ottawa, Illinois, sends in photos of its window tie-ups on "Peter Pan" and "The Golden Bed." These photos show that at least some of the merchants in Ottawa realize the mutual benefit to be derived from such tie-ups. Both displays feature an abundance of material on the photoplays, which means that the Orpheum theatre received real advertising value, while the stores, in return, received the undivided interest of all of the picture fans in Ottawa. Both displays were neatly arranged and were of the sort which should make it possible to go back to these same stores for further co-operation in the future.

S. S. Solomon, manager of the Republic theatre at Grand and Keap streets, Brooklyn, forwards a photo of the entrants in his Jackie Coogen impersonation contest. There were some 89 youngsters enrolled in the "Jackie Coogen Club," which must have given "The Rag Man" some mighty valuable exploitation.

Proof that theatrical advertising is maintained at a high level in Moline, Ill., is contained in a batch of screen ads received from Clarence L. Lucas, manager of the theatrical department of the Moline Daily Dispatch, who maintains this service for the paper's advertisers. The ads submitted are for the Le Claire theatre, and the pictures publicized are "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," Janice Meredith," "The Beauty Prize," "The Great Divide" and "He Who Gets Slapped." Stock material has been attractively used. The only special material is the theatre name slug—a good investment, by the way, for any house, large or small.

PUNCH IN SMALL ADS

OWING to high space rates, and other considerations, most New York photoplay advertising is limited to the "directory" style of copy—plain type announcements of a more or less routine nature. Now and then, however, in spite of all this, a campaign comes along which would be good in almost any city, and which has elements of novelty and punch that make it of interest to exhibitors outside of New York City.

Such a campaign, it seems to us, is that used in the newspapers of Manhattan during the run of "Charley's Aunt" at the Colony and Cameo theatres. Many of the ads were of the type being used generally about the country on this picture, but a few of the others departed from the beaten trail.

This photo shows how the dance tie-up on "The Wizard of Oz" (Chadwick) was carried out between the Colony theatre, New York, and Roseland.

The display of mirror mosaic vases in the foyer of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, of which Edward L. Hyman is managing director. They were made at the theatre, bits of mirror glass being pressed into the composition of which they were formed. Colored spotlights play on them.

These ads used copy in a simple, chatty style that won attention from the very start and put the reader in a friendly frame of mind. They had sales punch, put over in a not too obvious way. The best part about them, from the standpoint of the small theatre manager, is that they can be duplicated without any special artwork, or at least imitated. A little type, some rule and a thumb-nail cut, and the trick is done. Whether you use it on this particular picture or not, the lay-out itself is worth saving for use at some future time. Frank Wilstach prepared these ads in conjunction with the theatre management.

CANARY CHORUS

ADDING considerably to the high standard of entertainment at the Queen Theatre, Galveston, is the new chorus consisting of five beautiful canary birds.

During the organ solo they delight the audience by their harmonious warbling, often topping the "blue" notes of the organist. Besides being entertaining and ornamental, these little songsters create an atmosphere of romance, a joy to both old and young.

Manager Collins is to be highly complimented in securing the services of such talented "artists."

SUMMER AND THE RADIO

THESE warm days are bringing in their train the first disturbing crackles of static. From now on, radio reception will grow steadily worse, until in July and August even the local stations will not come in without their accompanying static disturbances and distance reception will be virtually impossible.

If it is true that there are more than four million owners of radio sets (and there is not much doubt of it) is there not a very significant thought here for the theatre manager?

In the past it has been assumed that conditions for the picture theatres in the summer were going to be "tough," and plans have been lined up on that basis. But here are several million persons who have been receiving at least a portion of their entertainment from radio, who, during the next few months, will use this form of entertainment to a somewhat less degree. Are not many of them in a frame of mind where they can be brought to the picture theatre instead? It would seem to us that they are.

A worth while experiment along this line would be the running of some special copy in the newspapers, in your program or as a handbill, along this line. It would be neither wise nor necessary to knock radio. Merely use such lines as: "These summer evenings, when static fills the air, the Blank theatre is always a cool and pleasant place to while away the hours."

AND OURS

Another stunt would be to get out a throwaway headed: "Tips to Radio Fans. How to Avoid Static. The problem of avoiding static in radio programs has not been solved, But the picture programs at the Blank theatre are as clear and enjoyable as ever. Movies are an ideal form of light summer entertainment."

HOW BUFFALO DID IT

THE value of the screen and stage as instruments of uplift and education in the modern scheme of life, as well as their worth as agencies of amusement and diversion, was stressed during "Go to Theatre Week," celebrated by the theatres of Buffalo, April 19 to 25. Special programs were put on by every house in an effort to obtain record attendance. "Just as the Lenten season is one of deep devotion and abstinence from worldly things, so it is our purpose to make the after Easter period one of general rejoicing," said Al Beckerich, manager of Loew's State and president of the Buffalo Theatre Managers Association in announcing the idea to the Buffalo public. "We believe we can find no more fitting way to promote merriment and joy than to ask everyone to help by participation in 'Go to Theatre Week.'"

"However i pnlanning a 'Go to Theatre Week,'" said Mr. Beckerich, "it is not our plan to try and drive Buffalonians to the theatre, whether or not they wish to attend. Our real and only motive is to bring to their attention the great good the theatre of today is doing in every community, through furnishing needed wholesome recreation.

"The theatre has become a necessary part of the educational feature of American life, as well as an indispensable method of diversion. This educational feature is especially significant in the case of the schools. Much attention is being paid everywhere to the value of the screen and stage as mediums of instruction of children. The screen, particularly, is lending itself to the enlightenment of the young.

"There is small need of dwelling upon the necessity of mixing play with work. The millions who daily attend the theatres prove in happiness and increased business, or working efficiency, that nature demands a proper portion of both labor and recreation. Mirth and joy are as much a part of the necessities of life as fresh air and food."

In announcing "Go to Theatre Week," some 40 theatres of the city joined in placing a solid page ad in each of the Buffalo newspapers, one paper getting it Friday, another, Saturday, another, Sunday and so on until Tuesday when every paper had published the ad. The papers also carried special stories and Mayor Frank X. Schwab was prevailed upon to issue the following proclamation:

"Whereas, the week of April 19 to 25, inclusive, has been set aside as 'Go to the Theatre Week,' I, as Mayor of the city of Buffalo, hereby officially proclaim the week of April 19 as one of general observance of the 'Go to the theatre Movement,' and particularly urge citizens in general to co-operate.

"The theatre is recognized as a national institution wielding a tremendous influence for general good in this country. It affords a recreation that is greatly advantageous because it permits complete relaxation from business cares, keeping the mind occupied in a healthy way while the body is resting. There is also no question about the theatre being an educational asset to our civic life of today. It portrays the customs, dress and life of this and other days, with both film and stageland playing equally active parts therein.

"Buffalo points with pride to three of the finest vaudeville houses in the country, a great group of the best possible in picture houses and two first class legitimate theatres, across the boards of which the most gifted dramatic talent of the world has walked.

"Therefore, it is with real enthusiasm, that I indorse and participate in this 'Go to the Theatre Week,' and urge fellow Buffalonians to co-operate."

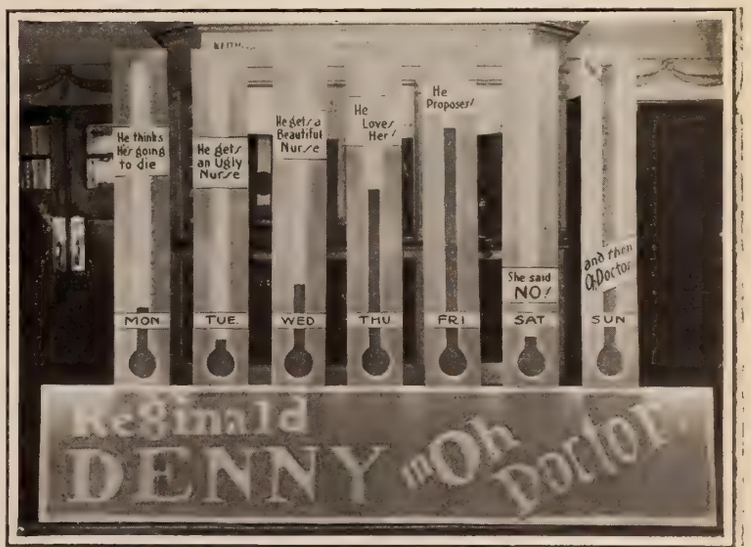
Great good came as a result of the week and it also brought back many folks who for some reason or other had dropped their theatre going habit. While few may have realized it, "Go to the Theatre Week" came during a season of terrible static disturbance in radioland, so that many undoubtedly were glad to desert the dials for the stage or screen.

EASTER ATMOSPHERE

EASTER week is past, but a description of the Easter presentation used by Manager John B. Carroll at the Victory theatre, Tampa, is worth while at this time for future reference in following years. Carroll frequently puts on material of unusual effectiveness, but it is only occasionally possible to stage presentations that will bring forth the spontaneous applause that this did.

The stage was arranged to represent an open field, the back drop being a scene of the outdoors. In front of this were a number of set pieces, with here and there a giant rabbit popping up from the grass. In the center of the stage was an immense easter egg, with smaller ones around it. When the curtain went up on this setting, lighted by colored spots from the booth, it never failed to bring a strong hand, and when the large egg, which was cracked thru the center, opened and disclosed a charming girl with a basket of flowers, there was another round of applause. The young lady came from the egg and rendered a couple of selections.

Carroll contributed a hundred passes to the Victory to go with the easter egg stunt. This brought him a lot of fine publicity as the papers played up the hunt and the Victory offering was of course mentioned in each writeup.



GET THE CHILDREN IN

CHRIS DEIBEL, manager of the Liberty theatre in Youngstown, is a great believer in bringing in the youngsters of the city. On a recent Saturday he put on the first of his special Saturday morning children's performances—and had 2,800 of them in his 1,650 seat house. The performance was scheduled to run from ten to eleven a.m. on Saturday.

At nine o'clock, Deibel says, there was a line in front of the theatre extending solid for three blocks. The show was free. Deibel turned the theatre over to the Youngstown newsboys. Then, with the newsboys as hosts, he invited all the other youngsters of the town to come as guests. The Vindicator tied up with Deibel for the stunt. The newspaper gave a double eight inch column to the story, on the front page, and in that front page space carried a picture of "The Great Circus Mystery," which was to be featured. This picture was a regular ad mat taken from the press book. Never has the Vindicator so wholly entered into co-operation with any exploitation idea.

The story read: "To Every Boy and Girl in Youngstown. You are invited to be our guest at a special performance of 'The Great Circus Mystery' to be given at the Liberty theatre at ten o'clock tomorrow, Saturday morning. This is made possible through the kindness of Manager C. W. Deibel. Come and bring your friends with you. Everything free. (Signed) The Vindicator Newsboys."

Deibel will offer special program adapted for children every Saturday morning from 10-11 at ten cents admission.

Short Subjects and Serials

Chase and Cook Units Out on Location

Two of the Hal Roach units producing comedies for Pathe left this week for location. Charley Chase and a company of thirty-five people are at San Diego making scenes on board the Emma Alexander for the current production being directed by Leo McCarey.

Clyde Cook and his supporting comedians are making scenes at Camp Hearn, near San Diego. In the picture Cook will portray an under-dog in the military service. Thomas Buckingham is directing the film, which will be the first release in this star's series for Pathe.

The Hal Roach Star Comedies unit have started their second production. The picture, which is being directed by Jay A. Howe, has a cast which includes Al St. John, Jimmy Finlayson, Marjorie Whities, Dot Farley, Harry Lorraine, Lige Conley, Martha Sleeps, Lucien Littlefield, Al Hallett, George Rowe, and W. H. Platt.

Winkler Will Re-Issue "Felix" Subjects

The M. J. Winkler organization, distributors of short subjects, have decided to re-issue the first series of "Felix" subjects, originally placed on the market in 1921. These older subjects will be brought out immediately after contracts on the present series have been fulfilled.

The "Felix" re-issues will be included in the Winkler 1925–26 lineup and will keep sixty of these subjects actively at work in all territories.

Educational Releases For May

"Balto's Race to Nome" Among Eight Two-Reelers Picked for the Month's Program

ONE of the most pretentious short subject programs assembled for any one month has been announced for May by Educational, which this week stated that eight two-reel productions, seven of which are comedies, and six single reel comedy and novelty offerings would be released next month.

Among the two-reel offerings will be "Balto's Race to Nome," the Sol Lesser production, starring Gunnar Kasson and his famous dog-team, heroes of the dash to the Alaskan city with anti-toxin. The picture will reproduce scenes of the thrilling race against death, which a few months ago was recounted on the first pages of newspapers and which brought fame to Kasson and "Balto," the leader-dog of the team he drove into Nome. The picture will be released May 17.

Seven well known comedy stars carry the acting honors in the comedies announced for the month. Lloyd Hamilton in "King Cotton," a "Way-down-South-in-Dixie" comedy will be released the first week of the month. "Dragon Alley," a juvenile comedy will accompany the Hamilton picture on the schedule for the week, which will also include "Monkey Business," an Earl Hurd cartoon comedy.

"Tender Feet" with Walter Hiers in the starring role, and "Fares Please," with Al St. John will be on the program for the second week of the month. St. John will appear as the conductor of a trolley car equipped with all the conveniences of a modern hotel.

The third of the "Fables in Color" series entitled "Only a Country Lass," will also be released on May 10th.

In addition to the "Balto" feature, May 17th will bring a Tuxedo Comedy entitled "Curses," and "Earth's Other Half," a Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge reel.

Lige Conley will be seen in the Mermaid Comedy, "Hello, Goodby" as the two-reel subject for release during the week of May 24th. "Wild Waves" a Cameo Comedy with Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance will be the single reel comedy for the week.

The schedule for the month will be concluded with the Christie Comedy "Sit Tight," with Jimmie Adams and the Earl Hurd cartoon comedy, "Two Poor Fish," of the "Pen and Ink Vaudeville" series as the one reel subject for the week.

Kinograms, Educational's news reel will course, be released twice a week in addition to the above subjects.

Neufeld Breaks Arm on Set at Century Studio

Sig Neufeld, production manager at the Century Film Corporation studio in Hollywood, broke his left arm last week in a fall from an elevated platform from which he was supervising the making of a scene for a Wanda Wiley comedy. Neufeld accidentally stepped back off the platform.

Sennett Selects Bathing Girls for New Comedies

Mack Sennett has selected several bathing beauties who will regularly appear in comedies which he will make for the Pathe program. The girls so far chosen to fill the newest designs in bathing costumes, which Gladys Rousseau, chief designer of the studio wardrobe says will feature Jockey Club, Polka dot, boulevarde stripe and cross-word puzzle motifs, are Lillian Knight, Evelyn Francisco, Lois Boyd, Marion McDonald, Della Peterson, Dolores Mendez, Louise Loftus, Julia Duncon and Carol Wines.

Two newcomers among the leading players in Sennett comedies will be given an opportunity to show their talents in pictures started at the studio last week. These are Charley Farrell and Thelma Parr, who is a graduate from the bathing girl ranks. They will have the featured roles in a comedy Eddie Cline is directing.

"Our Gang" and Tryon at Work on New Comedies

Among the new comedies started in production recently at the Hal Roach studios in Culver City are an "Our Gang" two-reeler, and a Glenn Tryon comedy vehicle being directed by James W. Horne.

Tryon is doing the role of a female impersonater and has Fay Wray, James Finlayson, Jules Mendel and Noah Young as leads in his support.

The "Gang" are appearing as "dolls" in the picture they are now filming under Bob McGowan's direction.

Bessie Welsh, Hilliard Karr and Will Hays are feature d in "Tourists De Luxe," a Century Comedy released by Universal. These scenes are taken from the picture.

Pathe Lists May 3 Program

"Our Gang" and Ralph Graves Star in Comedy Releases on Schedule

THE Pathe program of releases for the week of May third will bring the final chapter in the serial "Idaho," and a wide variety of short subjects in which comedy and novelty will be featured.

The comedy will be supplied by two-reelers produced by Mack Sennett and Hal Roach. Ralph Graves in "He Who Gets Smacked" is the Sennett production, while "Shootin' Injuns," featuring "Our Gang," is the Hal Roach contribution to the program.

Graves will be seen in a story burlesquing the manly art of prize fighting. It was written by Felix Adler and A. H. Giebler. Lloyd Bacon directed and Mollie Malone, Eli Stanton, and Marvin Lobach heads the supporting cast.

"Shootin' Injuns" was directed by Bob McGowan. In it the "Gang" feels the urge to go West and slay Redskins of the wildest and savagest sort their fertile imaginations can visualize.

In addition to these comedies and the serial episode, there will be a Grantland Sportlight film called "Sporting Judgment," an "Aesop's Film Fable" by Paul Terry and entitled "Permanent Waves," Pathe Review No. 18, and Pathe News, Nos. 38 and 39.

The tenth and final episode of "Idaho" brings the romance of Beth Cameron and "Boston" Graham, the pony express rider who throughout the story has aided the girl in her efforts to bring to justice the bandits who murdered her father, to a happy conclusion. The end finds the outlaws rounded up and law and order established in the frontier district through the courageous efforts of the Girl Vigilante and her followers.

Century Has Lengthy Program

Abe Stern Returns With Word of Fifty-Two Comedies for the Coming Season

ABE STERN, vice-president of Century Comedies, who has just returned from the coast, announces the most ambitious program for the coming season in the history of that organization. The company will release through Universal fifty-two Century comedies, one each week from August 5th, 1925 to July 29th, 1926.

The weekly release scheduled will include a series of twelve comedies starring Wanda Wiley, twelve starring Edna Marian, a series of twelve Buster Brown comedies, two series of six each with Eddie Gordon and Al Alt, and a series of four featuring Charles King.

The Buster Brown comedies are expected to be the feature of the Century program. Through arrangement with R. F. Outcault, cartoonist creator of the character they will be exact screen portrayals of the comic pictures. Buster Brown will be played by Arthur Trimble, a boy actor of exceptional talent. Others who have been signed for this series are; Peter the dog, who will play Tige; Doreen Turner as Mary Jane; Katherine Young, as the mother; Charles King, as the father; Emily Gertes, as the maid, and Dorothy Vernon as the cook.

The Buster Brown comedies will be released one each month. They will be directed by Charles Lamont from stories and continuities by George McWilliams.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Quo Vadis"—First National Arcadia, Philadelphia

North American: "One of the most gigantic moving pictures ever filmed, both from the point of view of actual size and lavishness of individual scenes. Sienkiewicz's novel is made to live. The story combines the voluptuous pomp of pagan Rome, and the simplicity of the early Christians, thus the necessary emotional and scenic contrasts were ready for the skill of the producers to fit into the film version. Nero as played by Emil Jannings. His work is admirable."

Record: "A highly exciting and thrilling version of 'Quo Vadis.' The cast is excellent, the photography grades very high and the portrayal of Nero is a masterpiece of Emil Jannings. The mob scenes are magnificent. An abundance of grand heart-throbs takes possession of the onlooker and a whirlwind of feeling is stirred up by the film."

Inquirer: "The picture is a magnificent spectacle. The settings are constantly beyond expression."

Public Ledger: "In size and lavishness, this production is unequaled. In acting it is more than capable. One s filled with amazement at the completeness of it all. The picture is spectacular and certainly is fascinating photoplay fare. Emil Jannings adds another remarkable royal portrait to the brilliant collection. In him we see the Emperor Nero to the life."

Evening Bulletin: "The motion picture which long since established new standards for stupendousness appears to have out-distanced itself, in the film version of 'Quo Vadis' at the Arcadia Theatre. 'Quo Vadis,' is thrilling and dramatic. Most of the thrilling scenes of the book have been filmed in impressive fashion."

"The Fool"—Fox, Central, New York

Times: "Mr. Lowe is restrained and sympathetic throughout. He has an infectious smile and his eyes radiate sincerity and kindness."

American: "Edmund Lowe does his very best work as Gilchrist. His is a performance that at no time seems theatrical."

Evening World: "Lowe is going to make thousands of friends for his superb performance."

Telegraph: "Edmund Lowe as Daniel Gilchrist gives a performance that will long be remembered by patrons of the cinema."

Journal of Commerce: "Lowe played in the role of the minister with sincerity and just the right note of pathos."

Journal: "The picture is better than the play, with Edmund Lowe excellent as Gilchrist, who suffers for his ideals and does it without overacting."

Donald Keith, who has been signed for featured roles in B. P. Schulberg productions

"Wizard of Oz"—Chadwick, Colony, New York

Evening World: "'The Wizard of Oz,' which is put out as a Chadwick picture, is one of the best comedies seen on Broadway in a long time. There's a bona fide laugh in nearly every scene, and most of them are of the howl variety. You can't afford to miss this picture."

Mirror: "They shrieked uproariously at this speedy version of Frank Baum's quaint fantasy. Larry Semon has made a highly entertaining picture. It's loaded with excitement, thrills, fun and a faint dash of romance. For clean cut, novel, splendid entertainment, don't miss Larry Semon in 'The Wizard of Oz'."

Times: "Persons in the audience not only laughed till the tears came, but they roared until they coughed."

American: "Shrieks of delighted laughter greeted the picture. I want to commend Larry Semon for his manner in picturizing the former musical comedy."

"Voice of the Nightingale"—Educational, Stanley, Philadelphia

Public Record: "'The Voice of the Nightingale' is not a feature. It is but an incident in the program. Yet it typifies what our idea of motion pictures for children ought to be. To its production have been brought a poetical artistry, an understanding of the child mind, a sense of pure humor and technical skill rarely equaled in the studios that provide our daily entertainment. Half fairy tale and half reality, it deals with a tragedy in bird life and teaches a lesson to the thoughtless little humans who are too often responsible for such calamaties. Its pathos—for pathos marches always side by side with humor, in which, strange to say, this tragedy abounds—must appeal alike to the grown-ups and the little folk."

"Voice of the Nightingale"—Educational, Criterion, New York

Post: "It is a fascinating pictorial version of a nightingale's song and what it signifies to the child who has captured and shut it up in a cage. The picture is a fairy tale in color and it is delightfully photographed with a keen conception of the possibilities of fairy stores on the screen. There should be a very definite field for this sort of film, which makes use of the peculiar advantages of motion pictures over other means of expression in this presentation of imaginative subjects."

"Proud Flesh"—Metro-Goldwyn, Captol, N. Y.

Telegram, Mail: "Both scenarist and director have conspired to make this one of the most deliciously amusing pictures of the season, rippling with laughter and giddy with action. King Vidor, that uncommonly discriminating director who produced this film for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has given it a jocund, individual stamp of his own, and ticklesome subtitles have been provided which keep the strutting hero and heroine human by making them just a trifle goody at times."

Telegraph: "'Proud Flesh' is one of the most amusing feature comedies presented hereabouts in some time. It is the fast zippy relation of the romance between a Hibernian of San Francisco and a young lady with a background of Spanish dons, guitars, tangoes and serenades. King Vidor, who directed, seems to have had a good time at his job."

Mirror: "'Proud Flesh' holds forth at the Capitol this week with Eleanor Boardman, Pat O'Malley and Harrison Ford splendid in the leading roles. This is a snappy picture. King Vidor has turned out a neat job. It moves at a lively clip, with Eleanor Boardman impressive as the sophisticated, thoroughly spoilt but lovable Fernanda from Madrid, Spain."

Herald-Tribune: "Harrison Ford plays Diego, and it is the most artistic performance he ever has given. Eleanor Boardman is exquisite and fetching as the naughty heroine, who carries not an ounce too much of the proud flesh, and the direction of the picture is fine. Most of the titles, too, are excellent and all in all 'Proud Flesh' is a step in the right direction."

Post: "The program at the Capitol this week is one of the most thoroughly entertaining affairs that we have attended in a long time. Eleanor Boardman is fast becoming one of our particular favorites on the screen. She made a great hit with us not long ago in 'The Way of a Girl,' and her newest venture, 'Proud Flesh,' is even better than 'The Way of a Girl.'"

Sun: "A well directed, tastefully produced picture is 'Proud Flesh.' King Vidor is responsible for the direction and Eleanor Boardman, Harrison Ford and Pat O'Malley are in evidence in the leading roles. All three give splendid performances."

Graphic: "Perhaps the word best suited to describe this picture is 'amusing.' The audience chuckled at the Spanish love-making of Harrison Ford, at the caveman tactics of Pat O'Malley, at the high-hat airs of Eleanor Boardman, and last, but not least, at the humorous subtitles. The way Harrison Ford kids the serenader and the balcony climber is a treat."

George Hackathorne, in B. P. Schulberg's special production, "Capital Punishment."

Bulletin: "'Proud Flesh' is an amusing film play, produced with a light hand, and taken from a novel which was a serious achievement. There's something new and different for you in the movies. The film play is interesting and quite delightful. Eleanor Boardman plays the role of the Spanish girl, and she has a splendid chance to show that she is a comedian of no small talent."

Journal: "It's an amusing comedy with clever titles and excellent work on the part of Miss Boardman, Harrison Ford and O'Malley. Ford is very attractive in his Spanish make-up and he and Eleanor do a tango."

Times: "'Proud Flesh' is a bright entertainment, in which there are a slight touch of heart interest and plenty of amusement. It has been handled most adroitly and is filled with original ideas. Miss Boardman is charming as Fernanda. She is alert and convincing in her acting and never at a loss for a winning expression. Harrison Ford is capital as the Spaniard. There are streaks of satire in this production, and the subtitles are always helpful and often provocative of laughter."

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Riders of Mystery

(Goldburg-Independent Pictures Corp.—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A LITTLE more carefulness in regard to the timing of the scenes and in covering up the mechanical flaws—and more time spent on building up important situations so that the action wouldn't appear so unnaturally fast—and this western would be practically flawless. It cannot be called a lifelike story. The characters are planted too firmly for that—and their activities are too well worked out in advance. But, at least, it has a melodramatic plot and releases some rattling good incident. As for the backgrounds, the spectators can drink in some exceptionally picturesque scenery.

The plot puts over the obvious and conventional conflict between a gang of bandits and the hero—who for the purposes of providing suspense must become the victim of a frame-up. In other words when the sheriff sets out single-handed to capture the "phantom bandit" and does not return, the hero, a stranger in the town, is accused of killing him since he has brought in the officer's belt for identification by the latter's daughter.

But the sheriff is not dead. He has merely played "possum" and hidden himself in an old shack so as to reconnoitre and capture the bandits at a more advantageous time. Meanwhile the stranger has been placed in jail—and a necktie party is in store for him when he escapes by the window as the mob storms the doors—a mob incited to riot by the villain—the stage-coach driver. The rest of the action deals with the heroine taking the bandit off his guard by promising to meet him—and the eventual capture of the gang by the hero and the sheriff and his posse.

There are a few convenient episodes—and coincidence plays a strong factor. But at least there is always present the element of suspense. There are some mechanical flaws—one of which is faulty tinting in allowing day to represent night. The acting is natural as contributed by Bill Cody and a few others—particularly a character sketch by Frank Rice.

THEME. Western melodrama in which a gang of bandits are routed and captured by a cowboy who, being a stranger, is accused of a killing, but escapes to administer the long arm of the law.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The atmosphere and detail. The natural acting by Bill Cody. The comedy character sketch by Frank Rice. The escape from the jail. The manner in which the bandits are captured.

DIRECTION. Puts over satisfactory action and stages it against colorful backgrounds. Errs in allowing hero to come out of a fight without a mark on him.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. If your audience has developed a liking for Bill Cody you can make no mistake by exploiting him here. Use newspaper tie-ups and program teasers. The best angle is in advertising Cody who can ride with the best of them.

DRAWING POWER. Should draw with audiences that like westerns filled with action. If Cody is popular he should draw them.

SUMMARY. Averages up as a satisfactory western through its action and suspense. Even though plot is obvious the attention is held because of its vigorous incident.

THE CAST

"Old Jerry" Jones	Frank Rice
John Arliss	Tom Lingham
Helen Arliss	Peggy O'Dare

SYNOPSIS. Sheriff in attempting to capture desperate band of bandits is shot. Cowboy discovers him and takes him to shack for shelter, but in bringing back his belt for identification by his daughter the hero is framed by the villian and placed in jail. He escapes and with his pal they gather a possee and the bandits are eventually captured.

Reckless Courage

(Lester F. Scott-Action-Weiss Bros—4851 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WITH the lively incident and a pace of action which keeps it moving this western should satisfy its audience. They will not see anything new in plot and though it does get off to a rather novel start it soon settles down into a regulation crook melodrama with western trimmings. It may appear strange to some to discover a diamond dealer conducting business in the vicinity of the plains and entrusting his daughter with the dangerous mission of delivering a packet of precious jewels. But in accepting this premise the spectator will have to accept the entire story—which is somewhat far-fetched.

The novel introduction features an airplane hold-up—with a bold crook soaring near enough to the girl's machine to board it and commanding her to hand over the packet. He had been tipped off by the dealer's butler—a member of the band of crooks. But the girl tosses the packet overboard and by the long arm of coincidence it strikes the cowboy hero on the head and knocks him from his horse.

At this point the action features a pursuit by the heroine and the crooks to recover the jewels and before they are safely back in the possession of the dealer one is given the opportunity to see several hand-to-hand fights. The girl thinks the cowboy is a member of the gang and by tieing him fast to a chair recovers the packet. But she has not reckoned with the real crooks and first thing you know she is in their power. Which puts it up to the hero to rescue her.

The star is Buddy Roosevelt and he flashes some good horesmanship in his pursuit of the crooks. In the climax he has occasion to develop a punch in the story when he knocks the ringleader out. With all the action geared on high it doesn't give the romance much of a chance. This element is mostly suggested at the finish

THEME. Western melodrama of cowboy who rescues daughter of diamond dealer from clutches of thieves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The hold-up of the airplane. The fights. Scene when hero is captured by heroine. The hero's capture of the crooks. Star's horsemanship.

DIRECTION. Succeeds in giving it plenty of incident which compensates for slight story. Stresses coincidence, but inasmuch as there is sufficient action its faults are negligible.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up star and his horsemanship. Bill it as western novelty in which cowboy captures diamond thieves. Emphasize its fast action.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for average houses catering to westerns. Where star has following picture should draw.

SUMMARY. Nothing new uncovered in plot here, but the action and incident are lively enough to hold the attention. Uncovers long arm of coincidence in several scenes—and never rings genuine, but there is no denying that it keeps moving.

SYNOPSIS. Diamond dealer entrusts his daughter with the delivery of a packet of jewels. She travels by airplane and in mid-air is held up by a crook in another plane. She tosses the packet overboard and it is picked up by cowboy. It then becomes a pursuit by the girl and the crooks to recover the jewels. The girl thinks the cowboy one of the crooks, but when he rescues her from various dangers she learns her mistake. He captures the crooks.

O. U. West

(Harry Garson Production-F. B. O.—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

WHILE this latest offering in the Lefty Flynn series is a let-down from its predecessors and is rather slow in getting under way, it will get by in houses catering to the western fans because of the growing popularity of the star. In this vehicle Lefty gets an opportunity to do his stuff as a tamer of bucking broncos and is shown in one sequence sticking to the saddle in spite of all efforts of Old Dobbin to dislodge him. He also is given a chance to make a dozen or so bad men bite the dust as he goes to the rescue of the heroine, held captive in the cabin of the cattle rustlers.

The picture opens with some comedy moments in which Lefty gets friendly with a Pullman porter of dusky hue, changes hat and coat with him and then proceeds to imbibe of the 100 proof to such an extent that when the two see a rabbit outside the car window, one declares it a mountain lion and the other insists it's a Missouri mule. To settle the argument they take the berth hammock and dash out across the plains in pursuit of the bunny. This sequence will start the picture off with some laughs, which will help.

The plot deals once more with the worthless son who is shipped to a ranch by the irate father who offers the foreman $5000 if he can keep the youth a year and make something of him. Lefty goes to work and after going thru all the menial jobs "learns to ride" and takes part in the round-up, which is well staged. The climax is rather thrilling and shows Lefty going single handed into the rustlers' cabin after the heroine and being trapped therein. Of course he fights his way out and wins the girl. Ann May gives a cut and dried performance of the heroine and the rest of the personnel is just fair. Scenically the film is O.K.

THEME. A western dealing with the making over of a worthless son into a knight of the range who cleans out the rustlers and wins the foreman's daughter.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The opening comedy scenes. The chase after the rabbit. The scene in which Lefty is made to believe he killed a man. The rescue of the heroine from the runaway. The taming of the bronco by the supposed green rider. The round-up scenes. The attractive western backgrounds.

DIRECTION. Just fair. Has taken much footage to get an uninteresting story under way. Has put in a few thrills but not as many as in former Flynn vehicles. Has given the picture an attractive mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Get some cowboy hats if possible and arrange a display with them in a hat store. telling the folks these are the hats worn by Lefty Flynn in "O. U. West." A cowboy mounted on a gayly saddled horse. Play up the star, his fights, his horse taming, his rescues.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for the smaller houses downtown catering to the western fans and similar theatres in the communities and towns.

SUMMARY. The plot of this one is woven from familiar cloth and does not measure up to the first of the Flynn series from an action or story viewpoint. There is some good comedy in the opening footage and Flynn gets an opportunity to ride, fight and make love and this is all that his admirers will ask. The production is pleasing to the eye from a scenic standpoint.

SYNOPSIS. In the hope that he may make over his joy-loving son. Oliver U. West's father ships him to a ranch. On the train O. U. and a colored porter divide a bottle and detrain at a water tower to chase a rabbit. The ranch foreman eventually finds O. U. in a cabin in which a man has just been shot. He makes O. U. believe he did it, but promises to keep quiet if O. U. will work a year on the ranch. O. U. promises, starts to work, rounds up some cattle rustlers, rescues the foreman's daughter and turns out O. K.

Baree, Son of Kazan

(David Smith Production-Vitagraph—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

WHILE many tales have been laid in the wilderness, this romantic drama of the North from the pen of James Oliver Curwood is one of the best of its type. In offering audiences a good entertaining picture, especially appropriate for summer presentation, exhibitors will look far before finding one more suitable for their screen than this one. While "Wolf," the famous war dog, is featured with Anita Stewart, the animal stuff is not overdone nor is the story changed in the least to give the dog opportunity for a lot of tricks. On the contrary the stunts that "Wolf" does put over are really convincing and in addition wonderfully well done. They are plausible "tricks."

The production is one of the most attractive from a scenic viewpoint released in many moons. Against an insipiring background of snow covered plains and mountains, frozen rivers, quaint Hudson Bay trading posts, tepees, log cabins, dark forests, crystal streams and the wilderness in all the glory of springtime, is laid a story universal in appeal, a tale of red-blooded folks, elemental in its passions and heart-touching in its romance.

Anita Stewart is the star and although this charming actress has been appearing on the silver sheet for over a decade, she doesn't seem to have changed one bit in her youthful, vivacious appearance. As Nepeese, daughter of the snows, she gives a thoroughly satisfactory performance. The supporting cast is one of uniform excellence and admirable as to type.

The picture is rich in "big scenes," the fall of Carvel from the cliff in seeking to make friends with Baree, the pushing into the icy lake of McTaggart by the girl, the fight in the cabin between Pierre and McTaggart, the shooting of Baree, the burning of the cabin, the chase after Nepeese by McTaggart and the leap of the girl over the brink into the icy water, the saving of Baree from death in a trap and the thrilling climax.

THEME. Romance of the Canadian wilderness in which Baree, a dog, twice saves the life of his mistress who puts up a terrific battle to save herself from the sinister and villainous Factor.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The work of "Wolf," the war dog. The acting of Anita Stewart, Jack Curtis, Joe Rickson and Donald Keith. The leap of Nepeese from the high cliff into the icy waters to escape from McTaggart. The fight to the death in the cabin. The fine climax.

DIRECTION. David Smith has started this one off with a rush and has packed it with action and incident, not allowed the dog stuff to harm the story. Has brought out some fine acting on the part of his players and has succeeded in holding the interest.

EXPLOITATION. Tie-up with the newspaper in your town that is running the serial. Some 800 papers are using it. Book displays of the novel. Police dog ballyhoos. Put on a girl in an Indian maiden costume singing an appropriate song as a prologue with north woods scenic background.

DRAWING POWER. This is one that should appeal to every member of the family and, if properly exploited, should draw in business right now when you need it most.

SUMMARY. A good picture all through, with a real dog actor and a fine cast of human players. A story that is action-packed and a background inspiring at all times.

THE CAST

Nepeese ..... Anita Stewart
Jim Carvel ..... Donald Keith
"Bush" McTaggart ..... Jack Curtis
Pierre Eustach ..... Joe Rickson
"Baree" ..... "Wolf," the dog

By James Oliver Curwood. Scenario by Jay Pilcher. Directed by David Smith. Photographed by Steve Smith, Jr. and D. H. Smith.

SYNOPSIS. Jim Carvel, seeking to make friends with Baree, the pup, falls from a cliff and breaks his leg. He is rescued by Pierre and his daughter, Nepeese, with whom he falls in love. Seeking to evade the police, Carvel goes further north. McTaggart, unscrupulous factor, desires Nepeese. In a fight over the girl Pierre is killed and Baree shot. But Nepeese escapes and is rescued and given harbor by an Indian. Later Carvel returns, saves Baree from death in one of McTaggart's traps and then is lead to Nepeese by the dog which takes the life of McTaggart, as the latter makes one last effort to possess the girl.

Madame Sans-Gene

(Paramount—About Nine Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE can be no doubt about this being Gloria Swanson's most pretentious picture though after it has unwound its long and often tedious story of a washerwoman's climb to high estate and her triumph over Napoleon there can also be no doubt that it is not her best. "The Humming Bird" and "Manhandled" surpassed it in story interest not only because of concentrated plots which told what they had to tell in straight-forward fashion, but also because they were not burdened with footnotes which would detract from the attention the story needed.

This time-honored play has probably the biggest acting part of any work aside from Shakespeare's tragedies. And it has made reputations for the best of the French and Italian stage. Gloria Swanson's reputation is made, but her personality and talent increase in stature in humanizing the screen characterization of the role. Yet as colorful as her performance is and as convincing as it is—especially in the comedy flourishes—she must share honors with the backgrounds. Indeed, these backgrounds in the way they are emphasized to establish the historical significance of their detail seem to be more prominent factors toward awakening the spectator's interest than the plot and characters.

There are some truly magnificent scenes—all of them authentic—and they are created on a spectacular scale. They fairly exude the rich atmosphere of the First Empire. Because of them the interest wanders even with the star creating her histrionic triumph. Director Perret holds many of his situations far too long—especially in the scene when Napoleon is outwitted by the alert laundress who has climbed to the estate of a duchess.

Somehow the feeling is created that the picture lacks something—call it animation—call it drama. It has moving moments in its early scenes, as indicated in its sweeping Revolutionary episodes and the pathos and humor in the life of the laundress. The star will make it a success. Her acting and the glamour of Napoleon's court—so finely suggested here—make it well worth while.

THEME. Romantic drama of Napoleon's reign—with central figure a laundress who climbs to high estate through sheer force of personality—and who triumphs over Napoleon in settling her own destiny.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The magnificent settings. The accuracy of detail. The Fontainebleu and Compiegne backgrounds. The Revolutionary atmosphere. Swanson's gifted performance. The impersonation of Napoleon by Emile Drain.

DIRECTION. Doesn't extract the best story interest from this play. Misses with dramatic sequences by holding scenes far too long. Fails to stress the dramatic situations. Gives it elaborate mounting—and detail is always accurate.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as star's triumph is one of the biggest acting roles. Put on dignified atmospheric prologue.

DRAWING POWER. Through star's popularity and publicity of her marriage picture should prove a sell-out in any type of house.

SUMMARY. A picture of opulence and beauty, magnificent in its settings and atmosphere, but somehow lacking real dramatic fiber. Carries most appeal in its backgrounds. Star scores—a real triumph, but support is not so good.

THE CAST

Catherine Hubscher (Mme. Sans-Gene) ..... Gloria Swanson
Napoleon ..... Emile Drain
Lefebvre ..... Charles de Roche
La Rousotte ..... Madeleine Guitty
Neipperg ..... Warwick Ward
Fouche ..... Henry Favieres
Caroline, Queen of Naples ..... Arlette Marchal
Eliza, Princess of Bacciochi ..... Renee Heribelle
Empress Marie Louise ..... Suzanne Bianchetti
Madame De Bulow ..... Denise Lorys
Savary, Minister of Police ..... Jacques Marney and 1,500 other artists

By Victorian Sardou and Emile Moreau. Scenario by Forrest Halsey. Directed by Leonce Perret. Photographed by George Webber.

SYNOPSIS. Records the triumph of a sharp-witted laundress who fights for France and wins love of soldier who later becomes a marshal, while she climbs to high estate and becomes a duchess. Her vulgar manners embarrass Napoleon's court, but she triumphs over him in having her own way in affairs of the heart.

Recompense

(Warner Brothers—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

FOR about three reels the film version of Robert Keable's novel, "Recompense," a sequel to "Simon Called Peter," carries on with good story interest—what with its war scenes and the romance between the clergyman who turns soldier and the nurse. There are some very effective shots of a shell-torn town and the atmosphere is realistic enough even though the sponsors have helped themselves to some library scenes of the late conflict. There being little excuse for drama in these episodes the action doesn't get out of its element in showing the tension which grips the lovers as they realize their moments together may be their last.

It is when demobilization comes that the story sags. It starts off on another tack entirely and switches its central figures from France to South Africa. It tries to point a way to pathos, but because the characters are moved about arbitrarily this ingredient never becomes very forceful. The clergyman simply cannot make up his mind that he loves the nurse enough to marry her. So they separate. He goes into the South African bush where he undergoes a terrific amount of suffering before the girl is brought to him and nurses him through his illness. These particular scenes are picturesque and also furnish suspense as a brutal overseer attacks the clergyman.

The story then shifts to Cape Town where the dominie decides to go his own way. He would commit himself to perform real service in helping the social outcasts. So he goes to London's Limehouse to conduct a mission. And the nurse eventually comes back into his life and wins back his love. It is the latter part of the picture which is disappointing. There are scenes which are often dull or meaningless. The action often stops while the characters are being brought together again. The sympathy which is extended the clergyman during the war is dissipated by his lack of decision. He fails to be sincere after a time. It is played in good spirit by Marie Prevost who looks real nifty in her uniform—and George Siegman lends a colorful performance as the brutal overseer.

THEME. Romantic drama of clergyman and nurse who develop strong love for one another in the war. They are separated after demobilization and a misunderstanding develops. Reconciliation eventually occurs.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The war episodes. The romantic development. The colorful performance by Marie Prevost. The acting bits by George Siegman and Charles Stevens. The South African episodes.

DIRECTION. Fails to develop any real feeling or sympathy for his characters. Story stops occasionally and then begins all over again. Gets good results from war episodes—and brings out some effective acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The war stories shouldn't frighten them now. Play this up as a romance of the late war—and feature author and story which is a sequel to "Simon Called Peter"—a best seller. Tie up with bookdealers. Interest Legion posts.

DRAWING POWER. Author's popularity and that of Monte Blue and Marie Prevost should draw them. Well advertised should do business.

SUMMARY. Carries on excellently during its war episodes and creates real interest. But story wanders and characters are moved about arbitrarily. Plot separates lovers and then proceeds to bring them together on several occasions.

THE CAST

Julie Gamelyn ..... Marie Prevost
Peter Graham ..... Monte Blue
Dr. Sampson ..... John Roche
Stenhouse ..... George Siegman
Mosheshoe ..... Charles Stevens
Angelica ..... Virginia Brown Faire
Col. Donovan ..... William C. Davidson
African Dancing Girl ..... Etta Lee
Officer ..... John Patrick
Mrs. Donovan ..... Katherine Lewis

By Robert Keable. Directed by Harry Beaumont.

SYNOPSIS. Clergyman renounces the pulpit and becomes a soldier to be near a nurse who has captured his heart. They become very devoted, but after demobilization they are separated. The clergyman is nursed through serious illness, but refuses to marry the girl as he intends giving his services toward benefiting humanity. The girl still keeps her faith in him and after a misunderstanding they are reunited.

Spook Ranch

AS this western has a spooky atmosphere—what with most of its action taking place in and around a haunted house, we anticipated more mystery and comedy than what is uncovered. It isn't much of an idea that has been concocted for Hoot Gibson's latest. At the start it looked as if it would develop into a straight comedy for the star has a blackface pal to act as his foil—and some satisfactory humor is extracted from a desert scene when the black man is unable to make his balky mule advance until his wagon catches fire. Hoot has been boob enough to buy the gold rights of the Mojave Desert and after digging into the sand he realizes he is hungry.

The two men are foiled in trying to grub a meal from a Chinaman—and thinking they killed him they attempt to run away. But the sheriff captures Hoot when he tries to make a getaway in a freight car. Here is the introduction of the spooky elements as the cowboy is given his freedom and a deputy's badge if he will solve the mystery of a haunted ranch. The director has used a lot of hokum in building his atmosphere. There is a whitewashed barn, plenty of gnarled trees, an owl perched in a branch—and a ranch house which caters to swinging doors. So much for the atmosphere.

The comedy points are not developed. Instead the plot takes up a mystery thread and doesn't succeed in building much suspense because there is lacking any real motivation. While Hoot is chasing the occupants of the house from room to room his colored pal is stricken with fright to such extent that he is unable to move his feet. There are no spooks. But the bandits try to act like them in dressing in white robes and scaring the cowboy and the black man. Their object is to force a Spanish mine owner and his daughter to divulge the location of a hidden mine. After a climatic chase Hoot routs the bandits and rescues the girl. The characters are not clearly defined—the romantic element is absent—and there isn't very much action. Hoot has had far better westerns.

THEME. Western comedy-melodrama of cowboy who is given job as deputy to solve mystery of haunted ranch. Captures several bandits who have masqueraded as spooks and wins the girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The introductory comedy episode. The capture of Hoot. The spooky atmosphere. The rescue of the girl. The horsemanship of star.

DIRECTION. Doesn't develop a comedy nor a melodrama—and plot lacks motivation. Characters at ranch never clearly defined and action lacks meaning. One wonders how bandits are able to get away with it—and not be discovered.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Of course Hoot Gibson has an established following. So the best angle is to play his name up prominently. Bill as a comedy melodrama with a spooky atmosphere. Put on your usual ballyhoo.

DRAWING POWER. Hoot is popular enough to draw them and his audience should enjoy him here. Suitable for average houses.

SUMMARY. Not up to Hoot's usual standard. Story lacks any real motivating plot and as it develops, action becomes vague. Several characters not clearly defined and romance is lacking. Some few comedy bits, but suspense seldom figures in mystery episodes. Mostly hokum. Atmosphere satisfactory. Hoot needs real stories.

THE CAST

Bill Bangs ..... Hoot Gibson
Geo. Washington Black ..... Ed Cowles
Navarro ..... Tote Ducrow
Elvira ..... Helen Ferguson
Don Ramies ..... Robert McKim
Sheriff ..... Frank Rice

By Raymond L. Schrock and Edward Sedgwick. Directed by Edward Laemmle. Photographed by Harry Neumann.

SYNOPSIS. Cowboy is so gullible he buys gold rights to the Mojave Desert. Becomes hungry and tries to grub a meal in town. Strikes restaurant keeper and thinking he killed him makes a getaway via a freight train. He is captured but is given his freedom and a deputy's badge if he will solve the mystery of a haunted house. Several bandits have masqueraded as spooks in trying to locate a gold mine. The cowboy captures them and rescues the girl.

The Man Without a Conscience

(Warner Brothers—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

WILLARD LEWIS who gave us a memorable portrait of the prince in "Beau Brummel," comes to the front again in this production with a character study that, to say the least, is out of the rut of film roles. Mr. Willard appears as Amos Mason, a man of lowly birth who starts for New York determined to get to the top of the heap by fair means or foul. The methods he used to attain his ambition are decidedly original, and while they may seem lacking in plausibility, they do furnish entertainment.

The story is one that holds the interest principally because of the fine acting contributed by such players as Irene Rich, June Marlowe, Robert Agnew and others. It is to these members of the cast and Mr. Willard that credit must go for putting over a tale which in less capable hands would prove rather unconvincing. It is one of those rare pictures in which all the characters are kept busy in roles of almost equal prominence.

There is real interest in the way Mason forces his way into the home of a socially prominent but financially weak household. He writes to the head of the household that the maid, recently engaged, is dishonest and should be watched closely. It happens that the maid is the girl whom he promised in the small town to marry and whom he lured to New York with him only to desert her when his fortune improved. Willard's work as he assumes the role of a millionaire and dives into a reception in his honor is one of the highlights of the picture.

There is drama in the sequence in which the girl, forced to marry Mason because of financial needs of her family, learns from the discharged maid of Mason's origin. There is a good climax in which Mason's real estate boom built on a "card board" foundation carries him to retreat and eventually into Sing Sing. A happy ending is tacked on showing the return

THEME. A modern social drama picturing the rise and fall of a man whose conscience had gone dry; how he attained riches only to have them cause his ruin.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The subtle characterizations contributed by Mr. Lewis, and Miss Rich. The sequence in which Mason forces his way into the "400." The scene in which Shirley, the society bride, discovers the lowly origin of her husband. The climax in which Mason is sent "up the river."

DIRECTION. James Flood is fortunate in having such a sterling list of players to aid him in putting over a rather unconvincing plot. He has given the picture an attractive mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the names of Willard Lewis and Irene Rich. The title. Photos of Miss Rich and Miss Marlowe in fashion window tie-up. Use the effective throwaway furnished by exchange which you can localize and which asks "Who is (name of your town) "Man Without a Conscience?"

DRAWING POWER. This one is suitable for downtown first run houses because of the popularity of its stars and the moral of its story.

SUMMARY. A high class production, notable, principally, for the fine acting on the part of a finely balanced cast.

THE CAST

Amos (Richard) Mason ..... Willard Lewis
Shirley Graves ..... Irene Rich
Ann Sherman ..... June Marlowe
Douglas White ..... John Patrick
James Warren ..... Robert Agnew
Mrs. Graves ..... Helen Dunbar
Dane, the Chemist ..... William Orlamond
Mrs. McBride ..... Kate Price
Mr. McBride ..... Charles McHugh
Lurette ..... Sally Long

By Max Kretzer. Scenario by Hope Loring and Louis Lighton. Directed by James Flood. Photographed by David Abel.

SYNOPSIS. Amos Mason arrives in New York with Ann Sherman whom he has promised to marry. Amos is determined to succeed. Telling Ann her money has been stolen he starts in with it in a hair tonic business. Amos appropriates more than his share of the money. Ann gets a job in the Graves household. Amos sees Shirley Graves and determines to win her. He succeeds in making them believe him wealthy. Eventually he weds Shirley after casting off Ann. Shirley discovers his early activity. Mason's business is ruined. He is jailed. When he gets out he is a reformed man and finds happiness with his wife and child.

The Gambling Fool

(Goldburg-Independent Pictures Corp.—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S difficult to make head or tail out of this picture which presents a complicated plot that carries a rambling, disjointed continuity. No time is spent in developing any scene and the action shifts so fast from one sequence to another that it becomes almost impossible to make out what it is all about.

The story as best as we could make it out from the collection of characters—each one of whom seemed to have equal importance—concerns paying the taxes on a ranch. The big mogul of the village realizes the property is valuable because of a huge dam constructed in its vicinity. And so he plots and uses his hirelings who scrape and bow to him with all the attention of a lowly peasant for his king.

The story has many phases and skips from the desert town to New York and back to the desert again. Its central character is a stranger who calls himself a square-shooting gambler. He wins the dilapidated ranch away from its owner in a poker game even when his opponents have the advantage of a mirror behind his shoulders. He puts it over on them with some tricks of his own.

Meanwhile a baby enters the plot—and just about runs away with the acting honors. The child is easily the most natural performer of the lot. She is the daughter of the ranch-owner who is killed by the big mogul. Her young aunt comes from New York and is at her wit's end to discover who are with her and against her. She is kidnaped. The baby is kidnaped two or three times—and so it goes without any semblance of sequence. It seems as if it was produced with but one object in mind—to keep it moving. There is plenty of gun-play, but the players are invariably in a terrific hurry—so much so—that there is no display of characterization. The finish brings in the race to the ranch by the girl, the hero and the villains. After a particularly hectic gunfight the good people conquer—and the picture is over. It's a western in which is crowded too much old-fashioned incident.

THEME. Western melodrama involving the triumph of virtue over villainy when an honest gambler takes a hand in a schemers plot to win a valuable piece of property.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The poker game. The long shots. The race to the ranch. The baby sequences. The comedy relief when the baby is fed. The atmosphere.

DIRECTION. Crams it full of so much incident and action that it is tough to follow its central plot. Skips from one sequence to another without pausing to build characterization. Stages it adequately. Has done better work than this.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title offers teaser possibilities. If Farnum is popular in your house go after his following. Put over campaign featuring the courage of a bold hero in overpowering bad men. Bill as action picture.

DRAWING POWER. The title should draw them. Suitable for program theatres.

SUMMARY. If this western wasn't so crammed with incident and its plot less complicated it would carry some appeal. The action skips from one sequence to another without any continuity—and because there are no pauses the scenes don't register reality. Far too many characters and the scenes are distributed too freely among them.

THE CAST

Jack Stanford	Franklyn Farnum
"Stringy" Hawkins	Otto Myers
"Plump" Parker	Fred Holmes
"Lightning" Cass	Harry Northrup
"Bud" Fitzroy	Jack Pearce
George Morgan	Ralph Yearsley
Morgan's child	Mary Louise Montague
George Hartford	Jos. W. Girard
Mary Hartford	Ruth Dwyer

Story and direction by J. P. McGowan. Photographed by King Grey.

SYNOPSIS. Young gambler strikes "hard-boiled" desert town and turns tables on bad men. First he wins dilapidated ranch away from its owner and pays the taxes on time—this preventing an auction. Next he takes care of infant child found in the house and sees to it that it is rescued from arch-villain. Then he protects the child's aunt. In the end he overpowers the villains and triumphs in romance.

Lying Wives

(Emerald-Ivan Players, Inc.—Seven Reels)

IN view of some natural and convincing performances in this domestic drama presenting a double triangle it succeeds in being quite plausible in spite of some situations which are far-fetched. It certainly creates emotional opportunities for the players—and those who have the sympathetic roles extract all the sympathy and pathos from them. While the plot is complicated it is easy to follow and shows that Director Abramson knows how to build progressive action even though as an author he doesn't always score his points.

It's a story of a scheming wife of an elderly wealthy man who reaps a whirlwind of trouble for herself and everyone with whom she comes in contact. She causes her step-daughter (an unnecessary character) to meet her death and inveigles a youth to suspect his wife of infidelity. For the greater part of the action it rings fairly genuine only missing fire in the manner in which the youth is drawn. This character loses all sympathy in his inexplicable conduct in accepting gifts for his child from his wife's benefactor the while he is gambling the man's securities away Then when he turns on the scheming woman who has given him her securities to cover his losses she promptly thrusts him into jail. One would think he had been taught a lesson by this time. But when she gets him out he falls in with her intrigue and promises to run away with her in almost the same breath that he accuses his wife. Were it not for some of these unconvincing moments the story would come close to being real drama.

But there is no denying its moments of appeal. Richard Bennett is sincere and natural in the role of the young wife's father who erases the shadow over his life thus permitting him to reveal his identity in the end. The scenes are well knit together and Mr. Abramson has staged them with fine atmosphere and background. The interest is held all the way—and there is good suspense to boot. But it could stand trimming The child party, the masquerade and the daughter's episodes could be eliminated without harming the action the least bit. It's a good picture with real heart interest.

THEME. Domestic drama of scheming wife whose lying tongue creates dissension and disillusionment in the lives of others. She pays bitterly at the end when, in a contrite spirit, she makes amends.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The convincing performances by Madge Kennedy, Richard Bennett, Clara Kimball Young and Barney Sherry. The settings. The atmosphere. Scenes when girl is killed—when youth is intrigued—when heroine's father reveals his identity—when couple are reconciled. The heart appeal. The subtitles.

DIRECTION. Extracts first rate drama and sentiment from domestic story. Creates some effective scenes which are acted with sincerity. Builds interest and suspense all the way, though some of the episodes are far-fetched.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up its lavishness—its cast—its child appeal—its moral. Teaser the title. Bill as a real drama of moving moments.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for most any type of house as its story is easily understood and has audience appeal.

SUMMARY. There is first rate heart interest here—which makes this an audience picture. Is unconvincing in the manner in which hero is drawn for his actions are rather stupid, but situations are dramatically effective and are acted with fine naturalness by the leading players. Neatly mounted.

THE CAST

Patricia Chase	Clara Kimball Young
Margery Burkley	Madge Kennedy
Theodore Stanhope	Richard Bennett
Elsie Chase	Edna Murphy
Wallace Graham	Niles Welch
Alvin Chase	J. Barney Sherry
Wallace Graham, Jr	Buddy Harris

Written and Directed by Ivan Abramson. Photographed by Frank Zukor.

SYNOPSIS. Scheming wife plots to win back love of erstwhile youthful sweetheart. Latter marries and the schemer leads him to suspect his wife of infidelity. She causes him to gamble the securities of his wife's benefactor and has him thrust into jail. Effecting his release she continues her plotting, but her rival pleads for her to show some humanity. She makes amends, but is rejected by her husband.

Regional News from Correspondents

Atlanta

W. W. ANDERSON, branch manager of Pathe, is giving the local office a half holiday Thursday, in order that the entire force may attend the baseball game, which is the first Atlanta game to be played this season.

Lionel Keene, assistant to E. A. Schiller, came into Atlanta Wednesday of this week, and left the same day, for Nashville, Tenn., where he will remain until Friday returning to Birmingham, Alabama, then. Mr. Keene is very busy with the details of the opening of the Temple theatre in Birmingham, scheduled to occur Monday, April 27th.

Archie W. Blue, Florida representative for Famous Players-Lasky, was in Atlanta Monday of this week. He stayed only a short time, however, leaving Tuesday for New York, to attend the convention of the distribution department of Famous.

Joe Marentette, of Associated Exhibitors, has just returned from South Georgia, where he spent last week visiting various points. He reports that business in this section of the country is booming, with more activities afoot than have been in the past several years.

Howell Graham, formerly a pioneer exhibitor of Chattanooga, Tennessee, but now a decorator, with his concern, the Hill Sign Company, located in Birmingham, Ala., was in Atlanta Monday for a brief visit. Mr. Graham left on Wednesday, after spending Tuesday with his friends on Film Row.

Hank Hearne, salesmanager for Southern States, spent last week in Florida. He returned Monday, with reports that the business outlook is highly encouraging.

G. S. Love, of the Dream theatre, Columbus, Ga., was in town this week, for a short visit.

Lee Castleberry of Gadsden, Ala., who owns the Bell theatre there and another house in Alabama City, came in town Saturday of last week and left again Tuesday of this week.

Hugh Manning, who operated several theatres in Georgia, was in Atlanta Tuesday, with the news that he is remodeling the Strand theatre in Marietta, Ga., and that he is planning to build several new houses soon.

Salt Lake City

THE reported opening of a new theatre at Rigby, Idaho, has fallen through due to the one back of the proposition being unable to secure a lease on the property desired. Several exchanges had closed with him on productions.

Harry T. Nolan, Mountain Division Manager for Associated First National, is in Idaho with W. F. Gordon, local manager. Mr. Nolan will go on to Butte, and thence East to the convention at French Lick Springs. Mr. Gordon will return to this city.

The local film club has a real honest to goodness, dyed-in-the-wool baseball team as is attested by the trouncing this organization handed to another local aggregation this week. Frank Horr, shipping clerk at the Producers Distributing Corporation, is the manager, captain, and financial committee, and has whipped into shape of an admirable representation. To obtain funds to carry the team through the season, a big dance is being given tomorrow night at the Merry Gardens.

John Rugar, manager of the American theatre at Park City, Utah, must have been in town today. At every exchange the information was given that this worthy had made his appearance, and with reports so heavily in his favor, it must be that he "musta been." And when John comes to town, every exchange knows it. (John comes down off the hill about three times a week).

C. L. Theuerkauf, Western Division Manager of Theatres for Universal, is here for a few weeks looking over the Kinema, Universal's local holding, with Ed C. Mix—no relation of Tom—local theatre manager. He will return to Los Angeles upon completion of his business here.

W. K. Lendon, traveling auditor for Universal, is in this city going over the books and records of the local exchange. He said that he is still wondering when Sam Henley, exchange manager, is going to buy him that dinner. But dinner or no dinner, Henley is hitting them heavy on securing contracts for the new product, having returned this week from Idaho with a brief case bulging with the official documents.

Milton Cohn, formerly manager for Universal in this city, is back, and has hit the high places on the road for Universal. His many friends are pleased to see his face around here again, and are glad at the fine showing that he is making.

If C. F. Parr, local Producers Distributing Corporation mentor is not in Idaho, he is in Montana, and if he is not in Montana he is out in Utah. The humble correspondent always slips into his office just as he has left to catch the train. He left yesterday for Montana to be gone a week or so.

James R. Keitz, young and handsome manager here for Greater Features, sallied forth yesterday for the Cache Valley region of Northern Utah to tell them about the new lineup of productions he is selling.

Carston Dahnken, vice-president of the American Theatre Company, holders of the American in this city, is expected to arrive within a few days from the coast.

Mitchell Cotradakis, formerly operating the Eko theatre at Price, Utah, passed through this week with his family, en route to New York City, where he will sail for Europe. He has tied up with a large company for foreign rights.

Nick - Salvurakis, succeeding Nick in Price, came as far as this city with him. He has renamed the theatre the Lyric.

Frank White, owner of the Realart theatre, American Fork; S. M. Duggins, operating the Casino theatre, Gunnison, and J. J. Gillette, of the Strand theatre, Tooele, were in this city recently booking new pictures for their houses.

L. A. Davis manager of the local F. B. O. exchange, leaves next Monday for Montana putting in two weeks of selling.

E. M. Gibson, appointed to the post of assistant manager to Davis, is securing some dandy contracts in and around this city, according to his chief, and W. K. Bloom, is still knocking 'em dead in Montana. No successor has as yet been appointed for Gibson in Idaho, as Davis said that he has been unable to find a man as good as Gibson was.

To celebrate his departure for Ekalaka, Montana, where he is entering into the exhibitor field in the Playhouse theatre, S. N. Feinstein, added unto his assets one fine Hudson coach automobile in which to make the trip. He was formerly salesman for Metro-Goldwyn out of the local office.

A. G. Pickeft, newly appointed manager at the Famous Players-Lasky exchange reports that he is getting acclimated and is mighty glad to be in this city. He is enthusiastic over the outlook in this territory for the coming season.

Jack Hirshmann, former salesman out of the local Producers Distributing Corporation exchange, and lately with Famous Players-Lasky in Chicago, has returned to the Paramount banner. He leaves this week for Denver, where he will sell under the direction of Hugh W. Braly, former manager in this city.

The Famous Players-Lasky local bunch entrains Thursday for Los Angeles, where they will sit in at the convention which convenes in that city this week.

George L. Cloward, Metro-Goldwyn local chief, left yesterday for New York City to attend the national convention starting April 20. During his absence the affairs of the exchange will be well taken care of by Charles Dillerd, office manager.

E. E. Harris, who joined the sales force of the local Metro-Goldwyn office last week is sending in some mighty satisfactory business from his district in Montana, according to Office Manager Dillerd.

David T. McElhinney, Associated Exhibitors resident manager, returned to his local headquarters Sunday, after a nine-day live wire trip into Idaho, in the interest of the new Douglas McLean production, and the new season product.

Joe McElhinney, brother to the just mentioned notable, arrived in this city yesterday, coming from the Phil Munsky Liberty exchange in Omaha, as his last film connection. He will join the force of the local Universal office in the near future, devoting his time between the office and the road.

W. G. Seib, branch manager for Pathe, left yesterday for Idaho, where he will spend the next ten days stirring up contracts for the new productions on the Rooster schedule. He will attend the celebration at Boise in honor of the opening the new main line of the Union Pacific Railroad.

Albany

LIGHTNING again struck Film Row during the past week when Ted O'Shea, who has been connected with Metro-Goldwyn's Buffalo exchange, arrived in town and succeeded M. N. Wolfe, as manager of the Albany branch. Mr. Wolfe, who came here about six months ago from Boston, has returned to The Hub.

Daylight saving became effective in Albany and other nearby places on April 27. There was some talk in Schenectady of fighting the ordinance, but when thousands of workers in the General Electric plant came out in favor of daylight saving, theatre owners in that city decided that it would be poor policy, from a patronage standpoint, to combat the movement.

Theatres in summer resort towns are now preparing to open for the season. The Casino in Fleischmanns, which is run by Henry C. Kron, opened up this week while Otto Eigen, who runs the Academy in Sharon Springs, is preparing to reopen on May 2.

Among the visitors along The Row last week was Mrs. A. E. Milligan, who has a house in Schuylerville. Mrs. Milligan's son was home from Cornell for the Easter vacation.

Oscar Perrin, managing the Empire in Glens Falls, as well as two theatres in Albany, will dedicate a new organ in the Glens Falls house on Sunday, May 3. Mr. Perrin has just placed a large mirror in the Leland, in Albany, which incidentally will observe its 100th anniversary in May.

Frank S. Hopkins, until recently local manager for the Producers' Distributing Corporation, has gone with Universal, and will cover the Syracuse territory, working out of the Buffalo branch.

Practically the entire office force from the Paramount exchange in this city, ranging from J. H. McIntyre, the manager, down, were in New York city a portion of last week, attending a Paramount sales convention.

Some exceptionally good exploitation was done last week by Walter Suckno, owner of the Albany and Regent theatres in Albany. Mr. Suckno was able to secure windows that heretofore had never admitted anything other than their own wares.

Arthur Goldsmith, who has been selling Fox product in this territory has now become associated with the Producers' Distributing exchange in this city.

Although Vincent Jenre is janitor of the Strand in Schenectady, he proved his value last week. Mr. Jenre, in costume, appeared on a mustang around the city, in conjunction with exploitation on a current picture.

William Shirley, managing director of Farash Theatres in Schenectady, observed his thirteenth wedding anniversary last week and was assisted by a number of his friends at a party given in the lobby of the theatre, following the regular evening show. A feature of the anniversary observance was a mock marriage in which Mayor William Campbell officiated. Following this there was dancing and refreshments.

Meyer Friedman, of Schenectady, was called to New York city last week, through the illness of his father. He returned late in the week, and will devote his time to the real estate business, having resigned from Farash Theatres.

C. W. Bunn, a special representative for First National, was in Albany for a portion of last week.

Where in the world does Charles Stombaugh, manager for Pathe here, find the shirts he is wearing? The latest creation came back with him from New York last week and with white and blue stripes is discernible a block away. Mr. Stombaugh is quite a fisherman, or at least lays claim to have been such while in Minneapolis, and has his rods on hand to back up his claims.

The Barcli theatre in Schenectady was reopened last week for children's matinees. The house has been closed for some little time in order to deflect business to the three other theatres which are operated by the company. The Parent-Teachers' association was behind the reopening last week and the idea proved a good one for many children were entertained during the vacation period.

Hugo Rubens, who has been presiding at the console at the Albany theatre in Schenectady, has been transferred to the Strand in that city, succeeding Mrs. Hamilton Reed, who recently resigned.

Jane Jennings, who played one of the principal roles in Herbert Brenon's "The Little French Girl" for Paramount.

Work started last week on a new Proctor theatre in Schenectady. The house will be located in the business center of the city and will cost about $500,000.

The final junior movie of the season in Albany was held at the Mark Strand theatre on Saturday morning and became a benefit for the Girl Scouts of the city in appreciation of their work as ushers at Junior Movies during the winter. Uly S. Hill, manager of the house, donated the theatre. Subscribers to the Junior Movies had as their guests over 600 children from various orphanages. Members of the Albany Mothers' Club were in charge.

Miss Betty Feuer, the 20-year-old manager of the Crescent theatre in Schenectady, appeared this week in a brand new Studebaker sedan. She was a bit timid, however, in getting into the thick of traffic, having never driven before.

Claude Fish, of the American theatre in Schenectady, was raised to the rank of "Esquire" at the annual meeting of the Elks Lodge in that city last week.

W. F. Seymour, division manager for the Producers' Distributing Corporation, was in town during the week.

L. L. Connors, of the Victory in Cambridge, was along Film Row during the week, wearing a broad smile, having won his case before the Film Board.

Things broke badly last week for Holbrook Bissell, a well known salesman for Universal, out of this city. Mr. Bissell had been having trouble with his landlord over his dog and decided to move. Finding a home out in the country, Mr. Bissell engaged a moving van to transport his worldly possessions and then on the day the van arrived, someone made off with the dog that had been the subject of the whole controversy.

The organ in Harmanus-Bleecker Hall is now being heard twice a week in broadcasting with Stephen Boisclair doing the playing. According to the General Electric Company, the music from the organ has been heard as far away as Ireland.

J. M. Moran is no longer handling the theatre in Coxsackie, the management having been taken over by his brother.

O. R. Rieffel, manager for Fox in Albany, got out of the hospital last Tuesday, started for his office on the following morning, had the batteries of his car go bad, and then was forced to have someone shove him half way down the street until he could gather sufficient momentum to drive to a garage.

William Shirley, of Schenectady, appeared last week in some of the most unique footwear ever seen in that city. Just where Mr. Shirley acquired the shoes he does not say, although claiming that they came originally from England. At any rate, Mr. Shirley had the nerve to wear them to New York and upon returning home remarked that he saw nothing like them on the streets of the metropolis.

It looks as though they will have to put an addition to Harmanus Bleecker Hall in Albany, that is if Jake Golden continues as manager. In the way of providing entertainment for 25 cents, Mr. Golden has set the city to talking, and incidentally, to attending the theatre.

San Francisco

THE 40,000 U. S. sailors and officers who visited the Golden Gate with their 115 battleships and cruisers between April 5 to 15th inclusive, packed the theatres of this section and brought approximately 200,000 visitors to the Bay cities who desired to see the vessels and men. The theatres were officially thanked by the admiral before going, for the courteous manner in which the men were treated and because many of the leading houses gave men free entrance at certain times.

Practically all San Francisco theatres remaining closed April 10, Good Friday, until after 3 P. M. For several years the local show houses have co-operated with the observance of this day.

Harry Fontana, owner of the Glade theatre, Lindsay, was a recent San Francisco visitor.

A. G. Piggott, for the past 18 months working out of the San Francisco office of Paramount under Salesmanager J. J. Patridge, has been rewarded for his good work by having been made manager of the Salt Lake City office of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Mr. Piggott first came to the San Francisco office from Los Angeles to work in the local exploitation department and later was promoted to the sales department.

Fred Woldenberg, salesman for All Star, has left on a sales trip to Sacramento and the San Joaquin valley.

F. E. Benson, manager of the local office of the United Artists, has been appointed manager of the Los Angeles branch and W. S. Rand, formerly manager of the Los Angeles branch, has been appointed to manage the San Francisco office.

Herbert Harris, manager of the Century theatre, Oakland, and son of the manager of Ackerman & Harris, recently took unto himself a bride, and many of the local theatrical managers sent him letters and telegrams of congratulations.

Eugene Perry, Jr., four-year-old son of Eugene Perry, manager of the Union Square theatre, recently fell off his little tricycle. The doctor was compelled to sew up his chin. During the operation little Eugene was very quiet and after it was over, went up to his anxious parents and smilingly asked how it looked.

Chicago

THE breaking of ground for Marks Brothers new motion picture palace at Sheridan Road and Devon Avenue, on April 15th, was marked by an elaborate celebration. This theatre will be one of the largest in Chicago and will have a seating capacity close to four thousand. Alexander J. Levy and William J. Klein are the architects. Marks Brothers, Louis L. and Meyer S., have been in the exhibition business in Chicago for fourteen years and operate the Broadway Strand, Orpheus and Marshfield Theatres and are building, in addition to the theatre mentioned above, a large house at Fullerton and Crawford and one at Lawrence and Harding, both of which are to be opened before the end of the year. Among the speakers at the ceremony marking the breaking of ground at Sheridan and Devon were: Vice-President Dawes, General Pershing, John L. Hecht, president of the Kiwanis Club, James M. Slattery, president of the Sincerity Club of Rogers Park; members of the Loyola-Sheridan Business Men's Association, Peter J. Angsten, Robert J. Murphy, and Albert Quan, commissioners of the north shore district. John C. Ryan acted as master of ceremonies. In the evening open air dancing on a specially built platform to the music of Husk O'Hare and his orchestra, and entertainment by a number of theatrical stars, made the affair a memorable civic event.

Eddie Phelps, former Paramount salesman, is now connected with United Artists, and has been assigned to eastern Illinois territory.

Divisional Manager Cleve Adams of F. B. O., has returned from a tour of exchanges which took him as far south as the Gulf. Southern exhibitors, according to Mr. Adams, are taking great interest in the Milwaukee convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and an unusually large attendance of theatre men from the south is predicted.

Carl Laemmle passed through Chicago last week, enroute from Universal City to his New York headquarters and stopped off for a two day visit.

Vice-President L. J. Darmouth of Standard Cinema Service, visited local headquarters of F. B. O. this week for a conference with Exchange Manager Sampson. Mr. Dartmouth is on a tour of F. B. O. exchanges which handles the product of his company.

J. W. Miller of the Madison Theatre, Madison, Illinois, is reported to be seriously ill at his home.

O. H. Giese, owner of the Wildey Theatre, Edwardsville, Illinois, is running for mayor of his home town at the election to be held on April 21st.

C. C. Jones plans to keep his American Theatre at Cambria, Illinois, closed until local business conditions improve. The Knox Theatre at Carrier Mills, Illinois, is also to be dark for an indefinite period.

Joe Levy, special representative of Preferred Pictures, was a Chicago visitor this week.

Divisional Manager Cresswell Smith of United Artists accompanied Hiram Abrams to New York City last week. Mr. Abrams came through from Hollywood and only tarried in Chicago for a few hours.

Walter Brown is back booking for F. B. O. Another popular F. B. O. employee cashier, Miss Stella Jacobs is also back on the job after an illness of many weeks which was aggravated by the death of her father. Miss Jacobs is one of the veteran employees of this company.

William Aschmann of United Artists' Milwaukee office, was visting the local exchange this week. Mr. Aschmann reports that Milwaukee exhibitors and exchange men are both determined to make the national exhibitors convention a great success and predicts that the greatest number of exhibitors ever assembled at one of these events will attend. The Milwaukee boys are guaranteeing plenty of entertainment for all those who participate.

Jack Miller, Frank Schaefer, V. T. Lynch and General Manager Charles L. Casanave of Lynch Theatres, Inc., have returned from New York where they spent last week.

Central Penn

UNDER the general stage management and musical direction of Mrs. Florence Ackley Ley, former prima donna, who is head of the Community Service Bureau maintained in Harrisburg by the Wilmer & Vincent theatrical interests, the second annual operatic production by the Harrisburg Civic Opera Association was held in the Orpheum Theatre, on the evenings of April 22 and 23. The association, which is sponsored largely by Wilmer & Vincent who control half a dozen motion picture and other theatres in Harrisburg, is composed of the best amateur vocal talent of the city. This year's production was "The Fortune Teller." The operetta was rendered in a way that elicited very favorable newspaper criticism.

A romance growing out of their former association through the motion picture business in Harrisburg, resulted in the announcement on April 15 of the engagement of Miss Viola E. Burd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Burd, of Harrisburg, to wed Walter J. Hurley, formerly publicity representative of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in that city, and now manager of one of the leading Wilmer & Vincent picture theatres in Allentown. Miss Burd is an accomplished musician and for some time has been organist of the Colonial Theatre, Harrisburg. She is also organist of the First Baptist Church, and leader of the orchestra of the Harrisburg Civic Opera Association. She is a member of the Wednesday Club, an exclusive organization of Harrisburg musicians. Mr. Hurley, a former Bostonian, is a graduate of the University of Maine and a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity. He did newspaper work in Boston prior to going into theatrical work with Wilmer & Vincent. The marriage will take place this Spring.

Announcement has been made that Jasper Turano will be local manager of the New Regent picture theatre, Harrisburg, beginning on May 4, the date on which the house will pass from the control of Peter Magaro, who has sold the business and lease on the property to Marcus Loew, of Loew's Inc., of New York City. Mr. Turano is a half-brother of Mr. Magaro and has been associated with him in the management of the house. It is not proposed to make any other changes in the personnel of the staff of employes of the theatre.

Cleveland

E. E. OLIVER, a veteran in the theatre equipment supply business, has been appointed sole distributor in Ohio for the Superior projection machine which is made in Coxsackie, New York. Oliver previously handled the Motiograph machine in this territory.

The local Paramount exchange is stripped of its male shining lights for this week. All the boys, from Manager Eddie Fontaine right on down the line, went to New York to attend the international Paramount Convention.

H. A. Bandy, First National central division manager, made a tour of his southern territory last week. This included a stop at Cincinnati, Louisville and Indianapolis.

Charles Perry has resigned as special representative out of the Cleveland Fox exchange.

Dave Klein has been added to the local Fox sales force. Klein has been with Metro-Goldwyn for the past several years.

Mrs. Howard Baird is once again the proprietor of the Ball Park Theatre. At the time of the death of Mr. Baird, several months ago, Mrs. Baird sold the house to Fred Meiers, connected with the motion picture department of The News. Last week Meiers sold it back to Mrs. Baird.

Lemotto Smith, whose motion picture interests include Warren and Alliance, has just returned from a winter in Florida.

Martin Printz, manager of the Circle theatre, took a flying trip to Florida. He left here last Monday and is expected next Monday. Some call it a vacation.

M. B. Horwitz, managing director of the Washington Circuit of a dozen theatres, is spending four weeks at Hot Springs, Arkansas. It's the first vacation Moe has had in a year, and he needed a rest before gathering unto himself more theatres. Oh yes, the missus went along.

James McMahon, who is co-manager with Mr. Todd of the McTodd theatre, Willoughby, is a talented musician. He has a fine baritone voice. Now he has arranged with WTAM to broadcast a program of songs at stated intervals.

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association has announced its next meeting to be held at the Statler Hotel on April 21. It's the day before the opening of the local baseball season, so there should be no competition.

The Orient theatre, Toledo, has a new master. Tom Gardner, who operates the Ivanhoe theatre, also of Toledo, has just purchased the house from Carl Hume.

P. M. Tracy, former manager of the Opera House at Millersberg, has purchased the Zane theatre at Zanesville.

Nate Bigelson, booker in the Cleveland Lande exchange, and N. Frieberg have taken over the Rivoli theatre, Cleveland. This house formerly belonged to Sol Rosen.

The Film Exchange Building register revealed the following out-of-town exhibitor guests: H. L. Tracy, Mystic and Temple theatres, Willard; Joe Trunk, Victory and Mahoning theatres, Youngstown; Max Schagrin, Orpheum, Youngstown; Louis Manto, American theatre, Alliance; H. Graubner, Opera House, Salineville; E. F. Reynard, who has a whole string of houses in Marion; C. M. Jordan, Grand theatre, Newcomerstown.

Milton Bryer, who with Ike Friedman own and manage the Waldorf, People's and Ideal theatres in Akron, has just returned with his bride from a four week's honeymoon trip in the south.

Pittsburg

PITTSBURGERS are just about recovering from a terrific week of exploitation. Loew's Aldine theatre was the basis of unusual publicity. Eddie Bonns Trackless Train was the first eye opener for Pittsburgh. Not content with the remarkable Metro-Goldwyn special itself he added two jazz bands to the ballyhoo which paraded the entire down town section and stopped traffic completely.

Trilby Clark signed by Hunt Stromberg to a long contract. She will be seen in pictures released by Producers Distributing Corp.

Loew's Aldine stepped into the limelight again last Friday when they entertained the Siamese Twins, who were passing through Pittsburgh enroute to St. Louis. Capitalizing on their one day stay the Twins were guests of the Shrine Club luncheon after which they were paraded through the town. Jazz Week show at the Aldine broke all records for the theatre, and during Holy Week too, which goes to show that you can get them, by giving them what they want. Louis K. Sidney staged a great show and had a splendid newspaper campaign.

John Maloney, has relinquished the managerial reins of the local Metro Goldwyn office to Harry Schwearing. Maloney remains as part of the sales force. Harry is well known in this territory and has a host of friends.

Pat Garyn of the Metro-Goldwyn home office was a Pittsburgh visitor.

Dave Flamm, recovered from a recent serious illness is back in town. He was formerly with Metro Goldwyn exploitation dept.

The Grand theatre is doing a splendid business since adopting its present policy of added attractions.

The Blackstone theatre, one of the Rowland and Clark chain, reduced its prices to 30c week days and 40c on Saturdays and holidays. The former price was 50c flat.

Milton Crandell is still at the helm for Rowland and Clark publicity department. He is putting over a trip to Atlantic City, with a Popularity Contest, to Rowland and Clark theatre patrons.

Sam Bleye of the State theatre, Washington, Pa., reports his business as very satisfactory during the Lenten season.

Joe Kaliski of the Educational Exchange is preparing for his forthcoming convention. Looks like Atlantic City but Joe would much rather it had been California. He had a great time there last year. Oh, Joe.

All theatres have joined in the N. V. A. drive which starts this week, and a special midnight show on Wednesday will see a program made up from vaudeville and picture theatres.

F. C. O'Kelly of Morgantown, W. V., was in town the other day visiting all the big theatres, on the lookout for novelty acts. His Theatre, the Metropolitan is having a big year. Playing two pictures a week and all the legitimate attractions that come his way.

All the exhibitors in Pittsburgh are dusting off the old Grips. Big times are expected in Washington, Pa., this week at the Convention.

Ed. Schiller, General Manager of the Loew Corporation, stopped in Pittsburgh for a day last week to visit the Loew's Aldine Theatre. He and Louis K. Sidney the District Manager, left for St. Louis together.

Margaret Quimby, who plays a leading role in "Perils of the Primitive," Universal serial now in production.

Des Moines

Elsie Ferguson, star of Vitagraph's "The Unknown Lover."

JAMES NESTIE, owner of the Rialto theatre at Lake Mills, Iowa, has announced that he may build another theatre at Lake Mills. He plans the building of a $10,000 house but has not announced anything further in his plan for the new theatre.

Billy Finter, formerly salesman for Universal, has resigned and Mr. Fairchilds, who comes from the F. B. O. office at DesMoines, has taken Finter's place on the Universal sales staff. He has the southeastern part of Iowa.

Roy Pearson, inspecting booker, and C. M. Brady, travelling auditor, from the New York office have been at the DesMoines Pathe office. Mr. Brady was called from Boston to take the work of Mr. Anderson, cashier for Pathe, while Anderson is recuperating from an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Anderson is getting along nicely and was able to leave the hospital after a week. He will spend several weeks at home before returning to active duty.

There was a regular reception for Johnny Kennebeck at the station when his train went through enroute to the New York convention. Mr. Kennebeck, who has had charge of publicity for Famous Players in all the Australian branches, was formerly exploitation man for Famous Players for Omaha and DesMoines with headquarters in DesMoines. The eight men from the DesMoines office who will attend the convention in Los Angeles, are making such an outlay for new clothes that they ought to be the dolls of the convention. DesMoines Famous Players office will be represented by Frank Crawford, manager, Bill Barker, head booker, Jack Curry, head of advertising accessories, and the sales staff of R. M. Copeland, Slater O'Hara, P. W. Robbins, Harry Saveride, and E. R. Rushing.

John Waller of Osceola and R. C. Coons of Seymour visited the DesMoines exchanges together last week. Another visitor was L. D. Hendrix of the Strand theatre at Mt. Vernon. M. S. Carragher of the Park theatre at Clear Lake was also in town on a buying trip.

Anita Stewart in "The Boomerang," B. R. Schulberg special.

Joe Gerbracht of the Twin Star theatre at Ames, known as one of the finest of exhibitors to deal with in the Iowa territory, called at DesMoines exchanges last week.

M. J. Weisfelt, midwest division manager for F. B. O. from Minneapolis, is at the DesMoines office. Mr. Weisfelt, successfully put across many months ago in Minneapolis the "Greater Movie" movement which Will Hays is now introducing to theatres all over the country.

Dr. McLaughlin, K. C. secretary for a year in France and at present at the U. S. Veterans Hospital at Knoxville, reports that the movies are the looked for event in the lives of the 500 psycopathic patients at the hospital. Only comedies are shown as the minds of the patients are unable to follow the story of a heavier drama.

Josephine Buckley, recruited from work at the State House, took the place of Goldie Hartman, stenographer for First National, while she was absent from work for a few days. An addition to the stenographic staff at Universal is Ruby Morgan. Marie Parkins has been added to the staff of F. B. O. in the contract department. Eva Calloway is the new film inspector at the F. B. O. office.

Katheryne Hiller, stenographer for the Educational exchange, was called to her home in Ottumwa by the death of her sister.

W. E. Banford, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn office, is attending the sales convention in New York.

W. E. Troag, assistant sales manager for Universal, made quite a dent with his pleasing personality at his last visit to the DesMoines office.

Election of officers for the Film Board of Trade of Iowa is scheduled for two weeks from date.

Seattle

MANAGER Fred G. Sliter of the First National exchange this week was expecting the arrival of a large party of film stars and production men, who were to visit this city en route to Bellingham, Wash., where they were to shoot scenes for a Rex Beach story. Included in the party was to be Viola Dana, Anna Q. Nilsson and a number of others. Frank Lloyd, director, was in charge of the party, and was assisted by a number of men from his technical departments.

Seth D. Perkins, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn office, left this city this week for New York, where he was to represent the Pacific Northwest at the national convention of Metro-Goldwyn branch managers. During his absence affairs here will be directed by J. W. Parry, office manager and booker.

Manager Frank Steffy of the Coliseum Theatre is gaining more advertising for his house every week through his tieups with the Seattle Times radio service. At frequent intervals, Mr. Steffy allows remote control apparatus to be installed in the theatre and broadcasts the regular daily concerts by Sam K. Wineland's Coliseum Theatre Concert Orchestra.

E. C. Weksill, owner and manager of the Rose theatre in Colfax was a visitor on Film Row last week. Fred Walton, general manager of the American and Liberty theatres in Bellingham was also in for a short time, making arrangements for bookings on a number of his spring pictures. Mr. Walton planned "big doings" for the First National company that was to visit his city the latter part of this month, according to his preliminary plans as announced while he was here.

John Danz's Capitol theatre, opened only a few months ago as a first run, 35c theatre, last week started a new policy of two changes of program a week with admission prices reduced to 10c and 15c. This was the second price drop since the opening, as the Capitol has been operating under a 25c policy for the last two months. The house is directly opposite the Winter Garden, Seattle's leading first run 10c picture house, and that fact is said to be partly responsible for the price change at the Capitol.

Several changes and additions in the staff of the Greater Features Film exchanges in the Northwest were announced recently by J. L. Sheffield. L. N. Walton, formerly on the sales staff of the local office, has been moved to the Portland office and installed as manager by Jack Lannon, one of the heads of the organization. Mr. Walton has been with the organization for more than four years, and his brother, E. L. Walton, is manager of the Greater Features office in Denver. In the latter city, Walter Millar, well-known by film men of this state, has been added as sales representative. While Mr. Sheffield handles affairs in this city, Mr. Lannon is making a tour of the exchanges where changes are in progress, and will return within the next few weeks.

Fred Mercy, Jr., son of Fred Mercy manager of the Jensen-VonHerberg enterprises in Yakima, last week arrived in this city and has joined the staff of Manager Al Finkelstein's Strand theatre. He plans to remain in this city and learn the theatre business from the large town angle before taking up further work for the organization.

Florida

JOHN B. CARROLL, general manager of the four theatres controlled by Consolidated Amusements, in Tampa, is planning an elaborate summer series of prologues for the Victory. Each picture will be given a prologue with a special painted setting. Mr. Carroll has Scott Morse, an artist of exceptional ability, upon his staff, who will paint the different settings. Mr. Morse has demonstrated his ability by painting the handsome Easter set and many others.

Charles A. Sappal manager of the Central, Tampa, finds business so good in that house that he has decided to re-open the Maceo, which has been closed for about a year.

The Italian Club theatre, in Ybor City, had a rather costly film fire last week. This house is making a feature of Spanish productions, which they import from Cuba. The films come to them in small cans of 400 feet length and it requires quite a lot of work to assemble the pictures on to reels ready for the projection machine. Three six-reel features were being assembled when the film in the machine ignited and spread to these pictures. The fire was confined to the booth and did not damage the building.

Cecil A. Ross, manager of the Apopka theatre, Apopka, was in Tampa this week arranging for some new equipment. Mr. Ross is going to open another house in Apopka, this one exclusively for negroes. He also has another location in view in a nearby city.

The old Prince theatre, on upper Franklin street, Tampa, which has been closed for over a year, was re-opened this week by J. E. Ramos. Mr. Ramos had the house all re-painted and decorated. He has established a policy of variety programs at cheap prices, 15c for adults and 10c for children. William Sullivan is managing the house.

St. Louis

EMPLOYES of the motion picture exchanges in St. Louis have formed the Film Exchange Employes Educational Society and have filed an application for a proforma decree of incorporation with the St. Louis Circuit Court. The officers of the new society will be Nathan Sunley, president; John Caporal, secretary, and Louis Lavato, treasurer.

An official announcement of the leasing of the new St. Louis theatre, Grand boulevard at Morgan street, St. Louis, to the Orpheum Circuit has been made by David Sommers, president of the Metropolitan Theatres Corporation, owners of the new theatre which is now nearing completion.

Mr. Sommers stated that the new house will be ready for its grand opening about September 1. Originally it was planned to dedicate it on June 1, 1925, but the work was delayed.

The Orpheum plans to play first run pictures and Junior Orpheum vaudeville in the new house. The theatre represents an investment of about $2,000,000 and will have approximately 4000 seats. It has a frontage of 148 feet on Grand boulevard by a depth of 186 along Morgan street. The exterior will be of brick, stone and terra cotta and in height it will equal a seven story building.

Joseph Oppenheimer lessee and manager of the Garrick theatre, a burlesque house, has leased the old Hippodrome theatre, Sixth street near Market street, for use next season. He plans to open the house in August. It will play Mutual Circuit burlesque now playing at the Garrick.

Mr. Oppenheimer had contemplated building a new house down town but the leasing of the Hippodrome probably means the calling off of construction plans. The Hippodrome has been dark for many years.

Chester J. Gruber, owner-manager of the Miners Temple, Collinsville, Ill., is sponsoring the Milwaukee Black Diamond Sandwich Shop which recently opened at Union and West Florissant avenue, St. Louis. He serves coffee with a kick and other soft drinks.

Milton Goldbaum of the local F.B.O. staff has won the local office's "Gold Rush" prize for the second consecutive month. He landed the $35 in gold for both February and March and he is also leading the pack for the April prize. He travels Southern Illinois. Goldbaum's a close student of bird life, his favorite feathered creature being the Eagle shown on $10 gold pieces. In the local office's weekly contest prior to the opening of the Gold Rush drive he carried off the $10 gold piece for 15 of the 18 weeks the contest ran.

Joe Smith of the Universal poster department came down from Chicago to give the local poster department boys a few pointers on how to better the service for exhibitors. His a wiz. Lou Hess doesn't overlook any bets in bettering exchange facilities.

Tommy Tobin formerly with Metro-Goldwyn, Pathe and Columbia Pictures Corporation has joined the Universal sales organization, taking over his old territory in Southern Illinois. Jimmy Shea who has been hitting the tall and uncut there will concentrate in the future on the key cities and circuits.

Lou Goldman, brother of Mrs. Louis Stahl, whose husband heads the Sanford Amusement Company, died on Sunday, April 12.

Herman M. Ferguson has purchased the Elite theatre at Bernie, Mo., from George Winer. He also operates the Liberty theatre at Malden, Mo.

Mrs. G. Moore plans to re-open the Lyric theatre at St. Charles, Mo.

The Jefferson City Theatre Corporation is rushing work on its new theatre for that city and plans to open shortly. The officials of the company were in St. Louis the past week arranging for film service, etc.

Charley Goldman owner of the Rainbow and New Astor theatres in St. Louis has added the Dupo, Ill., theatre to his string.

Charley Werner, local manager for Metro-Goldwyn accompanied by J. E. Flint, division manager, left Saturday, April 18, for New York to attend the company's sales convention.

G. E. McKean, manager for Fox here, and his son, Claude, will go to New York Friday, April 24, to be present when the Fox Convention opens in the Big Village on April 27.

S. J. Hankin, manager for Educational Pictures announced that he will open a Five Weeks Sales Campaign on April 26th. He hopes to set new records for sales during that period.

R. H. Miller has taken over the Grand theatre in Mexico, Mo.

An epidemic of scarlet fever in the town has forced the temporary closing of the theatre at Perry, Ill.

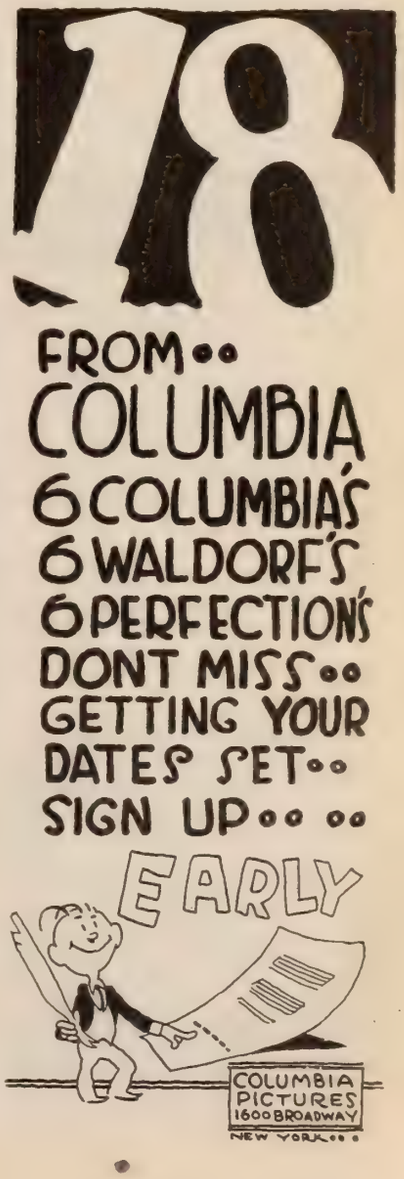
Clarence Denny who recently purchased the Dreamland theatre in Roodhouse, Ill., has closed that house.

J. Getzler who formerly operated the Moonshine theatre, Wayne City, Ill., is building an airdome in that city. The Moonshine has been dismantled.

R. C. Williams is operating the Crescent theatre at St. Francisville, Ill.

Houses reported closed include: Logan theatre, Logan, Ill; Kozy theatre, Wickliffe, Ky.; New Rex theatre, Pittsburg, Ill., and American theatre, Cambria, Ill.

H. C. Tuttle, owner of the Grand theatre, Desloge, Mo., has taken over the Regal theatre at Elvins, Mo.



J. Martin, owner-manager of the Overland Park, Mo., theatre, will leave shortly for a tour of South America.

Charley Morhaly of Valley Park, Mo., who retired from the motion picture exhibition field to operate a gold mine in New Mexico is visiting in St. Louis. He reports that his mine is doing excellently.

Fred Hoelzer who recently sold his string of South St. Louis theatres to Fred Wehrenberg has returned from a trip to Florida and other interesting points in the East. He says that he is tired of loafing, but hasn't decided on his future plans.

George A. Hickey, promoted from Kansas territory to Metro-Goldwyn District Manager in New England.

Denver

Lewis Natheaux, signed by De Mille for his stock company whose productions will be released through Producers Distributing Corp.

MR. H. BRADLEY FISH, assistant general manager of Vitagraph, Inc., arrived in Denver last Sunday accompanied by Mrs. Fish. He spent the week visiting Mr. Charles R. Gilmour, the local manager, and accompanied him on his calls to some of the more important exhibitors in the territory. Mr. Fish will leave Saturday for Dallas, Texas, where he will stop a few days before going to Milwaukee to attend the convention of the independent exhibitors.

Mr. R. J. Garland, local manager of Metro-Goldwyn, left for New York where he will attend the general sales convention of that company.

Mr. R. J. Garlaand, local man-Agular, Colorado, exhibitor, spent a very exciting week in Denver. Not only did Mr. Allen arrange his bookings for the coming months but he was in such a hurry to transact his business that he received a call from the city fathers to explain why he drove his automobile at such a great rate of speed on the down town streets.

The local Famous Players-Lasky office is going to look like the deserted village next week when H. W. Braly, the local branch manager, and his entire sales force will leave for Los Angeles to attend the general sales convention of that company.

Rick Ricketson, the local manager for the Rialto and Victory Theatres in Denver has pulled another new one. He will hold a special preview at the Brown Palace Hotel next week under the auspices of the Junior League, the most prominent society organization among the younger set in Denver. It is said that $1.50 admission will be charged.

MANAGER D. E. L. Fisher of the Garrick theatres, one of the fine theatres of Winnipeg, Manitoba, presented a "double bill" at the Garrick theatre during Easter Week under very unusual and interesting circumstances. Because of the Easter school vacation, Mr. Fisher decided that a special children's picture would be appropriate but he did not want to decide upon any plan favoring the child patrons that would hurt the regular adult patronage. So, he devised the special plan of presenting one feature during afternoon performances only and then offered a different show for the evening hours. The result of the arrangement was that there were big crowds both afternoon and evening, the people having their choice of features during the day.

A big event in moving picture theatre circles of Toronto, Ontario, on April 20 was the return of Luigi Romanelli to the Tivoli Theatre, one of the large downtown houses. Mr. Romanelli is one of the most widely known musical conductors in the Dominion, having been the supervisor of orchestras for Allen Theatres, Limited, Toronto, when that company had 55 theatres across Canada. Mr. Romanelli made his headquarters at the Allen Theatre, Toronto, which is now the Tivoli, but frequently made long trips of inspection on the Allen circuit and also directed the opening programmes of any new houses. The Allen chain has been defunct for two years or more and following the collapse of the Allens he became director of music at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto. He is now back with his first love, the Tivoli theatre, where he was once famous. The Tivoli is now operated under independent auspices and W. J. Stewart has had charge of the house for some months past.

During the week of April 13, the usual N. V. A. collections were made at the B. F. Keith theatre, Ottawa, permission being granted by Manager J. M. Franklin for the collection of money among patrons at every performance for the vaudeville actors' organization An unusual incident occurred in connection with this procedure at one performance when some unknown patron placed a handsome solid gold ring on the plate as it was passed around, this person having been apparently greatly moved by the appeal for funds for sick and disabled members of the profession.

"The Lightning Switch," was the title of a special musical potpouri which was played by the concert orchestra of the Hippodrome theatre, Toronto, during Easter Week. This unique overture was arranged by Jack Arthur, general supervisor of music for Famous Players Canadian Corp., the arrangement consisting of a combination of a few familiar bars from many different operas, classical airs, popular songs and other selections, all blending into a picturesque whole. Further interest was achieved through the offer by Mr. Arthur of a special assortment of prizes, the first being a three months pass at the Hippodrome, to those who guessed the largest number of pieces included in the musical ensemble.

The annual motion picture ball of the Manitoba Moving Picture Exhibitors Association was held Thursday evening, April 16, when music was provided by the Capitol theatre orchestra, Winnipeg, through the permission of H. M. Thomas, the Capitol manager.

Buffalo

CHARLEY HAYMAN of the Strand and Cataract theatres, Niagara Falls, N. Y., has arranged with the Duo-Art Film company of Rochester to make an industrial review of the city of Niagara Falls. The film, when completed, will be shown in the Strand.

Believing that pictures of any nature can be made inexpensively in Hornell, John L. McClutcheon was in that town last week discussing the proposition of erecting a picture studio in the city.

Sales of real estate in the vicinity of Elm and Cortland streets were stimulated the past week in Rochester by the rumor that the Keith interests were seeking a site for a new theatre in Kodak Town.

Joe Schuchert, Jr., manager of the Columbia and Colonial theatres, Buffalo, did a brody off the plank at the Buffalo Athletic club the other day and landed on his face. Result: Two black eyes. Joe is going to put on bumpers after this.

John E. McAuley of Chicago, inventor of the latest Peerless reflector arc lamp, was in Buffalo for a visit with Al Becker of the Becker Theatre Supply company, last weekend. Messrs. Becker and McAuley journeyed to Dunkirk, N. Y. to demonstrate the lamp at the Regent theatre. H. P. Lally was so enthusiastic over the invention that he ordered four of them for his houses in Dunkirk.

Manager Ray S. Averill is starting something entirely new at the Olympic theatre, Buffalo. Commencing Monday, April 27 he will inaugurate a complete noon hour show, when a program of pictures will be given from 12 to 1 o'clock, with a special admission price of ten and fifteen cents.

George Hackathorne is coming to the Lafayette Square, Buffalo, in person, the week of April 27.

Notice that the Liberty theatre property on East Erie avenue, Corning, N. Y., has been put on the market for sale, has been announced by Elmar G. Dodds, Corning representative of the Schine Theatrical corporation, owner of the house. The building on the property was badly damaged by fire last December.

John Stevens, formerly associated with Schine theatre company, is now manager of the Elk theatre, Buffalo. This house has just been sold by M. Minuse, who has gone to Florida for his health. The deal involved some $30,000.

It is reported along Film Row, Buffalo, that Lionel Edel, assistant manager of the Lumberg theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y., has started a new fad—hairnets for mustaches. Not having been in the Cataract City lately we are unable to confirm this rumor. Lionel is a brother of the late Harold Edel, former manager of the New York Strand.

Frank Hopkins, former manager of the Buffalo and Albany branches of Universal is back in Buffalo after several years' absence as a member of the "U" sales staff. He will cover the Syracuse territory. Frank is well known in this neck of the woods.

Jim Cardino, owner of the Varsity and Kensington theatres, Buffalo, and his brother, Thomas, have purchased the famous Williamsville Glen, a picturesque property which has been a favorite picnic and recreation spot for years. Jim also owns the Glen theatre in Williamsville at the entrance to the Glen.

William J. Mauer, a special officer at the Plaza theatre in William street, Buffalo, was discharged the other day with a reprimand from Judge Standart in city court. On March 27, agents Woodbury and David of the Children's Aid Society and Miss Josephine Reed, 282 Lexington avenue, an agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, went to the theatre to check up on the admission of children under age. They are alleged to have followed three small boys into the balcony. It is said they questioned the children and took them to the rear of the house where Mauer is alleged to have questioned their authority. Woodbury and Davis claim they identified themselves. When they went to the office to arrest Henry Oppenheimer, ticket seller, Mauer is alleged to have interfered. After hearing the testimony, Judge Standart discharged Mauer, but warned him to avoid future trouble. Oppenheimer was arrested and fined $25 by Judge George E. Judge in children's court.

George C. Sarvis, manager of the Library theatre in Warren, Pa., and Miss Ann Jane Healy, aged 24, also of Warren, who were seriously injured when the auto in which they were riding crashed into a tree on the Warren-Irvine road, are reported as having a good chance to recover. They are both seriously injured, however.

Working three shifts a day the contractors building the new Shea Buffalo house expect to give the theatre to M. Shea for a Christmas present, which will be going some. It is expected to have the exterior complete by the first of August.

Patrons of the Olympic theatre, Buffalo, were reminded that spring has arrived as Manager Averill introduced his girl ushers this week in new spring costumes which are most attractive

The Temple theatre in Lockport has placed its spring and summer price scale in front which shows a reduction to fifteen cents for adults and ten cents for children. "Nothing cut but the price," says the management.

The Beckman theatre in Dundee, N. Y. which has been closed all winter, has been re-opened with pictures by C. A. Betts of Red Creek.

A schedule showing the attraction each day at every theatre that advertises in its columns has been started by the Buffalo Star. It is checked up each day and patrons are finding it a valuable guide. The Star, by the way, is devoting a whole page each day to the screen and making it local most of the time.

Rumors persist that a motion picture house is to be built in the north Main street section of Buffalo. The latest report is that it will be at Main street at Highgate. Nothing official, however, has come to light as yet.

Ted O'Shea, who has been a member of the Metro-Goldwyn Buffalo sales staff for several years, has been promoted to the management of the Albany office of the company. Ted is one of the most popular salesmen in the business and has been covering the Syracuse territory out of the local branch. He has taken over his new duties.

Sydney Samson, manager of the Bond Photoplays corporation exchange, has returned from New York, enthusiastic over new productions which Bond will handle in western New York.

J. E. Storey, general sales manager for Pathe, was in Buffalo last week end for a visit with local manager Basil Brady, who was just coming to after returning for outfitting his family with new Easter clothes.

The Buffalo Paramount boys are probably breaking the New York hotel eating records because before departing for the Gotham convention they had been fasting for several days. They'll probably all be as fat as Earl Brink or Bill Bork when they get back. They expect to have one wonderful time.

A. L. Herman and Mike Resnick have been engaged as members of the sales staff of the Buffalo office of Bond Photoplays corporation. Mr. Herman has been in Albany, while Mike has been in everything.

Buffalo theatres were closed until 3 P. M. on Good Friday. "Go to Church," said a sign placed in the box office of Loew's State by Manager Al Beckerich. We never saw a sign in a church reading "Go to the Theatre." Atta boy, Al!

Colonel Howard F. Brink, manager of the Educational exchange in Buffalo, is getting set for the May sales drive when he expects to break all records.

New York and New Jersey

TO quote from the principal character in the following, "when tile meets tile" something real serious ought to happen. At any rate, here's one to think about.

Moe Streimer of United Artists went down to the Luxor baths a week ago this Tuesday. This is the place that Moe indulges in one of his favorite sports—diving. Just before leaving for the day, Moe decided to take just one more dive—and did—a jackknife over the brass rail and into four feet of water. According to those present, there was a loud report when Moe's head, instead of curving gracefully upward, struck bottom with full force. Now, at this point, by all methods of reasoning, Moe Streimer should have stayed down and out for the count on the bottom, but he came up, struck out for the other end of the tank and climbed out under his own power, calmly ordered a doctor and had four stitches sewn in his scalp wound.

He was at his office the next morning and the latest report is that outside of some soreness in his neck and back he is as good as ever.

The moral of this, is, "That you can't keep a good man down."

First National has a baseball team that is willing to meet all comers. They won their last three consecutive games in league championship—all rough, hard battles. The line up is, E. Bullwinkle, former star pitcher of Leland Stanford. Phil Murphy of Holy Cross, Catcher. H. Levy of Carlisle at first. M. Rader at second base. "Teddy" Roosevelt at third and H. H. Buxbaum, formerly of Harvard plays short stop. Dave Cross a former N. Y. U. Star plays left field and "Billy" Benson will gather them in when they fly out to right. Jake Zurich will cover center field.

They challenge any exchange in the film business and will spot them five runs—however, they reserve the privilege of taking these runs back if it should become necessary.

Herman Rifkin of Boston, State Rights buyer, was in town this week doing some buying.

George Roberts and Harry Berenstein, both of Albany, N. Y. were in the city Tuesday. Mr. Roberts purchased two new Simplex machines from Joe Hornstein.

IT remained for a Chicago exchange manager, R. C. Seery of First National, to come to Kansas City for a visit just in time to win the inter-exchange and exhibitors' golf tournament, played over the Excelsior Springs Course, last week. With a net score of 83, he having a handicap of 15, Mr. Seery led a field of about twenty-five contestants and was awarded a silver trophy. C. W. Allen, Vitagraph branch manager at Kansas City, was runner-up with a net 85, while C. E. Gregory, Metro-Goldwyn branch manager, won the blind hole event, the prize being a driver. "Bill" Warner of First National, who topped the field in the blind bogey event, was awarded a mashie.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in Kansas City last week were: D. Filizola, Empress, Fort Scott, Kas.; Lawrence Brenninger, Orpheum, Topeka, Kas.; George Shelton Star, Warrensburg, Mo.; Glenn Dickinson, Dickinson chain of theatres, Lawrence, Kas.; Charles Sears, Sears Circuit, Nevada, Mo.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kas.; S. E. Wilhoit, Jefferson, Springfield, Mo.

April showers didn't dampen any ambitions or wilt any white collars along the Kansas City film row last week. W. E. Truog, Universal district manager, following a tour of all the exchanges under his supervision, was back at his desk again, while C. F. Senning, Educational branch manager, reported business good, following a trip to St. Joseph, Mo.; where he sold the Hostettler theatres of that town 100 per cent. Louis Reichert, P. D. C. branch manger, spent ten days in the territory boosting sales, as did "Bob" Withers, Enterprise branch manager. L. B. Metzger, Universal branch manager, lost no time in telling all his friends that more than 200 pledges for "Laemmle Jubilee" already had been turned in. The Paramount office is having some nice new "spring" signs painted on the windows. Roy Churchill, F. B. O. branch manager, again was hustling in the territory. George A. Hickey, former Metro-Goldwyn district manager in the Kansas City territory who was transferred to the Boston territory, was given a big farewell.

Improvements on two theatres in the Kansas City territory were announced last week. The Colonial theatre, Junction, Kas., will be improved extensively, according to Glenn Dickinson, manager, who also operates the City and Cozy theatres. F. W. Weary, owner of the Farris theatre, Richmond, Mo., will remodel his theatre at a cost of $10,000, including waiting rooms on the second floor, rest rooms and plans for enlarging the lobby.

Members of the casts appearing at the Orpheum, Mainstreet, Pantages and Globe theatres, Kansas City, this week, gave a benefit dinner-dance this week at the Hotel Baltimore, Wednesday night, beginning at 11 o'clock, as a part of the National Vaudeville Artists' Association to obtain funds for the sick and charity funds of that association. An admission of $1 was charged.

It looked like Sunday night of old in Kansas City last Sunday night. The Mainstreet theatre hung out its "S. R. O." sign, while the Newman had them standing on the sidewalk, as did the Royal.

Gov. Ben S. Paulen has chosen a Galena man, Arthur S. McNay, for state movie theatre inspector which is among the best appointive offices in Kansas.

Mr. McNay has been associated with Governor Paulen during the last four sessions of the legislature, having been secretary of the Senate during the time Mr. Paulen was State Senator, then Lieutenant Governor, and during the 1925 session with him as chief executive of the state.

Mr. McNay has chosen Galena as his headquarters, where he will receive reports, and from which he will send reports to the Kansas State Board of Review at Kansas City, with which his office is associated.

Out of town visitors at Kansas City exchanges the past week were D. Filizola, Fort Scott, Kansas. Roy Gardner, Neosho, Mo. Mr. Bert, Independence, Kansas, and Mr. Harvey, of Pittsburg, Kans.

A new theatre which seats three hundred people has been opened up in Carl Junction, by F. O. Williams.

D. Filizola, manager of the Empress theatre at Fort Scott, Kans., shows that he is right up to business in the case of advertising. Recently he had several good pictures booked, so inserted a "reader" advertisement announcing that he was overstocked with good merchandise, and like merchants of other businesses he was going to give a bargain in showing from four to six different films each week. Fort Scott is a town of about 25,000 and pictures, usually run three days at least. Mr. Filizola drew the crowds.

Mrs. Chas. Dale, and Mrs. Ruth Goodman, gave a theatre party Saturday afternoon, April 11th, to the Degree of Honor orchestra members at a local theatre in Joplin, Mo. Mrs. Bert Rakestraw of Galena, Kan. gave a theatre party Saturday evening at the Electric theatre.

Detroit

GEORGE W. TRENDLE, attorney and general manager for the Kunsky interests, returned last week with Mrs. Trendle from an extended trip to Bermuda.

Lester Sturm, Metro-Goldwyn distributor, will attend the sales convention of his organization in New York. Frank Drew and Frank Stuart will represent the Fox exchange.

Steel work on the new State theatre is progressing rapidly. It is now at the fourth floor level while the girders are being put in place for the support of the huge proscenium arch which is already on the ground for hoisting. It is expected that steel work will be completed by June 1, at which time brick construction will immediately begin. The new house, located at the Northwest corner of Woodward avenue and Elizabeth street, is expected to open its doors to the public by November 1.

The State will be approximately the same as Kunsky's Capitol, there being but one hundred seats difference in capacity. This will make the State seat in the neighborhood of forty-one hundred. The new house will embody many novelties heretofore unknown to Detroit theatre-goers such as hydraulic lifts for orchestra pit and organ consoles as well as other novelties of unique design and origination. The large stage will be able to accommodate any kind of presentation.

Lew Cohen, Luther Gobel, George Guise, John Kunsky and Bert Williams, local managers, assisted in staging the monster vaudeville bill at Orchestra Hall for the benefit of the National Vaudeville artists association.

Improvements totalling $30,000 will be made by Same Ackerman to increase the size of his East Side theatre on Gratiot avenue. The house will be completely renovated though business will continue during the alterations.

The Mutual Investment company has leased the Ford Temple, a theatre and office building to be erected on Michigan avenue in Dearborn by Mrs. Mabel N. Jones, prominent in local film circles. Lease of the building will be for ten years. The theatre is to have a seating capacity of 1,200. The front or business block will include a basement to house bowling alleys, pool and billiard rooms. There will be four stores and a lobby. The second floor will include five apartments and seven offices. Adioining land owned by Mrs. Jones will be subdivided into lots.

Syd Hackford is covering the district around Grand Rapids for First National as the result of a staff re-arrangement by Fred North, local manager. Walter Collins, will be in charge of the office as well as covering the west side of Detroit, Fred Dickson, formerly with Fox, will succeed Collins as booker. Ben Converse is to cover the northern section of the state while Fred Wilson will remain in his regular territory, the Thumb district.

Mrs. Harry Buxbaum has recently returned from Miama, Fla. where she was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Meighan. While there, Mrs. Buxbaum won the amateur tennis championship.

Nate Robbins, chief of the Robbins circuit of Utica, N. Y. and Meyer Schine, of the Schine interests of Gloversville, were callers at 729 7th Ave., this week.

Ray Edwards of East Hampton was also in town.

In connection with "Bellman Month," Jack Bellman is going to start the ball rolling with a big part, Saturday, May 2nd.

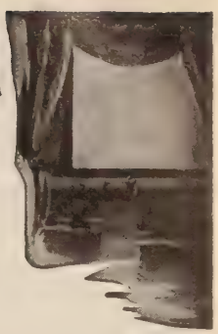
Joe Seider, president of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey, recently underwent an operation for removal of his tonsils. He is doing finely and is expected back at his 7th Ave. office this week.

Harry Buxbaum's police dog "Imp" not only won the police dog prize at the Miami dog show, but was judged the "Best Dog" of the whole show.

The Pathe exchange offices are being brightened up with a spring renovation.

The Savoy Amusement Co. of Atlantic City announces the installation of a new Wurlitzer Organ.

Burglars entered the Majestic theatre at St. Nicholas Ave. and 184th St. early Monday morning by forcing an alley door. They smashed their way into the safe with a sledge and took $240 and a check for $350. They left a penny.



Another Wurlitzer organ has gone to Coney Island. The Gates Cinema Corp. has just installed one at their Gate theatre, Surf Ave and West 25th St., Coney Isle.

The Throop theatre, Throop Ave. and Fulton St. Brooklyn, one of the D'Stamatis circuit, is being remodeled and enlarged. The seating capacity is to be increased by several hundred and it is to be ready for business again by September.

Hymie Goldshine who used to own the Montauk has bought the Windsor Terrace theatre at 1224 Prospect Ave., Brooklyn, from Harry Bernstein.

Presidential Address Before S. M. P. E. Traces Genealogy of Present Day Show

L. A. JONES, President of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, in his presidential address before that body at its last annual convention gave some very interesting information on the "ancestry" of present day motion picture engineering and equipment. This "ancestry" proves to be as unusual as most ancestors are—and possibly more mentionable than some. Mr. Jones also mentioned the commendable progress and success of the S. M. P. E. which is of timely interest in that organization will hold their spring meeting next month. Mr. Jones' address follows in part:

As I stated in the beginning, this is the 19th regular meeting of the society and, since it is our custom to meet twice a year, this means we are now in the tenth year of our existence. This a relatively short time and I think we are to be congratulated on the progress that has been made within this single decade. Even though we are a young organization we have an illustrious ancestry and it may be of interest to turn backward for a few moments and see just how far into the past we can trace our family tree. Many people take great delight and pride in tracing their ancestry back to the Pilgrim Fathers or to the time of William the Conqueror, so let us see if we can identify the beginning of the motion picture industry in those remote periods.

You are all familiar with what we may term the recent developments in scientific fields which made motion pictures possible. It was only a few years ago that Mr. C. Francis Jenkins built his first motion picture projector and we will not at present consider these recent developments but go farther into the past. I believe it is usual, in tracing a genealogy, to start at the present time and proceed generation by generation into the earlier centuries. However, we shall reverse this process and begin with the first date at which we can find any mention of anything resembling, even remotely, a motion picture.

Some months ago an interesting chronological table was published by Mr. W. Day in which he gives many interesting references and I am quoting in part from this publication.

We find that the Chinese in 5000 B.C. indulged in shadow shows in which buffalo hide figures were projected as shadows or silhouettes upon parchment screens. The phenomenon of persistence of vision, upon which depends the possibility to produce motion pictures, was noticed and mentioned in the writings of Lucretius, 65 A.D., and this same fact was commented upon by Claudius Ptolemy in 130 A.D. The first lens of which there is any mention in existent literature, was formed by a glass globe filled with water. This is credited to Hero of Alexandria but no date is given for this work.

It is well known that the optical lantern, or projector, in some form, was used by the ancient priests and magicians in the temple of Tyre and throughout Egypt, Greece, and the Roman Empire between the period 4000 B.C. and 200 A.D. and it was by some such means that many of the divine manifestations, occurring in the shrines and temples, were produced.

The optical lantern in its present form was invented by Athanasius Kircher at the Jesuit College in Rome, 1640 A.D. This was described and illustrated in "Ars Magna Lucis et Umbrae" by Kircher, the first volume of which appeared in 1657 and of which there are a number of copies still in existence. In Fig. 1 is shown a reproduction of a picture which appears in the second edition of the above work published in 1671. This shows Kircher's magic lantern and if we have an elastic imagination we will be able to see in the large box enclosing the light source and the lens a remote ancestor of the present projection booth, or as I should say in consideration of Mr. Richardson's feelings, the projector room. Following the work of Father Kircher there are many references in the literature to the projection lantern and its evolution. In Fig. 2 is shown a reproduction from "Artificalius teledioptieus" by Zahn, 1685. Here we see not only the assembled projecting equipment, but the geometrical optics are also clearly set forth. I do not know that Dr. Kellner will agree that the geometric optics shown therein are in entire agreement with the most modern conceptions but in any case the figure shows that the elements used in the projector at that time are essentially the same as those used at present. Fig. 3 is another illustration from Zahn's work (1685) showing the various suggested applications of the optical projector.

The lower one is particularly interesting. The vertical rod, seen just above the body of the lamp house, extends upward through the roof of the house and terminates in a weather vane. This is connected by two gears, shown in the figure, in such a way that the image projected onto the wall of the adjacent room shows, at all times, the direction in which the wind is blowing. In figs. 4 and 5, also from Zahn's work (1685) are shown various suggested forms of optical projector. In the lower right hand corner of Fig. 4 we see a type where the machine is supported on three legs and one can not help wondering whether or not this simple device may not be the illustrious forefather of the present highly developed Power's Projector. In Fig. 5 we see a somewhat different structural type in the supporting element and perhaps it is not unreasonable to suppose that this represents the ancient progenitor of the present Simplex family. Judging from the fumes emanating from the lamp house it must be equipped with high intensity arcs.

The Camera Obscura was first suggested by Friar Bacon in 1260 and Leonardo da Vinci gave illustrations explaining the theory and application of this intrument in 1490. Porta described the Camera Obscura quite fully in "Magica Naturalis" published in 1558 and in 1568 Daniel Barbaro first mentioned the use of a lens with the Camera Obscura. The application of the light sensitive properties of silver salts to the projection of pictures began about 1792. Many investigators worked on this subject and the precise chronological order in which the various results were obtained is rather uncertain.

From this period developments in the fields of science resulting in the production of motion pictures were very rapid and many of you are entirely familiar with this evolution. I will therefore not impose on your patience to follow the evolution from that time on. I hope that this very brief consideration of some of the more remote antecedents of the motion picture may be of some interest to you.

Loew Acquires and Remodels Birmingham, Ala., House

The Temple theatre in Birmingham, Alabama, recently acquired by Marcus Loew from the Masonic association in that city, will re-open, and under the Loew banner, on April 27 with Metro-Goldwyn's comedy, "Excuse Me." The theatre will offer every week high class pictures and high class vaudeville and will include in its program another feature, said to be a distinct innovation in a vaudeville house. This will be a "picture presentation"—a special, very short, scenic or musical number, presented just before the feature picture and designed to give an atmospheric impression in keeping with the film to be shown.

The Temple is closed while remodeling is in progress. This theatre is already one of the most beautiful houses in the South, and when improvements now under way are completed, will take its place even more surely in the front rank of Southern play houses. When opened under the Loew management, there will be 3000 seats in the spacious auditorium, an improved orchestra pit, and—on the outside—an electric sign fifty feet high, burning 96,000 watts of electricity. Special attention is being paid to the furnishing of the mezzanine floor, which will be fitted in gold and black and will have tables, comfortable lounge chairs, the latest magazines and papers, and other special features designed for the comfort of theatre patrons. This beautiful lounge will be christened "Peacock Alley."

Large Organ for New Park Theatre, Dallas, Texas

The largest theatre organ in the southwest, it is claimed, will be installed by the Bartola Musical Instrument Company in the new Fair Park theatre and auditorium, Dallas, Texas.

The auditorium is to be used for motion pictures, concerts, recitals and road attractions. It will be completely equipped with a battery of motion picture machines, stage lighting effects, picture screens. It will have a seating capacity of 5,500.

The contract was closed by Dan Barton in conjunction with the Bartola Musical Instrument Company's southern representative, Phil H. Pierce of the Phil H. Pierce Company, Dallas, Texas.

Fire Destroys Film in the Atlanta Grand

A news reel. two reels of the Metro-Goldwyn feature, "Excuse Me," and an N. V. A. trailer were destroyed by fire in the projection room of Loew's Grand at Atlanta last week. The trailer hung in the machine and started the blaze which caused the damage.

A cry of "fire" threatened a riot which was quelled when vaudeville performers came on the stage and assured the audience there was no danger. The bill was continued and a new print of the feature was received by the theatre the following day. Tom James is the manager of the Grand.

Good photography plays no small part in making a picture popular. It has a definite box office value.

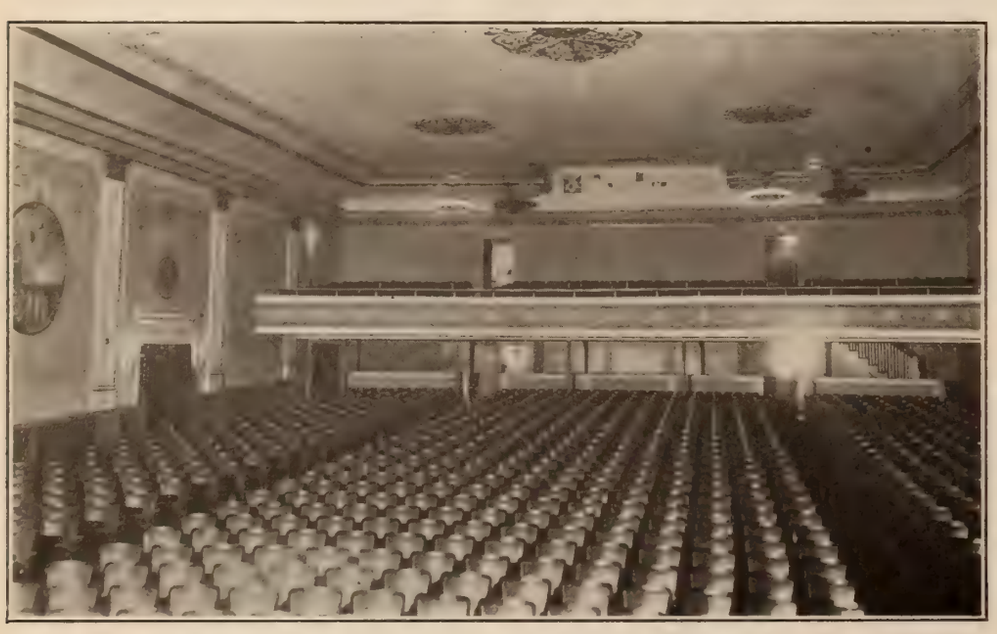
Niagara Falls New House to Incorporate Latest Features

ONE of the most important building construction enterprises that will be carried into effect this year in Niagara Falls, N. Y., is in progress on the north side of Niagara street, between 13th and Portage road, where the Niagara Theatre corporation is erecting a splendid motion picture house which will be ready for the public September first. The theatre will be among the most modern in design and appointments.

The building is of brick, tile and steel construction and completely fireproof throughout. It has a frontage of 90 feet and a depth of 150 feet. The cost of construction will reach $150,000. The house will have a seating capacity of 1,400, including the balcony which will seat 500. High class motion pictures and vaudeville will be the policy of the house, according to Peter Paonessa, under whose personal management the theatre is being built. Paonessa formerly was manager of the Lumberg theatre in the Cataract City.

Entering the theatre through the neatly decorated entrance through Niagara street, one will pass through fireproof decorated doors into the main foyer and auditorium, with entrance from the foyer to the balcony, ladies and gentlemen's rest rooms. Entering the foyer the visitor's eyes will sweep a very beautiful interior, including a stage 86 feet wide by 27 feet deep, in the rear of which will be conveniently arranged dressing rooms. The stage curtain will be of heavy material made to harmonize with the general scheme of decoration. Another outstanding feature of the auditorium interior will be the proscenium arch and its beautiful hangings. The side walls and domed ceiling will be of classic design and decoration. The cornices, wall pilasters, capital and bases will present a pleasing effect. The interior decoration will be in delicate shades of gold and blue, this color scheme being carried out in the tapestry hangings, carpeted aisles and foyer. The stage has been very carefully designed as to modern equipment, including a "fly" gallery, spot and foot lighting. The orchestra pit will be large enough to accommodate an orchestra of 15 to 20 pieces. The seating plans call for leather covered chairs. The floors will be covered with soundproof material.



The theatre will be heated and ventilated through large Plenium chambers under the auditorium floor, which will supply an abundance of fresh air without draft at all times, or in summer may be used to cool the auditorium. The lighting system will be of the latest type, capable of giving several different color combinations, and all lighting fixtures will be of the crystal type.

Ansonia, Conn., Assured a New Modern Theatre

With expected completion of the new Max Olderman modern business block within the next two months at Main and Tremont streets, Ansonia, Conn., that city is assured a thoroughly modern addition to its motion picture playhouses, I. J. Hoffman, proprietor of the motion picture-vaudeville Capitol theatre in that city, credited as one of the models of its kinds in the state, having leased required space in the building necessary to accommodate more than 600. The playhouse will be devoted solely to motion pictures and will be located on the ground floor of the three-story building. Workmen are rushing plastering interior and decorative details.

Plans Made for a House at Shelton, Wash.

F. W. Graham, theatre operator of Shelton, Wash., announced last week that he plans to open his new Granada Theatre in that town the latter part of April. After the opening of the new house, he plans to close the Lyric and will probably dismantle it to make room for a new business building.

Auditorium viewed from the stage of the new Empire theatre, Rahway, N. J. This house is very attractively designed and decorated.

Papers for S. M. P. E. Convention, May 18-21

A LIST of authors and papers that they will read before the S. M. P. E. at the coming Spring Convention, which will be held at Schenectady, May 18, 19, 20, 21, has been received from the chairman of the Papers Committee. These papers are of diversified subjects which gives them a very broad interest in the motion picture industry. The list is as follows:

A. B. Hitchins, Duplex Motion Pictures Industry, Inc.—The Machine Development of Negative and Positive Motion Picture Film.

T. K. Peters, Los Angeles, Cal.—A Museum of Motion Picture History.

J. I. Crabtree, Eastman Research Lab.—Static Markings or Motion Picture Films.

Smalley Denies Sale of Catskill House

According to William Smalley, there is no truth to the rumor that he has disposed of his theatre in Catskill to M. E. Silberstein, who operates the Community there. Smalley was along Albany Film Row during the week and stated that he had now brought Al Bothner, who has been managing the Smalley house in Mohawk, into the company's headquarters in Cooperstown, and that from now on Bothner would devote his entire time in booking amateurs for the amateur nights which are being featured in many of the Smalley houses.

Smalley further announced that he is negotiating for three more theatres, and furthermore that he might add to his holdings of dance halls. William F. Remmers, formerly of Ilion, has been given the management of the Smalley house in Mohawk.

Inquiries and Comments

Effect of Reduced Flicker Range

ONE of the greatest sources of annoyance to projectionists using an alternating current arc for picture projection is the periodic "pulsation," so to speak, of the screen illumination which is likely to result at certain projection speeds.

The cause of this peculiar pulsation in the screen illumination has long been known and various explanations have been advanced to account for it. So far, apparently, no correct analysis of problem has been made, but a step in the right direction was taken by Dr. A. E. Kennelly, of Harvard University, in his investigation of flicker in general. Some of the findings of this investigation were printed in the preceding article and showed the relation between screen intensity and the vanishing-flicker frequency for light and dark colored screens.

While Dr. Kennelly made no effort to analyze flicker from the standpoint of Motion Picture projection, his findings are directly applicable to this problem.

Pulsating Screen Illuminations

It was shown, in the preceding article that for a 100% flicker range (where the screen illumination varied from maximum to zero repeatedly) that the vanishing-flicker frequency, or the frequency at which flicker was no longer visible varied in a certain manner with respect to the screen illumination. Furthermore, the color of the screen also played an important part since the vanishing-flicker frequency was higher for a white screen than for a dark red one.

Now, the peculiar pulsation of the screen illumination at certain projector speeds when using an alternating current arc is due to a combination of two flickers; one caused by the shutter regularly interrupting the light beam passing to the screen and the other due to the periodic pulsations in the light from the A. C. arc which results from the current variations through it.

Ordinarily, neither of these two flickers, each taken by itself, would be visible on the screen since the shutter frequency would be about 32 or 48 depending upon the projector speed and whether a 2 blade or 3 blade shutter was used, and the arc flicker frequency would be at least 60 (for 60 cycle current).

When these two flickers are superimposed on each other, however, the difference in the two flicker frequencies results in a periodic "beat" or "pulsation" of the screen illumination which may easily become visible at certain projector speeds.

A complete analysis of this phase of the problem will be given in a later article and the preparatory step to this analysis will be now treated.

In the case of the illumination from an A. C. arc alone, the flicker range is never fully 100% (maximum to zero) since one or the other of the carbons or electrodes, are candescent, never having time enough to entirely cool off. In other words the flicker range of illumination with such an arc, expressed in percent is always less than 100%.

The higher the frequency of the current supplied to the arc, the higher will be the percentage value of this flicker range; that is, the closer it will approach the maximum.

It is important to have an understanding of this point since it is really the flicker of the arc, in combination with the shutter flicker, which causes the periodic "beat" in the screen illumination when an A. C. arc could be eliminated entirely there would be no need to go farther with the problem.

This being impossible, the next best thing is to try to counteract it. It is interesting to observe, therefore, that (Fig. 2) the vanishing flicker frequency decreases as the flicker-range decreases, but in nothing like the same proportion.

The three curves, shown in Fig. 2, show the variation of vanishing flicker frequency with screen intensity for a white screen where the flicker range varies from 44 percent through 7.5 to 3.3 percent.

In other words, with 56 percent constant screen illumination the results are as shown in the top curve and for 92.5 percent constant and 7.5 percent flicker illumination the the results are as indicated by the middle curve, etc.

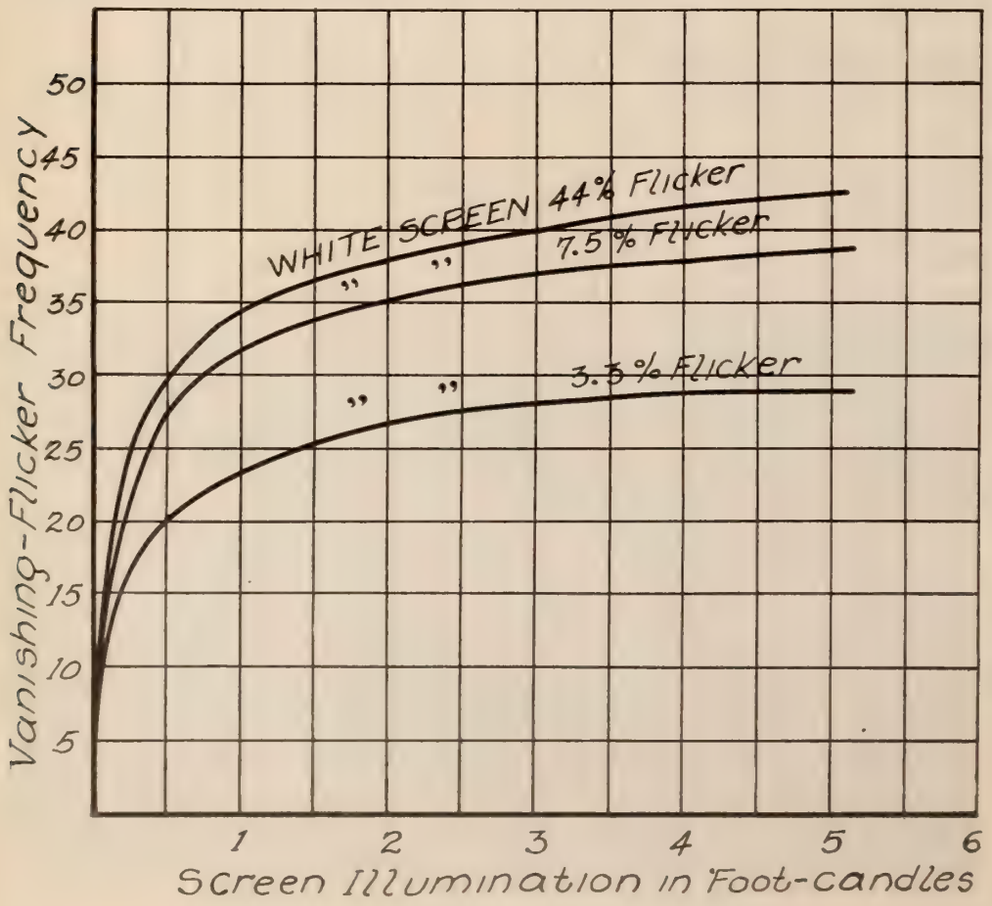

Figure Two

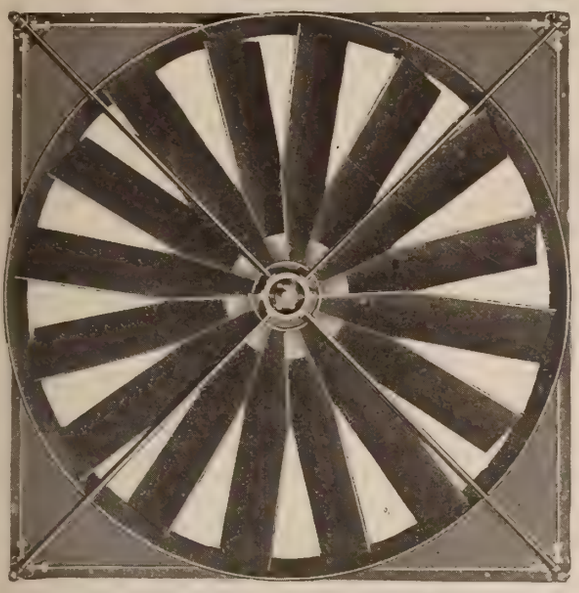

Highest and Lowest Flicker Frequency

The highest vanishing-flicker frequency that could be produced was found when looking directly at a 75 C. P. (horizontal) incandescent filament through the rotating sector-disc (shutter) at a distance of 50 centimeters (about 18 inches) from eye to filament. This frequency had an average value of 66 cycles per second, with a 100 percent flicker-range.

Furthermore, it remained the same no matter what the angular opening in the shutter was, providing that all of the filament was visible at the same time.

The lowest range of flicker which would be recognized with certainty was 1.4 percent

Cecil Wood Tendered Dinner by A. P. S. On Return from China

CECIL WOOD, an old, active and enthusiastic member of the American Projection Society, has just returned from Shanghai, China, where he has spent two years instructing employees of the Peacock Motion Picture Corporation in the best American methods of operating a motion picture projector. Mr. Wood was in charge of projection for Griffith when he brought out the "Birth of a Nation" and has occupied similar important positions in some of America's finest motion picture theatres. The American Projection Society gave Mr. Wood a dinner at their club rooms on Thursday, April 16th, to celebrate his return and the affair was a great success from every standpoint. The committee in charge had been given very short notice but the rooms of the society were elaborately decorated by some of the artistic members of the organization and Mr. Wood might easily have imagined that he was back in Shanghai enjoying an evening's recreation with all the facilities for amusement which China still provides.

Tony De Mott, who was chairman of the committee, introduced Frank Nealy as toastmaster of the evening and if you have never heard Nealy act in this capacity in the early hours of the morning you must surely attend one of these dinners of the American Projection Society. After a time Mr. Nealy introduced Mr. Wood, who related some of his professional and personal experiences and was then bombarded by the members of the society with a series of questions relating to his work and activities in China. Among those present were Otto Kafka, President of the A. P. S.; Jesse Hopkins, Vice-President; George Edwards, Editor of the American Projectionist; T. McDermott, known as "Tipperary Tim;" H. Griffith, General Sales Manager, and P. A. McGuire, Advertising Manager of the Nicholas Power Company, Inc. Tony De Mott is an excellent provider. Cecil Wood is a very interesting talker. George Edwards is a reservoir of ideas and energy, but we again recommend that you attend one of these dinners and hear Nealy act as toastmaster.

Lesser's Great Neck, L. I., Playhouse Has Many Unusual Features

THE Great Neck Playhouse, of Great Neck, Long Island, which is the property of Irving Lesser, vice president of Principal Pictures Corporation, is considered to be one of Long Island's most sumptuous theatres. Built at a cost it is claimed of nearly $450,000.00 it stands as a monument to showmanship. There are a little more than 1,500 seats, 1,000 of them being in the orchestra while the remainder are in the balcony.

Lesser engaged the services of Billy Lent, famous local musical king. With his fifteen musicians Lent is a feature that attracts patrons from surrounding communities. There is also a large Wurlitzer organ, played by an exceptional organist who had been playing in one of the nearby churches. His fame, too, adds to the prestige of the Playhouse.

"Doc" Wilson, who is nationally known is house manager of the Playhouse. Under Lesser's personal supervision the theatre is "stepping out" as one of Great Neck's great assets: There are three Simplex projection machines in a large, airy projection room. These are of the latest model and provide against any happenings to the showing of the films, which are of the very latest release.

The lighting effects were installed by a prominent interior decorator. They change from amber to blue and other colors, at various times of the day. The stage was built exceptionally large and can accomodate a musical comedy or dramatic offering. As it is, Lesser is presenting miniature musical revues and vaudeville acts in conjunction with the showing of the best features. The lobby was not so long ago remodelled and is now roomy for waiting patrons and lends itself nicely to display purposes.

Proposed Building Code Stirs Kansas City

KANSAS City exhibitors are prepared to bitterly fight a proposed new building code, which if effective would add more than $5,000 to the costs of the average first run house.

Among the conditions of the new code are that all seats in the auditorium shall be firmly secured to the floor and placed not less than 32 inches back to back. Where there are more than thirty rows on the ground floor additional cross aisles not less than 32 inches wide must be provided not more than 16 rows apart. The combined width of entrance and exit stairways shall provide one foot in width for each 25 persons accommodated on that tier and the aggregate width of emergency exit doorways, opening from each gallery shall be 60 per cent more than the required width of the stairways to which they lead. No entrance stairs to any tier in the auditorium shall be less than five feet wide.

Carr & Schad Purchase Theatre Site in Reading, Pa.

Purchase of a property at 742 Penn street, Reading, Pa., by the Carr & Schad Inc., who operate a big chain of picture houses in that city and Lebanon, forecasts the erection of a new half-million dollar theatre there about two years hence. It will be impossible to start the construction work until 1927 because of a lease on the property that does not expire until then. The site immediately adjoins the Arcadia theatre, owned by the same interests. The newly acquired property fronts 72 feet on Penn street, the principal business thoroughfare of Reading, and has depth of 270 feet. It is proposed to build a theatre with a seating capacity of 3,500.

Patrons Carry Fur Coats to Pa. Theatre During Hot Weather

IT is said that the motion picture industry is a nine or ten month per year business—that during the hot weather theatres lay practically dormant—and exhibitors entertain themselves by writing enticing red numbers on the wrong side of the ledger.

All this apparently is only a myth, for we hear just how, an efficient theatre should act from an exhibitor at Galeton, Pa.

J. A. Nordquist, owner of the "Main Street" theatre, Galeton, Pa., writes an unusually interesting letter which is printed in part as follows:

"I may state that we have a theatre that is very seldom heard of, at least many of the show people and others stopping off for an evening so tell us. We have a theatre where you have to go down stairs to get up in the balcony. We have a seating capacity of almost 800 and all good seats, but business is such up here now, and has been that way for several months, that we could get along just fine with 200 seats, and then have a few to spare, that is why I am on the road. My business on the road is selling ice-cream and soft drinks (less ½ of one percent). (I can assure you it is nothing stronger because if it was I would be able to sell more).

"We have a stage that is 40′ x 80′ and can accomodate almost any road show. In the summer, strangers in town think the women of this place are crazy, going to the show when the thermometer is 90 in the shade, with a big fur coat on their arm. You ask why—because the hotter the weather outside, the cooler in the theatre. Real hot evenings in July, the thermometer is down to 40 in the theatre, without any fans or other source of cooling system. In the winter it is just the opposite.

"And here's the contrast. Just across the street we have the Galeton Hotel where you have to go up on the third floor to get in the celler. In regards to building any new theatres in this territory, I do not think that there will be any for some time. Rather think if business keeps the way it has been there will be a few closed."

Schine Circuit to Convert Auburn Church Into Theatre

J. Meyer Schine, president and general manager of the Schine Theatrical interests, was in Auburn, N. Y., this week, with Architect Leon Lempert of Rochester, inspecting the old Second Presbyterian church which is to be converted into a modern theatre by the Schine company. Work will be started this spring. The house will have a seating capacity of 2200 seats. The property was purchased a year ago.

The Zicofe corporation of Buffalo, which operated the Grand theatre in Westfield, N. Y., has leased the new picture theatre in Batavia, N. Y., which was constructed by the Farber Brothers and which is expected to open in a month or so.

Organist Prevents Panic in Erie Theatre Fire

Remaining at his post until he was overcome by smoke, Percy Le Fleur, organist at the Columbia theatre, the largest picture house, Erie, Pa., played the organ and staved off a stampede which was started when the stage burst into flames one day last week. The fire started from crossed wires beneath the stage near the organ mechanism. It was soon noticed by patrons of the house which was crowded to capacity with women and children and a panic was started with a mad rush for the exits. Several women and children fainted in the jam and it was not until the strains of the music from the organ played by Le Fleur floated through the place that anything like coo'ness was observed by the crowd. Just before the last person left the theatre Le Fleur toppled from his seat, overcome with smoke.

The same theatre sustained a heavy loss by fire in 1919. The damage caused by the recent blaze is estimated at $150,000. The organ, valued at $20,000, is a complete loss.

David Marr and J. J. Colton Return From California

Mr. Marr and Mr. Colton of the Marr & Colton Organ Company of Warsaw have just returned from the west coast where they have been inspecting recent installations of their organs.

They also attended the premiere opening of the New Chapman Theatre at Fullerton, California, to hear their organ which was installed in this theatre during February.

and the most sensitive flicker-frequency for making it apparent was quite low; in the neighborhood of 2.5 cycles per second.

The fact that the lowest flicker range which could be recognized was 1.4 percent checks out pretty close with law, which states that for two objects so visible as such, the difference in illumination on the objects must be at least 1 percent. In other words, two pieces of paper over-lapping each other, one illuminated to 100 foot-candles and the other to 99.5 foot-candles, would only be visible as one piece and not two.

Replaces 1,054 Seats in Harrisburg House in 34 Hours

The remarkable feat of installing 1054 new seats in the main floor of the Victoria motion picture theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., within a period of a little more than 34 hours, and without interfering with any of the performances, was accomplished over Easter Sunday under the direction of Chas. K. Campbell, the house manager. The seats replaced a similar number of old seats that were removed.

As soon as the audience was dismissed following the last performance on the Saturday night preceding Easter, workmen began the work of removing the old seats and putting in the new. The work was all accomplished in time for the first performance at 10 o'clock in the morning of the succeeding Monday. The new seats are 22 inches wide as compared with 20 inches, the width of the old seats, and are of leather upholstering, both as to the seats proper and the backs. They were purchased from the American Seating Company and are a great improvement for comfort over the old. Some of the latter were installed in the balconies to replace the seats that were there, the total seating capacity of the Victoria being, 1,800.

The placing of the new seats and new carpets that were put in the theatre at the same time completed a program of improvements to the Victoria that cost in the neighborhood of $65,000 and were made since the first of the year. This included the installation of a new Marr & Colton pipe organ, a new rear wall for the theatre, installation of dimmers in the projection room to soften the ceiling and stage lights, building of a rest room for the theatre, etc., and a dressing room for the women ushers. All of the improvements except the new seats and new carpets were completed during several weeks in which the theatre was closed in the latter part of February.

Robb, Rowley and Dent Building in Tyler, Texas

Robb & Rowley, with L. L. Dent, are building a $75,000.00 theatre at Tyler, Tex., which will be managed by T. B. Noble, Jr. Mr. Noble was formerly in charge of the four theatres owned by the Corsican Theatre Co., of Corsicana, Tex. There are two other theatres in Tyler at present, the Electric Palace owned by T. J. Smith and the Queen theatre owned by Mr. Shields. The Electric Palace is to start extensive remodeling soon.

The Lufkin Amusement Co., of Lufkin, Tex., has let to a local company, the contract for a $68,000.00 theatre. This covers the house only. This theatre will be one of the finest in this part of Texas and Mr. Binion, the manager is at present figuring on the installation of the most modern equipment.

Wilby to Open New Theatre in Atlanta During May

With the opening of the Cameo theatre, which will occur in Atlanta sometime in May, Thomas G. Coleman, present city manager of Macon Theatres for Famous Players-Lasky, will leave that company to take over the management of the new Atlanta theatre for R. B. Wilby, owner of the Cameo. Mr. Wilby, in addition to the Atlanta house, operates the Princess theatre in Birmingham, two houses in Selma, Alabama, and three in Tuscaloosa, Alabama. Taking Mr. Coleman's place in Macon will be Montague Salmon, at present manager of the Lyric theatre in Atlanta, who will go to Macon to assume the management of the Famous houses there shortly after the closing of the Lyric theatre, which will occur about May 9th.

"Into the Net"—Pathe, Majestic, Dallas

Herald: "The new film feature is a genuine thriller. It stars Jack Mulhall in 'Into the Net,' and has a real kick in every episode of a long series. Rarely does a director succeed in piling sensation on top of sensation as is the case in the Jack Mulhall play. But the continuity is admirable; a definite specific story is depicted and long before it is concluded the audience is sitting on the edge of its seats breathless with interest."

"Tides of Passion"—Vitagraph, Strand, New York

Herald-Tribune: "We like everything about this picture except the name of it. J. Stuart Blackton directed 'Tides of Passion,' and remembering 'The Clean Heart,' which he produced some months back, we were not unprepared for what we found on the screen. Mae Marsh has lost none of that elusive charm which D. W. Griffith found in her. Laska Winter is a fascinating creature and a very clever actress. Ben Hendricks is good. The scenery is beautiful, the photograph good, and the titles are so much a part of the picture that we don't remember a single one of them."

World: "'Tides of Passion' has more sincere feeling in its development than we have seen in many months of films. Mae Marsh and Laska Winter are genuine and surprisingly touching in the two contrasting roles. If this is the influence that Basil King's plots have on young screen actresses he should be sent as a missionary to Hollywood."

Daily News: "Laska Winter gives the best performance as Hagar. Laska is a girl that not only bears watching but must be watched. She's that sort. The sea scenes have a charm about them."

Times: "Miss Marsh gives a very good performance and Miss Winter has good command of her part."

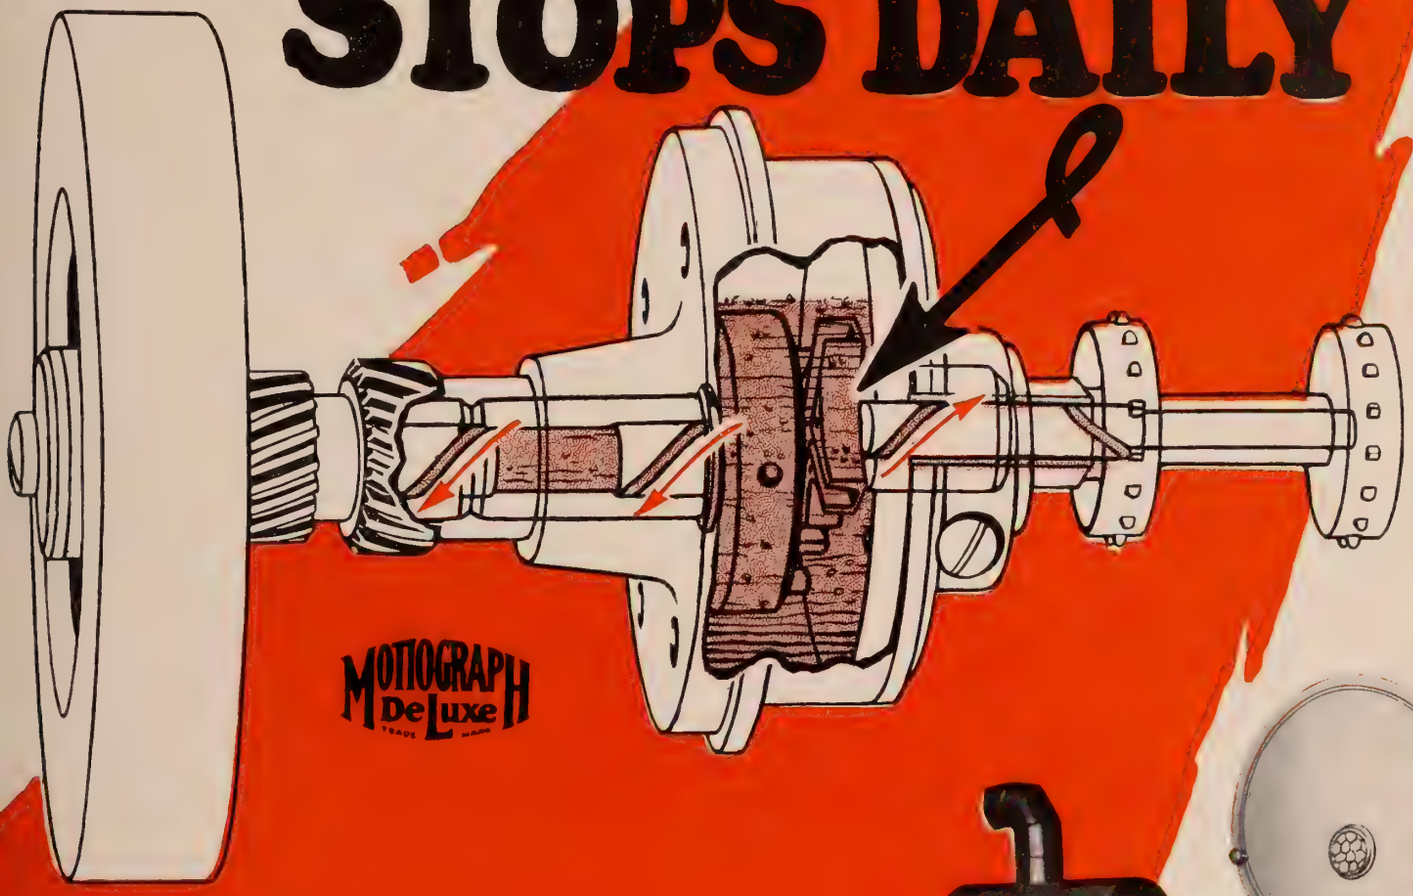
Morning Telegraph: "'Tides of Passions' pleases. Miss Marsh, who has contributed remarkably to the cinema, does not fail in this. She is an appealing artist, with a quality unlike that of anybody else. Laska Winter also realizes her opportunities."

"Greed"—Metro-Goldwyn, People's, Portland, Ore.

Oregonian: "There is in the parlance of critics a word that has outworn its usefulness, even as hokum has long since become obsolete in the dramas of the screen. It is none other than 'gripping,' a thoroughly descriptive term. In fact, there are no other creations in the pages of the dictionary that fit the screen play 'Greed' quite so well as this."

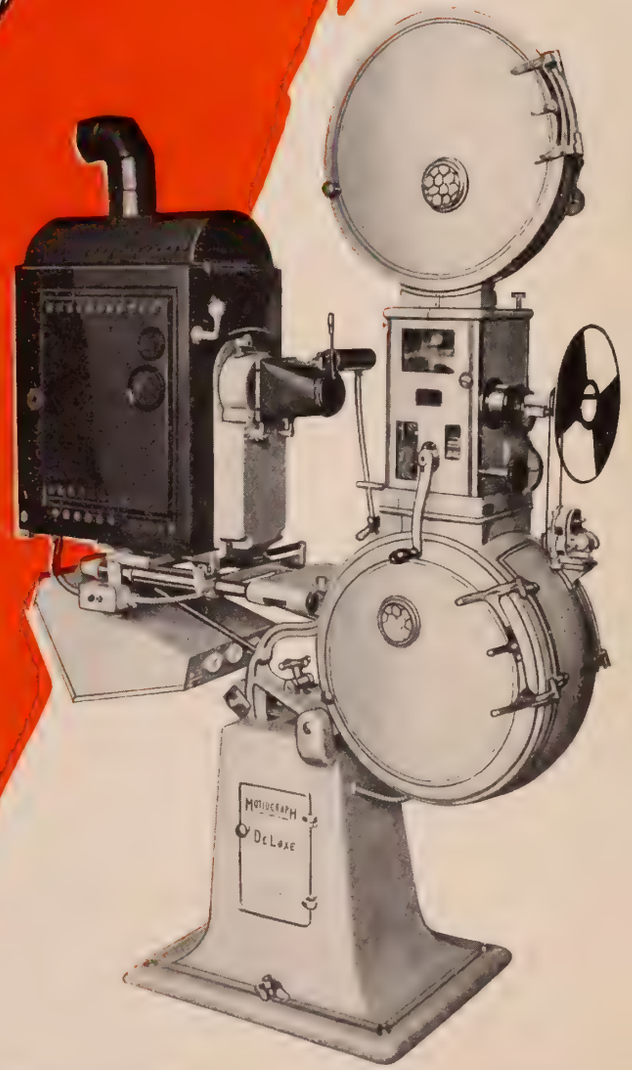
"Seven Chances"—Metro-Goldwyn, Lyceum, Minneapolis

Journal: "'Seven Chances' is a neat little comedy picture in which audiences will delight. Roi Cooper Megrue wrote the play of the young man who was forced to make seven proposals of marriage before he could get the right girl and whose haste was bound up with the fact that unless he married before nightfall the stupendous legacy would not be his. With the prodigality of the films .e seven prospects mount to nearly 700, pursuing the hapless one through every kind of adventure. Thereafter the picture resolves itself into one of the funniest chases of screen history, the hundreds of women of every size and age, their wedding veils streaming behind them, running madly after Jimmie who finds his real sweetheart still loves him and seeks to reach her home before 7 o'clock, the hour at which he must be married."



"Romola"—Metro-Goldwyn, Roosevelt, Chicago

Daily News: "A haunting little girl, with fleeting hints of an impossible happiness in the smiles that quiver across her face; a tremulous figure of all youth and every Spring is Lillian Gish. She is romance, sentiment, fugitive charm, yet she is alive. She is the statue every sculptor has tried to make of springtime, yet she is quivering with nerves, with fluttering fingers, with eyelash love. Losing herself in girl after girl of the fictitious screen, she has risen to first place among emotional actresses of the world."



Herald-Examiner: "There is great beauty to Henry King's cinematization of 'Romola.' The picture has a quaint and gorgeous feeling of other days, achieved through some fine photography and the settings of Florence in the fifteenth century. Lillian Gish, playing the title character, is lovelier than I have ever seen her. There is something almost unearthly about Lillian Gish; yet you feel that she is very much alive at all times."

Journal: "Lillian Gish's 'Romola' is done with fine intelligence and great feeling. There was someone on hand who had a sense of values and of beauty. The star is like some rare figure in an old painting so fragile and precious no one but a parvanue, probably, could afford to hang her.

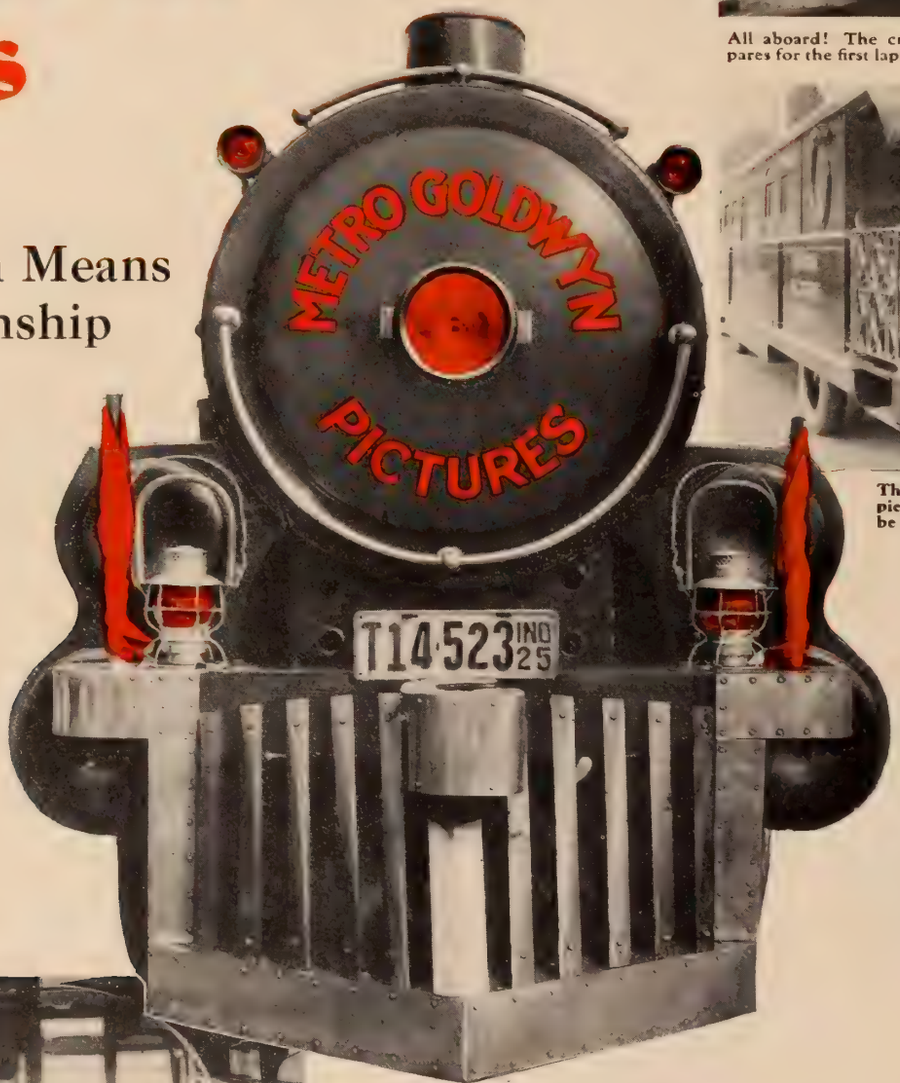
The Biggest Exploitation Stunt in Years

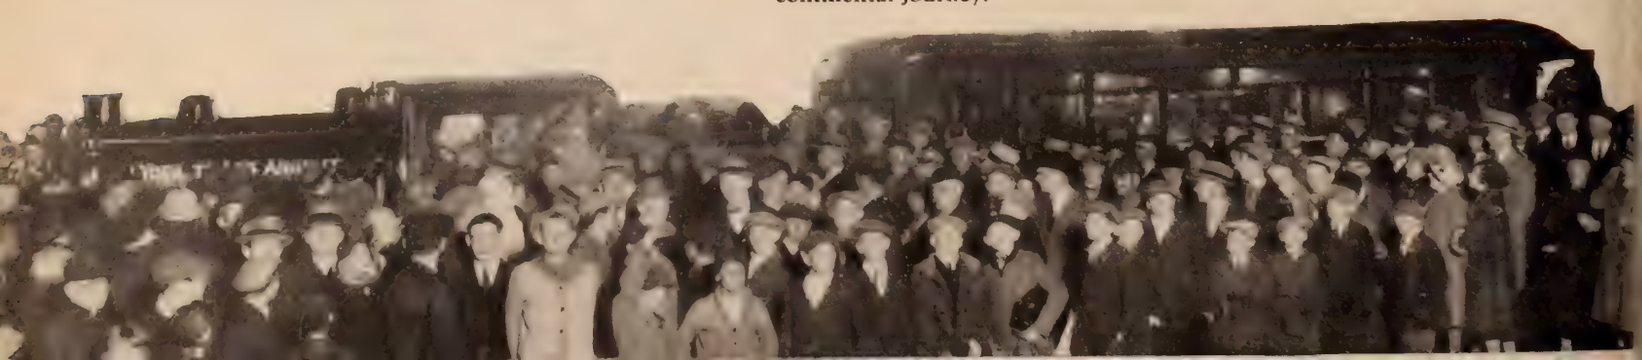


Metro-Goldwyn Means Showmanship

All aboard! The crew of Metro-Goldwyn's Trackless Train prepares for the first lap of its historic cross-country run.

The observation platform from which thousands of pieces of Metro-Goldwyn showman advertising will be broadcasted across the continent.

The Talk of the Industry



A SENSATION. Everybody's talking about it. The biggest showman stunt in years. To advertise the greatest line-up of showman pictures ever released. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures are the hits of the current year. They're the talk of the industry. And now the first trackless train of history is blazing a transcontinental trail of front-page publicity. Never before such a traffic-halting ballyhoo. Never before such audience pictures to broadcast. Hop in. All aboard. Ride to success with

Metro Goldwyn

Interior of the Pullman, with sleeping and dining accommodations; kitchenette and buffet; hot and cold running water; electrically lighted and heated.

Wherever this marvelous ballyhoo penetrates it creates tremendous excitement. Millions of motion picture patrons will cheer Metro-Goldwyn's Trackless Train on its transcontinental journey.

For a REAL Spring Drive

April Paramount Pictures

WHEN you've smacked out a beautiful 250-yard drive straight down the fairway, have pitched dead to the pin, and then made a perfect putt for a birdie—that's how you'll feel when you play each of the pictures named above. It's impossible to dub your shots or fall short when you're playing Paramounts. No matter what the conditions or how hot the competition, Paramount players are always first on the long green. Announce any of the above entries and you've got your opposition dormie almost before you start.

And The Greater Forty, the finest group of Pictures even Paramount has ever offered before, will be announced Next Week. And what an announcement!

So tee up, boys, and step up to the easy pickings!

BALTO

A sensation at its world première at Loew's State, Los Angeles. Edwin Schallert wrote, in the Los Angeles Times:

"I do not know when I have seen anything more fascinating than the film that depicts the terror-haunted, hardship-fraught journey across the frozen wastes. To miss this portion of the program will be to overlook a thrill that is more unusual than any ordinarily provided by entertainment because of its vivid and powerful reality."

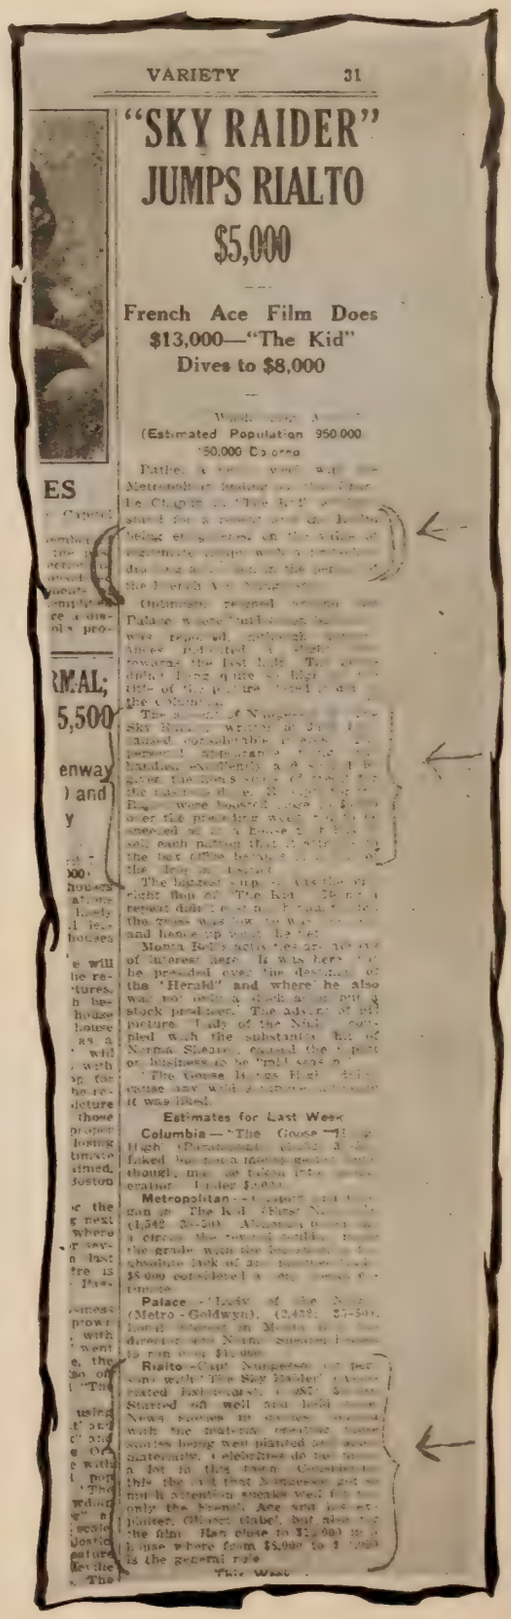
It Jumps Washington's Rialto $5,000.00!!!

Manager Weil of the Rialto, Washington says "'The Sky Raider' has done as much business this week as any two houses of this city combined!"

A tremendous business getter, if tied up to the most sensational exploitation stunt yet devised—



A Flying Circus Headed by Nungesser Himself

The crew comprises

1. Capt. Nungesser, ace of aces, conqueror of over 104 German warplanes. Capt. Nungesser does the most remarkable flying stunts yet seen, including the landing upon a sheet with his airplane, from a great height.
2. Lieut. Maurice Weiss of the French Reserves, the most spectacular stunt flyer imaginable. He will pilot the plane which will engage Capt. Nungesser in an amazing air-battle!
3. Sergeant Gaston Catellin, for 26 months chief mechanician of the French Esquadrille at Metz during the World War.
4. Gilbert Gable, the producer, expert exploitation and advertising man.

The equipment includes two airplanes, automobile, special railroad car, etc. etc.

THERE IS ONLY A LITTLE OPEN TIME LEFT FOR CAPT. NUNGESSER AND HIS PARTY. SPEAK QUICKLY IF YOU WANT TO SET YOUR WHOLE TOWN AFLAME WITH EXCITEMENT!

TO MORROW

Not yesterday, but tomorrow is what you are primarily interested in.

Past performances, with their records are now but history.

What will the morrow bring?

From United Artists Corporation, tomorrow will bring no idle promises, no camouflaged assurances, no sugar-coated announcement of what it hopes to do.

It will present the productions of the greatest stars in the world. Those of Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, D.W. Griffith, Rudolph Valentino, William S. Hart and others.

Adhering strictly to the original purpose of concentrating only upon the superlative type of productions, it plans a strictly limited output, but at the same time a definite volume of material.

The minimum of pictures, next season, will be twelve for the year. On the other hand, the maximum will be fifteen.

Such facts come as a joyous announcement to exhibitors. It will offer far more product of only meritorious quality—marketed on the most equitable basis ever presented.

TO MORROW

For instance, tomorrow will bring Mary Pickford in "Little Annie Rooney", a comedy in which her every inimitable qualification will be given sway; Charlie Chaplin in "The Gold Rush", the greatest and most stupendous Chaplin comedy of all time; Douglas Fairbanks in "Don Q, Son of Zorro"; D. W. Griffith's "Sally of the Sawdust"; Rudolph Valentino in "The Bronze Collar"; and William S. Hart in a spectacular western story, the title of which will be announced later.

Think of just those six. And tomorrow becomes brighter and happier for every exhibitor.

The six greatest stars, producing for you the six greatest productions of the coming season. Greatest, because these producing units are absolutely free from the deadening requirements of quantity production.

Of greatest importance to the exhibitor is the manner in which these wonderful pictures will be distributed. Each picture will be marketed singly—each sold on an individual basis—each offered only on its merit. No program or block bookings. No grouping for the purpose of a single contract—thus giving to the industry the greatest and most meritorious productions, upon an absolutely independent and open market.

It's tomorrow you are interested in and here are the greatest productions of tomorrow.

ON "THE PACE MAKERS"

BY

H. C. WITWER

Addicts of the Agitated Tintypes:—

I'm beginning to like this Ad Writing Racket better. In the first place, you don't have to bother with Plot and Construction and Heart Interest, and in the second place, you can fluently talk about Yourself.

The fact that "The Pacemakers" is the world's greatest two reel series is soon going to be like a Secret at a Mah Jong Party—Everybody will know it. It is getting just as Private right now as a Greenhouse with the Blinds up!

Until you Switch off the Dimmers and Lamp "The Pacemakers" with a Bright, Illegal Glare, you're like the guy which hadn't experienced the pleasures of Delirium Tremens—you ain't been nowhere, and you ain't Seen Nothin'! This is not because I wrote them, but in spite of that fact. At least a friend of mine told me he pegged the First Installment recently and liked it Very Much because in some parts of it they managed to get away from my stuff.

George O'Hara—Rah! Alberta Vaughn—Whoopee! Al Cooke—Wow! Kit Guard—Haw! Stanley Taylor—Sssssssss! Plenty of pretty girls, and big Sport Thrills in each Episode! If this is a College Series, then this Higher Education Thing is all it's Ballyhooed to be!

Yours, forever and a day

It should be a source of as much interest to exhibitors as it is to us that reports from previews at Los Angeles and the opinions of the critics are to the effect that HAROLD LLOYD'S newest picture, his last under the Pathe contract, is beyond question the best picture he has ever made.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC. is further pleased to publicly voice its appreciation of the HAROLD LLOYD CORPORATION'S contractual integrity in having spent in the production of this picture over three times the amount called for by contract.

Pathe also wishes to emphasize in this manner the fact that each Harold Lloyd picture will continue to be sold on its own merits, and without regard to or in conjunction with any other picture.

The new picture will be released in early Autumn.

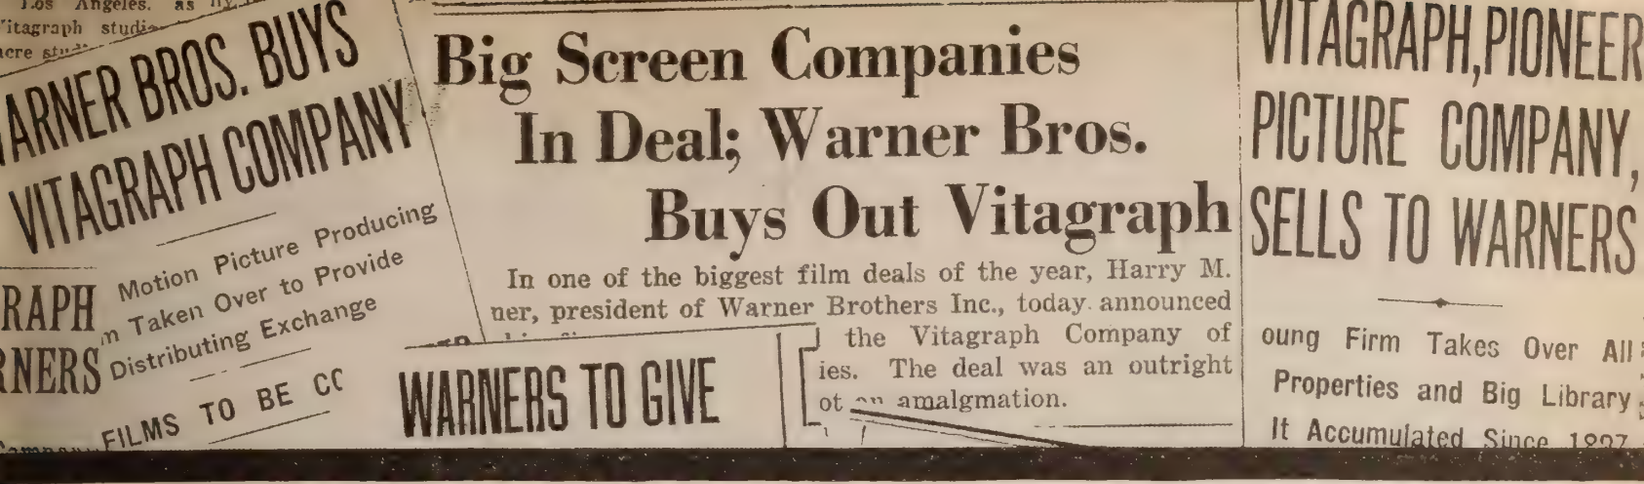
What Does It

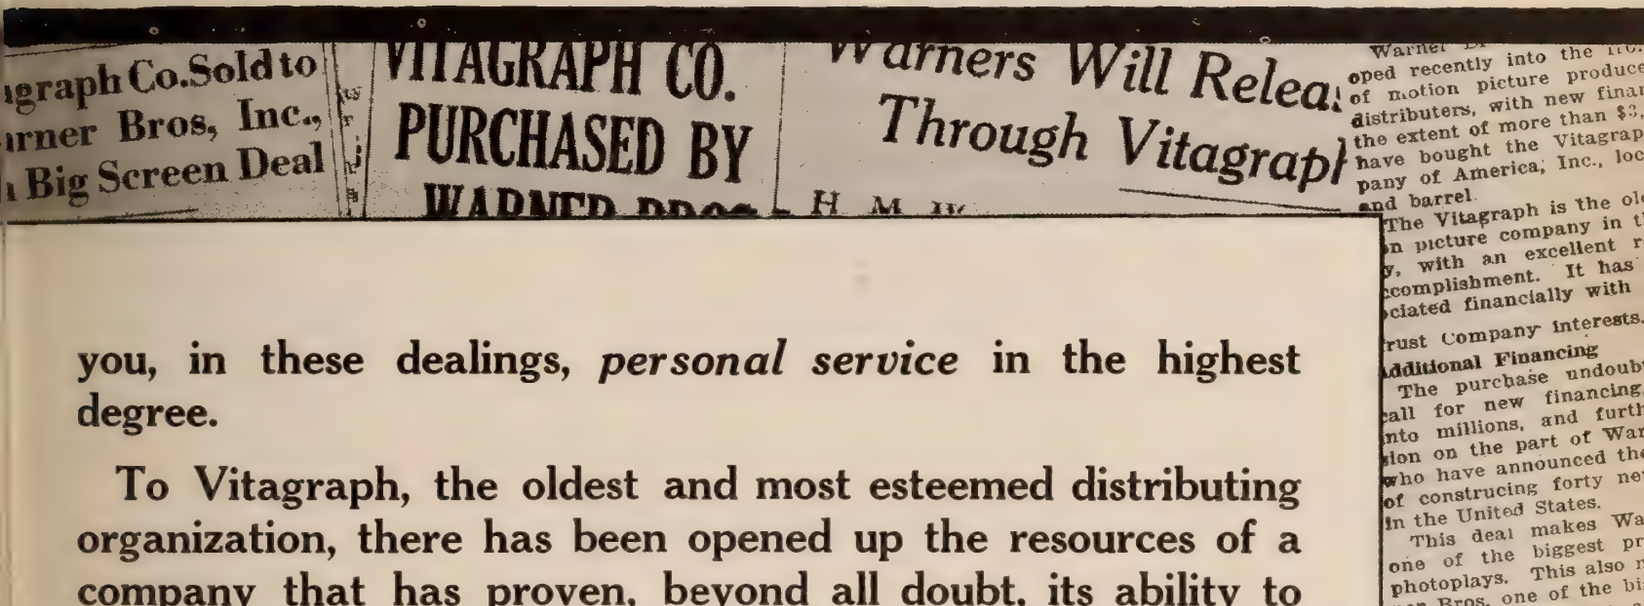
"Warner Bros. has bought Vitagraph!"

Warner thereby becomes a tremendous and powerful factor in distribution as well as production.



That's what it means to us.

But—



What does it mean to you—the exhibitors of the world?

First it means a stronger hold upon independence for every exhibitor — a steady supply of high class product distributed through a major, old-line exchange system. Through Warner Bros. and Vitagraph sufficient high class product for the coming year is a certainty. The guess is taken out of 1925-26 and all future seasons for every exhibitor who wants to be independent.

Warner Bros. will be closer to you; will deal directly with you through its own exchange system; and will give you, in these dealings, personal service in the highest degree.

To Vitagraph, the oldest and most esteemed distributing organization, there has been opened up the resources of a company that has proven, beyond all doubt, its ability to produce the kind of entertainment that brings money to the box office.

In brief, "Warner Bros. Buys Vitagraph" means that the man power and the resources of two mainstays of the independent exhibitor have united for the creation of a gigantic array of product distributed through an organization which for twenty-eight years has rendered service to the independent exhibitor.

Warner Bros. product for the season 1925-26, and all future Warner pictures, will be distributed through its newly acquired Vitagraph exchanges.

VOL. XXXI NEW YORK, MAY 9, 1925 NO. 19

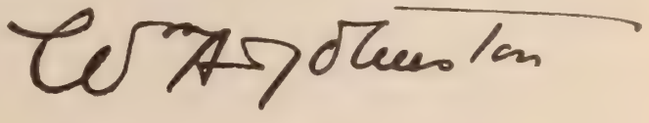
The Convention

FROM Milwaukee comes the first hand news that hotel reservations are at a premium; and our representatives in the Middle West report a widespread and serious interest among exhibitors in the forthcoming Convention. It looks like a real one.

There will be a heavy attendance; prominent producers and distributors will be there. There will be activity and excitement. An effort is being made among exhibitor organizations to have their members hold back all booking contracts with distributors until after the Convention. A bulletin has just been issued from M. P. T. O. A. headquarters in New York, bearing this appeal: "Bring Your Play Dates to Milwaukee." The bulletin states the establishment of a "Bureau of Trade and Commerce" which will be active at the Convention and where "the producers will be in a position to offer you (the exhibitor) contracts for their programs" and "you (the exhibitor) will be there to make your selection." The bulletin states "we have been in conference with Fox, Universal, Warner Brothers, Film Booking Offices, Vitagraph and many producers for the state right market." "It is for your good," the statement goes on, "that the Bureau has been introduced—for your preservation and the preservation of our industry from monopoly."

This draws a line, pretty sharply, between the above companies and the so-called "Big Three"—First National, Famous Players-Lasky and Metro-Goldwyn. That evidently is the purpose.

Laying aside for the moment a consideration of this effort, which, it would appear, is one of discrimination, we find ourselves speculating as to what definitely the Convention will do. What will come forth from it—after the exhibitors have gone back to their box-offices?



There will be lots of speeches. We hazard the hope that they will be business-like, not too sentimental. The issues are business matters—and these only. These speeches are bound to do some good; a lot of men who feel the lines closing too closely about them are going to talk right out, and these utterances in themselves will help to ease up a general situation that is getting far too stringent. There is no gainsaying the fact that those big branches of the industry—production, distribution and theatres, which for their own good and the combined good should be independent of each other, have gotten badly muddled and decidedly more so now than ever before in the industry's career.

The independent exhibitor right now is worried about permanency of product. Will he always have pictures? Is, therefore, his investment in brick and mortar a safe, a permanent one? But he has always worried on this point. From the time that theatre enterprises got big enough to have board of directors, said board has asked at every meeting: "So far so good, but what about pictures for the future?" And the various consolidations with producing and distributing interests have been actuated by this self-same worry.

But when has this market lacked product? And isn't the exhibitor's problem always solved by first knowing clearly just what the market affords and then doing shrewd and cool selection,—in other words, good buying!

So much for that side of the fence; now for the other, the producer's side. We fancy that the long-headed producer to-day is the man who, holding his head clear above the turmoil over trusts and theatres, is devoting all his brains and energy to turning out a program that will sell—and can't be kept from selling, on its merits alone.

Pictures are what count, gentlemen.

The Week in Review

THE big bit of news in this issue is the Fox announcement of 1925-26 product—comprehensive, colorful, impressive. Exhibitors, everywhere and of all degree, will thumb it carefully and weigh its worth. The announcement reaches them first through MOTION PICTURE NEWS—save only those First National Franchise holders gathered last week in convention at French Lick Springs. Jimmy Grainger, Fox sales manager, who knows when he's got something to sell and then is up with the robins, hopped a train to the convention with advance copies of this insert under him arm. Those who saw it were impressed; as they must be.

It is evident enough, as has been previously said here, that Fox is aiming at the high spots. Specials! And specials are going to count heavily in the exhibitor's book this year. The more specials the better; the fewer hundrum pictures tied to them the better. That will be the booking criterion.

Fox offers thirty-five "Special Attractions"—these in addition to seven each from Tox Mix and Buck Jones. These latter fourteen are standard box-office pictures, practically settled in advance as to booking value.

Now as to the Special Attractions. It is evident at a glance that each has been aimed at just what the name "Special" signifies. The names of H. G. Wells and Joseph Conrad stand highest in the book-world. Peter B. Kyne is a best seller author in this country. From the stage have been selected John Golden's successes, notably "Lightnin'," and "Seventh Heaven." These other stage successes: "The Fool," "Lazybones," "The First Year." "Havoc" has interesting possibilities—its direction by Rowland V. Lee, the fact that war plays are coming back strong in public interest (some million overseas men alone are interested in the right kind of presentment). Then there are spectacular specials, obvious ones, like "Siberia," "The Johnstown Flood," "The Fighting Heart," "Kentucky Pride," etc. And there are the known quantities, such as "The Iron Horse," "As No Man Has Loved," "The Fool." All in all, there's a well considered, ambitious effort here to depart from the program type of picture. "Special" is the keynote.

THE acquisition of Vitagaph by Warner Brothers came like a bolt from the blue. The trade isn't used to surprises like that. Such events are rare, and always were marshalled along with rumors. As it was, New York film circles gasped and then gave the matter its quiet, respectful consideration; as it should.

The step is a most logical one. Warners' exchange system was not all it should be—not, at least, for a concern determined to have and hold a place among the first line companies. The independent exchanges handled other pictures besides Warner product, pictures, too, of a different calibre. They couldn't concentrate on Warner product. Yet Warner's twenty-six a year couldn't alone maintain a set of exchanges. Vitagraph's exchange system, too, was not functioning satisfactorily. It needed more product. The heavy expense of a national distributing system plus an adequate sales force is intolerable without a considerable volume of product. So, with the union of Warners' and Vitagraph's production resources—two plants in Hollywood and one in Booklyn, and one of these the best equipped studio in the business—product is promised to the formidable extent of seventy features a year.

Then there are Vitagraph's European exchanges; a direct outlet abroad is important these days. Time was, not long ago, when the Vitagraph foreign offices were leaders in the London film market.

By this stroke, Warner Brothers indicate clearly their strength and their objective. It probably isn't a final move. They also are determined, apparently, to figure heavily in the way of first run theatres. But the big consideration, of course, will be—pictures. They have the plant resources; the men involved are, all of them, pioneer showmen. We understand an announcement of the new year's product is forthcoming. It will be read with much interest.

IN the meantime, all those independent exchanges, the best in their field, which handled Warner pictures, will open their shelves to other independent product. Which ought to help a good deal the State right market.

AN interesting interview with Bruce Johnson, First National's foreign manager. He has just returned from Europe, and goes back again in September. By the way, I hear that Elek J. Ludvigh, one of the powers in Famous Players-Lasky, goes to Europe shortly, and will make his headquarters there for the next thee years. Marcus Loew has just purchased for Metro-Goldwyn the Gaumont string of theatres in France. Gus Schlessinger, lately returned, goes back across the water very soon with H. M. Warner. Ben Blumenthal is in Budapest.

Looks like things were stirring over there—like the prediction made in the NEWS that the big battleground for theatre ownership would be in Europe.

Says Bruce Johnson, on this point: "Either the Europeans must build the new theatres for Europe, or the Americans will have to. Competition—the spirited competition over here—will force the American companies to do so.

"Conditions are better in Europe, much better. I don't believe that this market will yield anywhere near the film income of the American market—not for a long time, at least. The people of Europe are far less prosperous, have little money, in comparison, to spend on theatre admissions. Remember that the people out of work today in England and their families equal the population of Australia. Taxes are heavy everywhere.

ON BROADWAY

By William A. Johnston

"Italy is in good shape — from a theatre standpoint. France not so good, and with an uncertain future. England is much improved. The exhibitors there have made money, good money, the past year. There are many fine theatres there, not in London, but in Manchester, Leeds, Birmingham and other main centres. Germany is coming along, but of course the restricted importation of American pictures is a factor there. In Austria you cannot get licenses for new theatres. Middle Europe is heavily taxed; and that is another damper on new theatre enterprises. Many distributors there have gone bankrupt, but I found on investigation that it was not due to their handling of American films — on these they made a big profit — but because they went into production and spent more money than they could possibly gross in their local markets.

"Will Europe produce? Yes, I believe so. Also, American companies will produce abroad, alone or in co-operation with foreign producers. The answer is not merely to send American directors and stars abroad. The Europeans have plenty of producing ability and they know how to produce economically there, which we do not. What they do need is our judgment in picking out stories that will meet the taste of this country. That's the foremost step. And then they need our advice in casting, if they aim to appeal to our standards.

"As for distribution, the day of the middleman in Europe is over, so far as the big American companies are concerned. They all intend to have their own exchanges and do their direct dealing with the exhibitor."

And there First National's foreign manager said, it seems to me, a most important thing: "International distribution, however, is not the all-important end. The first consideration is international production — that is, the making of pictures with a true international appeal. That can be done — whether the pictures are made here or abroad or by Americans alone or Europeans alone, or both working together. You cannot have successful international distribution if the product is provincial in character. In the matter of provincialism the American producer is just as open to criticism as is the European producer. The most progressive step that any American company can make today — the step that will most certainly assure its future — is the making of international pictures for international distribution."

JUST about twelve years ago we were seated in a small office at 220 West 42nd Street, New York; and aside from the fact that it was a bright spring day, the outlook wasn't dazzling. The editorial, business, advertising, circulation, stock-room, etc. of MOTION PICTURE NEWS were all included in a small bit of floor space, the annual lease of which called for nine hundred dollars and the said lease of which had just been signed with some trepidation. We had the uncharted feeling of a duck that had wandered afield and gotten into a strange pond.

And on this self-same day a young man from Chicago blew into the office, said his name was Rothacker, that he didn't believe any of the lies that had been printed about us, that the motion picture business had a great future, that there was lots of room for us, in fact for any straightforward enterprise, that he himself was building up a big printing and developing plant, just consider the possibilities, he offered, of the motion picture in advertising American goods and industries! — and how about a bite of lunch, etc.!

So we dug in again, with a new feeling of success; and about two years later this same Rothacker said: "You've made the grade, and I want the advertising space of your back cover; moreover, I want it right along, just so you maintain your progress and policy."

That back cover advertisement has run now continuously for ten years; and we are considerably proud of it. It breaks all advertising records of its kind in this field. Fifty-two times a year for ten years the copy has stated that Rothacker prints are a service to this industry; and that is a fact; moreover, it is a fact known to the trade in every country of the globe. By the way, from Japan the other day, where magazines are read backward, came a letter addressed to the Rothacker Film Mfg. Co., 729 Seventh Avenue, New York, and asking for a copy of MOTION PICTURE NEWS as advertised on the back cover.

All this is by way of reference to the Fifteenth Anniversary on May 10th of the Rothacker Film Company. There are few, very few firms in the motion picture business to-day who can claim that age. But the point is that those fifteen years stand for an unbroken record of quality work, of genuine service, upheld and steadily fought for regardless of any other lure or consideration. And that's a record — in any business.

Everyone in the trade — even beyond these shores — knows "Watty" Rothacker and likes and respects him. There's a temptation to reminisce some more, and plenty to say: but I want only to add this, which should be said of every man in the field for whom it may be said, that he would have made the same brilliant success in any other kind of business.

PARAMOUNT'S International Convention settled down in New York, functioned there, and then moved to the west coast to meet the western sales division. In advance of the convention, and impressed with its importance, we spent an interesting hour with Emil Shauer, head of Paramount's foreign department; he showed us the large maps

The Story of the Silkworm

WILLIAM DE MILLE made a speech recently at the annual luncheon of the National Board of Review in which he gave expression to some forceful opinions. One of them in particular deserves to be given especial emphasis, because it goes to the very heart of successful picture-making. Said Mr. De Mille:

"The public doesn't go to the theatre for art. It goes for entertainment. You can give it as much art with entertainment as you like. What the public objects to is the substitution of art for entertainment. It won't stand for that; it never has stood for it in the theatre.

"Well, my dilemma is that of the silkworm. You see, there was a ribbon clerk who used to sell ribbon and he became a very expert salesman of ribbon. He sold miles of it. A certain shade of dark blue came in which was very popular and so he went to the silkworm and said, 'Now, my friend, you must spin a shade of silk that is just this particular color.'

"The silkworm said, 'Well, all I know is how to spin silk. I don't know what color it is until after it is through.'

"The salesman said, 'I can't help that; if you don't spin the color silk that I need in my business, you won't get any food.'

"So the silkworm tried to spin that color silk and exploded.

"That is the ever-present problem, of course, from our end of it. The ribbon clerk thought he was doing the right thing but the silkworm was doing the only thing he could do — spin what was inside of him.

"Now, to make the example concrete, the worst pictures I have ever made have been made when I was trying to keep an eye on the box office. And the best pictures I have ever made, and some of the most popular, have been when I wasn't paying any attention to the box office whatever but was making a picture I wanted to make because I felt I had to make it. I have come to the conclusion that if the motion picture producer produces what his soul tells him to produce, he will reach even financial success far more often than when he simply tries to reach financial success. That has always been true of art and has been true in the theatre and other arts."

prepared for the convention and indicating the location all over the globe of the company's seventy-nine offices for the direct handling with theatres of its product.

I don't know of any one event of the day that more clearly symbolizes the great expansion of the American motion picture trade than this international convention — the first of its kind held here. Think of it! The same concern which, little more than a decade ago, handled its business in this country through some fifteen exchanges, now has seventy-nine offices outside of the country.

The most interesting portent of this convention, however, is the approaching development of the foreign picture market. We are well intent, too well intent, probably, upon our domestic affairs. I am told on all sides that Europe is going to have fine new theatres and that eventually, perhaps shortly even, the income from the foreign field will rival the several hundred millions taken in annually from the U. S. and Canada. In that event, we had better stop scrapping about the loose ends of the domestic market, and busy ourselves with a new field, where the prizes of initiative and enterprise are far greater.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Goldwyn snapped immediately upon their return from Jersey City, where they were married. Mrs. Goldwyn was formerly Frances Howard.

WHEN LANGDON FOLLOWS SUIT

WHETHER or not the many rumors of Harry Langdon's intention to desert the production of two-reel comedies—and like Keaton, Lloyd and Chaplin—to follow up with feature-length films, is true, the fact is evident that he is at present engaged on the production of the most ambitious story he has yet attempted.

The Sennett star has come along rapidly since he jumped to the screen a year and a half ago. And why not? He has a wealth of experience in the amusement field—having worked his way along from property boy through medicine shows, circuses and vaudeville. Being a trained comedian he had no difficulty in gauging the gags to suit his personality. And his personality is distinctly individual. Pathos, which is one of the important factors in any comedian's success, is portrayed by him with rare skill. He has that "hurt dog" expression which kindles sympathy. Yet when he cares to open the comedy faucets, a stream of richly amusing antics bursts forth.

Langdon has staked everything on "His First Flame." The greater part of the story was suggested by the comedian himself, from incidents recalled during the days when he was trouping up and down the Main Streets of America. His life has been so complete that if the picture carries out even a small part of his adventures it should be a rollicking number.

So our hats are off to Harry Langdon who is destined to take his place with that little handful of comedians who are sitting so pretty at the top. His inimitable characterizations have provoked admiration from the masses and the classes. He extracts laughs and sympathy because of his ability to suggest pathos and humor, so distinctively.

Clara Horton appears in a new sort of role in a Christie comedy now in production for Educational release, in which she is called upon to vamp the portly Walter Hiers.

WHEN MARION DAVIES IN PERSON

WHEN Marion Davies' new picture, "Zander the Great," opens at the Capitol Sunday the star will be there in person. Having but recently arrived from the Coast, she is busy purchasing a new wardrobe for her next picture, "The Merry Wives of Gotham." The new opus, "Zander the Great," takes her away from the costume spectacles in which she has appeared the last year.

Tom Mix, the Fox star, and Tony, his famous horse, give a party for the youngsters on board the Aquitania, in the main dining room of the ship.

Harry Langdon, the fastest rising figure on the comedy horizon today, who is appearing in Mack Sennett comedies for release by Pathe.

Little Helen Rowland, now playing with Milton Sills in "The Making of O'Malley" (First Nat'l), recently vamped Thomas A. Edison at his Menlo Park establishment.

Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of Fox corporation, and James B. Grainger, new Fox general sales manager, working over the sales map and planning the drive for the 1925–26 line-up of product.

Hugo Ballin and his cameraman, J. R. Diamond, at work on "The Shining Adventure" (Principal), with Mabel Ballin and Percy Marmont. Diamond has been with him on seven pictures.

RALPH SPENCE, whose fine Italian hand has saved many a picture flop and made good pictures better through his skill at adaptations and writing subtitles, has blossomed forth as the author of a burlesque mystery play, "The Gorilla." It had its try-out in Washington and the critic of the Star sings its praises in a column and a half on the Sunday dramatic page. The play opened in New York Tuesday night and the audience evinced great enthusiasm.

The Washington writer calls it as variegated in its wares as a Christmas tree with jack-in-the-boxes, torpedoes, firecrackers, zoological mimicries, and, in fact, every mechanical toy calculated to delight the human mind. It utilizes almost every familiar effect known to the crime and mystery drama and yet gets its thrills and surprises from moment to moment with unvarying accuracy. The Washingtonian says it belongs to the school established by "The Bat," but outbats "The Bat."

Mr. Spence is a versatile young man. He writes occasionally for Dr. Ziegfeld—and is often called by other play producers when they have a sick "brain child" on their hands. He should be registering high glee after the reception of his newest contribution to the drama. According to the reports it is destined to settle down for a run. Then after the run the screen producers will make their bids. And being strong silent men they will talk in figures. The result of it all should swell the Spence bank deposits.

Silver King, the "wonder horse" owned by Fred Thomson, F. B. O. Western star, receives every care possible, since he is a highly valuable piece of horse flesh. Here he is in his private motorized stable on wheels.

NAZIMOVA'S COME-BACK

IT certainly is a pleasure to see Nazimova back in the type of role which gives her the fullest expression of her emotions. Time was when appearing in the Ibsen dramas on the stage that she was ranked very close to the top of the profession. She became a screen favorite too—when "The Fog" and others cut from a similar cloth presented her the opportunity to show her emotional gifts.

Ferdinand Pinney Earle painting one of the special backgrounds used in the process by which he filmed "A Lover's Oath", Astor's first release.

Then all of a sudden came an abrupt departure from the characters she fitted so well. She experimented with bizarre settings and exotic roles until Oblivion came near to being written across her horizon. We all wanted her to express her deep emotions in stories of human attributes. She has responded with "My Son." Playing the Portuguese mother of an unruly boy she stages a real histrionic comeback. It is a performance with depth of feeling and exceptionally fine naturalness.

TIDINGS FROM TOM AND TONY

TOM MIX and Tony certainly gave their fellow passengers on the "Aquitania" a wonderful time during the trip across to Southampton. In fact the children who were on board have accepted the cowboy star as another Santa Claus for the party he gave them on Good Friday. Tony had signed the invitations as usual and the kids surely gorged themselves on the cakes and ice-cream. But they had their greatest thrill when Tom, mounted on Tony, rode into the grand dining room of the steamer, where the party was held. This is the first time a horse ever set hoof in the dining room of an ocean liner. So far as the grown-ups were concerned, Tom gave a talk on clean pictures. He told them of the efforts of himself and his company in that direction. He was introduced as the best known actor in the world.

WANTED—AN ADVANCE AGENT

MAE MURRAY is probably wishing she had taken an advance agent and a carload of lithographs and photos with her to Europe. According to a Paris news dispatch there is an officious functionary at the Italian frontier who doesn't know her. Neither her blonde beauty nor her famous mannerisms got her across the border when the official discovered that her passport did not carry an Italian visé.

When the star told him who she was he assumed a faraway look and muttered "Me no speaka da English." So Mae came back to Paris while her baggage went on to Vienna where she had intended visiting Max Reinhardt. That she registered indignation at Claridge's hotel in Paris is proved in her retort—"No more traveling in Europe for me."

HAROLD, MILDRED AND JOE

LIKE that memorable trio of Never-Never Land, Wynken, Blinken and Nod—Harold Lloyd, his wife, Mildred Davis, and his envoy, extraordinaire, Joe Reddy are always together. Wherever you find Harold you find Mildred. Wherever you find Mildred you find Harold. Wherever you find Harold and Mildred you find Joe.

There are two sets of three musketeers in the movies. One group comprises Doug and Mary and Charlie. The other comprises Harold and Mildred and Joe. The latter trio are visiting New York—their semi-annual trip. Harold and Mildred are here to see the shows and shop in the stores. Joe is here to tell the world with his own set of five-dollar words that Harold and the Missus are the two greatest persons in God's Vast Cathedral. Joe is guiding Harold around the newspaper offices, arranging interviews, luncheons, while Mildred takes up the peculiarly feminine pastime of looking over the shops. They will take in all the New York hits.

Their schedule is a heavy one—with mornings, afternoons and evenings completely occupied. The baby? Well, Harold and Mildred—and Joe agreed with them—thought that she was too young to stand such an arduous trip as the overland journey. So she remained in Hollywood. They certainly miss her. Not all the bustle and excitement of New York—not all the intensive pleasure to be gained from a short vacation in the metropolis can erase the far-away look in their eyes.

The Lloyds are intensely human folks—the kind of folks you'd like for neighbors—the kind of folks who would say "Sure!" if you invited them in your flivver to go picnicking in the country. There is nothing of the personal pronoun in Harold's vocabulary. He'd much rather talk about Mildred and the baby—and baseball and golf and shows.

Betty Bronson, who has been selected to play the Madonna in "Ben Hur" (Metro-Goldwyn), should give a reverent and sincere portrayal of the role. She is here shown with Director Fred Niblo.

ONE POINT OF VIEW

KENNETH R. EDDY, Fox News field cameraman at Sault-St.-Marie, Michigan, submits a clipping from his local newspaper headed:

"Locks Too Large to Take with Only 150 Feet of Film, Sabin Points Out."

Thereby hangs a tale — to wit — or to woo:

At the regular luncheon of the Rotary Club, it was announced that Fox News would "shoot" some pictures of the famous canal locks, and that at least 150 feet of film would be used.

Whereupon L. C. Sabin, general superintendent of the locks, arose and objected.

"It is impossible to get anything with only 150 feet," he said. "Every one of the locks is more than 150 feet long."

And that's thus!

This afternoon siesta business is the bunk, according to Director William K. Howard, who tried it while on location in southern Arizona for "The Light of Western Stars" (Paramount). Mark Hamilton wielded a soothing fan, but directorial cares kept Howard awake the whole time.

COSTELLO GIRLS SIGNED

JUST about the time Warner Brothers bought the Vitagraph Company of which Maurice Costello was at one time one of the best known and earliest stars, his daughters, Dolores and Helen, popularly known as the "Costello girls," were affixing their signatures to a contract with Warners in Los Angeles. Jack Warner signed both of the young women just two or three days before Warner took over the company that their father helped to make famous.

The young ladies have charm and personality—and have appeared in vaudeville and on the speaking stage. They have been coached by their father who is now playing the two-a-day—and are actresses of considerable talent.

It is the intention of the Warners to develop the young women for the screen and assign them to prominent roles. Their daddy was one of the best known of the old school screen players, and was the Valentino of his day when it came to popularity with the ladies. Of late his film appearances have not been frequent and he has given most of his attention to vaudeville.

Helene (left) and Dolores Costello, the two daughters of Maurice Costello, who have just been signed to a long-term contract by Warner Brothers. They have a great tradition to carry on.

Among the film executives attending the First National meeting at French Lick was E. M. Asher, vice-president of Corinne Griffith Prod. He is with Edward Small, Mrs. Asher, Betty and Billy.

One of the most promising recent discoveries is Carol Lombard, to be seen in featured parts for Fox. Never an extra, she was leading lady in "Marriage in Transit" and "Hearts and Spurs".

Action with a couple of capital "A's" is presented in this instantaneous photo of Buffalo Bill, Jr., and his horse, Kelly, in Thunderbolt Thrillers for Artclass.

THE HAPPY ENDING

AS the happy ending invariably culminates in a wedding of hero and heroine let us turn our attention to the lovers of a real story—who have tied their romance with a marital knot. The hero of this little tale is Samuel Goldwyn—the heroine, Frances Howard. After a brief courtship they were married a week last Thursday week at eleven o'clock in the morning by Judge Leo Sullivan of Jersey City. The bride has just made her screen debut in "The Swan." As for the groom—well he needs no introduction. He chose Edgar Selwyn as his best man while Miss Howard chose her sister, Constance, for maid of honor.

Following the ceremony the happy couple were hosts at their wedding luncheon at the Ritz. Those who "sat in" on the party included Diana Kane, Conde Nast, Everett Jacobs, Edgar Selwyn, Mrs. McLaughlin (mother of the bride) Mr. and Mrs. Goldwyn, Constance Howard, George Fitzmaurice, Mr. and Mrs. Henry King, S. Goldsmith, Rae Goldsmith, Mr. and Mrs. Wigham, Bernard Gimbel, Nathan Burken, Michael Arlen, George Cukor, Mrs. McNeeley.

Immediately following the luncheon the honeymooners entrained on the Century for Los Angeles. The NEWS offers felicitations.

WHEN CRASHING THE LAMBS

WHEN the Lambs—the actors club—stage their annual Gambol they carry on the sacred tradition that the gentler sex must not perform in the show. This tradition, however, was rudely shattered last Sunday night at the Metropolitan Opera House—the scene of the Gambol—when the Marquise de la Falaise (Gloria, you know) appeared on the darkened stage and engaged with Tom Meighan in an animated and vigorous denunciation of the Lambs as a whole for their stand against her presence in defiance of the time-honored institution.

Gloria was accompanied by her husband, the Marquis, who, making his public premiere on the American stage, enlivened the scene with volcanic and explosive French anent the attempted embargo against Gloria and her sister actresses. Meighan, who is Shepherd of the Lambs, made a gallant but ineffective defense against the tirade of the joint de la Falaise forces, while Augustus Thomas, dean of American playwrights, and leader of the anti-feminist wing of the Lambs, writhed silently in his seat.

The great audience applauded enthusiastically when Gloria cried out—"Why Tommy, we ARE in the Gambol—I did make the grade after all—Look, there's Mrs. Meighan in that diamond horseshoe box," pointing excitedly. Then the curtain dropped. Of course it was all a trick. Gloria was actually in her home in Hollywood—and later in the evening Richard Barthelmess read a telegram from her that the broadcasting of the dialogue of the sketch had been perfectly received in Los Angeles.

The number was put over by the De Forest Phonofilms—it being a motion picture that permitted Gloria, Henri and Tom to talk. It was directed by Allan Dwan under Dr. Lee De Forest's supervision and was the surprise feature of the Gambol.

FURTHER SWANSONIA

GLORIA not only knocked 'em "dead" at the Gambol, but she had nearly all of Los Angeles at the Santa Fe Station when she and the boy friend, Henri, stepped off the train. Then came the parade (parades are always happening out there when someone of note hops off the rattlers) headed by the cops, followed by a brass band—and Gloria, Henri, and Paramount executives and officials in autos bringing up the rear. It was an enthusiastic demonstration.

SPRINGTIME IN NEW YORK

SPRINGTIME in New York may start the ponies running at the local tracks and the posies blooming in the parks—but it is not a genuine springtime unless Several Hollywood commuters hop off the trains at the Grand Central Terminal. Among those who have arrived in Gotham from the Coast are Marion Davies, who has now become a resident of Hollywood, Mae Marsh, who will continue on to London to fulfill screen engagements, Nazimova, who is here to set her Port Washington home in order, William S. Hart, who came on to play a sketch in the Lambs Gambol, Mae Busch, who will begin work in the East on a new production, Teddy Sampson, Miriam Cooper, Lloyd Hughes and Gloria Hope.

Marion Davies, Cosmopolitan Metro-Goldwyn star, snapped by International Newsreel as she stepped from the train in New York for the premiere of her "Zander the Great" (Metro-Goldwyn).

Lucille La Verne, character actress, will play the same role in "Wrath" (Metro-Goldwyn), the picturization of "Sun Up", that she created in the play on Broadway.

Marshall Neilan is said to have picked another winner in little Sally O'Neil, a newcomer who plays the name role in his "Patsy" (Metro-Goldwyn).

800 Features for New Season, Cohen Survey Shows

Results of M. P. T. O. A. Questionnaire Made Public

SYDNEY S. COHEN, Chairman of the Administrative Committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, this week issued a statement incorporating the results of the questionnaire on product for next season recently sent out by the organization. According to the survey, about 800 features will be available from all producers and distributors for the new theatrical year.

Next week MOTION PICTURE NEWS will print a detailed summary of the pictures to be released in 1925-26, giving titles and casts and other available information. This survey will be as complete as it is possible to make it.

Mr. Cohen's statement follows:

"Actuated by a desire to dispel from the minds of my fellow theatre owners the fear that there would be a shortage of worthwhile pictures for the coming year, and impelled by the desire to prove correct my own oft repeated claims that there would be more quality product from the independents than ever before in the history of the Industry — I, in my capacity as Chairman of the Administrative Committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, sent out under date of March 15th the appended questionnaire to all of the known producing concerns.

"The response was overwhelming, and the extremely encouraging results are tabulated below. It is indeed gratifying to learn from them that not only will there be no possible shortage of product during the coming season, but that there will be an abundance of quality pictures from the Independents. Thus is my contention most fully borne out; and since this condition is one of benefit to my fellow theatre owners it is a double satisfaction.

"In the following tabulated results of the questionnaire, theatre owners will note that not only does the quantity and quality of the product listed therein assure the big downtown first run houses, and first run houses everywhere—(neighborhood or in the smaller cities) of an ample supply from which to choose their programs; but the small theatre owners' needs will be fully cared for as well.

"Read our questionnaire carefully, and then read this following list of films with the same care. This is information furnished us by these various producers and the classification is theirs, not ours."

This is the questionnaire sent out by Mr. Cohen:

"For the purpose of officially and authentically advising members of our organization with regard to the quality, number and general character of feature motion pictures to be released in America during the coming theatrical season, beginning September, 1925, we respectfully request your answer to the questions enumerated herein:

"(1) How many feature motion picture productions of more than 5,000 feet in length will your company release during the coming season?

"(2) How many feature pictures will you release that you might classify (A) (B)?

"(A) Of course referring to the type of picture worthy of a full week's run in cities or zones where such is the policy; or for the longest possible run given a picture in the larger neighborhood theatres or first-class houses in smaller cities and towns.

"(B) To refer to all other features worthy of a split-week run in houses dedicated to that policy or to the three, four or five day run which the first-class houses in smaller cities and towns and the large neighborhood houses give to features which merit such showings.

"(3) How many feature pictures, usually described as program pictures, will you release? These, of course, are pictures worthy of a two day play, to be played either singly or as a double feature according to the policy of the theatre—or to be played singly in the smaller, daily change houses.

"We respectfully suggest in your response, that these "program" pictures be in no wise confused with the Class A and B pictures referred to in the previous paragraph, and we urge the utmost frankness on your part in giving us the information we ask.

"We request, if possible, that you furnish us with your answer not later than April 10th, 1925.

"Any additional information that will enlighten exhibitors in formulating booking plans for the coming season, we will be pleased to have for transmission to our members."

One Killed, Four Injured, in Florida Airdrome Mishap

A motion picture screen, torn from its fastenings by a high wind, resulted in the death of one child, and injuries to four others, at the Airdrome, St. Petersburg, Florida.

The screen fell forward into the orchestra. The injured, three children and one of the musicians, will recover, it is said.

The manager of the theatre said that he could not account for the accident as the screen has passed tests of the building inspector and was considered safe.

Daylight Saving Repeal Fails in Chicago

Chicago theatre men were disappointed by the action of the city council in refusing either to repeal or curtail the period of daylight saving, provided for in the ordinance. The majority of the council, however, seemed to feel that as the matter had been voted on at a referendum election it would not be proper for the city council to overrule the popular verdict. Hope, however, was held out that a referendum on the repeal may be held at some future time.

Daylight Saving Abandoned in Washington

Washington exhibitors are congratulating themselves that there will be no daylight saving in the District of Columbia this year. The plan was tried out a few years ago with disastrous results, practically the entire population disliking the idea. A large part of Washington's population works for Uncle Sam and calls it a day at 4:30, and while daylight saving was very nice for those who followed golfing, canoeing or similar sports, it was felt by the majority that there was entirely too much daylight.

Plans Perfected by I. M. P. P. D. A.

Stronger Co-operation and Organization to Be Sought at Milwaukee; Consolidated Physical Handling Discussed at Meetings

PREPARATIONS for the Milwaukee convention of the I. M. P. P. D. A., May 10th, 11th and 12th, began to crystallize this week in a series of meetings presided over by John Lowell Russell, president pro tem. Stronger organization and co-operation with the other independent factors in the industry have been the principal matters for discussion.

From the trend of the discussion at these meetings, it appears that the issues to be brought up at Milwaukee will include:

Better co-operation between the various independent branches of the industry.

Better organization within those branches themselves.

Formation of an independent producers' association.

Formation of an independent exchanges' association.

The possibility of consolidated physical handling of prints and accessories on the part of independent exchanges.

A uniform contract between independent producers and distributors.

The Sydney S. Cohen plan for a Bureau of Trade and Commerce.

These issues have been thoroughly discussed at meetings of the I. M. P. P. D. A. in New York, and this delegation, at least, will come to Milwaukee prepared to work for definite action along these lines.

The feeling is strong within the organization that conditions demand organized action rather than talk, and it is the hope of the leaders of the organization that the Milwaukee meeting will bring concrete results that will at least be a move in the direction of a better stabilized independent field.

At a meeting of the I. M. P. P. D. A. on Tuesday, it was unanimously decided to have John Lowell Russell open the Milwaukee meeting with a key-note talk setting forth the plans outlined by the association.

Mr. Russell this week pointed out the need of stronger organization in the independent field, on the part of producers, exchange men and exhibitors.

"The distributors are pretty well organized in the present association," he said, "as are the exhibitors in many parts of the country, but the independent producers and exchanges are totally unorganized.

"With all four branches strongly federated, each having a salaried head, an Arbitration Board could be formed which would enjoy the confidence of all, including in its membership the four association heads and a fifth man, strictly neutral, heading the board. This fifth man would have to be a big figure, a man in whose judgment confidence would be placed, and one not engaged in any one of the four branches of the industry. Such a board could handle all matters between the various branches of the business, arbitrating all disputes and settling all claims.

"One of the biggest gains from such a step would be the increased confidence on the part of banks and financial houses, several of which would get behind the independents tomorrow if they could be assured of the stability and soundness of the field. That can come only through co-operation and organization. The banks will come in to any extent necessary, once the independent field is placed on a stable basis.

"The organization of an independent producers' association would be a big step forward," he also declared. "At the present time, stars are developed in the independent field and are then snapped up by one of the national producer-distributors. If the independent producers were strongly organized, they could co-operate in the matter of loaning players to each other, thus keeping them working steadily and building them up with the public through their being seen more frequently and in a greater variety of roles. Such an association could also enforce contracts with players and guarantee the validity of such contracts.

"Another vital step which such an association could bring about would be the drafting of a uniform contract for use between independent producers and distributors. As matters stand now, a producer has no means of knowing under what sort of contract the picture he is then making will be distributed. With a uniform, equitable contract this would all be eliminated."

The matter of consolidated physical handling of prints and accessories, it is understood, has come in for extended discussion at the I. M. P. P. D. A. meetings. It is pointed out that the costs of shipping, inspection, poster paper, and so on, are in their nature more or less fixed charges, depending in no way upon the rental or revenue, but simply on the volume of product shipped and handled. It is felt by many in the association that there is a great deal of unnecessary duplication of labor and expense in such physical handling, and that a consolidation of this part of the work would leave exchanges free to devote their entire time and effort to selling, relieved of the overhead of shipping and storage.

At the meeting on Tuesday, Mr. Russell appointed a committee of three to meet with Sydney S. Cohen in connection with the latter's plan for a Bureau of Trade and Commence. The membership of the committee includes Charles B. Hoy, W. Ray Johnston and Jack Cohn.

The Bureau of Trade and Commerce, as proposed to the association by Mr. Cohen, would be a central bureau, operated by the independent branches of the industry, including the M. P. T. O. A. The functions of this bureau would be many, including the listing of all independent product and reporting to exhibitors upon its merit, the arranging of playing time and booking dates, and the like. Contractual matters would also presumably come before this board.

Preparations are being made to accommodate three hundred delegates at Milwaukee, as it is expected that fully that many will be in attendance.

Booking Combine Looms in Buffalo

THAT efforts are again being made to form a booking combine in the Buffalo territory are shown from the following letter, which is being sent out to exhibitors by an attorney, evidently representing a group of exhibitors. The letter reads as follows:

"Several owners of moving picture houses in western New York have discussed with the writer the advisability of having a central purchasing agency for their films. The advantages of concentrated buying are too well known to need much in the way of explanation.

"Practically every large city in the country has a chain of houses who have bound themselves together for the purpose of purchasing their films on a basis at figures which cannot be met by individual bookings.

"The writer, who is an absolute outsider so far as the moving picture industry is concerned, has been asked to communicate with you and ask if you would attend a meeting with several of your associates to discuss the possibilities of a practical working plan that would be to the mutual benefit of all concerned.

"I am enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope for the convenience of your reply. If enough of those in the immediate Buffalo Territory are interested in a possible working plan I feel sure it could be accomplished to the ultimate good of all concerned."

Inquiries fail to divulge who is behind the move.

Canada Delegates Going to Milwaukee

A luncheon meeting of the Ontario Division of the Canadian Motion Picture Owners Association was held at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, on Wednesday, April 22, those taking part including President J. C. Brady, owner of the Madison Theatre, Toronto, Vice-President Ald. W. A. Summerville, president of the Prince of Wales Theatre, Toronto, and others.

Arrangements were fully discussed regarding the Canadian delegation to the International convention of the M. P. T. O. at Milwaukee, Wis., on May 12 to 15. Many exhibitors present at the meeting signified their intention of attending the convention.

Nitro Cellulose Bill Vetoed by Smith

ALBANY, Apr. 27.—Governor Alfred E. Smith vetoed the so-called nitro-cellulose bill last week when he completed the task of passing upon the 600-odd bills that had been handed him at the close of the New York State Legislature.

It was generally expected that the Governor would take such action so that the veto, which was included among a great many others, did not occasion any great amount of surprise. In the past the Governor has vetoed two similar bills. The measure proposed to amend the general business law of the state in the manufacture and use of nitro-cellulose film. The bill was the only one of interest to the motion picture industry, that survived the session.

"Bring Your Playdates" Is Convention Slogan

Developments On Eve of M. P. T. O. A. Meeting

THE main lines of action to be undertaken at the Milwaukee Convention were disclosed this week by several important developments.

1. Mobilization of independent playdates for independent productions, through the Trade and Commerce Bureau of the M. P. T. O. A. and the presence at the convention of the heads of several independent national distributors and the state rights companies, will be the keynote.

This was made evident through a statement issued by the M. P. T. O. A. Trade and Commerce Committee, composed of Louis M. Sagal, Harry Davis, R. F. Woodhull, A. A. Elliott, and Sydney S. Cohen, Chairman.

The statement, which was headed "Bring Your Playdates to Milwaukee," declared that the heads of Fox, Universal, Warner Brothers, F. B. O., Vitagraph, and the state rights producers "have pledged to our National Board of Directors in person their fullest co-operation, financial and otherwise in fostering the Bureau of Trade and Commerce for the purpose of segregating independent Commerce to Independents."

2. Preliminary to the playdate mobilization, the Board of Directors of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City, in a special meeting held April 27, unanimously voted to recommend and direct the members of the organization not to enter into new contracts or tie up their playdates on forthcoming productions for the season 1925–1926 from any producer until the Milwaukee Convention.

Similar action was taken by the Board of Directors of the M. P. T. O. of Western Pennsylvania and the Directorate of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey.

3. Strong forces are at work to bring about complete harmony in exhibitor ranks on the eve of the convention. A significant development was the unanimous decision of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas-Missouri, a member of the Allied State Organizations, to send three representatives to the convention at Milwaukee. Whether this movement will spread to the other Allied states—Michigan, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, North Carolina, Texas and Illinois, remains to be seen.

Following is the statement issued by the Trade and Commerce Committee of the M. P. T. O. A.:

"Bring your play dates to Milwaukee! We have prepared another fortress for your protection—the establishment of a Bureau of Trade and Commerce. We have been in conference with Fox, Universal, Warner Brothers, Film Booking Offices, Vitagraph, and many Producers for the State Right market. The heads of these companies have pledged to our National Board of Directors in person their fullest co-operation, financial and otherwise, in fostering the Bureau of Trade and Commerce for the purpose of segregating Independent Commerce to Independents.

"You will be in a position to trade at Milwaukee. All the sessions will be business ones, with the exception of the one devoted to the election of a Board of Directors. The Producers will be in a position to offer you contracts for their programs. You will be there to make your selections. Keep yourself ready for this new service which our Organization is offering you. It is for your good that this Bureau has been introduced—for your preservation and the preservation of our Industry from monopoly.

"Save your play dates for Independent Producers. Come prepared to do business at the Bureau of Trade and Commerce. There you will meet the owners of companies and their representatives. There will be no time, nor occasion for evading of issues or diplomacy. Every promise made will be made by an owner, not a salesman, and if made by a salesman, will have the owner of the company there as a witness for its fulfillment. At Milwaukee, you will meet the heads of the big national independent producing and distributing companies and state right organizations. It will give you a chance of getting acquainted with each other. Tell them the situation in your territory and your problems. Let them know what they can do to help you. Get together with them and iron out any differences that may have existed in the past. The battle is yours and theirs. You are both soldiers, fighting shoulder to shoulder for your independence. The interest is mutual, and they have told us they want to co-operate in every possible way with independent theatre owners. Milwaukee is the time. Come there with your play dates and learn the quality and quantity of product available and you can make your choice. Be prepared to make it. A bee is defenseless after its stinger is gone. You are defenseless without your dates. Bring them to Milwaukee for Independents.

"Remember our slogan—

"Independents for independents and independence!

"There's only one thing you've got that is worth anything to the independent producers. Play dates!

"There's only one power you control which can build up independent producer strength for your own future good. Play dates!

"Resolutions and promises won't pay negative costs. There's only one thing that will pay them. Play dates!

"When you're in a battle, you don't hand your ammunition over to your enemies. You use it to protect yourself and your friends. Your ammunition consists of Play dates.

"Every Play Date you give to a producer who is threatening to wipe you out of business is a stab in the heart of your only real friend, the independent producer.

"When you come to Milwaukee, bring your Play Dates with you and be prepared to give them to independent producers. This convention means business. Let's roll up a total of actual, honest play dates that will serve notice on the whole world that monopoly cannot get a foothold in this Industry.

"Play dates! Shoot down your enemies with 'em. Protect your friends with 'em. Build up a bulwark of strength with 'em to protect your own future."

Following is the text of the resolution adopted by the M. P. T. O. of Western Pennsylvania:

"Whereas, certain members of our organization have been approached by agents of an unnamed company, for the purpose of signing agreements whereby the theatre owners transfer to the company the exclusive booking of their theatre, and

"Whereas, this activity has resulted in bringing about a somewhat chaotic condition of the industry, and

"Whereas, the transfer of the booking is virtually a transfer of the control of the theatre, and

"Whereas, this condition will eventually bring about the control of the entire industry by a certain coterie,

"Be it Resolved, that all exhibitors refuse to sign any agreement or enter into any booking arrangement with any copartnership, company or corporation, until after the National Convention. The officers of the M. P. T. O. of W. Pa., having ample assurance that measures will be adopted and agreements entered into whereby the independnt exhibitor will have ample quality product of his own selection to guarantee the profitable operation of his theatre under his own control.

"And be it Further Resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent to all exhibitors in this zone, to all state organizations, the National Organization and all trade papers."

Newman Deal With Famous Players Confirmed by S. R. Kent

REPORTS that have been circulated for some weeks to the effect that Frank L. Newman, owner of the Newman and Royal Theatres, Kansas City, would join the Famous Players forces as managing director of the Rialto, Metropolitan and Grauman Theatres in Los Angeles, and that Famous would take over the Newman and Royal Theatres, were confirmed by S. R. Kent in an interview given at Kansas City last week.

Seen by reporters, Mr. Kent, who was aboard the Paramount special train for California, is quoted as having said:

"Mr. Newman will go to the West Coast in June or July, to manage the Rialto, Metropolitan and Grauman theatres for Paramount. Our company now is in a deal to buy the Newman and Royal theatres in Kansas City and I believe the final papers will be signed in Los Angeles during the Paramount sales convention."

Mr. Kent explained the transaction did not come under his department and that he did not know the details involved. Mr. Feld will accompany Mr. Newman to the coast, it was said. It also is reported that Mr. Newman's contract will call for $1,000 weekly. The Newman theatre is Kansas City's finest, costing nearly $2,000,000, while the Royal, a smaller and less expensive theatre, is conceded to be the best "money-maker" in the city.

Names Convention Delegates

New Jersey Exhibitors Will Be Well Represented at Milwaukee Sessions

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey at their monthly meeting held Thursday, April 23, at the Plaza Hotel, Jersey City, designated delegates to the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to be held in Milwaukee, May 12, 13 and 14.

The delegates are Joseph M. Seider, President of the M. P. T. O., N. J., who will be the chairman of the delegation; Peter Adams, Vice-President, Sidney Samuelson, R. F. Woodhull, Louis Rosenthal and Leon Rosenblatt, directors of the M. P. T. O., N. J.; Charles Hildinger, Morris Kutinsky, David Kaiserstein, Harry Wilkins, William C. Hunt and Lew Peizor. The chairman was authorized to fill vacancies.

A large delegation of Hudson County Theatre Owners attended the meeting and were impressed with the manner in which their State organization is functioning. Joseph Bernstein and David Kaiserstein addressed the exhibitors and expressed their gratification at the progress made by the State body.

The theatre owners were the guests of Leon Rosenblatt at luncheon prior to the meeting, when State Senator Thomas Mathis, of Ocean County, joined the exhibitors. Others present were Henry P. Nelson, State Secretary, William Keegan, State Treasurer, I. M. Hirshblond, State Director, Benjamin Schindler, State Director, Leo Juskowitz, State Director and Messrs. Brennan, of the Orpheum Theatre, Jersey City; Freund, Orient, Jersey City; Mertens, Fulton, Jersey City; Binkow, Temple, Union Hill; Bacili, Rivoli Theatre, West New York and Finkelstein, Academy, Jersey City.

President Seider, who is recuperating following an operation for bronchial trouble, spoke briefly touching on the activities of the organization since the last meeting.

The State President announced that he has retained Joseph Varbalow, Prosecutor of Camden County, as counsel to represent members in all cases effecting them, before the Philadelphia Arbitration Board. The President also said he has engaged Norman Samuelson, a lawyer, brother of Sidney Samuelson, to represent members in their cases arbitrated in the City of New York.

R. F. Woodhull reported on National activities. The State Convention will be held in Asbury Park late in June or early in July when many matters of interest to every theatre owner in the State will be discussed.

Three Theatre Robberies in New York City

During the past week three picture theatres in New York City have been broken into and robbed. The first was the Majestic at St. Nicholas Ave. and 184th St., where the burglars smashed their way into the theatre by forcing an alley door. Here, they took $240 in cash and a check for $350.

Sunday night, the Belmont, located at Belmont and Tremont Aves., Bronx, was entered and robbed of $2,500. This theatre is one of the Joelson & Grossman circuit. It is also reported that the Ogden theatre at 1431 Odgen Ave. was visited by a burglar who blew the safe and made away with $5,000.

National Theatres Declare Quarterly Dividend

The National Theatres Syndicate of California has voted to declare the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent on approximately $500,000 outstanding preferred stock as of record. The corporation owns the American, Liberty and Jose theatres in San Jose, and fourteen other houses in Northern California.

Two Illinois Towns Vote for Sunday Pictures

Pana, Ill., by a vote majority of sixty-one and Mount Pulaski, Ill., by a margin of nine votes sanctioned the opening of motion picture theatres on Sundays. On the same day Virginia and Jacksonville, Ill., both decided to remain in the Blue Law class by voting down Sunday shows.

New Corporations File at Albany

The past week brought the incorporation of the following companies in the motion picture business of this state, the amount of capitalization and the names of the directors appearing in each instance: 48th St. Studio Corp., $10,000, Samuel Cahen, Dorothy Starr, Nathan Raff, New York city; Benak Films, Inc., capitalization not stated, Dorothea Fleming, Whitman Bennett, Pearl Cohen, New York.

First Strongheart Unit, Inc., capitalization not stated, H. C. Hand, S. C. Wood, R. J. Gorman, New York city; Shore Road Theatres Corporation, $200,000, J. B. Berger, Frederick and Anita Huebner, Brooklyn; International Reopticon Corporation, capitalization not stated, Van Dyke Hill, G. H. Fox, Lyman Sessen, New York city; Pen and Pencil Films, Inc., $5,000, B. Ginzburg, B. Wintheil, H. Berlin, New York city; The Manners Family Films, Inc., Buffalo, capitalization not stated, C. Davidson, R. W. Snow, F. S. Davidson, Buffalo.

K. C. Petitions Against Carnival Companies

A petition sponsored by the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri will be presented to Mayor Albert I. Beach of Kansas City urging action against carnival companies in the city unless they are properly approved by the alderman of the ward in which they operate and a number of reputable businessmen.

The petition is directed against a carnival company now in operation and asks for a revocation of its license.

Double Feature Programs Opposed in Colorado

The M. P. T. O. of Colorado have taken a definite stand against the policy of running double feature programs. H. E. Huffman, president of the organization, states that such a policy will do more than any other one thing toward the disintegration of the exhibitors business in Denver.

Pathe Officers Re-Elected at Annual Meeting

THE annual stockholders' meeting of Pathe Exchange, Inc., was held at the Pathe Home-Office, New York City, on Tuesday, April 28th. The following directors were elected: Charles Pathe, Edmund C. Lynch, Paul Fuller, Jr., Wm. Fellowes Morgan, Jansen Noyes, Elmer Pearson, Lewis Innerarity, Bernhard Benson, G. L. Chanier.

Immediately after the stockholders' meeting the Board of Directors' meeting was held and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Chairman of the Board, E. C. Lynch
President ..... Paul Fuller, Jr.
Vice President..... Elmer Pearson
Vice President..... Bernhard Benson
Secretary ..... Lewis Innerarity
Treasurer ..... John Humm
Assistant Treasurer.... W. C. Smith

Mr. Pearson was also reappointed General Manager of the Company. He reported the Company's affairs in a prosperous condition and the outlook good.

Kansas-Missouri Will Be Represented

R. R. Biechele to Head Delegation—Affiliation With M. P. T. O. A. Will Depend on Events at Convention

MORE action than was anticipated developed at the first annual convention of the M.P.T.O. of Kansas and Missouri at the hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, April 27-28. The organization, which is a member of Allied, voted unanimously in adopting a resolution to send three representatives to the M. P. T. O. A. convention in Milwaukee. Another resolution adopted virtually makes the M.P.T.O. of Kansas and Missouri a closed organization.

There was no vote on proposed affiliation with the national body, everything depending almost entirely upon what transpires at the Milwaukee convention.

A strong sentiment favoring affiliation with the national body prevailed at the convention, the belief that the sooner all exhibitor organizations are united the better for the industry, being strongly voiced on the floor of the convention.

R. R. Biechele, who for the last two years has led the Kansas organization, was re-elected president of the merged body by acclamation. Mr. Biechele, with two men whom he will name, will attend the Milwaukee convention.

A resolution was adopted which provides that an exhibitor be asked only once to join the association.

Other officers elected were:

Jay Means, Murray theatre, Kansas City, first vice-president; Harry McClure, Strand, Emporia, second vice-president; Charles Bull, Novelty, Wichita, Kansas, third vice-president; R. Finklestein, Gillham, Kansas City, fourth vice-president; R. G. Ligget, Gauntier, Kansas City, Kansas, recording secretary; Fred Meyn, Pershing, Kansas City, Kansas, treasurer.

Board of Directors: Barney Dubinsky, St. Joseph, Mo.; Jack Truitt, Sedalia Theatre, Sedalia, Mo.; Charles Sears, Sears Circuit, Nevada, Mo.; S. E. Wilhoit, Jefferson, Springfield, Mo.; W. P. Cuff, Strand, Chillicothe, Mo.; Ben Levy, Hippodrome, Joplin, Mo.; C. R. Wilson, Liberty Theatre, Liberty, Mo.; A. F. Baker, Electric, Kansas City, Kansas; L. M. Miller, Miller and Wichita, Wichita, Kansas; G. L. Hooper, Orpheum, Topeka, Kansas; R. G. Liggett, Gauntier, Kansas City, Kansas; Walter Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kansas; E. E. Frazier, Empress, Pittsburg, Kansas; M. B. Shanberg, Midland Circuit, Hutchinson, Kansas.

It was under the administration of R. G. Liggett, of Kansas City, Kansas, that the old M.P.T.O. of Kansas broke away from the national organization. It was Mr. Liggett who battled the hardest in favoring the sending of representatives to the national meeting, the complete minutes of which will be brought to Kansas City for consideration by the M.P.T.O. K-M directors in determining a possible affiliation.

It was decided to allow the present basis for membership dues 1½ cents per capita for towns less than 50,000 and 1 cent for towns larger than that to remain intact.

At the banquet Tuesday night the speaking was limited, Mrs. Eleanore C. Walton, chairman of the Better Films Committee of the Women's Club of Kansas City; Mrs. Henry N. Ess, one of Kansas City's leading civic workers, and E. C. Rhoden, president of the Film Board of Trade and manager of Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., being the principal speakers.

West Penn. Exhibitors Hold Convention

THE fifth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania was held at the George Washington Hotel at Washington, Pa., April 21, 22 and 23 with approximately 225 members of the organization in attendance.

Various matters of importance to the exhibitors were discussed, the main topic being the block booking system. Among the principal speakers were Martin J. O'Toole, president of the M. P. T. O. A., Pete Woodhull, of New Jersey, chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. board of directors, and Charles Pettijohn of the Will Hays organization.

An unusual honor was extended to Henry W. Gauding of Pittsburgh, when he was elected permanent chairman of all conventions for a term of 99 years.

The other officers reelected were D. A. Harris, of Pittsburgh, President; M. A. Rosenbloom, of Charleroi, vice-president; N. B. Nadler, of Ambridge, treasurer; Fred J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh, secretary, and M. A. Rosenberg, of Pittsburgh, William R. Wheat, Jr., of Sewickley, and Hyman Goldberg of Pittsburgh, directors.

Pittsburgh was selected as the place for the 1926 convention, which will be held in April.

Famous Players Adds More Theatres

Acquires Three Houses Upstate and Negotiates With Gordon—Butterfield and Fitzpatrick & McElroy Active

FAMOUS Players-Lasky figured prominently in important developments in the theatre field this week. It became known that the company was negotiating with Nathan H. Gordon to take over the Gordon chain in Massachusetts and other New England states.

Famous Players has acquired three more upstate houses. New England Theatres, Inc., a Paramount subsidiary, has assumed operation of the Bard Avon and Stratford theatres in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. The new Palace theatre in Lockport, N. Y., has been leased to Famous Players for a term of years, at a reported yearly rental of $20,000. The house has a seating capacity of 1,800. It is reported Famous is negotiating for other theatres in New York State.

The Butterfield Circuit has acquired the Gladmer and Capitol theatres in Lansing, Mich., through purchase of leases from Claude Cady, prominent exhibitor, who retires from the exhibition field as a result of the deal. The Butterfield group, which already controls the Strand and Colonial theatres in Lansing, took possession of the Cady houses on April 25.

The Lansing deal is the forerunner of further activities by the Butterfield interests, who will build theatres at Owosso, and probably in Battle Creek and Bay City.

Another big Michigan circuit which promises to be very active is the Fitzpatrick and McElroy group. It has been stated by them that their holdings will be increased probably 100 per cent by the end of the year.

Announcement was made by the Loew offices that Marcus Loew would build a 3,000-seat house at Coney Island, to open about June 1. The theatre will be equipped to handle any kind of theatrical performance. It will start its career with an exclusive picture policy.

It was reported in Albany that W. W. Farley, head of Farash theatres, of Schenectady, N. Y., would associate himself with Jacob Tarsches, former part owner of the Leland in Albany, to erect a new theatre in that city with a seating capacity of 3,000.

A new theatre, costing $140,000 will be built this summer in Mechanicville, N. Y., by William Benton, of Ballston Spa, who also has theatres in Saratoga Springs and Plattsburg.

In the South Arthur Lucas, head of General Enterprises, Inc., which is rapidly increasing its holdings, has acquired on a thirty-five-year lease the Ideal theatre in Charlotte, N. C., and 100 feet of property in the rear of the building. The lease becomes effective by midnight of June 30th. The Ideal is now conducted by Otto Haas, and is the oldest house in point of service in Charlotte. Mr. Haas has one other theatre in Charlotte, the Ottoway.

Mr. Lucas has as yet formulated no plans for management of his newly acquired theatre, nor any plans for putting into use the 100 feet acquired with the house.

One of the biggest deals in the history of Jacksonville, Fla., real estate, was closed recently, when E. J. Sparks, capitalist and prominent theatre owner, president of the E. J. Sparks Enterprises, and developer of real estate in several Florida cities, tied up for a period of 198 years, by means of a 99-year lease and renewal option, the one hundred and five-foot square southeast corner of Ocean and East Forsyth streets. This site secured by Mr. Sparks is directly opposite B. F. Keith's Palace theatre, and diagonally across from the city hall—a location, which, in view of the rapid development of real estate in this section of town is probably the most significant ever negotiated by Mr. Sparks. Plans for the improvement of the property are being made, but it is expected that any further announcement will not be made until Mr. Sparks returns from the European tour, on which he is about to embark.

Canadian Copyright Amendments Threaten New Tax on Exhibitors

IMPORTANT amendments to the Canadian Copyright Act of 1921, introduced before the House of Commons at Ottawa by E. R. E. Chevrier, Federal member of Ottawa East, will affect all moving picture theatres in the Dominion in the matter of playing copyrighted music, according to an announcement in the Canadian Capital on April 24.

By the proposed changes to the act, introduced as a private member's bill in the Canadian Parliament, the definition of the word "performance" is extended to include all public presentations of copyrighted material and, for the first time, all such music or literature is also included for radio broadcasting so that the protected selections cannot be used on the radio, except by amateur stations not conducted for profit.

Thus the exhibitors of Canada are faced by the prospect of a new form of taxation in the recommended payment of royalty fees for all copyrighted music used by theatre orchestras at any performances in any way. The bill provides that composers will be permitted to collect a royalty every time their music is used if they so desire and one of the provisions is that any infraction of the act or its new provisions, such as the presentation of copyrighted music without proper arrangement with the composer, would result in a fine of $50 for each offense and it is further provided that half of the $50 fine is to go the complainant or informant, if any.

It is declared that if the Chevrier amendments go through as outlined in the bill, moving picture theatres may either limit their music to the selections not copyrighted or else pay the royalties. It is pointed out, however, that over 95 per cent of the present-day popular music enjoys the protection of Canadian copyright. The amendments to the act give composers and authors practically unlimited power to impose what royalties they deem fit.

The exact affect of the proposed changes on Canadian moving picture houses has not yet been determined it is true, but the statement has been made that the word "performance" will include moving picture shows.

Governor Kills Penn. Measure

Puts Veto on Anti-Daylight Saving Bill After Passage by Legislature

THE Anti-Daylight saving bill, the only one of importance to the motion picture exhibitors adopted by the Pennsylvania Legislature, has been vetoed by Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, who in his veto message writes:

"This bill has no relation to daylight saving, in spite of the general opinion to the contrary. Its intent and purpose is that clocks and time pieces which are under control of the government or municipalities and those which are placed upon any public street or highway, shall all show Eastern Standard time which clocks in substantially all cases already show only such time.

"With this purpose I'm heartily in sympathy. The bill, however, does not stop there. I'm informed by the Attorney-General that, whether intentionally or not, it goes further and provides that clocks and time pieces displayed in privately owned buildings to which the public resorts, like hotels, stores, theatres and the like, may not show such time as the proprietors deem expedient; for instance, that time pieces which show London and Paris time, or the time of Chicago, Denver or San Francisco would be unlawful.

"It seems to be wrong that privately owned time pieces maintained for private purpose should thus be controlled by a criminal statute. For these reasons the bill is not approved."

Under the provisions of the bill it would have been unlawful for any person, co-partnership, association, corporation or organization to "wilfully display" in or on any public building, street, avenue or public highway any time measuring instrument or device calculated to furnish time to the general public or "running so as to indicate intentionally" any time other than standard time.

If the bill had been signed and placed on the statute books it would have given strength to the exisiting anti-daylight saving bill of 1923 which made it unlawful for any municipality officially to sanction any except Standard time.

Consequently with the veto of the 1925 measure, which was sponsored by Miss Helen Grimes, member of the House from Allegheny county, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh and other large cities practically went on daylight saving schedules two days after the Governor killed the bill, or on Monday, April 23.

Western Canadian Theatres Not Disposed of.

The Western Canadian theatres of the former Trans-Canada Theatres, Ltd., Montreal, were not included in the physical assets which have been sold by the liquidator of that company to Famous Players Canadian Corp., Ltd., Toronto, according to an announcement made by James W. Davidson of Calgary, Alberta, former director of the defunct Trans-Canada company. It is pointed out by him that the Western houses were on a lease basis with Trans-Canada and these leases reverted to the theatre owners when Trans-Canada failed.

At the same time it is announced that the Western Canada Theatre Association has been reorganized for these theatres with C. P. Walker of the Walker theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, as its head. Manager Maynard Joiner of the Grand theatre at Calgary, Alta., is another officer. The Calgary Grand is owned by Sir James Lougheed, a member of the Canadian Senate at Ottawa, Ontario. Sir James and James Davidson were directors of the defunct Trans-Canada Theatres, Ltd.

"I am strongly opposed to political censorship," Mrs. Walton said. "I am convinced that pictures are getting better all the time and that the job of censoring belongs to the public."

"The growth and future of outlook for the motion picture is unlimited," declared Mrs. Ess. "Today we have one of the greatest educational mediums in the screen."

Resolutions pertaining to the following subjects were adopted:

That bulletins would be issued notifying all exhibitor members of exchanges renting films to non-theatrical institutions. That in the future members would be given thirty days notice only to meet payment of dues and that non-members would be asked only once to join; to aid in the support of American forest week; an appreciation to Dr. Burris A. Jenkins, of the Linwood Christian Church for his special service for film men recently: condolence to the family of the late James W. Watson, former first vice-president; condolence to the family of the late Mrs. James Liggett; condolence to the family of the late James Meyn and the late H. B. Varner, who was president of the North Carolina exhibitors body.

The following committees were named:

Resollutions—N. B. Shanberg, Hutchinson, Kansas, chairman; Jay Means, Kansas City, Mo.; H. A. McClure, Emporia, Kansas; M. G. Kirkman, Hays, Kansas; Mrs. Helen Withers, St. Joseph, Mo.; Mrs. C. E. Liggett, Madison, Kansas; A. E. Jarboe, Cameron, Mo.

Ways and Means: A. F. Baker, Kansas City, Kansas, chairman; L. M. Miller, Wichita, Kansas; S. E. Wilhoit, Springfield, Mo.; Barney Dubinsky, St. Joseph, Mo.; G. L. Hooper, Topeka, Kansas.

Film Golf Tournament on June 9

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week by Danny that the Semi-Annual Film Golf Tournament, conducted under the auspices of The Film Daily and for which MOTION PICTURE NEWS regularly contributes a trophy, will be held at Briar Cliff Lodge, Briar Cliff Manor, Westchester County, on Tuesday, June 9.

The Golf Tournament is, of course, one of the industry's red-letter events and always brings out a big attendance.

National Plans Formulating for Greater Movie Season

All Branches of Industry Promise Full Cooperation

PLANS are being rapidly formulated for the National Greater Movie Season which will be inaugurated by the Will Hays organization in August. Indications are that the complete cooperation of producers, distributors and exhibitors will be given the project and that the event will rival the opening of a baseball or football season.

Originally conceived by Herman Wobber, Paramount district manager in San Francisco, that city has profited handsomely by the annual Greater Movie Season and it is thought that all cities will benefit equally by combining in the event under the direction of the Hays organization.

Michigan is the first state to come forward as a solid unit in support of the project. Although the celebration does not begin until August, picture theatre owners in Michigan have not only taken enthusiastic hold of the idea but already are working to put it across, according to H. M. Richey, general manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, Inc., who has arrived in New York to consult with the Hays organization and to complete arrangements that will assure Michigan a smooth forward drive now that its campaign has started.

"Actually Michigan can claim some credit for the inauguration of the Greater Movie Season," Mr. Richey stated in pledging the co-operation of his association. "We prepared plans for such an event last year, but deferred the project in the hope that a national movement would be set afoot and thus lighten the burden the affair automatically would impose on any exhibitor organization undertaking it single-handed. The foundation we laid then affords us an immense advantage in the present campaign."

Apart from the national effort that will back the season, interesting plans have been developed for Michigan. Proclamations from the governor and mayors of the various cities will give the season official endorsement. More than thirty organizations, including Rotary and Kiwanis clubs, Red Cross, Women's Federation, Y. M. C. A. and American Legion, have already been enlisted to the movement.

One of the neatest pieces of exploitation yet planned to focus attention on the screen, may result from a tie-up with the Detroit police department. All traffic officers in that city, according to the plan, will wear white gloves and on the upraised hand of authority motorists and pedestrians will read the message, "Stop! Have you been to the movies?" Permission also will be sought to extend the Greater Movie idea with slogans painted at crossings. At least two state-wide newspaper contests are planned, one to determine the most beautiful girl in Michigan, who will receive a trip to Hollywood; the other of more general appeal, having an automobile as its capital prize.

The "Greater Movie Season" celebration which has become the most important annual event in the motion picture industry in San Francisco, Los Angeles, and many other cities in the United States, as well as Sidney, Australia, was conceived by Herman Wobber. His idea is the logical outcome of Greater Movie Week which was then in effect every year in many parts of the country.

"Movie Week celebrations showed the idea had national possibilities, but Movie Week never became popular because of the name which limited the very purpose of the celebration. Movie Week was supposed to encourage interest in motion pictures on the part of people who seldom or never, by choice, see a motion picture and to re-stimulate the interest of regular fans. The idea was sound, but the public reaction to Movie Week was that local theatres were merely celebrating seven days of good pictures. Movie Week gave no promise of anything more significant.

"Therefore we arrived at the idea of changing the name Greater Movie Week to Greater Movie Season, to begin August 1st," said Mr. Wobber. "We purposely did not confine the season to any specific length of time because of several important considerations. Mainly, we did not want to give the public the impression that this was merely a seven-day celebration of exceptional pictures; but rather a gala observance of the Springtime of the motion picture industry, celebrating the new and better pictures, and the new and better theatre methods.

"The right to have an annual movie season indicating the arrival of bigger and better pictures is as well founded as the opening of the baseball season, the opera season, the seasonal style presentations or the commercialized merchandising seasons of Christmas and Easter. The natural inclination of dramatic and screen editors and critics to give liberally of their space at the opening of the season has long been the custom.

"Every phase of our first celebration in San Francisco was to bring home to the public that motion picture history is being made every day, and that yesterday in the quickly changing order of things becomes ancient today. This thought was aimed to attract the class of people who seldom attend motion picture theatres because they have been disappointed by one or two poor pictures.

"Another benefit of Greater Movie Season is that it opens a new channel for exhibitors to exploit their theatres. It is natural for some exhibitors to get into a rut, applying the same effort and the same appeal week after week, sometimes resulting in decreased attendance. Therefore means must be found to periodically give exhibitors the opportunity of doing something entirely different from their regular week to week method.

"The campaign as originally launched in San Francisco covered three of the leading down town theatres. In their first campaign they made use of the boards; they used very liberal newspaper space; and gave their screens weeks in advance; ribboned their employees; published thirty thousand expensive booklets, announcing not only the purpose of the season' but their product for the ten or twelve weeks to follow. In all the campaign must have cost the three houses well in excess of $5,000.

"The first week not only compensated them for their entire cost of the campaign but gave them several thousand dollars additional profit. The second week showed an increase in attendance of over fifteen percent, and the succeeding weeks showed continual gain. To accomplish this it was necessary to involve almost the entire organization of the three theatres. Ordinarily the putting over of a motion picture theatre is left in the hands of the manager and the advertising manager, but in this case the entire organization was called together at a meeting, and the purpose of the undertaking was explained. The co-operation of every employee was immediately felt. A greater courtesy was apparent throughout the house, a greater interest in the welfare of the organization was manifested and a result entirely satisfactory and sufficiently encouraging to warrant its undertaking a second year was derived.

"On the day The Greater Movie Season opened in San Francisco a street parade was held consisting of a brass band and decorated automobiles furnished by the various exchanges.

"The second year was very similar in efforts and results as the first. The third year showed a broadening of the plan, by which all the first run down town theatres co-operated. A street parade was held in which Norma Talmadge appeared. In a public reception on the steps of City Hall, the mayor welcomed Miss Talmadge and endorsed The Greater Movie Season.

"Our Greater Movie Season in San Francisco this year will be the greatest we have ever had. Los Angeles has already received the support of the Chamber of Commerce and will have a pageant this year which I am told will be as beautiful as the annual Flower Show. In fact the Greater Movie Season in Los Angeles is expected to be an annual civic affair in which all the business firms will be asked to participate.

"The biggest benefits of the Greater Movie Season will not be felt until the event is observed by every town in the country with a motion picture theatre."

First National Election Brings Changes in Governing Body at Annual Meeting

A NUMBER of changes were made in the governing body of First National Pictures when the annual meeting of the stockholders was held at West Baden, Indiana, April 22, 23 and 24. Richard A. Rowland was named to succeed H. O. Schwalbe as chairman of the executive committee and also was a member of the board of directors.

Richard F. Hoyt of the firm of Hayden, Stone and Company, bankers and brokers, was also added to the directorate, and S. Spring, in addition to succeeding Schwalbe as secretary and treasurer was also elected to the new office of assistant general manager.

The results of the meeting were as follows:—

T.O.C.C. Holds Annual Dinner

Sydney Cohen, Senator Walker, Will Hays, Nathan Burkan and President O'Reilly Among the Speakers

"HARMONY" was the keynote of the annual installation dinner of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, held at the Hotel Plaza, New York City, April 28, and attended by four hundred members and guests.

At the speakers' table sat President Charles L. O'Reilly, Will H. Hays, Sydney S. Cohen, Senator James J. Walker, Judge Moses H. Grossman, acting President of the Arbitration Society of America; Commissioner of Licenses Quigley of the City of New York; Justice Lewis Gibbs, of the Supreme Court; Nathan Burkan, counsel for the T. O. C. C., and Joseph Jefferson O'Neill, of the Hays organization. Harry Reichenbach acted as toastmaster.

Mr. Hays paid a marked tribute to Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York and to Senator Walker, declaring that the latter was second to none in potential service to his Commonwealth. He called Gov. Smith "the best Governor New York State ever had." Mr. Hays also complimented Mr. O'Reilly's work highly.

Senator Walker got an ovation when he rose to speak. "It looks like old times," he said, "with O'Reilly, Cohen and myself on the same rostrum and Sam Merman present. I would like to see peace and harmony in the family, and politics driven once and for all out of the industry.

"What you have to do, do in a big way. Wait till something's really wrong, then make a fight. Make the other fellow be fair to you, and be on the square yourself. Maybe there will be another thoroughgoing M. P.T.O.A., but you must work for the good of the whole industry. I can't look back at Cleveland without wishing Milwaukee good luck."

Sydney Cohen got a big hand when he was introduced and told of the prospects for a record-breaking convention at Milwaukee. Mr. Burkan, who formally installed the new officers, attracted marked attention by saying: "If the combined producers and distributors would have supreme confidence in Will Hays, Milwaukee would not be necessary."

A stir was created when John Manheimer from the balcony, asked for permission to speak, and addressing his remarks to Senator Walker, urged the Senator to lay aside all personal business and "come with us to Milwaukee." The Senator declined to commit himself.

President O'Reilly, summing up the evening, said "a semblance of harmony has been brought about here tonight by the presence of Senator Walker, Mr. Cohen, Mr. Berman and Mr. Hays." A handsome ring, the gift of the members, was presented to Mr. O'Reilly

Among the stars present were Marion Davies, Fanny Ward, Richard Barthelmess, Jack Dempsey, Estelle Taylor, and Mae Busch.

Express Film Shipments Meet Approval

The express idea of film shipment continues to meet with varying success with the Iowa exhibitors. The Educational exchange reports that the small town exhibitor sees in the parcel post plan a saving of pennies that outweighs the idea of service with him while the postoffice is giving a service which is entirely satisfactory to his needs.

Premier reports that the express idea meets with the greater success and that sixty per cent of their film is sent by express. The Metro-Goldwyn exchange is receiving repeated requests for the express shipments. This exchange finds the express system offers a saving and that the exhibitors appreciate the greater service of the express plan.

Fire Damages Eighth Ave. New York House

Fire last Saturday in the Chelsea Vaudeville and Motion Picture Theatre at 308 Eighth Avenue, New York City destroyed the balcony and caused much water damage throughout the orchestra. Defective insulation on an electric light wire is believed to have caused the blaze. The house is operated by the Triad Amusement and will probably be closed for several weeks while repairs are being made.

Midwest Plans Annual Golf Tourney

The announcement of the second tournament of the Midwest Film Golf Association at Chicago is being received with enthusiasm by the large number of exchange men, exhibitors and others connected with the industry, who enjoyed the first tournament.

The date for the tournament has been fixed for June 16th and the place will again be the Olympia Fields Country Club, which has four of the finest golf courses in the central west The dinner this year, will also be at this club which has recently completed its magnificent club house.

The committee, which comprises R. C. Seery, chairman; J. J. Jones, Asher Levy, L. H. Mason and F. M. Brockell, announce that at this tournament there will be a prize for every foursome, two prizes or more for every class, as well as numerous special prizes and that trophies awarded will be up to the high standard set last year.

Eighteen holes will be played in the morning and eighteen in the afternoon, the evening get-together dinner and jollification to start immediately on completion of the day's events.

Mrs. Colbert is Honored at Albany Reception

With the wife of the Governor in the receiving line, Mrs. Elizabeth V. Colbert, of Albany, who was recently appointed by Governor Alfred E. Smith to a place on the New York State Motion Picture Commission, was the guest of honor one night last week at a reception given at the Hotel Ten Eyck in Albany, by the Democratic organiation of that city and county. During the evening Mrs. Colbert was presented with a handsome traveling clock.

Col. Henry B. Varner is Dead

COL. HENRY BRANSON VARNER, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North Carolina, and one of the prominent figures in exhibitor organization circles, died at his home in Lexington, N. C., on April 27. He was fifty-five years old.

Col. Varner was one of the outstanding theatre owners in the South. He owned and operated six theatres in North Carolina: the Lexington, and Youngs at Lexington; the Concord at Concord; Palace, Thomasville; Baden at Baden; and the Strand, Salisbury.

For many years he was one of the leaders in the old Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, and subsequently in the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, being a member of the Board of Directors of the latter organization. In recent months, Col. Varner was prominent in the councils of the Allied States Organization.

In addition to his theatre interests, Col. Varner had also been engaged in the newspaper business. He was prominent in civic and community work, and had much to do with promoting good roads in his state.

A resolution of tribute was passed by the M. P. T. O. of Kansas-Missouri, one of the Allied group, at its convention this week in Kansas City.

Warners Keep Vitagraph Trademark

Will Continue Production Plans Mapped, as Well as Own Schedule of Forty Pictures

THE purchase of the Vitagraph Co. of America by Warner Bros., which startled the motion picture world last week, does not mean that the old company is to pass out of existence, according to Harry M. Warner.

Warner stated that the Vitagraph trade mark would be continued with a bigger and better program in addition to the forty pictures already announced by Warner Bros.

Warner Bros. will finish the pictures now in production on the Vitagraph schedule and carry out all plans made by that company backed with a big advertising and exploitation campaign, the same as is being prepared for the Warner program.

All Vitagraph business will be in charge of the departmental heads of Warner Bros. and conducted from the home office of the Warners, 1600 Broadway. The advertising and publicity departments have already moved in from Flatbush and are functioning under the Warner Bros. advertising department.

Harry M. Warner is now in Los Angeles to check up on the Vitagraph production schedule. Before leaving New York he said:

"The purchase of Vitagraph by Warner Bros. means that Warners become a tremendous factor in distribution as well as production. In addition to our own forty pictures, we will go ahead with production under the Vitagraph trade mark and as far as possible carry out the plans under way by that company when the purchase was made.

"Just exactly how many pictures Warners will have under the programs of the two companies it is impossible to say at this time. But it surely means that the exhibitors will have a stronger hold on independence because they will be assured of a steady supply of high class product distributed through a major, old line exchange system.

"Through Warner Bros. and Vitagraph sufficient high class product for the coming year and all future years is a certainty. To Vitagraph, the oldest and most esteemed distributing organization, there has been opened up the resources of a company that has proven, beyond all doubt, its ability to produce the kind of entertainment that brings money to the box office.

"The purchase of Vitagraph by Warner Bros. means that the resources of two mainstays of the independent exhibitors have united for the creation of a gigantic array of product distributed through an organization that for twenty-eight years has rendered service to the independent exhibitor.

"Warner Bros.' product for the 1925-26 season and all future Warner pictures will be distributed through the newly acquired Vitagraph exchanges. Concerning actual production, I will have more to say upon my return from Los Angeles in about three weeks."

While Warner Bros. acquire no contract stars by the purchase, it does obtain a number of valuable pictures already in release. Also two finished but not released—"Wildfire" with Aileen Pringle and "The Unknown Lover," starring Elsie Ferguson. There is also in production at present "Steel of the Royal Mounted," featuring Bert Lytell, and "The Happy Warrior," a J. Stuart Blackton production.

Vitagrapn has announced 30 pictures on its production schedule and it is for the purpose of straightening out this program so that it dovetails with the Warner schedule that Harry M. Warner is now in Los Angeles.

Although Warner Bros. through the Vitagraph purchase, acquires an eastern studio in Brooklyn, it is not likely that they will produce in the east for the present.

Vitagraph Exchange Men to Be Retained

THE personnel in the Vitagraph exchanges will not be disturbed in the slightest by the purchase of that company by Warner Brothers, according to a statement made by Sam Warner at a luncheon of the organizations held at the Astor Hotel in New York last Monday.

In welcoming the Vitagraph men to the Warner organization Warner spoke of the fine feeling in the industry for Vitagraph and stated emphatically that in taking over the Vitagraph exchanges, the personnel will not be disturbed, thus assuring the branch managers and salesmen, as well as the exhibitors, a continuance of the personal friendship and contact that has existed so long between the sales force and the exhibitors of the country.

United Artists Announce Productions

Hiram Abrams in Statement Fixes Release Dates for First Six for Coming Season

THE biggest announcement that has come from the United States Artists Corporation during the six years of this organization, was made this week, when Hiram Abrams, President of the Corporation, issued a statement regarding the first six productions, together with their release dates, they will issue to the exhibitors of this country during the coming season.

The pictures announced and their release dates are as follows:

Charlie Chaplin in "The Gold Rush," to be released on August 16th.

Douglas Fairbanks in "Don Q, Son of Zorro," to be released on August 30th.

Mary Pickford in "Little Annie Rooney," to be released on September 13th.

Rudolph Valentino in "The Bronze Collar," to be released on September 27th.

David W. Griffith's production, "Sally of the Sawdust," to be released October 11th.

William S. Hart in a spectacular western story, the title to be announced later, to be released on October 25th.

The statement issued by Hiram Abrams, President of the Corporation, was in part as follows:

"Not yesterday, but tomorrow is what the exhibitors of this country are primarily interested in, for all past performances, with their records, are now but history. There is but one thing in the mind of every theatre owner and every theatre manager, 'What will the morrow bring?'

"From the United Artists Corporation the tomorrow in the history of the motion picture industry will bring no idle promises, no camouflaged assurances, no sugar-coated announcements of what this Corporation hopes to do.

"We know what we will do. We will present the productions of Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, David W. Griffith, Rudolph Valentino, William S. Hart and others, and we will adhere absolutely to the original purpose of the corporation of concentrating upon the superlative type of motion picture produced by its members. The Corporation plans a strictly limited output, but at the same time a definite volume of material. The minimum of pictures for the coming season will be twelve, while on the other hand the maximum will be fifteen.

"This year finds United Artists in its sixth season as a world-wide distributor of important motion picture product—enviably situated, stronger than ever, and far more firmly committed to its original plan of conduct.

"The recent augmentation of its make-up with the addition of other stars, whose productions it will distribute, and the election of Joseph M. Schenck, as Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Corporation, are undoubtedly the greatest steps forward that has been made in the industry for many years. It is well known that with Mr. Schenck's alliance with this Corporation, it is more firmly grounded as the leading independent motion picture distributing organization in the world.

"We are announcing but six pictures at this time and each separate picture will be offered and sold on its own merit. There is not even any pooling of proceeds from the sales of different pictures in the United Artists Corporation. All of this has been pretty well understood and appreciated in the motion picture trade, for it has been the policy of the United Artists Corporation from its very inception, and it has never been changed and it never will be changed."

Loew's Inc. Statement Shows Big Profit for Past Six Months

A SIX months' consolidated financial statement issued by Loew's, Inc., proves that corporation is enjoying the most profitable business in its history. The statement of the parent organization together with all subsidiaries, 100 per cent owned, shows more net profit in the six months period covered by the statement than was shown in the report for the entire previous fiscal year. Net profits for the six months were shown as $3,234,278, as against $3,061,910 for the previous fiscal year.

The net profits for the six months just ended were $2,945,143, to which is added $289,135, the undistributed share of profits credited to Loew's, Inc., It was stated by David Bernstein, treasurer of the company, that since March 15, the date of the statement, nearly $1,500,000 in bank loans had been paid off.

The consolidated balance sheet as of March 15 shows:

Skouras Stock On Exchange

25,000 Shares on Market to Help With Financing of the St. Louis Ambassador

THE Board of Governors of the St. Louis Stock Exchange has authorized the listing of 25,000 shares of Class A stock of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., and trading in the stock began at the morning session on Tuesday, April 21. The shares have no par value but the first sales were at $36 and $37 a share. They have a book value of $27.25.

This step is part of the plan of Skouras Brothers and their associates to finance their $5,500,000 Ambassador theatre and office building at Seventh and Locust streets, construction of which will get under way about May 1.

Recently Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., a Delaware corporation was authorized to increase its capitalization from 10,000 shares of no par value stock to 80,000 shares. Of this stock 25,000 shares will be Class A and 55,000 shares of Class B. Under the reorganization plan the 10,000 shares of old stock will be replaced by the new B stock on the basis of five shares of new for one of old. Five thousand shares of Class B stock is held in the treasury.

Prior to the listing of the stock on the St. Louis exchange the brokerage firms of A. G. Edwards & Sons and Lorenzo E. Anderson & Company took subscriptions for the stock on the basis of $36 per share. The new owners of Class A stock may trade their holdings for Class B certificates any time within five years. Class A is preferred stock and will receive a dividend of $3 per share before any dividends are declared on Class B stock.

Court Verdict For Exhibitor

Buffalo Jurist Compels City to Grant Permit for Motion Picture House

QUOTING from Mayor Frank X. Schwab's recent proclamation that the theatre is a recognized national institution and stating that the refusal of the city council to grant Simon Wertheimer an unqualified permit to build a motion picture theatre in Hertel Avenue, Buffalo, "Might well have been held arbitrary, tyrannical, capricious and unreasonable," Justice Hinkley in a decision has issued Mr. Wertheimer a peremptory writ of mandamus compelling the city to grant him a permit.

In 1923 Mr. Weitheimer commenced the erection of the building at 1400 Hertel avenue to be used as stores, offices and a theatre. When the stores and offices were completed, Mr. Wertheimer applied for a permit to erect the theatre building. The council on November 21, 1923, resolved that inasmuch as the theatre was to be opposite Saint Margaret's church, Mr. Wertheimer be granted the permit subject to the consent of the church authorities. The church refused its sanction and the council refused to issue the permit.

"A study of this unique resolution presents interesting questions," stated Justice Hinkley, referring to the council's resolultion. "That it is fatally defective upon its face is readily apparent. The council places in the hands of an unofficial body, the church authorities, the governmental function of granting or refusing a permit to petitioner to erect a motion picture theatre. It thereby gives to that unofficial body the power arbitrarily to deprive the petitioner herein of his vested interests in real property." The real question of the litigation, declares the court, is the application for a permit to erect a motion picture theatre.

"Legislation and its judicial construction must keep pace with advancing civilization. Much of the confusion of legislation and judicial precedent is due to the early puritanical ideas that a theatre in and of itself is an inherent evil."

In and Out of Town

J. I. SCHNITZER, Vice-President and General Manager of F. B. O., has returned to New York after a two weeks' stay on the Coast. He was accompanied by Art Schmidt, West Coast Sales Manager, and Lou Baum, of Gothic.

SAM SAX, President of Lumas Film Corp., got back from Los Angeles this week.

SOL and IRVING LESSER of Principal, returned to New York after the First National convention at Franch Lick.

PAT DOWLING, publicist for the Christie Film Company, arrived in New York last week on the Homeric from England and the Continent and departed for the Coast.

EDWARD AUGER, who has been one of the assistant general managers of Vitagraph, left this week for a tour of the branch sales offices. He is acquainting branch managers and salesmen with the plans of Warner Bros. since their purchase of Vitagraph.

EDWARD L. KLEIN has gone to Europe in the interests of several independent producers.

Suozzo Starts New Chain in Jersey

Charles Suozzo, who recently sold a string of twelve houses in Corona and Astoria to Small-Straseberg, and the Rialto in Jamaica to A. H. Schwartz, is planning a new circuit in Northern New Jersey. He has purchased the Majestic in Jersey City from Brennon and Henderson for $100,000 and the Opera House in New Brunswick. The Majestic seats 1,900 and the deal includes an eighteen-year lease at an annual rental of $30,000.

Perth Amboy Arrests Sunday Violators

Perth Amboy, New Jersey, had Sunday pictures last week for the first time in the history of the town, but they resulted in the arrest of Joseph Buchbeinder, manager of the Crescent and Ditmas, A. Jensen, cashier at the Ditmas and Anna Goldstein, cashier of the Crescent. They were paroled for arraignment later. The houses are controlled by the Reade Enterprises of New York.

Vitagraph Music Service is Appreciated

Exhibitors throughout the country continue to send their thanks to Vitagraph for that company's inauguration of a tax free music service to theatres. The latest letter of appreciation came from R. B. Grunauer, assistant general manager of the West Coast Theatres of Los Angeles, who expresses the belief that many other producers will follow the example of Vitagraph.

Jacksonville, Ill., Voters Ban Sunday Pictures

The voters of Jacksonville, Ill., on April 21 by a majority of 453 defeated a proposition to permit motion picture shows to open on Sundays. Jacksonville has been without Sunday amusements for many years. Even card playing is barred by the hotels there on the Sabbath.

Constance Talmadge Radios Australia Greeting

Constance Talmadge greeted her fans in Australia over the radio from Los Angeles on the opening night of her First National picture "Learning to Love" at the Sydney Theatre in Sydney. The stunt was conceived by John C. Jones, manager of First National in Australia and arrangements were completed on the coast by Harry Brand, publicity director for the Schenck outfit, who with Al Rockett of First National effected the tieup with station KFI operated by the Los Angeles Examiner.

With a difference of time of sixteen hours between the coast and Australia, Miss Talmadge delivered her greeting at 3 A. M. to catch the 7 o'clock audience of the same night in Sydney. The event opened a National radio week in Australia, during which radio fans attempted to "get" America.

Bennett Completes Cast for "Man of Honor"

Casting has been completed by Whitman Bennett for "A Man of Honor," in which Lionel Barrymore will star for Chadwick Pictures. Mildred Harris has been cast for the leading role opposite Barrymore, while others in important roles are, Isobel De Leon, European stage star; Winifred Barry, Dorothy Kingdon, Jean Del Val, Albert Mack, and J. Moy Bennett.

"A Man of Honor" was adapted for the screen by Laurence Marston and will be released immediately upon completion as the seventh of the Chadwick Nine.

Split With First National Denied by Sawyer

The printed rumor of a split between Associated Pictures Corporation, which sponsors Sawyer-Lubin productions, and First National has been emphatically denied by Arthur H. Sawyer, supervising director of Associated Pictures.

Sawyer declares there is absolutely no truth in the report that "The White Monkey" will be the last of their productions to be distributed by First National. He said: "'The White Monkey,' which will be completed this week is the third of the initial series of four each year which we have contracted to produce for First National and the fourth will be put into production as soon as a suitable Barbara La Marr vehicle can be obtained."

Schenck Buys "Kiki" for Norma Talmadge

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK has purchased screen rights to the David Belasco stage success, "Kiki" for Norma Talmadge, who is at present engaged in the making of a modern version of "Graustark" for First National release. The "Kiki" production will probably be made some time in the late Fall as Schenck plans to have Miss Talmadge follow "Graustark" with "Obligations," also a new purchase, from the novel by Elizabeth Yorke Miller.

Dimitri Buchowetski is directing "Graustark" with a supporting cast that includes Eugene O'Brien, Marc MacDermott, Albert Gran, Lillian Lawrence and Roy D'Arcy.

'Phantom' Has World Premiere

Universal Super-Special is Warmly Received in San Francisco Opening

UNIVERSAL'S longawaited "Phantom of the Opera" had its world premiere at the Curran Theatre in San Francisco last Sunday and is reported to have won high praise from both press and public. The picture is a super-special made by Rupert Julian from Gaston Leroux's novel and has Lon Chaney in the sinister role of the Phantom.

The San Francisco premiere was featured by an elaborate prologue and the presence of several of the stars who acted in the picture. Among the latter who made the trip from Los Angeles to San Francisco especially for the occasion were Lon Chaney, Norman Kerry, Mary Philbin, Arthur Edmund Carewe and Gibson Gowland. Kerry and Miss Philbin have the two chief supporting roles to Chaney.

The presentation included a scene from the opera "Faust" which is enacted in part in the plot of the film, and a ballet scene adapted from the Walpurgis Ballet of "Faust." The music from "Faust" supplied the back-ground of the music for the picture presentation. An orchestra of enlarged proportions was used for this.

"The Phantom of the Opera" will run for four weeks at the Curran. After it closes there it is not expected to be shown again until next August, when it will have its New York premiere at a big Broadway house.

Universal is backing it as the greatest screen attraction of the 1925-1926 season, and hailing it as another "Hunchback."

Clarence Badger Signs to Direct for Paramount

Clarence Badger has been engaged under a long term contract to direct productions for Paramount. Badger is one of the veteran directors. In 1915 he made the first three-reeler Mack Sennett produced and has directed pictures for First National, Goldwyn and Metro.

The Keynote of the Milwaukee Convention will be: "What pictures shall I book?" Is your 1925-26 Announcement in our big Convention issue?

Tiffany and Truart Busy With Productions

Tiffany and Truart are active on the coast with three pictures in the process of making for Phil Goldstone Productions. A. P. Younger has completed the adaptation and scenario of "Souls for Sables," suggested by the David Graham Phillips novel, "Garland and Company." This Goldstone production will be one of the Tiffany twelve specials for the coming season.

Truart started this week on "The Thoroughbred," one of its Big Six productions under the direction of Oscar Apfel, and "The Angel of the Desert" is now being edited and titled. The latter features Art Accord, Louise Lorraine, Rex and Black Beauty.

Cast Completed for New Brenon Production

The engagement of John Harrington for the role of "Whitey" completed the cast for "The Street of Forgotten Men," a forthcoming Paramount production. Herbert Brenon, who is directing the picture, has started camera work with the following players appearing in the principal parts: Juliette Brenon, Josephine Deffry, A. Borgato, Riley Hatch, Albert Roccardi, John Harrington, and Dorothy Walters.

Gasnier Adds to "Faint Perfume" Cast

Gasnier has added two to the cast of "Faint Perfume," which he is producing from the Zona Gale novel for B. P. Schulberg. The latest additions are Ned Sparks and Barbara Tennant. Those previously signed were, Seena Owen, William Powell, Alyce Mills, Mary Alden, Russell Simpson, Philo McCullough, Jacqueline Saunders, Betty Francisco, Joan Standing and Dickie Brandon.

Peter B. Kyne the Author of Four Fox Specials

ONE of the master strokes of Fox Film Corporation in connection with its 1925-26 product was the signing, as an exclusive feature, the services of Peter B. Kyne, one of the most widely read modern fictionists.

As a box office magnet the name of Kyne ranks high. By the terms of the agreement Fox gets exclusive rights to produce for the screen adaptations from Mr. Kyne's numerous works during the period of the contract.

For its 1925-26 program of releases Fox will produce four Kyne stories, and at present the author is at the Fox West Coast Studios making preparations to get his first one under way.

That Tom Mix and Buck Jones will each get a portion of the Kyne product is practically certain. Kyne is a writer of red-blooded stories such as these stars are in the habit of portraying.

Kyne first attracted national attention by his stories in which the now celebrated Cappy Ricks was the outstanding character. For the past ten years he has been regarded as one of the most popular writers in America. His international popularity was attested a few days ago when a survey of the United Kingdom showed that his works were selling four to one as compared with the most popular English authors. He is a native of California and a veteran of two wars.

MacLean Forming Unit for First Paramount Feature

Douglas MacLean is forming the production unit which will assist him in the production of features for Paramount, which now has a contract with the star calling for several productions.

The organization work is being handled by Bogart Rogers; MacLean's general manager. J. R. Crone has been appointed production manager, and George J. Crone has been made supervising editor. Raymond Cannon and Wade Boteler have been engaged for the scenario staff.

The first story the star will make for Paramount has not yet been selected. It is planned to begin camera work in about five weeks.

Film Daily Moving to 1650 Broadway

The Film Daily is moving its offices to 1650 Broadway, fifth floor, this week and will be in its new quarters on May 4. Offices have been at 71 West 44th street for a number of years. The new quarters provide increased space.

Universal Making Good Production Progress

The Universal production program is proceeding at a rapid rate with six features in actual production, four in the cutting rooms and eleven in preparation for immediate work.

The six pictures in production are "Peacock Feathers," featuring Jacqueline Logan and Cullen Landis, directed by Sven Gade; "The Titans," starring House Peters, directed by Edward Sloman; "The Home Maker," featuring Alice Joyce and Clive Brook, directed by King Baggot; "Perils of the Primitive," a serial featuring Joe Bonomo, directed by Francis Ford; "The Border Sheriff," starring Jack Hoxie, directed by Robert North Bradbury, and "The Dynamiter's Daughter," starring Josie Sedgwick, directed by Ernst Laemmle.

"Overland Limited" First of New Gotham Series

"The Overland Limited," a railroad drama now being prepared for the screen by James J. Tynan, will be the first of the series of twelve Gotham Productions announced for release during 1925–26 by Lumas Film Corporation The picture will be made on the coast.

Sam Sax is at the studios in the West arranging details for the starting of production. When filming gets under way he will return to New York, stopping off at exchange centers en route.

George Seitz to Direct for Paramount

George B. Seitz who has been producing serials for Pathe has been engaged by Paramount to direct "Wild Horse Mesa," the latest Zane Grey western drama which goes into production at the Paramount west coast studios in the near future. The cast is now being assembled.

Mary Pickford in a trio of highlight scenes from her latest United Artists production, "Little Annie Rooney."

King Starts Production on "Police Patrol"

Director Burton King has started preliminary production work and casting on "The Police Patrol," which he will produce for Gotham Productions for release through Lumas Film Corporation. This is scheduled as the third of a series of twelve Gotham pictures.

"The Police Patrol" will be made in and about New York City and the producers will have the co-operation of the New York police department. Actual shooting is scheduled to start about May 15th. Victoria Moore adapted the story from the play by A. Y. Pearson.

Eleanor Boardman Contracts with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Eleanor Boardman will continue for a period of years as a leading lady in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions according to the terms of a contract recently signed by the actress with Louis Mayer, vice-president in charge of production.

Miss Boardman is now enacting the leading feminine role in "The Circle," an adaptation of Sumerset Maugham's successful stage play of that name. Her next picture will be "You Too," by Roger Burlingame. Marcel Desano will direct and William Haines has been chosen as leading man.

Universal Signs Griffin as Director

Universal has signed Frank Griffin to direct a number of forthcoming pictures, the first of which will be the Laura La Plante starring vehicle, "Doubling for Cupid," adapted by Olga Printzlau from the Nina Wilcox Putnam story.

Griffin is well known as scenarist, screen adaptor and director. He has written a number of successful pictures, and in the past directed such players as Mabel Normand, Buster Keaton, Willie Collier, Sam Bernard, Weber and Fields, Ford Sterling and Louise Fazenda.

"Black Cyclone" Premiere for N. Y. Capitol

HAL ROACH'S latest feature production starring Rex, King of Wild Horses, and titled "Black Cyclone" is to have its world premiere at the Capitol Theatre in New York the week of May 10th. This engagement will be the first of a series of key city runs which are being arranged with elaborate exploitation campaigns and presentation effects.

The plan of preceding national release with a series of special exploitation runs marks a new departure from the customary Pathe policy and was prompted by the unusual character of the picture.

Many months were spent in the making of "Black Cyclone" in the Hal Roach studios and on location. Fred Jackman, the director, spent over three months on the Nevada desert making scenes for the picture, the leading roles in which are performed by animals. The human cast includes "Big Boy" Guinn Williams, Kathleen Collins and Christian Frank. The story is by Hal. Roach.

Flinn Stresses Stock Company

Says Organization Will Strengthen Producers Dist. Corp. Program for Season

JOHN C. FLINN of Producers Distributing Corporation is laying particular stress on the stock company angle of coming productions of his organization as giving particular strength to the program for the coming season. Players in important roles in pictures made by Al Christie, Hunt Stromberg, Belasco Productions, Frances Marion and Metropolitan Productions will be seen only in pictures released through Producers Distributing Corporation.

Flinn says in part:

"The stock company idea is positive in its assurance of benefit to everyone connected with the motion picture industry, and its inauguration into our 1925-26 releases is a decided step forward in safeguarding alike the interests of the exhibitor, the producer, the distributor and the player.

"To the exhibitor the stock company idea presents an unquestioned advantage. Through it he is enabled to present exclusive offerings and eliminate a certain type of unfair competition now extant. With the stock company idea in full force, the exhibitor who pays a good price for a good picture featuring a certain star or group of popular players, is not faced by the competition of an opposition house presenting an inferior picture purchased at a small price but presenting identically the same star or featured players.

"The distributor releasing worth-while offerings is not affected by similar unfair competition. Fine pictures, conscientiously made, will not be handicapped in their booking possibilities by cheaply made productions whose only merit is the reputation of the players.

"The producer is benefited by the stock company idea in having competent casts available at all times for each picture he produces. And close association with each player enables the producer to cast his picture with more certainty of the screen results. It also saves the time usually lost in assembling casts from the ranks of unattached and scattered players, and eliminates the delays frequently caused when players of the desired type and artistry are not available."

E. H. Allen in New York on Annual Visit

Having completed his production schedule for the season, E. H. Allen, general manager of the Hamilton-White units producing comedies for Educational release, is in New York on his annual visit. The season has been an exceptionally busy one for Allen. The companies working under him in the Fine Arts Studios produced eighteen Mermaid Comedies, six Hamilton comedies, six Juvenile comedies, all in two reels, and twenty four single reel Cameo comedies.

According to Allen, the work of transferring the properties of the various units from the Fine Arts studio to the recently purchased Principal studio has already commenced. Two new enclosed stages will be started at once in order that there will be no delay in the coming season's production activities.

Scenes from the First National release, "Fine Clothes"

First National to Start Four

Will Produce Two Features on West Coast and Two in East During May

FIRST NATIONAL has completed arrangements to put at least four pictures into production during the month of May, with a possibility that the number may be increased. The four now on the schedule are "The Viennese Medley," "Classified," "The Half-Way Girl" and "The Come-Back."

"The Viennese Medley" will get under way May 15 on the west coast with Anna Q. Nilsson and May Allison in the leading feminine roles. Kurt Rehfeld will direct.

"Classified" is a Corinne Griffith starring vehicle from the short story by Edna Ferber. It will go into production May 7 under the direction of Al Santell. Jack Mulhall and Charles Murray will support the star.

"The Half-Way Girl" and "The Come-Back" will be filmed in the east under the supervision of Earl Hudson. Doris Kenyon is featured in the former which is scheduled to start the first week of the month, with John Francis Dillon directing.

Milton Sills will have the starring role in "The Come-Back" which is scheduled for production sometime during the month. Joseph Poland and Earle Snell are preparing the continuity from the novel by M. D. C. Crawford.

Columbia Production Active

Pauline Garon and Jane Novak Sign for Feminine Leads in Features

WITH production activities at their height for Columbia Pictures in their new Clune studios to which they recently moved, Harry Cohn has issued an announcement that he has signed Pauline Garon to play opposite William Fairbanks in the first of his new Perfection series. This series will not be westerns, but straight action pictures of every day life.

Another player recently signed by Columbia for leading feminine roles in the company's six specials is Jane Novak. She will be seen first in "The Danger Signal," a railroad melodrama.

The move of Columbia Pictures from the Waldorf studios, in which they operated last year, was necessitated by the increased production program, as the former quarters did not provide enough space. At the Clune studio there are more and larger stages and sets, which will make for a greater degree of efficiency in production.

A comprehensive program of production has already been worked out to the last detail and casts will be assembled in a very short time and work on the first of each of the Columbia, Waldorf and Perfection series will commence. Further announcements as to casts and directors will be made in the near future.

Lillian Rich Signed for "Love Gamble"

Ben Verschleiser has signed Lillian Rich to play the feminine lead in "The Love Gamble," the first of a series of six Banner productions for the current season to be released through the Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation. It is a picturization of the Mazie Greig novel, "Peggy of Beacon Hill."

Others of the Banner series will be "The Checkered Flag," from the novel by John Mersereau; "Brooding Eyes," from John Goodwin's mystery novel; "Whispering Canyon," a story of the lumber forests of the west, and "Salvage," by Izola Forrester, which will be released as "Raging Seas."

"The Love Gamble" will be directed by Edward Lesaint and in addition to Miss Rich will have in the cast Robert Frazer, Pauline Garon, Arthur Rankin, James Marcus, Kathleen Clifford, Brooks Benedict and Benny King.

Sherwin Writing Titles for "White Monkey"

Louis Sherwin has been engaged by Sawyer-Lubin to write the titles for the Barbara La Marr feature, "The White Monkey," adapted for the screen by Arthur Hoerl from the John Galsworthy novel of the same name. The picture is now being cut and edited by Teddy Hanscom under the supervision of director Phil Rosen and will be released by First National some time in July.

May McAvoy to Star in Arrow Picture

Dallas Fitzgerald has signed May McAvoy as star in the first of a series of four Dallas M. Fitzgerald productions which will be released through Arrow Pictures Corporation. The picture, it is said will be of the society type adapted from a well known story and Miss McAvoy will be surrounded by a capable cast.

Universal Mourns Death of Harry Levy

Harry Levy, Universal's exchange manager in Pittsburgh passed away Thursday of last week, a victim of pneumonia. The funeral was held Sunday in New York, with interment in Montefiore Cemetery, Laurelton, Long Island.

A week previous to his death Levy underwent an operation for the removal of his tonsils. With a number of his contracts pending he resumed his work too soon thereafter and caught cold, which changed to pneumonia.

The passing of Levy is mourned throughout the Universal organization, with which he had been employed for the past six years. Not yet thirty years of age, deceased is survived by his his mother and father, his wife and two small children, as well as two sisters and a brother.

Conway Tearle Plays Lead in "The Mystic"

Conway Tearle will play the male lead in "The Mystic," which Tod Browning is producing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Aileen Pringle is to enact the principal feminine role.

Tearle, who has previously enacted only heroic figures in the pictures, will make his debut in a crook role, for the part entrusted to him is that of a polished faker who lives by his tricks as a clairvoyant and spiritualist.

Betty Francisco in Cast of "Faint Perfume"

Betty Francisco has been engaged for a prominent role in "Faint Perfume," an adaptation of Zona Gale's novel being produced by B. P. Schulberg under the direction of Gasnier.

Davis Will Distribute "Red Love"

JOHN L. RUSSELL of R. K. L. Productions has closed a contract with Davis Distributing Division whereby the latter will handle distribution all over the world for the L. Case Russell feature, "Red Love." John Lowell is starred in the production, which was directed by Edgar Lewis. Evangeline Russell has the leading feminine role.

Russell produced "Ten Nights in a Barroom" and is expecting even bigger things of "Red Love." The star in the new story plays the role of a full blooded Sioux Indian, a college graduate, who in self defense kills the town bully and is forced to become an outlaw. The entire production was made on the locations called for in the story.

The Davis Distributing Division is preparing an elaborate advertising and exploitation campaign on "Red Love," under the personal supervision of J. Charles Davis, 2nd, who also exploited "Ten Nights in a Barroom."

Florence Vidor in the Next Cruze Production

Florence Vidor is to have the feminine lead in "Marry Me," James Cruze's next production for Paramount, which gets under way this week. Everett Horton will play opposite Miss Vidor, and John Roche and Helen Jerome Eddy will have featured roles.

F. B. O. Fixes June Releases

Four Feature Pictures and Five Short Subjects Are Included in Program

A RELEASING schedule of four features and five short subjects has been arranged by F.B.O. for the month of June. Topping the list is "Smooth As Satin," an Evelyn Brent starring vehicle based on the stage play, "The Chatterbox," by Bayard Veiller. It is scheduled to go to the exhibitors June 14th. The cast is now being assembled and the picture will be directed by Ralph Ince.

Two features are down for release on June 21st. They are "High and Handsome," the second Lefty Flynn production of a new series, and "The Human Tornado," the fourth Ben Wilson production starring Yakima Canutt. "High and Handsome" is a Red Book Magazine story by Gerald Beaumont and will be directed by Harry Garson. Cliff Hill is responsible for the story and continuity of "The Human Tornado," which Ben Wilson will direct.

The fourth of the feature releases is "Whirling Lariats" and is scheduled for June 28th. It is the fourth western of the Fred Thomson series.

Trackless Train Is Sensation

Metro-Goldwyn Transcontinental Special Warmly Greeted on Arrival in N. Y.

MAYOR John F. Hylan of New York temporarily abandoned a committee meeting of the Board of Estimate to board Metro-Goldwyn's Trackless Train, in company with General Gerardo Machado, President-elect of Cuba when the transcontinental "Special" arrived in New York Tuesday of this week from a trip of more than a thousand miles from Indianapolis.

Before reaching the city, the Trackless Train was met in New Jersey by trade paper men who accompanied it to New York, where it traveled to the Battery and to the City Hall. There it was met by a civic reception committee. An immense crowd witnessed the train's reception at City Hall.

The Trackless Train, sponsored by Metro-Goldwyn through Major Edward Bowes, vice-president, and his aides, Howard Dietz and Eddie Bonns, is a decidedly clever exploitation feat in the history of the industry.

In Philadelphia, visited before the final "stretch" to Manhattan, Metro-Goldwyn's Trackless Train met with even a greater reception than was accorded it in Baltimore, Washington, Wilmington, Pittsburgh, Columbus, Dayton and other cities along the route, in all of which the train was a sensation never equalled.

Mayor Kendrick of Philadelphia and his cabinet were guests on the "Metro-Goldwyn Special" in the Quaker City, where a special escort of twenty policemen, led by three motorcycle police, carrying American flags and flags of the city, attracted phenomenal attention.

F. B. O. Changes Titles on Three Pictures

Three changes have been made in titles of F.B.O. pictures. "The Woman Accused" is the new title for "Drusilla With a Million," "Smooth as Satin" for "The Chatterbox," and "Three Bases East" for "April's Fools."

"The Woman Accused" is an Associated Arts production of Elizabeth Cooper's novel, with Mary Carr, Priscilla Bonner and Kenneth Harlan in the featured roles. F. Harmon Weight directed.

"Smooth As Satin" is based on the Bayard Veiller stage play, "The Chatterbox" and will have Evelyn Brent as the star, with Ralph Ince directing.

"Three Bases East" is the eighth episode of the new H. C. Witwer series, "The Pacemakers," in which Alberta Vaughn and George O'Hara are co-starred. Wesley Ruggles is directing.

Meador Signs Totman on Scenario Staff

J. E. D. Meador has added Llewellyn Totman to his staff of scenario writers for his new Truecraft Pictures Corporation. Totman's first assignment was the adaptation and continuity of "Queen Calafia," Blasco Ibanez's novel, which will be Meador's first Truecraft production.

Totman is only 21 years old and before entering the Metro publicity department under Meador a year and a half ago, had a varied experience in theatricals in the middle west. He left Metro-Goldwyn this week to join Meador.

Cast for "Rugged Waters" is Augmented

Ten more players have been selected for the cast which will enact the characters in "Rugged Waters," Joseph C. Lincoln's story of that title, to be produced by Irvan Willat for Paramount. Those previously signed for the picture include Lois Wilson, Wallace Beery, and Warner Baxter.

The new names in the cast are James Mason, Dot Farley, Knute Erickson, Walter Rogers, Warren Rodgers, J. P. Lockney, Jack Byron, Thomas Delmar, Willard Cooley and Walter Ackerman.

Myton Named F. B. O. Coast Scenario Editor

Fred Kennedy Myton has been appointed by B. P. Fineman as west coast scenario editor of Film Booking Offices and has started selecting stories for the F.B.O. schedule for 1925-26.

"Friendly Enemies" Has World Premiere

"FRIENDLY ENEMIES," the Belasco production starring Weber and Fields and released through Producers Distributing Corporation has its world premiere this Sunday night at the Colony Theatre on Broadway, New York. It is a picturization of the Sam Shipman and Aaron Hoffman stage play which scored a success several seasons ago.

"Friendly Enemies" was directed by George Melford and has in the cast, in addition to the stars, Virginia Brown Faire, Lucille Lee Stewart, Jack Mulhall, Stuart Holmes and Eugenie Besserer.

Bobby North Buys Rights to "Lying Wives"

Bobby North has secured the physical distribution rights for the Ivan Abramson production, "Lying Wives," for Greater New York and Northern New Jersey. North, president of Apollo Film Exchange holds the Warner franchise in the same territory and has been distributing Warner product exclusively.

"Lying Wives" was written and directed by Ivan Abramson. It is the first of a series of four Ivan Emerald productions to be produced by Ivan Players, Inc. In the cast are Clara Kimball Young, Madge Kennedy, Richard Bennett, Edna Murphy, Niles Welch and J. Barney Sherry.

Prominent Stage Actors in Cast of Daniels Feature

Several prominent stage actors now appearing in current Broadway productions will be seen in support of Bebe Daniels in "The Wild, Wild Girl," which Edward Sutherland is directing for Paramount. Among the members of the cast are Henry Stephenson, now appearing in "Dancing Mothers"; Ivan Simpson, who plays in "Old English," the George Arliss starring vehicle; Osgood Perkins of "Beggar on Horseback"; and Russell Medroft, who played in "Sonny," in which Emma Dunn was featured.

Tiffany Schedule Is Launched

Well Known Authors and stories Included in Productions for Coming Season

TIFFANY Productions has its schedule of twelve big pictures fairly launched, and M. H. Hoffman, vice-president of the organization is returning east from Los Angeles where he has been for the past three weeks completing all preliminary details.

The series is to be made from books by well known authors and includes the following; "Lightning," by Zane Grey; "The Lodge in the Wilderness," by Sir Gilbert Parker; "Souls for Sables," by David Graham Phillips; "Morganson's Finish," by Jack London; "The Travis Coup," by Arthur Stringer; "Tale of a Vanishing People," by Rex Beach; "The Wrong Coat," by Harold McGrath; "The Dumb Head," by Rupert Hughes; "The Luck Serum," by Governeur Morris, and "The Life of a Woman" by De Maupassant.

In discussion the coming productions Hoffman said:

"After viewing the first production made of the series of twelve based on books and stories of world-famed authors I can safely predict that the Tiffany franchises will establish the exchange handling it on a par with the best national exchanges.

"At last the independent exchanges will not be obliged to distribute the so-called orphan pictures as they will have as good as anything produced at live and let live prices."

Maurice A. Chase Launches New Company

The Chase Pictures Corporation has been organized by Maurice A. Chase to operate as a selling company handling independent product in upper New York state with offices in Buffalo and Albany. During the past several months, Chase, who is well known in the territory, has been busy assembling product and will start his first campaign with twelve feature pictures.

ACHIEVEMENT!

WE HAVE achieved supremacy in the field of motion picture production, combining the highest artistic quality and the greatest box-office value.

We have achieved literary and dramatic leadership, with an unparalleled array of authors and playwrights, including H. G. Wells, John Golden, Joseph Conrad, Channing Pollock, Peter B. Kyne, James Oliver Curwood, Owen Davis, Austin Strong, Winchell Smith, Richard Harding Davis and O. Henry.

We have achieved the highest standard the industry has ever known in the selection of directors, scenario writers and casts, as may be noted in the following pages.

These achievements have been attained at the cost of an entire year of tremendous effort—a year of search and research the world over for the foremost men and material, a year of far-reaching reorganization and expansion of the production staff, and a year of great financial expenditure.

Every energy of Fox Film Corporation is now bent to the production of motion picture masterpieces. We have definitely abandoned the making of program pictures.

But our achievements will not alter one imperishable precedent. We will continue to stand by our time-honored and well known policy of not using profits or rentals paid by exhibitors to build motion picture theatres in opposition to our regular customers. Under the Fox policy of contract and exhibition, every theatre owner is his own master, subject to no monopoly or control by outsiders.

Independence in Policy and Perfection in Pictures.

Fox Film's Record of 22 Years of Progress

THIS is the twenty-second anniversary of Fox Film Corporation, and in many respects it is by far the most important in its history.

Expansion, which has been the company's announced watchword since its inception, shows a realization that constitutes a brilliant record in film history. To-day it can boast the brains of the world among its contributors, and its personnel runs into the thousands—an army of highly paid, expert craftsmen organized into one great unit.

In its twenty-second year the curtain is lifted on a most imposing array of authors, directors and stars.

Most significant of all, perhaps, is the company's announced policy of "no program pictures." This means that the upward trend, so rapid in the last five or six years, has reached its climax in a product of equal quality. All feature pictures in the future come under the head of "specials."

Mr. William Fox, president and founder from a lengthy stay at the West Coast studios, where he has been supervising the production of the pictures for 1925-1926, and he has voiced the opinion that the coming season will initiate an era of prosperity never equaled in the industry. While there he was joined by John Golden, eminent play producer, and together they supervised the film conversion of the Golden stage successes contracted for by the company.

The acorn that to-day is a great oak with its branches reaching to the uttermost parts of the earth was planted by William Fox in 1904 when he created Greater New York Film Rental company. In 1908, when he realized that the then infant industry was in danger of becoming monopolized, Mr. Fox instituted a legal battle against General Film Company and Motion Picture Patents Company, which he ultimately won. Next came the organization of Box Office Attraction Company, which absorbed the previous concern, with Mr. Fox as president. Then in 1915 came Fox Film Corporation, which absorbed Box Office Attraction Company, with Mr. Fox as president and dominant force.

From that time on the company's progress was rapid. The following year studios and laboratories were established on the West Coast, and foreign business was expanded by the opening of a European headquarters in London, England. So fast did operations move that in 1917 production activities were double those of the year previous.

Accompanied by his general manager, Winfield R. Sheehan, Mr. Fox went to Europe in the spring of 1919. From the London headquarters he extended the foreign service throughout Great Britain and other countries. To-day it can be truthfully said that the sun never sets on the Fox banner.

Up to this time the company had been working in the East under a severe handicap caused by lack of office and studio space. It had been the dream of Mr. Fox to establish all of his working forces under one roof, and, upon the return of Mr. Fox and Mr. Sheehan from Europe, the cornerstone of the big Fox picture plant in New York was laid. This ceremony brought together leaders in civic affairs, theatrical lights and men prominent in business life. The Stars and Stripes were hoisted over partially completed structure on June 6, 1919.

On May 24, 1920, the formal opening took place. The distinguished visitors who attended saw a modern structure of commanding aspect occupying the entire block front on Tenth avenue, from 55th to 56th streets, designed in a manner that marks it as one of the most efficient plants in the film industry. The former scattering of forces was at an end, bringing with it an enormous saving in all departments.

Although it involved an investment of $2,500,000, the economy resulting from the concentration of the various working units has been reflected in a lower cost of production.

So great an attraction have the Fox Studios in New York proved that scores of notables on visits to the city have included in their itinerary a visit to the building. Here, for instance, in a studio floor that can comfortably take care of twenty companies simultaneously. Its laboratory on the ground floor, presided over by Vice President Jack G. Leo, is one of the largest in the world and contains every modern device of proved efficiency for the developing, printing and titling of film. Its output capacity totals 3,000,000 feet of film weekly. Here, too, is Mr. Fox's office and study as well as projection rooms, sales department, scenario department and every other branch that goes toward the making of a picture. In spite of its vastness, however, the company's expansion was so rapid that one year later it was forced to acquire another building one block south of the main plant which is known as the annex. This houses Fox News, Fox Varieties, auditing, cashier's, poster, and other departments. It also has a complete reserve studio and projection rooms.

Fox News was taken into the Fox family in October, 1919, after three months work of organization. In the face of competition from other news reels long established it proceeded to rise steadily in its field until today it numbers some of the greatest news cameramen the industry has developed.

Its success brought about the inception in 1921 of Fox Varieties, which has been extending its scope farther and farther each year until now it numbers expeditions into unexplored lands, magic delvings into the realm of science and a quality of product that places its single reels among the greatest of screen novelties.

The history of Fox Film Corporation charts the career of William Fox. In every one of its important steps forward, it has never once fallen backward, he has been its prime mover and its guiding force. Beginning life as a poor boy, through his indomitable will and seemingly unquenchable store of energy, he has culminated as the head of a mammoth oraganization.

Never, however, since he came to be a recognized factor in the film world, has he lost sight of the fact that those who sometimes appear as the most humble can, if given the opportunity, rise to the heights. This is seen in many of the stars and directors who under the Fox banner have been lifted from comparative obscurity to enviable positions.

Although occurring at a time when his business needed all the concentration he could possibly give it, Mr. Fox did not hesitate when the call came to give every effort to the call of patriotism in behalf of America during the great war. Characteristically, Mr. Fox is mum when asked about his endeavors at this time. The fact remains, however, that after receiving repeated governmental appreciation, he, in 1918, was in charge of the entire section of the final Liberty Loan drive representing the motion picture interests of New York. When it was all over, the results showed that he and Mr. Sheehan, as his chief aide, had scored 100 per cent with the teams that they had organized.

Mr. Fox's reward has come to him at last. His dreams have all come true, unless, which is likely, he is secretly planning even greater achievements than those represented in this twenty-second year of progress. Certain it is that his past achievements indicate he will never stand still or be entirely content, for that is foreign to his nature. The great organizing force that brought the company that he heads to the zenith of success and security is now in its prime, for Mr. Fox is still in his early forties.

A captain of industry with no project too colossal for him to tackle, Mr. Fox is withal a man of simple tastes and intense love of home and family. One of his greatest recent joys was contained in the news flashed to him while at the West Coast that he had become a grandfather twice over with the birth of bouncing baby boys to each of his cherished daughters.

Fox Announces 49 Specials for Next Season

ONCE again the annual announcement by Fox Film Corporation sees that company exceeding all its previous efforts in production and distribution.

For the 1925-26 season Fox will release 35 specials, 7 Tom Mix starring specials, 7 Buck Jones starring specials, 8 two-reel pictures from stories by O. Henry; 8 two-reel comedies based on the Van Bibber stories by Richard Harding Davis; 8 two-reel comedies based on "The Married Life of Helen and Warren," written by Mabel Herbert Urner; 20 two-reel Imperial comedies; 26 Fox Varieties, one reel each, gathered here and there from the world we live in, and 104 Fox News issues.

As announced recently, there will be no program pictures on the Fox release schedule for the coming season. That the day of the program picture is over is evident to every observer, and the Fox company in line with its progressive policy has decided not to wait for the handwriting on the wall to abandon these pictures.

The Fox dramatic schedule for the coming season is headed by "The Iron Horse," fresh from a year on Broadway at the Lyric Theatre and its triumphs in Chicago and Los Angeles. Then come "As No Man Has Loved," based on Edward Everett Hale's classic, "The Man Without a Country," and the screen version of Channing Pollock's dramatic stage success, "The Fool," both direct from successful runs on Broadway.

With this triumvirate are thirty-two other special productions of positive merit, including adaptations from the best stage successes and novels obtainable.

Heading these is the John Golden Unit of Clean American Plays, which the Fox company is producing in conjunction with the theatrical producer. This group is headed by "Lightnin'," the play that broke long run records. The other plays in the Golden group are "The Wheel," "The First Year," "7th Heaven," "Thank You," and "Thunder Mountain," which is an adaptation of "Howdy Folks."

"Marriage," by H. G. Wells, celebrated English novelist, is another of the ambitious picturizations on the Fox program for the coming season. This is the first Wells story to be brought to the screen.

Peter B. Kyne, popular magazine and novel writer, is another contributor to the Fox 1925-26 program. Kyne, for a period covered by contract, has given Fox the exclusive rights to his services, and the coming season will see four Kyne stories released by Fox.

Other productions on the Fox schedule are:

"Havoc," from the international stage success of the same name, which will be one of the most ambitious offerings in the history of Fox productions.

This picture, while it has the war as a background, the story, in the main, concerns a love vampire who causes "havoc" in the hearts of brave men whom she deceives.

"East Lynne," which as a novel and play made a popular record that has seldom been surpassed.

"The Fighting Heart," from Larry Evans' story, "Once to Every Man," a romance of the prize ring.

"Part-Time Wives," from a story by Bessie Beatty of high society and "now and then wives."

W. R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of Fox Film Corporation.

"Siberia," based on the play success by Bartley Campbell which thrilled an older generation.

"3 Bad Men," by the author of "The Iron Horse," Charles Kenyon, dealing with a struggle for conquest, love and treasures in Central America.

"The Johnstown Flood," fast-moving melodrama based on that greatest of American catastrophes.

"Kentucky Pride," which as the name suggests, is based on the "Sport of Kings" with a love story and what is said to be the most exciting horse race ever filmed.

"The Dixie Merchant," an adaptation of Harry Benefield's new novel, "The Chicken Wagon Family."

"The Trouble Hunter," based on the successful novel "Pearls of Desire," by Austin J. Small, involves a hunt for buried treasure, a beautiful girl castaway, Chinese pirates, and a dashing Yankee hero.

"Lazybones," from the play by Owen Davis, who is noted for the absorbing human interest of his stories.

"The Silver Treasure," which brings to the screen, the justly renowned name of the late Joseph Conrad. It is an adaptation of that author's "Nostromo."

"The Rime of the Ancient Mariner," Samuel Taylor Coleridge's masterpiece of descriptive poetry.

In addition to the foregoing there will be seven Tom Mix starring vehicles and seven Buck Jones pictures. For these two Western stars the works of popular authors of red-blooded fiction have been secured. Peter B. Kyne, James Oliver Curwood and Jackson Gregory are contributing stories for these players.

The success of Tom Mix in portraying Dick Turpin, has led to the selection of a similar vehicle for him for the coming season, and Mix, will be seen as the romantic Spanish cavalier, Don Juan, "The Everlasting Whisper," by Jackson Gregory, "The Best Bad Man," by Max Brand, and two of the Kyne contributions will be the first of star's pictures for the season.

For Buck Jones there are two Jackson Gregory stories, "The Timber Wolf" and "Desert Valley," already scheduled with a number of other fitting vehicles being considered.

It is evident from the foregoing that Fox officials had their eyes on the box office value of the names of the authors they signed. Wells, Conrad, O. Henry, Kyne, Richard Harding Davis, Curwood, Golden, Pollock, Owen Davis, Winchell Smith, Larry Evans, Channing Pollock and Frank Craven, all worthy of display in lights.

The directorial staff of the Fox company is also worthy of special consideration. To John Ford, Emmett Flynn, Victor Schertzinger, Rowland V. Lee, Reginald Barker, Frank Borzage, W. S. Van Dyke and Lynn Reynolds, will go the major portion of this gigantic schedule.

Ford, whose "The Iron Horse" leads the program, has already completed two more pictures for next season, namely, "The Fighting Heart" and "Kentucky Pride," and is now at work on "Lightnin'." He has also been assigned to make "Thank You."

Flynn will direct "Part-Time Wives" and "East Lynne."

Schertzinger has the task of directing "The Wheel," "The Dixie Merchant," "Siberia," and "Thunder Mountain."

Lee, who directed "As No Man Has Loved," will also be responsible for "Havoc," and "The Silver Treasure."

Borzage will direct "The First Year" and "Lazybones."

Supplementing this group is Harry Millarde, who directed "The Fool," John Griffith Wray, who will direct "The Trouble Hunter"; Lynn Reynolds and J. G. Blystone, who will be responsible for the Tom Mix starring pictures; W. S. Van Dyke, who will have the major portion of the Buck Jones vehicles, and George Marshall, who will continue to make two-reelers out of the Van Bibber stories.

In addition to stars Tom Mix and Buck Jones, already mentioned, the list of players in Fox pictures includes George O'Brien, Madge Bellamy, Alma Rubens, Jacqueline Logan, Judy King, Jay Hunt, Shirley Mason, Edmund Lowe, Paul Panzer, J. Farrell MacDonald, Diana Miller, Ethel Clayton, Charles Edward Bull, Will Walling, Fred Kohler, Cyril Chadwick, Gladys Hulette, James Marcus, Francis Powers, James Welch, Colin Chase, John Padjan, Jack Canzhorn, Frances Teague, Edward Piel, Brenda Bond, Mary Thurman, Edward Hearn, Pauline Starke, Lucy Beaumont, Harvey Clark, Henry Walthall, Gertrude Astor, Alice Calhoun, Robert Cain, Freeman Wood, George Berrell, Virginia Madison, Billie Dove, Francis Ford, Jack Herrick, Victor MacLaglen, Wallace MacDonald, Richard Travers, Otis Harlan, Walter McGrail, Marian Nixon, Fred De Silva, Harrison Ford, Claire Adams, Lou Tellegen, Frank Keenan, Marjorie Daw, Leslie Fenton, Lydis Knott, and Richard Headrick.

In addition to the foregoing there is a host of character actors of high merit playing roles in the many big productions now in the making.

Writing the scenario for Fox is another group of experts in their line headed by Frances Marion, J. Clarkson Miller and Gerald C. Duffy.

Details of Fox Specials for New Season

The Iron Horse

"THE Iron Horse," is now ready for release early next season direct to exhibitors after a year's run in New York.

This production makes its premiere bow to the exhibitor with an elaborate publicity campaign behind it. Already it is in its fourth month at Sid Grauman's Egyptian theatre, in Hollywood.

The advent of "The Iron Horse" has been watched with the greatest interest by exhibitors. Headed by George O'Brien, the production carries with it a supporting cast that includes a regiment of United States troops and cavalry; 3,000 railway workmen; 1,000 Chinese laborers; 800 Pawnee, Cheyenne and Sioux Indians; 2,800 horses; 1,300 buffaloes, and 10,000 Texas steers.

With George O'Brien is Madge Bellamy; J. Farrell MacDonald, whose portrayal of "Corporal Casey" has placed him in the front ranks of screen comedians; Fred Kohler, Gladys Hulette, Frances Teague, Cyril Chadwick, Will Walling, Charles Edward Bull, James Marcus, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Chief Big Tree, Chief White Spear and a host of others.

John Ford, the youthful director of "The Iron Horse," is another who has achieved fame through the success of the picture.

"The Iron Horse" was approximately three years in the making, representing obstacles and an enormous mass of detail that taxed the fortitude of everyone concerned with it. For months members of the cast lived on the Nevada desert and in the Sierra range experiencing hardships almost equal to those of the transcontinental pioneers.

The original conception of the story of "The Iron Horse" came to Mr. Fox about four years ago while pursuing a study of the life of Abraham Lincoln. Lincoln's far-seeing vision that brought about the accomplishment of the mighty plan to unite the East and the West with a transcontinental railroad immediately impressed the producer with its rich, romantic material. Personally he went about selecting the director and the cast and gathering together the army of technicians needed. Months were spent in research work, and no effort was spared to insure the picture being correct in all details. This embraced locations, costumes, characters, material and historical incidents. It took a year of preparation before a single scene was taken.

Jack G. Leo, vice-president of Fox Film Corporation.

To attract the attention of the public and heads of the nation's affairs to this tremendous undertaking, the biggest publicity campaign ever put out by the company was started. For weeks a giant airplane flew over New York, spelling in mile-high letters the name of the picture during the day. At night the plane, with electrically lighted letters of gigantic size, blazed forth "The Iron Horse" over the heads of the "White Way" millions.

Senators, congressmen and heads of the nation's industries were invited to see the production, which resulted in a shower of praise and endorsement. Then came the opening at the Lyric theatre, which was attended by one of the most distinguished audiences New York has ever seen.

The following day the critics of the leading dailies were unanimous in proclaiming "The Iron Horse" marked an epoch in screen history.

As No Man Has Loved

"AS No Man Has Loved," the William Fox epic production based on Edward Everett Hale's "The Man Without a Country," is another of the big specials to be released to exhibitors direct from an established run in New York.

To safeguard exhibitors against re-issues of old pictures bearing the title of Dr. Hale's story, the present title was chosen, typifying the theme of love and romance contained in the production.

Dr. Hale's story has been read by more than 10,000,000 people throughout the world, and has been proclaimed one of the nation's literary classics. Its main strength lies in its appeal to those in every walk of life, its power and its beauty. When the story was first issued, it swept the country by storm. In America it has thrilled three generations. It has been translated into all tongues, and all races have been inspired by its sentiments.

The production represents the cherished desire for many years of Mr. Fox to make a production based on this story. To be certain that the picture would adequately reflect the power and glory of Dr. Hale's classic, six months of painstaking research work was spent upon it before turning the script over for actual studio work. This preparation meant the building of replicas of river boats and warships of fifty years ago besides arranging for a vast company of actors and actresses.

To make the picture Rowland V. Lee, the widely-known director, was chosen and given carte blanche. After a year's continuous work, Mr. Lee delivered the finished production. The picture was then given its premiere at the Central Theatre in New York and was attended by high officials in the army, navy and other branches of the government. Also in this notable audience were church and legal luminaries, and the elite of the nation. Newspaper accounts of the opening showed that the audience had been profoundly impressed by the magnificent and faithful interpretation of the Hale classic.

A cast of exceptional merit is included. Edward Hearn takes the lead as "Nolan," the principal character in the story, with Pauline Starke playing the role of "Anne Bissell," his sweetheart. Others in the cast are Lucy Beaumont, Richard Tucker, William Walling, George Billings, Wilfred Lucas and Earle Metcalf. In addition there are hundreds used in the Aaron Burr and the sea battle episodes in the picture.

John C. Eisele, treasurer of Fox Film Corporation.

The Fool

CHANNING POLLOCK'S "The Fool" comes in screen version to the exhibitor this coming season with a most elaborate campaign behind it. The play which for two years blazed a trail of dramatic glory in New York and throughout the country has been transformed into a screen production.

Like other of the big Fox specials, it comes to exhibitors backed by a New York run at the Central Theatre. For a year it has been heralded and advertised, and now it comes as one of the greatest of the special productions to be issued by the company for next season.

The play is familiar to the country's millions who flocked to see it wherever shown while on tour. In New York more than 400,000 persons saw it in a season's run. Its popularity was no sooner assured than William Fox began negotiations for the screen rights and purchased them over the heads of other picture producers.

Its stage success in New York is now being duplicated in screen form at the Central Theatre. Heading the cast is Edmund Lowe, the brilliant and rising young screen star. Supporting him are Mary Thurman, Paul Panzer, Riley Hatch, Brenda Bond, George Lessey, Henry Sedley, Downing Clark, Raymond Bloomer and others. Edmund Goulding, the well known scenarist, prepared the script.

"The Fool" was directed by Harry Millarde who has to his credit "Over the Hill," and "If Winter Comes."

Havoc

THE international stage success, "Havoc," has been made into one of the most ambitious offerings in the history of Fox productions. For months extensive preparations for the filming of this play were carried on, even to the extent of sending Edmund Goulding, the scenarist, to England to confer with the author, Henry Wall, and to visit the actual war scenes upon which the play was based.

"Havoc" was originally written by Mr. Wall to please himself, and with no idea of financial benefit. Presented at the Sunday night Repertoire Theatre, in London, it made such a hit that it was removed to the Haymarket, where it ran for almost a year. Then it was brought here for an extended run in New York with the original company.

When Mr. Fox acquired the screen rights to the play, he realized that more than ordinarily careful work would have to be put into the scenario. Accordingly Mr. Goulding was sent abroad for six months to visualize and get at first hand a true conception of the scenes and situations.

"Havoc" however, must not be considered in the category of a "war play." While a number of the scenes are laid in the front line trenches, the story in the main concerns a love vampire who causes "havoc" in the hearts of brave men whom she deceives to satisfy her selfish ambitions.

The making of this picture was entrusted into the hands of Rowland V. Lee, director of many of the big Fox specials, and an unusually fine cast was selected. This is headed by George O'Brien. With him are Madge Bellamy, Walter McGrail, Leslie Fenton, Harvey Clark, Eulalie Jensen, David Butler, Wade Boteler, and others.

Mr. Lee served in the World War in the actual scenes shown in this picture. Entering the British army as a private he was later made an officer and it is said, was the only motion picture director to be wounded and gassed at the front.

The Fighting Heart

HERE is one of the fastest-moving pictures ever shown upon the screen. There is action from start to finish.

Mr. Fox believes this an ideal production from the popular viewpoint. It concerns the deep love of a small-town boy and girl; a town bully who is soundly thrashed by the boy, and a subsequent meeting of these rivals in the prize ring in New York. From the country town the spectator is brought into the whirl of big city night life, presented in bewilderingly beautiful settings.

Saul E. Rogers, vice-president and general counsel of Fox Film Corporation.

The scenes in the ring where the two battle for the championship are the climax.

The picture is from Larry Evans' novel, "Once to Every Man." The screen version is by Lillie Hayward. John Ford is the director.

The star part of the country boy who battles his way to success is taken by George O'Brien. Billy Dove is his charming foil. J. Farrell MacDonald is said to be funnier than ever, and Victor MacLaglen vividly portrays the combination of town bully, bootlegger and prize fighter.

To this cast are added James Marcus, Francis Powers, Harvey Clark, Colin Chase, Bert Woodruff, Francis Ford, Lynn Cowan, Diana Miller, Edward Piel, Jack Herrick, Hazel Howell, and a host of others.

The Johnstown Flood

NEVER in the history of America has there been a greater catastrophe than "The Johnstown Flood," and no fiction ever written could equal the awe-compelling story contained in the facts of this disaster.

For screen presentation this human drama, it is said, offers to the exhibitor a product of great box office worth. Without deviation from the facts, the story portrays love, thrills, sacrifice, suffering, and a mysterious Heaven-like force that wreaks punishment upon a town that has defied its Creator.

Even animals portray heroic roles in the picture. The dynamiting of a terrific log jam is one of the big scenes.

The story of the picture reads like fiction, but every incident shown is based on fact. Like Paul Revere of Revolutionary times, a young and beautiful girl is shown riding at breakneck speed through the town and its environs shouting out a warning of the flood that is rushing towards the doomed town. Later the deluge descends, and in the whirling maelstrom float burning roofs of houses from which scores are rescued. Men and women and animals risk their lives in daring deeds in the swirl of water that has blotted out the valley town. This scene, taken from the stories of eye-witnesses, has been duplicated.

Reginald Barker has in hand the work on "The Johnstown Flood," and the leading members of the cast are Edmund Lowe, Jacqueline Logan, Alma Rubens, and Paul Panzer.

Siberia

THE biggest melodramatic offering of the year is claimed by Fox Film Corporation for its production "Siberia," based on the international play success by Bartley Campbell.

There are few, if any, exhibitors, the Fox company believes, who do not remember the Scenarists engaged by William Fox to prepare the scripts for the Fox Specials to be presented next season. Stage Successes Important Factors on List success of the play. It was shown in America and all over the world for more than twenty-five years, playing to packed houses wherever it went.

The limited scope of the speaking stage could not allow full justice to be given to the story, but on the screen all its vastness is fully brought out. The orgies at the Winter Palace of the Czar, the Russian spy system at work, the salt mines of Siberia, mutiny of the political exiles, and an intense story of love and sacrifice are, according to the announcement, some of the thrills that fill every scene of the production.

This is another special to be produced by Director Victor Schertzinger from a screen version by Edfrid Bingham. The cast will contain well known and popular names, it is announced.

Thank You

LAUGHTER, romance, heart interest and dramatic situations go into making the special production "Thank You," taken from the John Golden stage success that ran a year in New York and four years on tour.

Written for the stage by Winchell Smith and Tom Cushing, it brought unstinted praise. This included prominent ministers, legislators, business men and women. The general public's interest was shown in the packed houses that greeted it for four years.

Laid in a rural community, the story deals with a slip of a girl who adroitly tames a townful of hypocrites. Aided by her sweetheart, she confounds those who would bring about the undoing of her uncle, the underpaid village clergyman. The climax of the picture shows a thrilling combat between the girl's sweetheart and her chief tormentor.

James R. Grainger, general sales manager of Fox Film Corporation.

An arrangement between William Fox and John Golden, with the co-operation of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., calls for a part of the proceeds from this picture to be turned over to the pension fund for aged and infirm ministers. Public notice of this fact alone, the Fox company believes, will assure generous support to every theatre showing "Thank You."

Frances Marion has prepared the screen version and the direction will be in the hands of John Ford, of "Iron Horse" fame.

When the Door Opened

"WHEN the Door Opened," James Oliver Curwood's dramatic story of the great Northwest, is presented to the exhibitor by William Fox for next season.

The company will be taken by the director, Reginald Barker, to the Saskatchewan and Manitoba provinces of Canada in order that a true conception of the backgrounds in the story will appear upon the screen.

Love and adventure form the theme of the tale that deals with virile men and women who are continually called upon to face death and danger. The screen version was written by Harry Chandlee, and the cast was chosen with special care.

The Dixie Merchant

"THE charm and appeal of this picture lies in the fact that it presents a theme entirely new to the screen. It is as different in plot from the ordinary story as night is from day, and yet contains all the elements essential for screen entertainment," says the announcement.

The picture is based on a new novel "The Chicken Wagon Family" by Barry Benefield, with the screen version by Edfrid Bingham. The direction is by Victor Schertzinger. The cast is headed by Madge Bellamy and Jay Hunt, who was also chosen above all others to take the lead in "Lightnin'."

The Silver Treasure

The announced policy of William Fox to base his productions on stories by well known authors or on stage plays of proved success brings to exhibitors for the season of 1925-26 the great name of Joseph Conrad, whose writings are unexcelled in English literature. Under the title "The Silver Treasure," Conrad's greatest novel, "Nostromo," is being made for the screen under the direction of Rowland V. Lee.

Colorful Romances Selected for Fox Program

A greater part of the story has a tropical setting with all of its romance and glamor. The struggle for wealth, in which a man sacrifices his honor, and the story of a love that cannot be quenched in spite of untold hardships forms a tale to spellbind any audience. Although Conrad has been called "Master of sea stories," this title does not give full credit to the writer for his ability to word-paint thrilling adventures ashore. In "The Silver Treasure" a scene depicts an attack on a peaceful mining town by a fierce band of marauders.

A cast of distinction picked carefully to represent the types described by the author is being chosen. The screen version was written by Lillie Hayward.

Kentucky Pride

THE race horse is shown in all of its beauty, its almost human intelligence and devotion in the production "Kentucky Pride," released as one of its leading specials by Fox Film Corporation for the coming season.

In company with an exciting story of love, the lure of the race track, and dramatic situations throughout, the life of the race horse from birth to old age is portrayed. All the outdoor scenes are laid in the country of the Kentucky blue grass, so the horses are shown in their natural surroundings.

In addition to the thrilling race scenes, the Fox company believes the world-wide love of the horse will prove a lure for picture audiences. It was directed by John Ford.

Henry Walthall has the leading role, and is supported by J. Farrell MacDonald, Gertrude Astor, Malcolm Waite, Belle Stoddard, Winston Miller, Peaches Jackson, and many others.

Marriage

THE name of H. G. Wells will appear on the screen for the first time when William Fox presents for 1925-1926 the noted writer's story, "Marriage." Hailed as the world's foremost living novelist, Mr. Wells up to this time has steadfastly refused to allow any of his writings to be picturized.

Clyde W. Eckhardt, Assistant to General Manager, Fox Film Corporation.

Mr. Fox bent every effort to induce Mr. Wells to capitulate. When consent was finally given, "Marriage" was chosen for the screen because of its success in book form. It has been one of the most consistent best sellers throughout the world and contains an absorbing human plot.

Wells was one of the first modern critics of the marriage institution. This particular novel, "Marriage," started much of the present day discussion of the various phases of matrimony. The author, also, has been fearless in attacking social problems, and in "Marriage" he has created a hero who is described as one of the most remarkable characters in all fiction.

H. G. Wells' works, it is claimed, are in greater public demand than those of any other living writer. The picture will be directed by Roy Neill.

The Rime of the Ancient Mariner

A special production will be "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner," based on the poetic masterpiece of Samuel Taylor Coleridge, which will be presented to exhibitors by Fox Film Corporation for the season of 1925-1926.

The fantastic, colorful and exciting material contained in this great poem was recognized by Mr. Fox as being peculiarly adaptable to the screen, and plans were inaugurated to give full scope to this most original theme.

In this dream of a skeleton ship with symbolic Death gambling with Life-In-Death for the Mariner's life, there runs a heart-stirring story of human kindness to man, bird and beast. The screen version, written by Robert Lord, calls for a production entirely different from anything previously attempted.

Samuel Taylor Coleridge was a philosopher and poet, and his works occupy a place of first importance in English literature. This poem, on which the picture is based, proved to be the most noted landmark in the history of the romantic period in which it was written, and was the most noteworthy of five poems of which he was author.

East Lynne

ACKNOWLEDGED for fifty years to contain one of the most absorbing love stories ever written, "East Lynne" comes to the exhibitor next season.

Since the novel was first written by Mrs. Henry Wood, millions of copies have been sold throughout the world in many languages. The play ran for many years.

Its possibilities for profit to the exhibitor were at once recognized by Mr. Fox, who resolved to produce "East Lynne" on a scale never before attempted.

To this end he placed Emmett Flynn, the director, at the head of the production with a free hand to bring forth all that the story calls for, but which cannot be told in any other way except on the screen.

Lenore J. Coffee, who wrote the screen version of "East Lynne," is one of the foremost scenario writers of today.

The cast includes Alma Rubens, Edmund Lowe, Lou Tellegen, Marjorie Daw, Frank Keenan, Lydia Knott, Paul Panzer, Leslie

"The Iron Horse," spectacular historical drama dealing with building of the first American transcontinental railroad, will head the list of Fox Specials for release during 1925-26, going direct to exhibitors from long-run engagements in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

"Lightnin'" to Live Again as Fox Film

Fenton, Martha Mattox, Belle Bennett and Harry Seymour.

Thunder Mountain

BASED on the John Golden success, "Howdy Folks," the screen production "Thunder Mountain," the Fox company believes, will receive a welcome from exhibitors. The fame of the play in New York, Boston, Chicago, and on tour is an asset in itself.

Chiefly it concerns the dramatic struggle of a mountain preacher to save the soul of a girl against her will. To accomplish this, the minister, who is a "he-man" all the way through, does not hesitate at the proper time to use his fists. As is generally the case, however, the clergyman's endeavors are misconstrued, and he is narrowly saved from death.

The play was written by Pearl Franklin, and prepared for the screen by Gerald C. Duffy. Victor Schertzinger is the director.

Lightnin'

HEADING the John Golden Unit of Clean American Productions for the season of 1925-1926 is "Lightnin'," which carries with it the slogan "The Play That Broke the World's Record!"

In the face of bids by other producers for the screen rights to "Lightnin'," William Fox succeeded in securing a contract whereby this and other great plays are to be transferred to the screen.

The success of this play in New York has no parallel in dramatic history. Its three years' run on Broadway netted it 1,291 performances, almost doubling the previous record which had stood for twenty-five years. This was a run of 658 performances by "A Trip to Chinatown." In Chicago "Lightning'" ran for two years, and in Boston one year.

One of the most difficult problems ever faced by Mr. Fox was the choosing of an actor to play the part of "Lightnin' Bill Jones," the role that immortalized the name of Frank Bacon. After looking over a field of hundreds of applicants and making scores of screen tests, the coveted part was awarded to Jay Hunt, a veteran actor of stage and screen and a personal friend of the late Frank Bacon.

Tom Mix, star in Fox photoplays.

The remainder of the cast presents a list of names well known to screen patrons. Madge Bellamy has the part of "Milly," and J. Farrell MacDonald is "The Judge." Ethel Clayton is "Margaret," and there are also included Otis Harlan, Edythe Chapman, James Marcus, Wallace McDonald, Richard Travers, Brandon Hurst and many others.

The scenario was written by Frances Marion from the play by Frank Bacon and Winchell Smith. The picture was directed by John Ford.

Three Bad Men

WRITTEN by Charles Kenyon, author of "The Iron Horse," "Three Bad Men," deals with the struggle for conquest, love and treasure of Central America. It is essentially an action picture in a colorful setting.

The cast includes George O'Brien, Madge Bellamy, Alma Rubens, Edmund Lowe, Charles Buck Jones, Jacqueline Logan, Paul Panzer, J. Farrell MacDonald, Judy King and others. Rowland V. Lee, who directed the William Fox epic "As No Man Has Loved," has been chosen to produce "Three Bad Men."

Part-Time Wives

"PART-TIME WIVES" is based on the startling Good Housekeeping Magazine story by Bessie Beatty.

From a screen version by Gerald C. Duffy, Emmett Flynn is producing a picture that contains the glamour of wealth, the playgrounds of society in Palm Beach, New York and Paris, a life within the mansions of the so-called elite.

The theme deals with husbands and wives who, after the waning of the honeymoon, set their paths apart in the giddy whirl of social divertisements. The consequent temptations that fall in the path of both sexes, ennuied to desperation in their frantic hunt for "something new," are brought up to a dramatic climax.

One of the principal scenes, which it is claimed will prove a distinct novelty on the screen, is shown on board a big transatlantic liner.

The First Year

HAILED as the greatest comedy drama of married life ever written, "The First Year," one of the John Golden Unit, comes to the exhibitor in screen form with a record of two solid years of stage performances in New York.

The story, as can be guessed from the title, concerns the first year of married life of a young couple, typically American. Their trials and tribulations introduce humor, pathos and at times border on tragedy.

Frances Marion wrote the screen script from the play story by Frank Craven. The direction is in the hands of Frank Borzage, recently added to the Fox ranks, who has been given an exceptional cast.

Seventh Heaven

"SEVENTH Heaven" is another of the John Golden phenomenal stage successes. In addition to playing nearly 1,000 performances in New York, numerous companies on tour filled theatres all over America.

The play was written by Austin Strong after he spent six months in the Paris slums in the haunts of the Apaches, thereby obtaining at first hand a true knowledge of life and habits in the dens of the French capital.

"As No Man Has Loved," the William Fox production of Edward Everett Hale's "The Man Without A Country," one of the new Specials from the Fox Company.

Celebrated Writers Contribute Fox Stories

To such an extent will careful attention to detail be made that some of the original taxicabs used by the French government to carry soldiers to the front at the battle of the Marne, thereby saving Paris, were brought to America to be used in the picture.

The screen version has been written by Frances Marion, and Emmett Flynn, will direct the production.

Lazybones

"LAZYBONES" comes to the exhibitor fresh from its stage success in New York. This play by Owen Davis, produced by Sam H. Harris, was one of last season's hits.

It contains a love story written around characters that capture the hearts of all who see them. The author is of wide reputation and noted for his stories of absorbing human interest. The name of Owen Davis alone, Mr. Fox believes, furnishes an asset to the picture of the greatest value to the exhibitor.

The chief character of the picture is a unique combination of idler and philanthropist. His greatest enemy is himself, and his intense love for mankind leads him to commit sacrifices that bring him heaps of trouble. In spite of it all, however, the heroine of the story sticks to him and believes in him, defying the finger of scorn pointed at her by her fellow townsfolk. In a dramatic climax all is righted, the solution bringing a complete surprise to the audience.

Buck Jones, star in Fox Photoplays.

Frank Borzage has been given the direction of this production. Frances Marion wrote the screen version.

The Wheel

ANOTHER offering from the John Golden Unit is "The Wheel," a story of temptation and high pressure life written for the stage by Winchell Smith. In the story, which contains an absorbing love theme, a girl struggles to save the man she loves from his ruinous mode of living.

"The Wheel" has an atmosphere of high society, culture, and magnificence. It is one of the most elaborately prepared specials on the Fox schedule.

Victor Schertzinger, the director, is at the head of the production.

The cast is headed by Harrison Ford. With Mr. Ford are Claire Adams and Mahlon Hamilton. Others in the cast are David Torrence, Margaret Livingston, Clara Horton, and Georgie Harris.

The lavish scale on which the picture is being produced calls for hundreds of extras and minor part actors and actresses.

The Trouble Hunter

PRESENTING the beauty, lure and fascination of the South Seas, "The Trouble Hunter" was selected by Mr. Fox as an ideal story for the screen.

Set in a tropical atmosphere of mystery, it involves a hunt for buried treasure, a beautiful girl cast away on an uncharted island. Chinese pirates, ruthless fortune-mad traders, and a real, dashing Yankee hero.

The screen version was written by J. Clarkson Miller from the novel "Pearls of Desire" by Austin J. Small. John Griffith Wray is the director, and the cast includes Edmund Lowe, Alma Rubens, Jacqueline Logan, Paul Panzer and Judy King.

Imposing Array of Stars For Fox Specials

WIDESPREAD popularity with the fans and real box office value are claimed for the names of the stars and featured players which the Fox Film Corporation has assembled to enact the numerous dramatic specials that company will produce for its 1925-26 schedule of releases.

Leading the list, is Tom Mix, kingpin of Western stars, who is now touring Europe adding to his laurels and legion of admirers.

Tom will make seven special productions for Fox the coming season. One of his most ambitious picturizations for the coming season will be the portraying of that gallant Spanish cavalier, Don Juan. The success of his interpretation of Dick Turpin, has led Fox officials to believe that the cowboy star is the right man to bring to the screen the dashing, daring hero of Old Spain.

Sharing starring honors with Tom Mix in Fox productions next season are Buck Jones, and Earle Foxe.

Heading the list for featured roles in the other special productions that form the Fox release schedule is George O'Brien, the young star who was introduced with success last season by the Fox company. O'Brien has the leading role in "The Iron Horse" and "The Fighting Heart," already completed and is now working in "Havoc."

Then comes Alma Rubens, Madge Bellamy, Jacqueline Logan, Pauline Starke, Bille Dove, Shirley Mason, Florence Gilbert, Judy King, Margaret Livingston, Edmund Lowe, J. Farrell MacDonald, Diana Miller and Jay Hunt—a veritable starry firmament of unsurpassed brilliance.

Miss Rubens, who will be remembered for her excellent work in the Fox productions "Gerald Granston's Lady" and "The Dancers" will have as one of her first pictures for the coming season "East Lynne," in which she will portray "Lady Isabel." She will also be seen in "The Johnstown Flood" and "The Trouble Hunter."

Madge Bellamy, considered the most beautiful girl appearing in pictures, was signed to a Fox contract for her exceptional work in "The Iron Horse," which will be released to exhibitors early next season, and in "The Dancers" last season. Miss Bellamy is slated to appear in three Fox releases for next season, namely, "Lightnin'," "Havoc" and "The Dixie Merchant."

Lowe, who is the featured player in "The Fool," will have many suitable roles assigned to him in the coming Fox production. Promoted from program pictures to specials, this player is now working at the West Coast Studos in "East Lynne" opposite Alma Rubens. He will also play opposite her in "The Johnstown Flood" and "The Trouble Hunter."

Petite Shirley Mason, like Lowe is again making her bow in special productions after a few years as a star in program pictures. She will have many of the leading parts yet to be handed out. They will be announced later.

Jay Hunt, as the world knows, has the job of bringing to the screen the role of "Lightnin' Bill Jones," in the screen version of "Lightnin'," and when he has finished that he will be featured in "The Dixie Merchant."

J. Farrell MacDonald, who captured New York as the result of his interpretation of "Corporal Casey" in "The Iron Horse," will also be seen in "The Fighting Heart," "Lightnin'," and "Kentucky Pride."

Margaret Livingston will have important roles in "The Wheel" and other productions. She has just been signed to a long term contract with the Fox company.

For other leading roles, "heavy" and character parts the Fox company has alligned a group of sterling actors. This group includes such well known names as Paul Panzer, Ethel Clayton, Charles Edward Bull, Will Walling, Fred Kohler, Cyril Chadwick, Gladys Hulette, James Marcus, Francis Powers, James Welch, Colin Chase, John Padjan, Jack Ganzhorn, Frances Teague, Edward Piel, Brenda Bond, Mary Thurman, Edward Herman, Lucy Beaumont, Harvey Clark, Henry Walthall, Gertrude Astor, Alice Calhoun, Robert Cain, Freeman Wood, George Berrell, Virginia Madison, Francis Ford, Jack Herrick, Victor MacLaglen, Wallace MacDonald, Richard Travers, Otis Harlan, Walter McGrail, Marian Nixon, Fred De Silva, Harrison Ford, Claire Adams, Lou Tellegen, Frank Keenan, Marjorie Daw, Leslie Fenton Lydia Knott and Richard Headrick.

Group of Star Directors Assembled By Fox

A NOTABLE array of directors appears on the roster of Fox Film Corporation for the coming season.

Added to those who have achieved fame and reputation with big Fox productions are several new names. Among them are F. M. Murnau, the youthful German directorial genius whose European-made picture, "The Last Laugh," created a distinct sensation in America; Victor Schertzinger, whose name is familiar to all exhibitors; Frank Borzage, whose brilliant record with big productions is well known, and John Griffith Wray, formerly production manager and director for Ince.

Mr. Borzage is in his early thirties, and was born in Salt Lake City, Utah. He started his career on the English speaking stage as a boy. In 1913 he went to Los Angeles, and within an amazingly short time became a director. Since then he has made more than 100 feature productions.

Two of the biggest Fox specials have been given over to Mr. Borzage. They are "Lazybones," by Owen Davis, and John Golden's "The First Year," by Frank Craven. The screen versions for both pictures are by Frances Marion.

Mr. Wray, also a young man, was born in Minneapolis, Minn. Starring as an actor, he had graduated to managing director when he decided to join forces with the late Thomas Ince. His rise here was rapid. After directing several big features, he was made manager of all the Ince productions. Mr. Wray's first production for Fox will be "The Trouble Hunter," a story of the South Seas based on the novel "Pearls of Desire," by Austin J. Small.

Mr. Schertzinger's first production for the company will be a notable one. It is a screen version of Winchell Smith's play, "The Wheel," and the director is particularly enthusiastic over it. He will also direct "Siberia"

Mr. Schertzinger is a gradute of the University of Pennsylvania, and began his motion picture career in the early days of the industry. His most notable work also was with Ince.

Mr. Murnau was invited to joint the "Fox family" chiefly because he achieved the "impossible" on the screen, viz:—something new. In his European production the George O'Brien, appearing in William Fox Photoplays.

American public was treated to effects that not only amazed all who saw them, but sadly puzzled even old-timers in the film industry. The productions to which Mr. Murnau will be assigned are to appear in a later announcement.

John Ford, through his masterly work in "The Iron Horse," finds himself at the age of twenty-nine ranked with the greatest directors in the industry.

For the coming season he has been chosen to direct the greatest of the John Golden plays, "Lightning'," a signal honor in return for his painstaking work in other big specials. Other new specials that will carry his name as directors are "The Fighting Heart," from Larry Evans' story, "Once to Every Man," and "Kentucky Pride," a thrilling race picture.

Rowland V. Lee is another name that spells success in the Fox ranks. His "As No Man Has Loved," based on the Edward Everett Hale story, "The Man Without a Country," goes direct to exhibitors from its run in New York, and few productions can boast of praise equal to that showered upon it by the newspaper critics.

Mr. Lee, although also a young man, has had wide experience in screen production. Prior to his entry into motion pictures, the director had a stage career of several years in stock, with David Belasco and other stage producers. While a lieutenant in the Twenty-Eighth Infantry he was sent into the Argonne, where he was gassed and wounded so that he was unfit for further duty. Because of his personal experiences at the front, Mr. Lee has been chosen to direct "Havoc," a screen production of the internationally successful play of the same name by Henry Wall, depicting English society in wartime. Mr. Lee will also direct "The Silver Treasure," based on Joseph Conrad's great novel "Nostromo."

Emmett Flynn needs no introduction to exhibitors of Fox pictures. This brilliant young producer of such specials as "A Connecticut Yankee," "Monte Cristo," "Shame" and "The Man Who Came Back" has been chosen this year to picturize several of the most important productions in the giant series.

These are "Part Time Wives," and "East Lynn," which is known all over the world.

J. G. Blystone, who is credited with more than thirty productions under the Fox banner, has made Jackson Gregory's "The Everlasting Whisper" with Tom Mix in the leading role.

Mr. Blystone has been directing dramatic productions for about two years. Previously he was Hollywood's premier comedy director but displayed such exceptional skill that Mr. Fox felt the director would have a better opportunity to exercise his ability in the dramatic field.

Harry Millarde, who has to his credit two of the greatest of Fox productions, "Over The Hill," and "If Winter Comes," appears as director of "The Fool" featuring Edmund Lowe, and now playing a successful run at the Central Theatre, New York.

Other directors on the dramatic staff who have proved their worth are Maurice Elvey, W S. Van Dyke, Edmund Mortimer, R. William Neill and Lynn Reynolds.

On the comedy lot the list of well-known fun-makers includes George Marshall, who is directing the "Van Bibber" series of comedies based on Richard Harding Davis stories; Benny Stoloff, Louis Seiler, Robert Kerr, Bryon Foy, with Henry Lehrman as supervisor of comedies.

"Lightnin'," stage play in which Frank Bacon shattered existing long-run records, will be the first of the John Golden successes to be offered next season by Fox Film Corporation.

New Program Offers Seven Tom Mix Vehicles

TOM MIX, who has become a sort of national institution in pictures, and is now on a triumphant tour abroad, will be presented the coming season in seven thrilling special western adventure productions of a quality exceeding anything else of the kind ever attempted by Fox Film Corporation.

Tom Mix's success in "Dick Turpin," "Riders of the Purple Sage" and "The Rainbow Trail," by Zane Grey, show him at the height of his brilliant career.

Before leaving for Europe, Mix finished his first big special for 1925-1926, "The Everlasting Whisper," by Jackson Gregory. Chiefly it concerns a race between the hero and a band of cut-throats for a gold mine of mystery secreted in the western hills.

With Tom Mix in this production are Alice Calhoun, Robert Cain, George Berrell, Walter James, Virginia Madison, Earl Dane and others. The screen version is by Wyndham Gittens. It was directed by J. G. Blystone.

Max Brand, author of "The Untamed" and other stirring tales of the West, furnishes Tom Mix an ideal vehicle in "The Best Bad Man." This is based on the writer's original magazine story, "Senor Jingle Bells," and concerns a recklelss adventurer who turns his previously bad record into good for his love of a beautiful girl.

Another one of the "Big Seven" is "The Lucky Horseshoe," the scenes of which are laid in Spain. Here the star changes his cowboy outfit for that of Don Juan, and as the Prince of Spanish lovers gets into all kinds of romantic adventures.

The tremendous mass of publicity attending Tom Mix on his tour across America and in Europe has brought him before the public eye more prominently than ever before.

"According to the judgment of London editors, about the most important event in the British Empire or the world is the arrival of Tom Mix, with Tony, at Southampton," says the opening paragraph of a special cable despatch to the New York Evening Post from its London correspondent.

Another report of his arrival in the city on the Thames, cabled to the New York Herald-Tribune from its correspondent, said that Mix was the center of all juvenile England. The despatch adds:

"A half-dozen newspapers contain editorial references to Mix, and, in fact, he has backed Painleve off several editorial pages."

New Yorkers got an idea of Mix's popularity when he visited the office of the Fox corporation. While Tom was in the building it was almost impossible for anyone to get in or get out of the building so great was the throng that waited for a glimpse of him.

Mix found time to give several talks over the radio and he rode his famous pony through Central Park. He was the cynosure for all eyes at the performances at Broadway theatres. He met and engaged in a long pow-pow with Governor Alfred E. Smith to whom he gave another one of his celebrated Stetson hats as a memento of the occasion.

Incidentally he conducted several contests in various New York newspapers and managed to drop over to Newark, New Jersey, to attend a presentation ceremony for the best boys of that city.

One of the biggest moments of his visit to Manhattan was the Bon Voyage Buffet dinner arranged in his honor at the Astor Hotel. Here again Tony shared the high honors with him, the horse being presented "in person."

Fox Program Features Give Way To Specials

FOX Film Corporation will abandon program pictures and concentrate on special productions for the season of 1925-1926, beginning in August.

To exhibitors of Fox products this announcement will not come as any great surprise. It has been easy to realize that it was only a question of time when the evolutionary work which has been going on in the Fox company would culminate in the abandonment of the small program product.

This evolutionary movement has been noticeable for the last five or six years. Each year there have been fewer and fewer of the small pictures cut to the accepted program standard and more of the larger productions known as special pictures.

At first these big specials were few and far between, although stupendous affairs for the period in which they were produced. They were veritable milestones in production advancement. Gradually these large productions have increased in number until they became of frequent occurrence on the schedule released to exhibitors.

The real graduation from smaller pictures was begun about five years ago with a schedule that included such productions as "Over the Hill," "A Connecticut Yankee" and "The Queen of Sheba."

Every year since then Mr. Fox has been making more special productions. Some of the outstanding successes have been "Monte Cristo," "Nero," "The Silent Command," and "If Winter Comes." This advancement has evolved into this new policy of "special only."

It is also announced that artists who have heretofore been identified mostly with program products, such as Shirley Mason and Edmund Lowe, will be given important roles as leading players in the special productions.

In the West Coast studios some of the biggest and most important of the specials to be released next season are already under way. These include John Golden stage successes acquired for the screen by Mr. Fox as the basis of the John Golden Unit of Clean American Plays, one of the most important parts of the Fox product.

"Lightnin'," "The Wheel," and "The First Year" have already been started as the first of the Golden specials. Other big guns that will boom in the Fox broadside, and which are now in the making are "Havoc," the stage drama of London social life based on war conditions; "Lazybones," the New York stage success of this season; "Marriage," the first work of H. G. Wells to be presented on the screen, and a number of others.

These will be ready to join "The Iron Horse," "The Fool" and "As No Man Has Loved" (the new title for "The Man Without a Country"), three giant specials.

Tom Mix in "The Everlasting Whisper," the first of seven vehicles with the favorite cowboy-hero which Fox will release this year. The story is by Jackson Gregory.

Leading Scenarists Writing Scripts For Fox

MAGAZINE writers, novelists and photoplay dramatists of established reputation are represented in the staff of scenarists in charge of the scripts that form the basis of the Fox specials for next season. The list shows a number of new names that stand at the head of their class in this branch of the film industry.

Frances Marion's name looms at the head of the scenarists. This skilled writer has been in the film industry since 1914 and has prepared scripts for all the prominent motion picture companies. Although her parents were well able to pay her way through college, she refused to take a penny from them. Instead she devoted her spare hours to writing short stories and scenarios. At the end of her studies she had not only paid for her tuition, but had a neat little bank account besides.

For the coming season she has to her credit a notable list of adaptations in the Fox special productions, among them being "Lightnin'," "Thank You," "The First Year," and "Lazybones."

Gerald C. Duffy, another of the most prominent on the Fox staff, has been writing for the screen for twelve years He is a well known magazine writer and is credited with more than 200 published short stories. He was formerly a magazine editor and a personal friend of O. Henry. Because of his acquaintance with the great short story writer, Mr. Duffy will supervise the preparation of continuities of the O. Henry stories to be screened by the Fox organization.

Mr. Duffy's work for the Fox company next season will be seen in "Thunder Mountain," "Part-Time Wives," "Marriage," H. G. Wells' story, and "Siberia."

Edfrid Bingham was a vetaran newspaper man when he turned his writing endeavors to the screen. A graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, he was for twenty years a newspaper man in Denver, New York and on the Paris branch of the New York Herald. He joined forces with Fox in June of last year and this season has to his credit the scenarios for "The Rainbow Trail," and "Riders of the Purple Sage" for Tom Mix, and several others. His work in the new big specials will be seen in "The Wheel" and "The Dixie Merchant"

Buck Jones to Be Starred in Seven Fox Specials

SEVEN virile western pictures, featuring adventure and romance, are on the 1925-1926 schedule for Buck Jones, the Fox star.

Exhibitors, it is announced, have received with enthusiasm the news that the Buck Jones pictures have been raised to the calibre of specials. They are based on stories by noted authors and contain supporting casts of prominence.

For early release in August and October will be "The Timber Wolf" and "Desert Valley," both from the pen of Jackson Gregory. "The Timber Wolf has practically been completed.

With Buck Jones in the leading role, those with him are Elinor Fair, Dave Dyas, Ben Allen, William Walling, Robert Mack, Jack Craig and many others. The scenario was written by John Stone, and the production is being directed by W. S. Van Dyke.

Buck Jones has been steadily rising to the front ranks of Western stars. Born in Vincennes, Indiana, he has climbed up from a mechanic's helper to one of the world's greatest horsemen.

Charles Kenyon, who wrote "The Iron Horse," will contribute his capable endeavors to "The Johnstown Flood," one of the biggest of next year's offerings, and "Three Bad Men." Mr. Kenyon is a veteran at the screen writing profession. Formerly a newspaper man, he graduated into a short story writer of great prominence. Finally he joined the scenario writing field, where he has built up a name that is included with the best in this branch of the industry.

J. Clarkson Miller, who is responsible for the screen versions of "The Trouble Hunter" and "The Best Bad Man," two of the big offerings for next season, can point with pardonable pride to a brilliant record in the literary world. Born in Des Moines, he is a graduate of the University of Iowa and started his literary career as a newspaper writer in his home town, Chicago and Los Angeles. Then he turned to short story and verse writing. Up to the time he entered the film field he was a regular contributor to The Saturday Evening Post, Smart Set and a host of other magazines. He is also the author of several vaudeville sketches.

It was through the advice of her sister, Seena Owen, the screen star, that Lillie Hayward entered the ranks of scenario writers. This was about six years ago, and up to that time Miss Hayward had studied to be a professional musician. Her sister's advice, however, proved to be very sound, for Miss Hayward immediately showed a special talent for the work. Miss Hayward in her short career has headed the scenario staffs of three prominent film organizations. For the future Fox specials she is writing the screen versions of "The Silver Treasure," from Joseph Conrad's novel "Nostromo," and "The Fighting Heart."

Robert Lord, a newcomer in the Fox ranks, can point to a decidedly diversified career. Educated at Harvard, he went immediately to the stage, joining the Bramhall Players, in New York, and later playing several parts in the Morosco Stock Company, in Los Angeles. Tiring of the stage, he became dramatic and music critic on The Boston Telegram, and took to play and short story writing. Mr. Lord at the present time is engaged in arranging continuities for several of the important releases for next season.

Harry Chandlee, who started his career as special writer for The Washington Star and The Washington Times, is also a well known short story writer, his principal contributions appearing in McClure's and Pearson' smagazines. He has been writing for the screen since 1914, when he started in the scenario division of the old Lubin concern. Mr. Chandlee's first work will be seen in "When The Door opened," James Oliver Curwood's story of the great Northwest.

Other writers of note on the Fox scenario staff are C. Graham Baker, formerly a screen director, newspaper man and artist; C. Wyndham Gittens, who prepared the scenario for the Tom Mix special, "The Everlasting Whisper," and Lenore J. Coffee who is preparing the screen version for "East Lynne."

The scenario staff in the East is presided over by Hamilton Thompson, and Hetty Gray Baker has charge of editing the films.

"Havoc," a screen version of the stage success, to be offered as one of the Fox Specials on the 1925-26 program. In the scenes illustrated here George O'Brien, Harvey Clark and Walter McGrail appear.

Fox Will Film Works of World-Famed Writers

THE list of authors whose works will be produced by Fox Film for the company's 1925-1926 program reveals many names of world-wide fame as literary men. Wells, Conrad, O. Henry, Kyne, Curwood, and Gregory head the list of novelists, while names of such prominence in the theatre as Golden, Pollock, Owen Davis, Winchell Smith, and Frank Craven, are some of the play writers whose leading works will be represented in the list of pretentious specials which Fox will offer exhibitors next year.

H. G. Wells, who throughout his career has steadfastly refused to permit any of his novels to be picturized, has at last capitulated, and "Marriage," proclaimed one of his best novels, will be seen upon the screen.

Here is a theme that is particularly adaptable to picturization. In his novel Mr. Wells fearlessly tackles social problems, and produces a story that teems with action.

One of the greatest acquisitions for the coming season is the novel "Nostromo," by Joseph Conrad, which will appear under the title of "The Silver Treasure." In it the author has introduced a series of exciting incidents that promise action from start to finish.

The box office value of names like Wells and Conrad cannot be calculated. Instantly known to millions of picture patrons, the fact that the stories selected are their best from the viewpoint of entertainment value completes a product which should have immense drawing power.

Another name that stands out prominently in the Fox release schedule is that of Peter B. Kyne, who needs no introduction to picture audiences. In a unique contract Mr. Kyne has agreed during its period to give the company the exclusive production rights to his works. At Mr. Kyne's own suggestion a stipulation in the contract calls for the author's co-operation in the direction, scenario writing, and cutting of his pictures, thereby assuring the screen production to be a true conception of his work. For the coming season four productions from his pen will be made.

James Oliver Curwood, whose virile stories are chock full of screen material, contributes two of his great Northwestern romances to the list. They are "When the Door Opened" and "Back to God's Country," both containing a vast store of supreme entertainment and thrilling adventure with magnificent backgrounds of forests and mountains.

Four stirring outdoor stories by Jackson Gregory are listed in the schedule. The first, "The Everlasting Whisper," has been completed with Tom Mix in the leading role, and gives the Western star full opportunity to display his prowess.

Other pictures of magnitude based on the works of distinguished writers include "Pearls of Desire," a South Sea treasure story by Austin J. Small, to be released under the title "The Trouble Hunter;" "The Desert's Price," by William MacLeod Raine, chosen especially as a Tom Mix vehicle; and "Part-Time Marriage," by Bessie Beatty.

On a par with the book material garnered for the company's schedule are the stage plays that represent the works of playwrights of the highest calibre. These include dramas, comedies and melodramas, each carefully picked for points of exhibitor and audience appeal.

The John Golden Unit of Clean American Plays includes "Lightnin'," one of the biggest Fox offerings of the year, from the record-breaking play by Frank Bacon and Winchell Smith; "The Wheel," also by Winchell Smith; "Thunder Mountain," based on "Howdy Folks," by Pearl Franklin; "Thank You," by Winchell Smith and Tom Cushing; "The First Year," by Frank Craven, and "7th Heaven," by Austin Strong.

Owen Davis is represented by a special picture production of his great play "Lazybones." Other plays and novels brought to the screen will be Dorothy Yost's thrilling racing story, "Kentucky Pride;" Bartley Campbell's stupendous melodrama, "Siberia," and Mrs. Henry Wood's world-known novel and play "East Lynne."

Channing Pollock's success, "The Fool," comes for the season of 1925-1926 direct to exhibitors from its New York run in company with "As No Man Has Loved," based on Edward Everett Hale's "The Man Without a Country," and "The Iron Horse."

Big names are also noted as authors of stories on which series of two-reelers are based. Richard Harding Davis' "Van Bibber" adventures will be released in one series of eight. There will be eight two-reel dramas and comedies by O. Henry, and a real novelty in a series of eight two-reel subjects by Mabel Herbert Urner based on her renowned newspaper magazine page articles, "The Married Life of Helen and Warren."

Reginald Barker Signs With Fox Film

AS this edition announcing the gigantic Fox Film Corporation program for 1925-26 was going to press it was learned that Reginald Barker, pioneer screen director who has many notable productions to his credit, had signed a long term contract with the Fox Company to direct a number of its productions.

Barker will take his place on the Fox production firing line along with John Ford, Emmett Flynn, Rowland V. Lee, Frank Borzage, Victor Schertzinger, John Griffith Wray, W. S. Van Dyke, J. G. Blystone, Maurice Elvey, F. W. Murnau and others.

The first big specials to be directed for Fox by Mr. Barker will be "When The Door Opened," by James Oliver Curwood and "The Johnstown Flood." Both of these productions are of tremendous scope of the kind that Mr. Barker is used to directing and through which he earned his fame.

Since joining with Thomas Ince years ago Barker has directed some of the outstanding successes of the industry.

Barker is a true man of the show world. Born in Winnipeg, Canada, he became an actor early in his teens and at the age of sixteen managed his own stock company in Kansas City. Attracting the attention of Henry Miller, he was persuaded to join up with that stage star's company as manager and actor. He was successively as actor and manager, with the companies of Olga Nethersole, Emily Stevens, Robert Hilliard and Walker Whiteside.

One of the first of the legitimate stage managers to recognize the possibilities of motion pictures, he entered the industry in its infancy and has been in it ever since.

Buck Jones in scenes from "The Timber Wolf," one of his starring vehicles on the list of Fox Specials announced for next season. Elinor Fair will appear as his leading lady.

Plan Comprehensive Short Subjects Program

THE novelty chest of Fox Film Corporation for the season of 1925-1926 contains a list of surprises made to complete the exhibitor's program on a scale never before attempted by that company.

There will be exactly 174 short subjects released, in two-reel and one-reel lengths. Based on stories by noted authors, they have been given the same care and preparation as their brothers—the big specials.

This means that an exhibitor booking these two-reelers will enhance the drawing power of his program, as the short subject comes to the theatre with a well-known cast and an author's name that is known throughout America.

First there will be eight two-reel releases from the pen of O. Henry. These stories have never before been screened, and represent the cream of this noted author's writings. They portray every human, humor, drama, pathos, in the whimsical vein that was essentially O. Henry's claim to fame. The drawing power of his name cannot be overestimated, and his books can be found in millions of homes.

Another brand new series specially chosen because of the immense popularity of the characters includes eight two-reel productions on "The Married Life of Helen and Warren," the best known couple in fiction, by Mabel Herbert Urner. At the present time 500 newspapers are running the series as a regular feature. The couple, "Helen and Warren," have become so well known that their followers are prone to take them as a living fact instead of fictional.

This is the first appearance of "Helen and Warren" on any screen.

There will be eight more of the two-reel "Van Bibber" comedies for release during the coming season. These stories by Richard Harding Davis represent the merriest of laugh-producers with a unique style that is most refreshing. Earle Foxe will be continued as the star, portraying antics and adventures of the young and handsome but irresponsible society man, with George Marshall directing.

Twenty Imperial Comedies specializing in side-splitting situations, beautiful girls and presenting some of the screen's funniest comedians will be released on the new schedule. The exhibitor cannot consider his program complete without this two-reel series on his list. "A laugh a second" is to be their motto. A goodly staff of directors with expert knowledge of the tricks that amaze audiences are "shooting" on the comedy lot. As with all other short subjects, Imperial Comedies are being prepared and produced with the same care that is given to a big, special production.

For that "gap" in the program that exhibitors are always hard pressed to fill so as to keep the afternoon or evening showing up to a standard of quality and entertainment, Fox Film Corporation has for the coming season arranged the release of twenty-six Fox Varieties in single reels that mark a distinct novelty on the screen.

Under a new directing head, and with an increased staff, every nook and corner of the world is being delved into to bring forth the strange, the unusual, and the unique characters and places that the civilized world hears about. Every one of Fox Varieties represents the highest possible laboratory work, and, the Fox Company states, the exhibitor can expect the finest prints, magnificently colored to suit each subject.

Fox News will continue to be released twice a week, or 104 issues for the year. This news reel is now firmly intrenched behind its record of successful years and needs no introduction to the exhibitor. For the past season it has added to its laurels with a succession of "beats" that have proclaimed its fame far and wide.

It now numbers 2,000 cameramen in all parts of the world. This "safety insurance" means that nothing of any public interest can escape the Fox News cameraman no matter where and when it happens.

The staff of editors has also been augmented so that each news branch has its special head. Besides its Gibraltar-like position in regular news service, Fox News, it is declared, has under preparation scores of news novelties to amaze and delight the eye.

During the past season Fox News has increased its circulation all over the world. The policy of Fox News towards the exhibitor is "Once a friend, always a friend," and its boast is that it has never lost an account through any fault of its own.

Exhibitors looking over the summary of short subjects here described will realize that every possible need has been thought of by the Fox Company. Every exhibitor's request and suggestion has been met with so that the most difficult part of planning a campaign has been made easy. In fact, the Fox company believes it has solved as never before the supreme question in the mind of the theatre owner—"how shall I round out my program with short subjects that represent the acme of entertainment?"

Important Statement on Length of Pictures

ONE of the most important announcements concerning the policy of Fox Film Corporation for next season definitely determines the length of all feature productions.

"Mr. Fox has made preparations so that all of his big special attractions will go to the motion picture theatres expertly prepared in the length best suited to these theatres for profitable presentation. This is another application of Fox showmanship principles to a vital exhibitor problem," says the announcement.

The special production "The Iron Horse," which is scheduled for general release in August, will be nine reels long to which it has been cut from the 11,200 feet shown on Broadway. Another big special, "As No Man Has Loved," will go out in nine reels also instead of the initial length of 11,000 feet. "The Fool," when its New York engagement is finished and it is generally released, will be in nine reels, which will be the maximum length of the biggest specials next season. "Lightnin'," which has just been finished at the West Coast Studies, will go out in six and a half reels, it is announced.

"William Fox realizes that 'footage' is not always synonymous with entertainment value when a big picture goes out to the smaller theatres," the announcement continues. "The big special production in its original Broadway run length is not always suited to the needs of theatres throughout the country, with their individual limits of presentation. Accordingly, all the Fox specials will be cut to the length favored by the majority of showmen."

"The Fighting Heart," a Fox Special produced from the Larry Evans novel "Once to Every Man." Billie Dove and George O'Brien appear in the scenes above.

Golden Plays Feature New Season's List

SIX of the biggest stage successes of the American theatre will be presented to exhibitors in screen form by Fox Film Corporation through a contract made with John Golden, the theatrical producer.

Known as "The John Golden Unit of Clean American Plays," this combination brings to the screen "Lightnin'," "Howdy Folks," "Thank You," "The First Year," "7th Heaven" and "The Wheel."

Mr. Golden made a prolonged stay on the West Coast to supervise the screening of some of these productions and co-operate with Mr. Fox in the important work of picking suitable casts and settings for each picture.

A brief resume of the plays and their records may be set forth as follows:

"Lightnin'," by Winchell Smith and the late Frank Bacon. This play broke the world's record with 1,291 continuous performances in New York, surpassing the previous record by 500 performances. This previous record has stood for twenty-five years.

"Howdy Folks," by Pearl Franklin, had two seasons in New York, Boston and Chicago, and contains a story packed with thrills. The picture will be released under the title "Thunder Mountain."

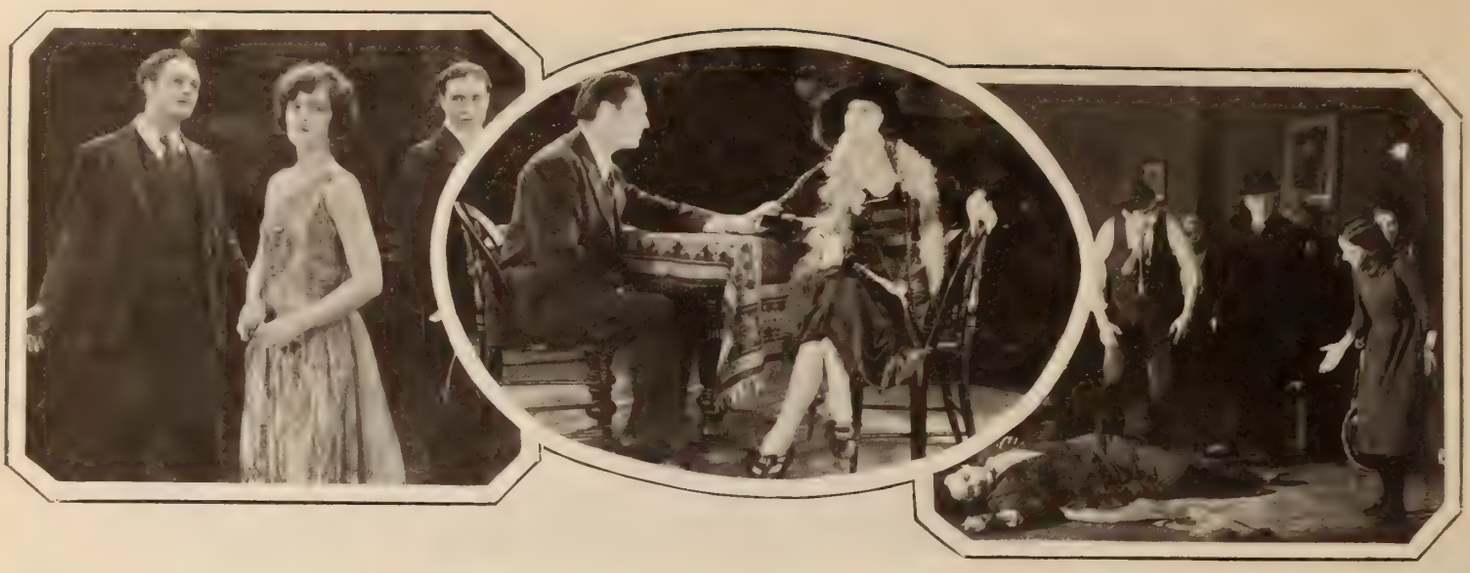
"Thank You," by Winchell Smith and Tom Cushing, ran for two full seasons in New York and was four years on tour. As a voluntary proposal by Mr. Golden, Mr. Smith and Mr. Fox, a share of the receipts from the picture version of this play will be donated to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States for its Service Pension Fund for Aged and Infirm Ministers, through the co-operation of Will H. Hays, president of The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

"The Wheel," by Winchell Smith, ran a full season in New York and had a triumphal run throughout America. It contains ideal material for a great screen production.

"The First Year," by Frank Craven, gave 729 performances in New York. It recently completed its fifth year on tour.

"7th Heaven," by Austin Strong, ran three full seasons in New York and was shown in all the leading theatres in America by three companies.

One of the hardest tasks undertaken by Mr. Golden and Mr. Fox was the choosing of an actor to portray the role of "Lightnin' Bill Jones," which was played by the late Frank Bacon. Jay Hunt, veteran performer and one of Mr. Bacon's closest friends, finally was chosen because of his remarkable resemblance to the late actor and also because of his fine career in character parts.



Also in the cast will be Madge Bellamy, Ethel Clayton, J. Farrell MacDonad, Otis Harlan, Edythe Chapman, James Marcus and many others. John Ford is directing "Lightnin'." The screen story was prepared by Frances Marion.

Another one of the John Golden Unit also well under way is "The Wheel." The production of this giant special has been given into the hands of Victor Schertzinger. The screen version of this story of temptation and high pressure life was written by Gerald C. Duffy. The cast is headed by Harrison Ford, Claire Adams and Mahlon Hamilton. The supporting cast includes names well known to exhibitors and their patrons.

The other pictures from the John Golden Unit are in course of preparation.

"The Wheel," one of the John Golden Unit, will picturize the famous play written by Winchell Smith. It will be one of the new Fox Specials.

"The Fool," Fox Film Corporation's screen version of the famous Channing Pollock stage play, to be released as a Special next season. Edmund Lowe, Brenda Bond, and Raymond Bloomer are seen in the stills above.

Ambitious Plans Made For New Fox Varieties

UNDER a new directing head and with a greatly increased staff, Fox Varieties comes to the exhibitor next season with a series of 26 single reel subjects gathered from all corners of the earth. These reels, it is announced by the Fox company, will constitute the acme of entertainment among short material, and will furnish the exhibitor subjects of the same high quality demanded in big features.

The production schedule has been carefully worked out. Already a number of the pictures for the coming season have been gathered and edited. The rest are being made with a definite purpose in view, a purpose to offer the widest possible variety of material, each reel a complete unit, and each reel filled with interest and entertainment. Cameramen are already working in widely separated parts of the world gathering the negatives. Others have been assigned for trips that will carry them to still more unique places, into the lands that hold out the lure of travel and adventure.

With the selection of its slogan, "The World We Life In," for Fox Varieties, a definite policy was decided upon. That policy is set forth in the slogan. It is the plan of Mr. Fox to make these pictures truly reflect the world in every varying phase and every unique place. The pictures are designed with the idea of world interest, pictures brought from foreign lands to interest those who dwell in America, and also those who dwell in foreign lands. Other pictures gathered at home with the same unique point of view and purpose.

Expeditions now under way have already carried Fox Varieties cameramen far up the Nile to bring back the wonders of Egypt. By airplane, across a desert to famous old Mt. Sinai, The Mountain of the Law! Through the beautiful countries of the Mediterranean, whose charm is as old as history, this expedition is making its photographic records. Another expedition in the Antipodes has already furnished material of a kind only to be found where the South Sea Islands cast their enchantment over the world's seekers after romance and adventure.

Other expeditions that have already left, or will be started within the next few weeks, include two headed for the Arctic Circle, and one bent on a mountain climbing adventure in one of the best known and least photographed sections of the world.

Still more ambitious plans have been approved, and preliminaries are under way for trips that will lead through as yet undiscovered tropic pathways.

This is the organization that has been thrown into the field to produce the negatives that will furnish the basis for Fox Varieties. From an editorial point of view, everything is done to make them attractive to the theatre audience and a fit companion in dress and photographic quality to any feature ever put on the screen.

The Varieties department, organized by Mr. Fox to carry out his plans for these pictures, is being expanded and strengthened to insure results that will please exhibitor and audience. Ray L. Hall, formerly a newspaper man, and connected with the film industry for many years as editor of news reels and other short reel material, has been appointed production manager. Fred C. Quimby, known throughout the industry for the record he has made in handling short reel subjects, has been made sales manager of Fox Varieties and Fox News, and will devote his entire time to this branch of the work.

Earle Foxe in scenes from one of the "Van Bibber" series of two-reel features to be presented next season by Fox. The pictures are based on the celebrated stories of the same title by Richard Harding Davis.

Fox News Prepared For Greater Achievement

FOX NEWS, "Mightiest of All," was adopted as a slogan when it became apparent that the semi-weekly reel of current events issued by the Fox News division of Fox Film Corporation had attained its present enviable position.

Today Fox News literally covers the world. Its army of staff and field cameramen is one of the largest maintained by any organization of its kind. This particular branch of the department is handled so thoroughly that every event of news interest is covered with the same precision and care that are observed by the leading newspaper press associations and newspapers.

And in order that each issue of the news reel may contain a diversity of subjects, every cameraman and every member of the editorial staff is constantly on the lookout for the unique and unusual subject.

That Fox News covers the world, as is asserted in all advertising, is an established fact. With cameramen in the British Isles, Continental Europe, the Far East, Africa, Australia, South America, Mexico, the Philippines, Japan and China and a corps of staff and field men located in every important center in the United States, nothing of importance escapes Fox News. Thousands of feet of negative film arrive at the New York office every day. This negative is screened and considered for its news and entertainment values by a most thoroughly trained staff of editors.

Heading this staff is Truman H. Talley, the director-in-chief, with William A. White as associate director, James E. Darst as associate editor, Harvey Smith as news editor and Harry Lawrenson as foreign editor.

The Editorial Advisory Board is composed of the following persons, who contribute their ideas and suggestions and comprise this important body because of long experience in newspaper work: Edwin C. Hill, Gerald K. Rudulph, Miss Elizabeth Pickett, Ray L. Hall, Charles Sarver and John Weier.

Because of the rapid strides made by Fox News during the past two years, Mr. Fox decided to appoint Fred C. Quimby, a leading sales executive in the motion picture industry, to the position of sales manager of Fox News and Fox Varieties. Mr. Quimby assumed his duties about three months ago and ever since has been engaged in the development of plans for the coming season. He has already visited a number of branch exchanges and is enthusiastic over the future possibilities for greatly increased distribution. A number of special salesmen handling only Fox News and Fox Varieties will be sent into all sections of the United States and Canada.

William Fox, president of Fox Film Corporation, and Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager, have issued explicit instructions to Mr. Talley and Mr. Quimby to leave no stone unturned in their respective and cooperative efforts to produce the best news reel in the industry and to see that it is presented in the greatest number of theatres possible.

During the past two years Fox News has scored a great number of exclusive "beats," and hundreds of letters have been received from exhibitors over the country complimenting the staff upon the superior quality of the reel in general.

Eight 'Van Bibber' Comedies On New Program

THE wholesale praise that many exhibitors have showered on the "Van Bibber" comedy series during the last season has caused Fox Film Corporation to prepare for 1925-1926 release eight more of these two-reelers.

Coupled with the drawing power of the author's name, Richard Harding Davis, has been the distinct novelty of the subjects presented and their refreshing humor.

In the host of inquiries by exhibitors for information regarding the release schedule for next season, the most constant query has been about "Van Bibber." According to letters and first-hand opinions received from exhibitors who have shown this product, the pictures show a distinct departure from the ordinary run of comedies.

Van Bibber was created by Mr. Davis to represent the type of society man who has plenty of time on his hands, a good income that goes as fast as it comes in, and a love of adventure that leads him into all kinds of scrapes. He is devoted to Sylvia Paddock, daughter of Colonel Paddock.

Earle Foxe, through his admitted success in the pictures, will continue as star in the series, portraying the character of Van Bibber in the clever plots. So far he has appeared as a rich man, poor man, sailor, hunter, bull-fighter, detective, prize-fighter and auto-racer in a series of screamingly funny situations.

The eight stories for the coming season are said to be more fast and furious than any so far shown. So great has been the success of this series that Mr. Fox has ordered each one to be handled in the same manner as a big feature. This means casts of note, elaborate settings and high quality all the way through.

George Marshall, whose expert handling of the Van Bibber pictures was largely instrumental in bringing them to the top of the comedy ranks, will continue to direct the series.

Twelve O. Henry Tales to Be Screened by Fox

THE man who knew New York better than New York knows itself, who unearthed many literary gems from the humor, pathos, love and thrills of everyday life was O. Henry, America's foremost short story writer. Each story is a jewel of fiction containing scenes familiar to everyone no matter what his station in life. In all O. Henry wrote about 300 of these stories. In a contract with the publishers, Doubleday, Page & Co., Fox Film Corporation has acquired the screen rights to the entire output of the writer for three years, with the choice of producing as many as may be selected.

Out of this wealth of material twelve have been picked for production for the coming season.

"East Lynne," famous for years as a novel and play, is brought to the screen by William Fox. It will be released as one of the new specials. Frank Keenan, Marjorie Daw, and Leslie Fenton are seen in the stills shown above.

"THE CHECK-UP"

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Universal Sends Out Touring Unit

Mobile Mansion Leaves Universal City on Exploitation Trip That Will Carry It Across United States

DURING the next few days, it is announced by Carl Laemmle, president, Universal Pictures Corporation will send out one of the most remarkable exploitation caravans ever dispatched. It is a mobile studio unit, consisting of a powerful auto-type tractor and a veritable "bungalow on wheels," fitted out as a laboratory and complete living quarters. This unit will visit all of the principal cities in the United States, making pictures of them as a matter of historical record.

Starting from Universal City, just outside of Los Angeles, the mobile film unit or Mobile Mansion, as Universal calls it because of the completeness of its appointments, will proceed northward to San Francisco, thence to Portland, Tacoma, Seattle and Spokane, and then eastward through Salt Lake City, Denver and Omaha, and continuing to the Atlantic Coast with frequent stops. It is expected to reach New York next September. From New York it will swing through the Southern States and return to California via Louisiana, Texas and Arizona. The entire trip will take at least a year, according to present estimates.

C. E. Holah, a veteran film executive, will be in charge of the tour and will accompany the unit. As advance agent for the outfit, Garrett Graham, formerly publicity director for the Hal Roach studios, will officiate. He is now in San Francisco arranging for the first stop of the caravan.

Carl Laemmle's idea in sending out this touring studio to the country's principal cities is in line with the patriotic slogan "See America First." He believes that he could leave no greater historical legacy to posterity than a complete motion picture record of the leading cities as they are today. In each city where a stop is made, a print of the picture taken there will be shown in one of the local theatres and then placed in the city's archives as a record for future generations.

The Mobile Mansion is a unique outfit. It was constructed for use in Universal's forth-coming picture "California Straight Ahead." The Mobile Mansion includes both tractor and trailer. The tractor is a powerful Hall-Scott-Fagoel truck motor of 120 horsepower, built into a regulation automobile roadster type body, but of much larger proportions. The driver's controls are the same as those of a passenger car save for two extra gears for hill climbing. Safety signal lights to warn motorists behind it when it stops or turns, telephones connecting the driver with the passengers in the trailer, a ship-telegraph by which "Full Speed Ahead" and such directions may be electrically transmitted to the dashboard before the driver's eyes from the trailer, complete the equipment.

Masked front, suitably painted, used during the run of "So Big" (First Nat'l) at the Empress theatre, Owensboro, Ky.

The trailer, or Mobile Mansion proper, is twenty-five feet long, eight feet wide and fifteen feet high. It is the last word in design for the so-called "automobile house." It is built on the lines of a Pullman car, with observation platform in the rear and a center door leading into the car itself.

The rear three-quarters of the car is equipped as a modified Pullman sitting room, with easy chairs and a divan. At one end is a small cabinet, built into the wall, which unfolded, becomes a small piano. Panels in the walls above the wide windows have control knows for an elaborte radio set with loud speakers built into the walls, while another folding cabinet houses a phonograph.

At night two folding beds pull out of a door in the wall. Electric lights and an electric heater complete the living room equipment. Beyond this living room is a door leading to a small corridor. On one side of this is a bathroom and a shower, a gas water heater, clothes press and other conveniences. On the other side is the kitchen. An ice-box is surmounted by a three-plate gas stove, and folding dish racks, a folding sink and a cabinet for provisions and a rotisserie cooker complete this equipment.

In the space occupied by the bathroom is also a small winding stair that leads through a trapdoor to the roof of the trailer. This is a dance floor, and it is stretched on a frame that accommodates a colored sun-awning. Above the awning stretches the antenna for the radio.

Three people can live continuously in the trailer with all the comforts of any home. Laboratory work will be done in one section of the trailer which has been fitted up for this work.

The cross-country tour has been planned in connection with automobile clubs, Chamber of Commerce, Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs and similar organizations. Newspapers in the various cities are all set to co-operate in the filming of the local points of interest. All kinds of tie-ups are being arranged.

Besides the film made enroute, the unit will carry special reels of Universal City pictures and of studio shots of the various Universal stars. Handsome souvenir folders will be distributed at every stopping point.

Universal's "Mobile Mansion", or touring studio unit, which is starting on its trip around the country, which will bring it to New York in September and back to Universal City in about a year, after visiting most of the United States.

Twelve Day Campaign for Showing of "Lincoln"

Manager Dewey Mousson of the Knickerbocker theatre, Nashville, Walter Harmon, assistant manager, and W. R. Arnold, exploitation man, devoted twelve days to their intensive exploitation campaign on the showing of "Abraham Lincoln."

About a week in advance, manager Mousson ran a large announcement in the Nashville Tennessean, inviting the school teachers of Nashville to attend a special showing of "Abraham Lincoln" at the Knickerbocker at 9:30 Saturday morning. Smaller ads to the same effect were used in the Banner and the Tennessean. Slides and film trailers were run on the screen and both lobbies were freely decorated with stills and cut-outs by Harmon. Six and three-sheets were hung in the Sixth avenue entrance, while one-sheet frames were mounted on the stairway leading to the balcony.

The mirrors of the main entrance were utilized for attractive designs painted by Harmon, the middle mirror containing a picture of Lincoln in a one-sheet poster. The picture was mounted on heavy beaverboard and just below it was painted in large black letters, "All that I am, or ever hope to be, I owe to my mother." On each side of the cut-out, Harmon painted the national colors. The name of the picture appeared on the mirror in large black letters on a white background.

Two American flags were arranged on the curtains so that when they came together at the close of each showing, they spread out to their actual size which was something of an innovation in stage management. Flags were also used freely in the marquee decorations, even the large electric signs carrying small flags. A cut-out head of Lincoln was used in the centre of the flags.

Exploiter Arnold obtained cooperation from the Ford Motor company, agents of the Lincoln car, for an attractive tie-up in its Broadway show rooms. Two Lincoln cars were displayed in the window with a card worded as follows: "66 years ago Lincoln rode to debate with Douglas on a mule. Today the Lincoln car represents perfection in transportation. Drive a Lincoln car to see 'Abraham Lincoln' at the Knickerbocker Theatre."

Rivoli "Sans-Gene" Campaign

Vigorous Exploitation Drive Boosts Premiere of Production on Broadway

REPRESENTING a varied assortment of unique ideas, a complete campaign was staged ahead of the opening of "Madame Sans-Gene" at the Rivoli theatre, New York City. While other theatres might not care to go in for so elaborate a campaign, many of its features might be modified for use on a less expensive scale.

Tickets for the opening night were advertised at five dollars each. Special teaser advertisements in French ran in all New York papers two weeks before the opening performance. An exhibit of costumes worn in the picture was placed in the show windows of Stern Brothers Department store on 42nd street. Another costume exhibition was held on the mezzanine at the Rivoli.

News trailers explaining the progress of preparations ran for two weeks at the Rivoli and Rialto theatres. Decorations at the Rivoli included a monster sign across the front of the building reading "Gloria Swanson." Eight foot letters in two rows made the sign measure twenty feet by ninety feet over all, perhaps the largest ever erected for a theatrical production.

Blue, white and red streamers extended from the top of the theatre to the sidewalk. Two miniature French guard houses were built at either side of the entrance and two giants, costumed as gendarmes stood at attention at different periods during the day and evening.

A heavy blue carpet bearing the crest of Napoleon covered the sidewalk under the marquee. Special blue runners were placed over the stair carpets in the theatre, all bearing the Napoleonic crest. The vestibule decorations included twelve huge photographic enlargements of Miss Swanson and a life sized oil painting draped with French and American flags was on view just inside the center entrance. Flowers, palms and foliage were used throughout the auditorium and mezzanine. Stage drapes were prepared specially for the engagement and carried huge oil paintings of the star. Three girls dressed in the period of the picture distributed the souvenir programs.

Co-operative Spread Given "Never Say Die" Run

W. F. Howell, of the Strand theatre, Valdosta, Georgia, obtained three pages of publicity in the Valdosta Times in the interest of "Never Say Die." "Never Say Die" played the Strand the first part of the week, and Howell's spread in the Valdosta Times was on the Saturday previous.

Coloring Contest Exploits Showing of "Rag Man"

A Jackie Coogan Coloring Contest sponsored by the Birmingham Post was the feature of the exploitation campaign in Birmingham Ala., where "The Rag Man," played recenly at Loew's Bijou. This contest achieved over 1,500 inches of space in the press. C. D. Haug, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, conducted this campaign.

Julius Swarch & Sons, New York clothiers offered as prizes through their local dealer, J. Blach & Sons, a Jackie Coogan suit to each of the five best and neatest set of colored Jackies sent in, with free tickets in the pocket of each suit. Other prizes were Coogan caps, Coogan pencil boxes, Coogan vanity boxes, pails of peanuts donated by Kelly & Company, of Cleveland, O., Coogan rulers and one hundred tickets. Every contestant received an autographed photo of Jackie.

J. Blach & Sons displayed the Coogan suits and caps in their windows with cards announcing the nature of the contest, and also displayed the prize winning colorings with the names of the winners.

Five thousand Jackie Coogan rulers were distributed in the class rooms at the public schools, and fifty dash card signs were carried on the front and rear ends of street cars. One hundred and fifty 1-sheets were posted, and 150 window cards were displayed. Manager Vinson of Loew's Bijou cooperated actively throughout the entire campaign.

Boy Scouts Aid in Staging Campaign of "Lincoln"

Manager Charles S. Smith of the Shattuck Opera House, Hornell, N. Y., when he showed "Abraham Lincoln", got in touch with the local Boy Scout organization and obtained a recommendation of the picture in a letter sent out from Hornell Scout headquarters to all Scoutmasters and assistants of the Hornell district.

He also arranged with the Boy Scouts to distribute heralds and copies of the roto section prepared on this production, from house to house.

On the Sunday preceding the opening every minister in the city announced the showing at both morning and evening service and advised their hearers to see it. The Rotary and Lion clubs announced the coming of the picture and gave similar advice. The superintendent of schools called on every school teacher and asked them to make the announcement in their classes and advise their pupils to attend.

Arrangemens were made for the school children to sell tickets. For every ten tickets sold one free admission was given. The teachers took care of their own classes in the selling of tickets and turned in the money. G. A. R. members were invited, through the newspapers, to attend a showing as guest of the management. A benefit was staged for the Children's Home.

Compo Board Street Car for "Conductor 1492" Run

Any one going by the Dome Theatre, Youngstown, Ohio, last week, must have wondered what a street car was doing right up on the sidewalk. But there it was. It extended across the entire front of the Dome Theatre. Emory Downs, manager, built it of wall board, and labelled it conspicuously with the name of Johnny Hines, and "Conductor 1492." One had to go through the door of the street car to reach the ticket booth.

Over the ticket booth there was a regular street car register of the kind that rings up the fares. Every time any one bought a ticket to the show, the register rang a bell and rang up another fare. The street car comapny donated the use of the register.

The girl in the ticket booth also had an electric connection whereby she could press a button and sound a street car gong. She did this between customers. The stunt made a big hit. All Youngstown talked about it.

"Old Lives for New" Given Aid of Boy Scouts

Boy Scouts handed every teacher attending the South Carolina Teachers' convention in Columbia, S. C., during the showing of "New Lives for Old" at the Imperial, a special herald as they registered at the Chamber of Commerce.

An advance announcement was made by manager C. W. Irvin, both on the screen and in the theatre close-ups, as well as in the local newspapers, that this picture has been selected from the current Paramount attractions as an excellent offering for the Teachers' convention. A special ad was also run in the new South Carolina Gazette. in return for which they gave each teacher a copy, gratis.

The lobby was appropriately decorated with stills and photos from the picture, together with a special banner of welcome over the entrance.

A special lattice-work frame, combined with two cut-out figures and the usual poster paper made up Manager Cliff Denham's workmanlike display on "Classmates" (First National) at the Capitol theatre, Victoria, B. C.

The opinions expressed after a private showing of "Oh, Doctor" (Universal) were made a part of the lobby display at the Rialto theatre, Des Moines.

Civic Courtesy Contest is Aid to "Excuse Me" Run

As part of his elaborate campaign on "Excuse Me" when it played at the Liberty theatre, Seattle, Leroy V. Johnson, manager, put across a tie-up with the Seattle Star, evening daily, that netted hundreds of inches of free publicity, including three and two-column stories on the front page. The stunt was in the form of a contest of courtesy, designed for city employees.

For the best stories of fifty words or less telling of the courteous act of some civic employee, the Liberty awarded ten dollars in cash. For other good letters, prizes ranged from $5 down to a number of free admission tickets to the following weeks' shows. The contest was put over in the guise of a "Courtesy Week" and the letters that were received, when printed in the Star, were good for many inches of publicity every day.

Another part of his exploitation campaign included special decoration in the lobby and foyer of the theatre. The lobby was dressed to resemble the back platform of a railroad train, with all the railroad lanterns, flags and paraphernalia to carry out the atmosphere. On the inside of the house, all the girl ushers were costumed in white duck conductors and porters costumes, with railroad caps and lanterns. A typical "Excuse Me" prelude was offered, featuring a local duet that used "Tea for Two" as their feature number and then carried the piece throughout the film as the central theme selection.

Italian Newspaper Boosts "Quo Vadis" in Tie-up.

Not often does a motion picture break away the sacred barriers of page one, let alone dominate the rest of the paper. In the language of the press agent, "When you get on page one, you've done something."

First National, in exploiting "Quo Vadis," had 16 front page stories of two columns in length each, for 16 consecutive days, and it obtained space aggregating ten full pages on the inside of the paper in addition to the page one "breaks." All but one of the first page stories were printed in red ink so that you couldn't miss them a mile away.

Allan S. Glenn, supervisor of exploitation for First National, noted that a large number of Italians were attending the picture, all of which is only natural since the picture was made in their native land with Gabriellino d'Annunzio as a co-director.

There are more than 900,000 Italians in New York and its environs, a potential market worth considering. So the Bolletinne Della Sera, the largest of the Italian newspapers, was approached with a new angle of publicity promotion that greatly increased their circulation and gained the sixteen days first page publicity in attractive colors. A large cut-out head of Colleen Moore was placed over the marquee where it could be seen as well by night as by day.

Brilliant Front Display on "So Big" in Seattle

Manager Leroy V. Johnson of the Liberty Theatre, Seattle, designed a very effective theatre front display for "So Big". The entire title and the star's name were done in electric lamps over the entrance doors. The star's name was repeated in lights under the marquee.

A cut-out from the 6-sheet poster was mounted on the sidewalk line. Photographs were mounted on the outside of the shadow-box where a spotlight played on them for the evening display.

At one end of the banner was a painting of Edna Ferber's book, with a gate and a farm-house in the background, painted

YOUR IDEA

IN THE MAIL

JACK A. MARSHALL, manager of the Grand theatre, Huntsville, Ala., writes in regarding a couple of useful exploitation ideas which he has been putting to good advantage. They will be described elsewhere in this department. Judging from the material, Huntsville has a live theatre. C. L. Hackworth is proprietor of the Grand, and the Jefferson as well.

FRANK H. BURNS, exploitation director of the Beacham theatre, Orlando, Fla., "crashes" into this department regularly with something or another. This time he submits some of his latest advertising from Orlando, including group ads on the Beacham and Phillips, and on the Phillips, Grand and American. Run inside of one boxed space, the individual ads are placed in small panels which set each off to advantage, yet give all the advantage of the "flash" in their combined size. Although he is limited to stock material and type, Burns knows the value of a little printers' rule and white space.

The publicity director of Goldman's New Kings theatre, St. Louis, A. J. McGINNESS, forwards newspaper proofs on two ads used this week in St. Louis papers on "Isn't Life Wonderful?" The selling point decided on was the director, and this has been played to the limit, his name overshadowing everything else completely. McGinness promises to send other ads from time to time, which we trust he carries out, as we shall be glad to reproduce as much of it here as conditions may permit. Unique ideas deserve being passed along.

At the Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, FRED S. MEYER took part in a local merchant's Co-operative Day by offering ten tickets for $2.50, a saving of $1.50. These tickets are good all summer and are not limited to a short period. The ad announcing this was laid out in striking fashion. Meyer does not say how it worked out, but such summer stunts usually pay well.

MANAGER H. BROWNING of the Olympia at New Haven, one of our most consistent contributors of material, sends in a new batch of stuff. Browning is still getting good results with cross-word puzzle stunts—a craze, incidentally, which appears to have passed its peak—and used one to advantage on "Sally" not long ago.

The latest issue of the Fayette County MOVIE FAN is at hand, and contains the usual newsy line-up of matter. There are always some interesting features in this little publication, and we imagine it must be a considerable force in the amusement field in Uniontown, Pa., where it is published.

JIMQUIN—otherwise James C. Quinn—has burst into golden song with a number entitled "Catalina, Aloha Oe (I Love You)," for which he wrote both words and music. Jimquin sang it in person recently at the New Strand theatre, Avalon, Calif. The song has been published in such a form that advertising can be imprinted on the inside and back covers. The office piano player has not yet passed upon the number, but it appears tuneful and catchy. The name "Catalina" lends itself to this sort of thing so readily that we are surprised someone hasn't used it for a popular ditty ere this, along with "Bambalina," "Katherina," "Tetina," and the other "ina" titles.

A WORTH WHILE PRESENTATION

AT comparatively small expense, a first rate presentation number is being used this week at the Howard theatre in Atlanta, arranged by Alex Keese, musical director. While providing a splendid program number, it also helps to promote good feeling between the theatrical interests and the churches.

A Handel short subject is being shown, and during the running of the picture, which deals with the life of that great and noted musician, the Howard orchestra plays bits from "The Messiah," Handel's great oratorio, and "Largo." As the picture fades away to a finish, the Junior Choir of St. Phillips cathedral descends the steps on the sides of the stage, and standing there in the dim light sings the Hallelujah chorus from "The Messiah." The choir is of mixed voices, little boys and little girls, trained by Grace Chalmers Thompson. They are vested, and make a charming and picturesque appearance, as well as adding greatly to the effect of the overture presentation.

Their services were obtained without charge Howard Price Kingsmore, manager of the theatre, made a generous donation to the cathedral, in compliment to Miss Thompson and in appreciation of her kindly assistance. This is another instance of the promotion of good feeling between Church and theatre, so essential to the latter, at least.

COMING TO THE POINT

THOSE advertising men who continually strain after effect, looking for something allegedly "new" all the time, have overlooked a great truth—the fact that results in advertising come not from straining for effect and fantastic novelty, but from steady, consistent, workmanlike copy. Brilliant novelties have their place—but they are not half so effective as good, average copy, day after day and every day.

Harold Horne, formerly an exploitation man and now manager of the Criterion theatre, Los Angeles, has been putting out some first rate consistent copy, which we have been watching, and which has maintained a high batting average for general excellence.

The reproduction here of one of his ads on "Introduce Me" will serve to illustrate. It is neither the best nor the worst of his regular output, but a representative specimen. Here is no far-fetched stretching after the "unique," but a straightforward presentation of the desired points. Aside from the illustrations, which have been kept in a subordinate position, four things hit the eye—"Laff! Say! You'll Bust," "Criterion," "Douglas MacLean," and "Introduce Me." What more is necessary?

There is a little additional sales copy, but since the ad is here reproduced actual size there is no need to quote it. The one possible defect in the ad is the fact that it is a bit crowded. If each element had been made just a trifle smaller, with corresponding white space, the various parts would not appear to "jostle" each other quite so much.

If the experiment meets with favor, we shall reproduce other ads actual size here from time to time.

AND OURS

DOING HIS STUFF

ED OLMSTEAD, whose theatre ads were reprinted frequently in these columns when he was with Herschel Stuart in St. Louis, and later with Bruce Fowler at McVickers in Chicago, is now doing his stuff in New York, where he is in charge of publicity and advertising for the Rivoli and Rialto. Despite the difficult conditions in New York, he is still turning out distinctive copy, well away from the beaten track. Space rates are high in Manhattan and there are a considerable number of papers which must be given the copy. As a result, most of the metropolitan advertising is of the stereotyped "directory" sort, containing little more than the billing. Illustrations are used rather sparingly, if at all, and an out and out pictorial ad is a real rarity. Such, however, is the art ad on "The Charmer," reproduced here, which Olmstead did recently for the Rivoli engagement of the picture.

Ed Olmstead's striking ad for "The Charmer" (Paramount) at the Rivoli theatre, New York City.

Half of the entire space is taken up by the head of Negri. This, however, is a striking likeness of Miss Negri in a few lines, so that it serves the valuable purpose of immediately attracting the attention of her following. Wisely, no effort was made to crowd in an entire figure, or even the neck and shoulders. What was being sold was not a particular bit of action in the picture, but the fact that this was a picture in which a particular star appeared—which was, of course, the outstanding sales angle in this instance. The supporting program has been given good prominence, without taking up too much space, by putting it in a box tipped at an angle. The stock billing has been neatly arranged in the lower left hand corner.

MAKING STOCK MATERIAL WORK

ONE example is worth a dozen precepts, for which reason we are particularly glad to present the accompanying newspaper ad on "The Spaniard," which proves the value of white space more strongly than a hundred articles which we, or anyone else, might write. Used by Emery's Majestic theatre, Providence, R. I., it is an outstanding example of how to obtain strength and originality with stock cuts. The only special material in the ad is the theatre name plate, which, as we have said here so often, is a worthwhile investment for any theatre.

We wonder how many advertising men could have resisted the temptation to fill the open space at the left with a jumbled conglomeration of catch-lines, selling talk and such miscellany? Not many, judging from the general run of theatre advertising coming across this desk.

Perhaps some managers might feel that this space left blank is wasted, and certainly this is an extreme instance of white space—but if they could have seen this ad on the newspaper page, and the manner in which it dominated the section, they would quickly see the value gained.

Not that we would recommend that every ad be laid out along these lines. Far from it. But to get variety into the theatre's advertising, there is nothing better than an occasional odd arrangement of this sort, with the material thrown off centre and plenty of white space to balance it up.

Some pictures, in their very nature, demand plentiful selling copy. This does not happen to be one of them. There is one simple, definite point to put across, and the single piece of text in this ad does so—and then wisely stops.

SELL SERVICE

WHILE you are busily selling individual photoplays from week to week, don't fail to sell your other big assets—service and equipment. However small the theatre, however limited its equipment, there are things about it—reasons why the public should patronize it—other than just the productions shown. They come primarily to see the picture, of course, but there are other things to sell—service, courtesy, comfort, projection, safety, and many more.

As an example of one of these, projection, we have before us a piece of copy which any well equipped theatre should be able to run truthfully and to advantage—and if your projection isn't such that you can truthfully say such things, improvement in that would probably be your most effective method of exploitation.

The editorial in question appears in the current issue of the Fayette County Movie Fan, published at Uniontown, Pa., under the heading, "Attention to Detail," and says:

"As you sit watching the clear, steady flickerless projection of the pictures on the screens at the State and Penn it is probable that a second thought is never given the care and consideration used in the operation of the projection apparatus in the two theatres. Perfect projection is one thing that has always been considered a necessity in good theatre operation by Managing-director C. M. McCloskey. Way back in the early days of the movies when the Imp was the leading theatre in Uniontown he had the reputation of having the best projection in this part of the State. When the Penn was constructed well-known projection engineers were brought to the city to make the lay-out for the screening apparatus. That this was the wise course to pursue is indicated in the fact that today the Penn theatre has a picture projection that is equaled in few theatres in this part of the country. When the time came to build the State, Manager McCloskey again made doubly sure that the projection would absolutely be the finest that could be had. Specialists were called from the General Electric company and other makers of projection apparatus and their recommendations were followed with the result that today the State projects a picture on the screen that is the talk of the entire section. Here is an interesting comparison—see a certain picture at the State; then when you are in some other city view it again. We know you will find a big difference in favor of the State!"

A strong lay-out, characterized by abandant white space which gave an off-centre effect, featured this ad on "The Spaniard" (Paramount) run by the Emery Majestic theatre, Providence.

Variety of Tie-ups Given "So Big" in Lexington

Col. Fred Levy was determined that when "So Big" showed at his Kentucky theatre in Lexington, every inhabitant should know of the picture's coming.

He used 2,000 special door-knob hangers. By a tie-up with the Lexington Laundry, 2,000 heralds advising recipients to send their laundry to the Lexington and to go to the Kentucky theatre to see "So Big" were wrapped in the laundry's packages beginning a week in advance.

Twenty banners were painted and hung on taxicabs four days before the opening and continuing during the showing. Three thousand regular heralds were used.

Among merchant tie-ups was one with a women's ready to wear shop on Miss Moore's dresses; another was a display in a florist's; still another a toilet article display in a drug store. Two confectionery stores tied up on the picture. On the windows and mirrors of one of these was painted a fancy design announcing the Colleen Moore sundae. A book window display was obtained. All of the displays were in excellent locations.

A color scheme of orange and black was carried out in everything—heralds, banners, cards, etc.

Teaser Racing Ads Exploit "The Dixie Handicap"

A cross word puzzle contest was recently conducted by Norman W. Pyle, Metro-Go'dwyn exploiteer, in Johnstown, Pa., in connection with the showing of "The Dixie Handicap" at the Olympic theatre.

A teaser campaign in all the local papers initiated this exploitation campaign. The teasers announced that the horse racing season in Altoona would open on the following Monday, and added, "For details call 2-6170." This was the theatre's phone number. Employees replied to all inquiries by announcing the run of "The Dixie Handicap" at the Olympic throughout the week. Pyle followed this up by announcing on the Saturday preceding the premiere in large display ads: "The greatest race in the history of the turf will be run in Altoona all next week at the Olympic theatre in 'The Dixie Handicap.' The picture you'll cheer."

A jockey rode through the streets, and 1-sheets were placed on all the city waste paper receptacles in the downtown district. Street cars carried a half sheet card on the front, and there were a number of window displays also. Five thousand heralds were distributed and two slides and a trailer were used. There was, in addition, a special lobby display.

A section of a railroad track with switches and lanterns was used by Manager Charles Fraler in front of the Grand theatre, Tracy, Calif., for "The Signal Tower" (Universal).

Empress Front Masked for Showing of "So Big"

Manager R. R. Russell, of the Strand Amusement company's interests in Owensboro, Ky., had another mask for the Empress theatre for "So Big," for its three day run, to stimulate interest.

Two weeks ahead of the showing, however, an electric sign was playing over the box office. A week in advance another electric sign, a box with bright red cut-out of "So Big" as a baby, was attached to the storm door at the entrance of the theatre. Then the Saturday night before the showing on Monday, up went the big mask over the entrance, which called attention to the unusual attraction for the coming week. It remained up during the showing.

As the mask is made of beaver board it can be used again and again. Three-sheets were used as the side panels and a local artist completed the drawing.

Teaser Box Placed in Joie Lobby on "Contraband"

To stimulate interest in "Contraband", playing the Joie, Fort Smith, Ark., Manager John P. Read conceived a novel and effective lobby display on the attraction. A huge box was placed in the center of the lobby on which were painted the words: This is "Contraband" Keep Off But See It Opened Up Friday and Saturday.

Another good stunt was the use of two banners reading: "This is Not Contraband But See It at the Joie Today." The above were placed on two trucks of a well-known local transfer company.

The regular campaign was supplemented by the use of advance stills, trailer and slide, with marquee, display of 24-sheet cutout with title in cutout letters across the front.

Barrels and cases borrowed from the Tennessee Brewing company pro vided Manager Bert Jordan of the Majestic theatre, Memphis, Tenn., with this arresting display on "Contraband" (Paramount).

FIRST NATIONAL

New Toys—
Considered one of Richard Barthelmess' best. Business above average. (Middle West.)

Learning to Love—
Highly entertaining and with good cast. Interesting to the end. Business excellent. (Middle West.)

Quo Vadis—
An expansive feature that did a good business. (East.)

Sally—
Really considered Colleen Moore's best to date and doing capacity business. (Middle West.)

Colleen Moore contributes an excellent performance in this, her latest production. Packed house at every performance. (West.)

A feature which gives general satisfaction. It has as nearly all the advantages of the stage presentation as it seems possible to have—not forgetting Leon Errol—and the star fills the part with a success that might surprise even her most ardent followers. Good show. Fine week here. (Middle West.)

Popular on a hold-over. (East.)

Declasse—
As this was a good week everywhere else in town and a holiday week, the fact that business was not up to the average at this theatre must be interpreted as due to the picture shown. The story is not one that appeals aside from the connection with Ethel Barrymore who was able to put it across with fair success here. (Middle West.)

Interesting and entertaining, with high class sets. Business was fair. (Middle West.)

This one held up fair for a week's run. (Middle West.)

One Way Street—
A well produced and acted picture that drew capacity houses at every performance. (Middle West.)

Interesting and entertaining. Receipts averaged up. (Middle West.)

If I Marry Again—
Business was brisk for a week's run with this one. (Middle West.)

Three-column ad on "Romola" (Metro-Goldwyn) at the New Park theatre, Boston.

Two-column art ad on "Lady of the Night" (Metro-Goldwyn), with good attention value, run in the Sunday Cincinnati papers for the showing opening that day at the Family.

A well told story with good production and acting. Box office receipts good (West.)

Playing With Souls—
Entertainment value averages up. Had on strong musical bill and did fine business throughout week. (Middle West.)

Idle Tongues—
Failed to arouse much interest. Just another program picture. Acting fair. (East.)

So Big—
A personal triumph for Colleen Moore. Widely praised by patrons. Business capacity. (East.)

I Want My Man—
There is a good deal to this picture which did well. (East.)

The Lady—
One of the best of this star's productions to date. Drew a full house at every performance. (West.)

One Year To Live—
Good story with good production. Business was good. (West.)

METRO-GOLDWYN

Excuse Me—
A farce, comedy drama, that has some very clever moments. It did a pretty fair business on the week. (Middle West.)

A good box office attraction. Attendance good. (Middle West.)

The Great Divide—
A good western—did fair business. (Middle West.)

It's a good western—Business fair. (Middle West.)

Seven Chances—
Plenty of laughs in this one Buster Keaton proved big drawing card. Business for week very good. (Middle West.)

We pulled through with this picture on the strength of our other attractions. (West.)

This Keaton comedy is a dandy and wins the hearty ha-ha every time it tries. Also some moments of lesser mirth. Did very well on a week that did not average high at the other theatres. (Middle West.)

Good fun for the most part. Original situations make it worth seeing. Business fair. (Middle West.)

So This Is Marriage—
More society stuff. Fairly acted and directed. Failed to arouse much attention. Business fair. (East.)

The Way of a Girl—
Something entirely new which played to full houses all week. (East.)

A good show. Did business being advertised with vaudeville as Take-a-Chance Week. Interest in the bill was stimulated because all numbers, including the feature, were not named. (Middle West.)

Much ado about nothing. Much wasted effort on the part of everybody concerned. Business fair. (East.)

The Rag Man—
Jackie Coogan's latest production did a good business at this house. (West.)

Wife of the Centaur—
Entertaining and pleasing. Fair business. (Middle West.)

Cheaper to Marry—
Considered fair entertainment. Good cast and splendid acting made it popular. Good business. (Middle West.)

The Denial—
Was on with a wonderful stage program and played to capacity during entire week. Patrons liked it very much. (Middle West.)

The Silent Accuser—
Attendance slightly below normal although opposition was stiff. (Middle West.)

PARAMOUNT

The Crowded Hour—
This one failed to get over with our patrons. (Middle West.)

The Thundering Herd—
Interesting western with good cast. Did good business. (Middle West.)

A Kiss in the Dark—
The title helped draw them. Attendance slightly above normal. (Middle West.)

An entertaining little picture that did an average business at this house. (Middle West.)

Nothing to go wild about. (East).

Madame Sans Gene—
Gloria's latest only went fairly well here. It isn't quite as good as some of her previous pictures. (Middle West.)

This is Gloria doing all her tricks. The picture met with fair success on a bad week. Week's average was nothing to make the box office stagger, and not as much as was expected as the star is quite popular here. (Middle West.)

Not quite up to the usual Weekly attendance. (Middle West.)

Men and Women—
Good style, but stale, hackneyed story. Business only fair. (Middle West.)

Played to good crowds all week. (Middle West.)

The Spaniard—
A good program picture that did a good business. (Middle West.)

This one pleased our audiences with resultant good business. (West.)

Audiences divided in opinion on this one. Business held up. (Middle West.)

Worldly Goods—
Heard much favorable comment. Did very well with it. (Middle West.)

New Lives for Old—
An entertaining picture that drew them in in goodly numbers. (West.)

Air Mail—
Full of punch. It's a thriller. Real melodrama. Busines, fair. (Middle West.)

Adventure—
Good story and well acted. Business was above average. (Middle West.)

A good story spoiled by too many titles. Business was good. (Middle West.)

Too Many Kisses—
Didn't draw as well as we expected. Not much of a picture. (West.)

A fair enough picture. It wasn't enough to counterbalance a weather handicap but did a fair week's average. (Middle West.)

"Madame Sans Gene" (Paramount) ad at the Princess theatre, Toledo.

The Goose Hangs High—
A delightful James Cruze production. (East.)
Very pleasing and well acted comedy drama. Business excellent. (Middle West).
Sackcloth and Scarlet—
A money maker. Played to good crowds all week. (Middle West.)
Argentine Love—
Fair enough picture of its type. No cause to complain. (Middle West.)
Code of the West—
A fair western that pleased them. Busines was off. (Middle West.)
This one didn't register with our patrons. (West.)
The Dressmaker from Paris—
Pleases the ladies. Busines held up. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

Dangerous Innocence—
Good cast and good acting. Seems to be well taken. (Middle West.)
Delightful romance, well received by the press and responsible for good business throughout week. (Middle West.)
Up the Ladder—
Just an average picture but in conjunction with specialty week, did good business. (Middle West.)
The Last Laugh—
Good acting but the plot was a disappointment. It did a fair business. (West.)
This one is very much removed from the ordinary run of pictures; a distinct novelty. Business was excellent. (West.)
One of the biggest pictures of the year. Played to good attendance. but the crowds didn't justify the greatness of the production. (Middle West.)
A most remarkable picture. Business was slow first half of week, but picked up briskly the end showing that word of mouth advertising was its best asset. (Middle West.)
Most unusual movie. Pleased everyone. (Middle West.)
Head Winds—
Another box office winner starring House Peters. Came close to hanging up a house record. (East.)

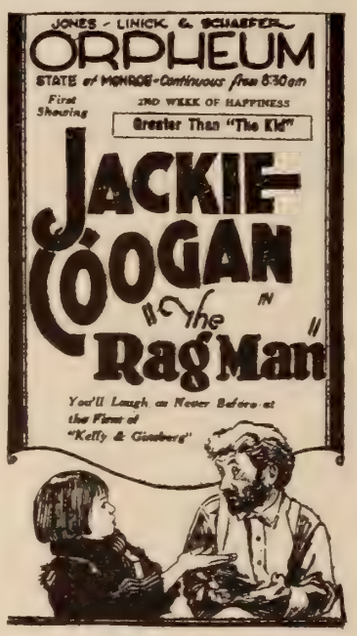
Three-column art ad on "The Roughneck" (Fox) at Reade's Hippodrome, Cleveland.

Some thriller. Took the popular fancy. (East.)
Splendid storm scene puts this one over. Business good. (Middle West.)
This picture did a sell-out business at every performance. It is a well acted production. (West.)
Let 'Er Buck—
This has novelty, punch and entertainment. It has a great rodeo scene. Business, good. (Middle West.)
A regular honest-to-goodness western. Pendleton rodeo scenes good. Business good. (East.)
Fifth Avenue Models—
Good average program picture and drew well for week. (Middle West.)
Played to bumper houses throughout seven day run. Excellently received by press and generally praised. (Middle West.)
The Saddle Hawk—
A good western with plenty of action which our patrons liked. Good business. (West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Drums of Jeopardy—
A fairly entetraining picture. (Middle West.)
The Speed Spook—
Not as speedy as title suggests. Fair entertainment. Personal appearance of Johnny Hines helped it. He made hit with audience. (Middle West.)
The Mad Dancer—
Very entertaining production well produced. Box office receipts good. (West.)
Those Who Judge—
This one went well in this house with business holding up throughout the run. (West.)

Metropolitan theatre ad in Baltimore on "Recompense" (Warner Bros.).



Yesterday's Wife—
They liked this one here so the box office had a good week. (West.)

WARNER BROS.

Being Respcetable—
Fine movie. Average patronage. (Middle West.)
Recompense—
An excellent production. Pleased generally. Nice business. (Middle West.)
A Broadway Butterfly—
An ordinary picture of its type. Fair business. (Middle West.)
Bridge of Sighs—
An excellent picture that drew full houses at every performance. (West.)

PROD. DIST. CORP.

Beyond the Border—
A good western that did a good business. (West.)
A little below the normal week's attendance. (Middle West.)
A Cafe in Cairo—
Great Picture. Great business. (Middle West.)
Charley's Aunt—
A screamingly funny comedy in which Sid Chaplin does very well. Business was very good. (Middle West.)
Going strong on the second week. Held over. (East.)
Continues to do well on the second week of the run. (Middle West.)
One of the best comedies to date with Sid Chaplin carrying Simple and effective ad for "The Rag Man" (Metro-Goldwyn) at Jones, Linick & Schaefer's Orpheum, Chicago.

off the acting honors. It was a sell-out. (West.)
One of the real screen entertainments of the year. Audience rolled in laughter. S. R. O. all week. (East.)
Soft Shoes—
Harry Carey's latest failed to get over with our audiences. (West.)
The Crimson Runner—
This picture has interesting spots which so overshadow the weak spots that the whole is interesting. Did capacity business with personal appearance of Priscilla Dean doing, on the stage, a portion of the screen story. (Middle West.)

VITAGRAPH

The Beloved Brute—
Nothing exceptional about this production. We did fairly well with it. (Middle West.)

ASSOC. EXHIB.

School for Wives—
Just a mediocre picture with nothing new revealed. Business was fair. (Middle West.)

Art ad on "Romola" (Metro-Goldwyn) at the Balaban & Katz Roosevelt theatre, Chicago.

The Sky Raider—
A novelty produced with Capt. Nungesses in person. (East.)
The Adventurous Sex—
Extremely melodramatic, drew average business. Favorable press mention. (Middle West.)
Introduce Me—
Light, spontaneous and pleasing. Business good. (East.)
This will please them. Did here. Fast and clean. Fine business. (Middle West.)

FOX

Dick Turpin—
This Tom Mix did a very good week. Evenings averaged much higher than the matinees. So evidence seems to point that this is a man's picture especially. (Middle West.)
Tom Mix at his best in a distinct departure from his usual roles. The S. R. O. sign was out all week. (East.)
Riders of the Purple Sage—
An excellent production and did good business throughout run. (Middle West.)
Lady of the Night—
Just a program picture with nothing to recommend especially. (Middle West.)
Wings of Youth—
A good society drama. Business was fair. (Middle West.)
The Folly of Vanity—
Fair program feature. It played in a bad week here and might do better elsewhere. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Salvation Hunters—
Fair picture, uncertain as to box office value. Business fair. (Middle West.)
Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall—
An entertaining and elaborately mounted production that attracted capacity business for the week. (East.)

F. B. O.

Forbidden Cargo—
The patrons liked this one with resultant good business. (West.)

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

He Who Gets Smacked
(Pathe—Two Reels)

HERE we have Ralph Graves in the role of the chap who poses as a fighter and finds himself booked to appear in the star bout at the boxing carnival for the favorite charity of his employer, the owner of a department store. He hates to fight but is forced to go through with the engagement. Now this does not sound so very funny, nor is there anything novel in such a plot. However, the performance of the play and the introduction of several good gags are responsible for making the work a comedy of exceptionally amusing elements. It is one of the best pictures Graves has done for Sennett and easily ranks with some of the best two-reelers of recent times.

Graves has the support of such competent players as Marvin Lobach, Mollie Malone and Eli Stanton. Lloyd Bacon directed the play. The picture is a clean score for the star and the director and it may be recommended as a sure laugh-getter for any program.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Grief In Bagdad
(Pathe—One Reel)

A burlesque on the "Thief of Bagdad" is attempted in a rather ambitious production for the space of one reel. Settings of a highly ornate and colorful sort have been prepared for the backgrounds. The action attempts nothing more than the broadest slap-stick, remaining unflinchingly on the side of the obvious and mere movement. It is not out of the customary slot of slap-stick except in so far as the thing is quite "dressy" and moves fast enough to capture and hang on to a measure of the spectator's interest throughout the proceedings.

Earl Mohan, Billy Engle, Dolores Johnston, Katherine Grant, William Gillespie, and Leo Willis are in the cast. Ross Lederman directed the reel.—T. C. KENNEDY

Rock Bottom
(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

CLIFF BOWES is a foreman's helper in this one-reeler in which he is featured with Virginia Vance. It is just a series of gag stuff in which Cliff is ordered by the foreman to do ridiculous stunts in connection with the construction job on which he is working.

Among other stunts Cliff is ordered to get the $25,000 payroll within the hearing of a band of yeggs who secrete themselves in various parts of his car. He outwits them after numerous thrilling incidents, which are not without humor. The picture is up to the standard set by Bowes and Miss Vance.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Monkey Business
(Educational—One Reel)

THIS tells the tale of the gorilla with a toothache and is one of the Earl Hurd Pen and Ink Vaudeville series in cartoon form. "Prop's" assistance is sought in extracting the aching tooth of the Gorilla, who seeks revenge and gets it on "Props" by pulling several of his teeth. The cartoons are clever and afford some fairly good comedy.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Here's Your Hat
(Universal—Two Reels)

THIS is another of the series of kid comedies, which seems destined to meet with widespread approval. Arthur Lake and Olive Hasbrouck are the featured players. They are a winsome pair, with a lot of personality and acting ability. This story is not quite as good as some that have gone before, but at that, it is way above the average for these two-reelers.

Eddie is Arthur's rival and he calls upon Olive with a box of candy, which he warns her he will take back if she permits Arthur to call while he is there. She feigns a headache and dismisses Arthur, who suspects nothing until he emerges from the house with Eddie's cap, as Olive's father enters. Papa hands the cap to Eddie who considers himself dismissed. The latter scenting trouble sends Arthur back in and later goes in himself.

Arthur has occasion to go to a nearby store, returns with a bandaged hand and a tale of his own heroism, which is disbelieved by Eddie. The pair engage in a fight which terminates with Arthur the victor and his reward is a kiss from Olive. If the stories continue to hold up for these youngsters this series should be an immensely popular one.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Shootin' Injuns
(Pathe—Two Reels)

HAL ROACH'S "Our Gang" have a vehicle for "action" in this depiction of youthful dreams of Goin' West to Fight Injuns. The picture is typical of the "Gang" comedies, opening with a scene in a shack where the kids plan their adventure into Arizona, "by way of Japan," to duplicate the heroics of Boone, Custer and other great frontier fighters. Their trip is ruined when a downpour of rain drives them from the delivery wagon on which they set out for Arizona, and they get into the house of an inventor of amusement devices of the "house of fun" order which flourish at the Coney Islands of the land.

The director has made full use of the weird effects possible to the sliding stairs, dancing skeletons, and in this regard betters the many previous essays in this direction by employing the trick "process" camera invented by a member of the Pathe Review staff. Slow motion, stop motion and the other tricks help along considerably. The picture is up to the average "Our Gang" comedies.—T. C. KENNEDY.

The Village School
(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is another of the Lyman H. Howe Hodge Podge series, which depicts characters and scenes from all parts of the world, as well as a cleverly arranged series of cartoons. The old "rich man, poor man, beggar man, chief," etc. game is used in this one to show types from all countries portraying the characters suggested.

The questions put to the children in the village school serve to introduce some clever cartoons, as well as views from around the world and shots of the army and navy wigwagging. This is just as clever as those of the series that have gone before it.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Napoleon Not So Great
(Sering D. Wilson—500 feet)

THIS animated comic strip in color brings novelty to the cartoon comedy. The natural colors of the Kelly process have a good vehicle for display in the phantasy and grotesquerie of this visualized dream of a Redhead, who engages in a warfare with Napoleon. It is fairly humorous, but the humor is overshadowed by the novelty of having such vivid color on the screen. It is a half reel which should be very desirable for the exhibitor anxious to provide a dash of something "different" now and then.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Big Red Riding Hood
(Pathe—One Reel)

CHARLEY CHASE is starred as an "intellectual giant and financial dwarf" who is commissioned to write a translation into the Swedish of "Little Red Riding Hood." Since he is without the price of a copy of the book he must depend upon reading it from a volume on the shelf of a second-hand book store. Before he finishes the copy is purchased by a man who thinks he will like "Little Red Riding Hood" because he used to be a jockey. The book is laid on the back seat of a Ford and away it goes with its new owner at the wheel. Charley must finish reading it so he rides on a bicycle alongside the car, scanning the pages through as wild and thrilling a motor tour as one can imagine.

Martha Sleeper, Leo Willis, Jack O'Brien, Helen Gilmore, and "Fighting" Dick Gilbert appear in the support. "Big Red Riding Hood" is bigger and better than most single reelers.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Looking For Sally
(Pathe—Two Reels)

SOME cleverness and originality is mixed in with the action which is depicted in this two-reeler starring Charley Chase. He returns from Europe and mistaking a very ugly girl for the sweetheart he loved before departing these shores, he escapes from her and goes in search of a blond beauty whose radiant face has charmed him. He chases her about, assuming the role of a broken-down tramp in order to make her acquaintance and then he finds that this girl is Sally.

The action is keyed to a fast beat, and when moments of amusement marked for their sheer brightness are not developing, the movement holds the interest. Chase gives a most capable performance and has the able support of Katherine Grant, Noah Young, Leo Willis, and Jules Mendel. Leo McCarey directed the picture, which is somewhat above the level of the average two-reel comedy.—T. C. KENNEDY

King Cotton
(Educational-Hamilton—Two Reels)

THIS Lloyd Hamilton vehicle is hardly up to the standard of past stories in which the comedian has appeared. It is not without its humorous incidents, but it strives too hard to be funny and falls just short of the mark.

Hamilton reverts to the skunk for his laughs in the first reel. He bags this odoriferous animal unknowingly while in the act of picking cotton and thereby ostracises himself from the other cotton pickers. An escaped bear which plays havoc in the cotton fields also adds slightly to the comedy.

In the latter half of the picture Hamilton is disguised as a colored servant in the home of the cotton king's daughter, is compelled to help her with her dressing and goes through some really funny antics. Hamilton fans will doubtless like the picture, though he has been seen to better advantage in the past.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Sporting Judgment
(Pathe—One Reel)

DIVING, football, polo, and auto racing are the sports used in this Grantland Rice "Sportlight" film to illustrate the point that keen judgment of time and space is necessary to eminence in athletics. Scenes of sporting events are assembled to make the point convincing and interesting as well. The reel shows a champion high-diver making a 110-foot dive as a climax, and it is a stirring one, for the reel.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Short Subjects and Serials

Ralph Graves and Molly Malone in scenes from the two-reel Mack Sennett comedy, "He Who Gets Smacked," a Pathe release.

New "Our Gang" Comedy Print Due

The Pathe home office will receive a print in a few days of the latest Our Gang comedy, "Mary, Queen of Tots." The picture is now in the hands of the cutters. It features the regular gang cast.

The second of the new group of Star Series Comedies is also well along in production. It has an extensive cast which includes Al St. John in the featured role, Martha Sleeper, Marjorie Whiteis, James Finlayson, Lucien Littlefield, "Husky" Hanes and Al Hallett, Jay Howe is directing.

"Husky" Hanes, the six months old comedy "find" of F. Richard Jones is appearing in his second picture under the Hal Roach banner. He is playing in support of Charley Chase in "Daddy Goes A-Grunting."

Davis to Distribute Ben Wilson Serial

Ben Wilson productions has closed a contract with Davis Distributing Division whereby the latter will distribute the ten episode serial, "The Mystery Box", which is now in production on the west coast. The serial stars Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber and will be ready for release on June 1st. It will be followed by "The Power God", a fifteen episode serial, which will also be distributed by Davis.

Pathe Names Week's Releases

Serial "Sunken Silver" and Charley Chase Comedy on May 10 Schedule

THE principal releases on the Pathe program for the week of May 10th are the serial, "Sunken Silver" and Charley Chase in the Hal Roach comedy, "Looking for Sally." The serial is based on the Albert Payson Terhune story, "Black Ceasar's Clan."

"Sunken Silver" is in ten chapters. It was in production for four months in Florida. Walter Miller and Allene Ray have the featured roles. The screen adaptation was made by Frank Leon Smith and the picture was directed by George Seitz.

The Charley Chase comedy, "Looking for Sally," was directed by Leo McCarey and includes in the supporing cast, Katherine Grant, Noah Young, Jules Mandel and Leo Willis.

Hal Roach is also presenting a one-reel comedy. The title of the picture is "Grief in Bagdad." The cast comprises Earl Mohan, Billy Engle, Dolores Johnston, Katherine Grant, William Gillespie and Leo Willis. The production was made under the direction of Ross Lederman.

The fourth chapter of "The Origin of Man" series is the featured subject in the Pathe Review No. 19. A cartoon novelty, "The Making of Man," by Hy Mayer, and a Pathecolor of the City of Washington in "Visiting Our Own America" series complete the Review.

The Aesop's Film Fable for the week is entitled "Darkest Africa." Topics of the Day No. 19 and Pathe News Nos. 40 and 41 complete the Pathe program for the week.

International Newsreel Will Cover Patriot's Day

Three staff cameramen of International Newsreel were detailed from New York to Boston last week under the direction of J. J. Fraenkel, manager of the Boston office, to make a special for the Boston territory in connection with Patriot's Day. The edition was 300 feet in length and in addition to covering the patriotic exercises, also showed pictures of the marathon run.

At the conclusion of the exercises the negative was hurried to the Boston laboratory, where it was developed and prints made for the New England territory. By 8:30 the same evening the pictures were being shown in the Boston theatres, and the next day they were available throughout the New England territory.

Sennett's New York Office Moved to Pathe Building

On and after April 27th, 1925, the New York office of Mack Sennett, Inc., will be located in the Pathe Building, 35 West 45th Street.

Regional News from Correspondents

Canada

AN estate estimated at $530,261 was left by Harry Brouse, owner of the Imperial and Franklin Theatres, Ottawa, and one of the original directors of Associated First National Exhibitors, who died suddenly last September, according to the papers filed with the application for administration in the Surrogate Court at Ottawa, Ontario, on April 23. Mr. Brouse, who was one of the outstanding independent exhibitors in Canada, left no will so that the estate is divided evenly among his widow and the two children, Mrs. Hattie B. McRae, wife of Findley McRae, and Bert Brouse. Findley McRae went to Ottawa only a few years ago with the Shipman producing unit which made two pictures locally, "The Man From Glengarry" and "Glengarry School Days." Eventually he became manager of the Alexandra Hotel in Ottawa, which was owned by the late Mr. Brouse. Mr. McRae made application for the probate and has been serving in the capacity of administrator of the estate.

The estate has a gross value of $728,174 but is subject to mortgages totalling $251,912. Assets included cash in the bank $21,392; stocks and bonds, $54,004 and mortgages, $36,645.

For a period after the death of his father, Bert Brouse took over the direction of the Imperial Theatre, one of Ottawa's largest moving picture houses. He was forced to relinquish this activity, however, through serious illness. He was married a few weeks ago. The Imperial Theatre has now been leased to A. H. Coplan for a period of five years, Mr. Coplan also having the Princess Theatre, Ottawa. The Franklin Theatre, a downtown house, is under lease to J. M. Franklin, manager of the B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, until next August.

Bernard Allen of Toronto and John A. Nash of London, Ontario, have bought the Majestic Theatre at London, a large local house, and are spending considerable money on it for remodeling.

Salt Lake City

A. G. PICKETT, local branch manager for Famous Players-Lasky and party entrained yesterday with his party enroute to Los Angeles to attend the international sales conference and western division convention combined to be held at Hollywood, April 24 to 27. Mr. R. D. Hanish,
Rex Film Renovator Co;
Columbus, Ohio.

Dear Mr. Hanish:-

As requested in your letter that we tell you what results we have obtained with your film renovator, we have had this machine in use in this office for the past two months and we have found it very satisfactory in every way. It has more than made good your claims for it.

I find it much more satisfactory than the usual methods of waxing and renovating film particularly on new prints. It makes the film more pliable and.I believe it increases the tensile strength of same especially around the sprocket holes.

It may interest you to know of another use we put it to during an emergency case in this office. During a very heavy rain our film vault sprang a leak and the vault became flooded. We stood a very good chance of losing fifty or sixty reels of film.The film was almost saturated with water but we immediately placed it on the renovator. It cleaned the water off and we absorbed it with paper and waxed it at the same time.

This is a new thing in film renovating because water is a positive destroyer of emulsion on film as it warps and hardens same. After putting the film thru this machine I found it to be in a better condition than before it had become flooded. In all my experience in the laboratory end of the film business I have never found anything better adapted for the purpose than your process.

I wish you every success with your process and you may use this letter at any time you wish.

Very truly yours,
INDEPENDENT FILM CORPORATION.

Albany

THE Albany Film Board of Trade will give a dinner on May 4, in honor of J. H. MacIntyre, the retiring president. On the same day the Board will elect its new officers. Nominations were made last week, at which time Charles Stombaugh, Alec Herman and Herman Stern were placed in the race for president, while Howard Morgan, O. R. Rieffel, and Robert Mochrie were nominated for vice-president and Herman Stern, Charles Stombaugh, Alec Herman and Sigbird Wittman were nominated for treasurer.

Mrs. J. H. MacIntyre, wife of the manager of Paramount in Albany, leaves in May for Maine, while Mrs. Charles Stombaugh, wife of the manager for Pathe in Albany, left during the past week on a trip to her former home in Topeka.

Charles S. Boyd is the new salesman for Associated Exhibitors in northern New York. Charles Walder, manager of the local exchange, has just purchased himself a new home.

Miss Jane Holloran, secretary to the Albany Film Board of Trade, has never heard anything concerning her car that was stolen three months ago.

Leon Medem, a salesman connected with the local Pathe office, had a traveling bag stolen from his car while it was parked in front of the French Consulate in New York city. The bag contained a pair of shoes that Mr. Medem had never worn and likewise a much prized razor.

"Philabar Hall" in Valley Falls opened last week.

Mrs. Elizabeth Walton, of the Happy Hour in Lake Placid, was along Film Row during the week.

Harry Kron, who runs the Casino in Fleischmanns, is also running six bowling alleys this summer.

After listening to a piano seven days out of the week, Ben Apple, of the King theatre in Troy, gets more music when he goes home, as his two sons are members of the Checker Orchestra of Troy, frequently heard over the radio. One plays the banjo and the other the saxophone.

Joe Kallet, who has the Star and the Strand in Rome, is the owner of a brand new sedan.

Bob Bendell, who has been connected with a number of film exchanges in Albany, is now scouring for new houses for the Schine brothers. Pete Dana, who books for the Schines, was in Albany last Sunday, and had a long conference with Mr. Bendell at the Hotel Ten Eyck.

Charles Stombaugh, local manager for Pathe, has his men working like tigers in connection iwth the Storey victory campaign running until August 8. Mr. Stombaugh had a sales meeting in Albany on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, that was a hummer. And speaking of Pathe, ask Amos Leonard, a salesman, what he thinks of Vermont weather. He started out to cover his territory and then was forced to abandon his car one day last week in Proctor, Vt., because of snow drifted roads.

The Albany Zone Committee is slowly but surely building up its organization. Up to the present time all but two theatres in Utica have joined, and rarely a day passes now but that one to three theatres apply for membership. No date has yet been fixed for the next meeting. In all probability it will go over until after the national convention.

In Delmar, a suburb of Albany, one of the churches is trying out a new plan of entertainment, running a motion picture show for the children from 7 to 8:15 p. m. with another show from 8:15 o'clock on. There is no motion picture theatre in the village and if the church finds that sufficient number attend their entertainments, they will be continued.

At the Orpheum theatre in Chatham, N. Y., last Thursday night, a revolver dropped from the pocket of Nelson Jackson, assistant operator, and exploded. The bullet lodged in Jackson's leg and later he was removed to the Hudson Hospital.

Nate Robbins, of Utica, made himself even stronger in Watertown last week, when nearly 1,000 children of Jefferson county, who are interested in junior project work, were entertained at the Avon theatre as guests of Mr. Robbins. A new policy was also announced for the Avon which from now on will run split-week vaudeville along with pictures.

Lawrence Carkey, manager of the Strand theatre in Carthage, entertained all Civil War veterans of that village and vicinity last week.

The Star theatre in Potsdam, which has been run for some time past by H. E. Flack, was sold the past week to the Papayanakos brothers, who got their start when motion picture shows were in their infancy, in Watertown, and who retired only to re-enter the business later. They now have houses in Gouverneur, Canton and Potsdam. The Star, which they have just acquired, was built ten years ago.

Herman Stern, able manager for F. B. O. in this city, showed himself a true friend last week when upon arriving in Little Falls, he found that Mrs. Francis McGraw, owner of the Gem theatre there, had lost her sister. Mrs. McGraw expressed a desire to go to Utica to make certain arrangements. Mr. Stern took her there, making a record breaking trip in his car, and then brought Mrs. McGr: back home.

Exhibitors in northern New York as well as in this part of the state, were out of pocket to the tune of several thousands of dollars last Sunday, as the result of a storm that left from four to eight inches of snow, and which brought a torrent of rain throughout the day in the central part. The Park theatre, in Hudson, abreast of the times, and noticing the drop in temperature on Monday, came out in their newspaper advertisement the following day, calling attention to the fact that the house was warm and comfortable.

There was a red hot bowling match in Troy the other night, when Walter Roberts and Bill Jarvis took on Ben Stern and John Gamble for three games and a purse of five dollars. All four are connected with the Troy theatre.

The Lincoln in Troy, managed by Tony Veiller, is doing exceptionally well these days and last week there were five nights out of the seven when persons were standing.

That pictures would continue throughout the entire summer at both Harmanus-Bleecker Hall and the Colonial theatre in Albany, became a foregone conclusion last week when it was announced that stock would begin at the Capitol the fore part of May.

Exhibitors will extend a welcome to Alex Weissman, who is once more back in town after several months in Mexico. Mr. Weissman was manager of the United Artists' exchange in the City of Mexico, but is now connected with the local Metro-Goldwyn office.

Ben Apple, of the King theatre in Troy, will try to bolster up business throughout the hot spell by giving away prizes on Monday and Friday nights to holders of lucky coupons. The accompanying presentation speech will also be made by Ben.

Jacob Elias, owner of the Cornhill theatre in Utica, and one of the best known exhibitors in the entire state, will sail for Europe on June 8. Mrs. Elias will accompany him. The trip will have a twofold object for it will be the observance of the couple's twenty-fifth wedding anniversary and at the same time Mr. Elias will claim a small fortune which was recently left him through the death of a relative in Austria.

Motion picture theatre owners in New York state are receiving visits these days from State Troopers, who are demanding a compliance with the law in so far as fire escapes are concerned, and exits. The work is being done in conjunction with the New York State Labor Department and reports of these investigations are being filed in the Albany office of the State Troopers.

Washington

A PRIZE of $100 is being offered by Harry M. Crandall for the best name suggested for the new house soon to be erected by the Crandall Amusement Company at Georgia Avenue and Farragut Street. The contest will close May 15.

The proposed house will have a large seating capacity and is designed to take care of the entirely new residential district which has sprung up in that section during the past two years. The York Theater, erected by Mr. Crandall a few years ago, is but a half-mile distant, but the population is becoming so dense that there has long been need for another theatre.

An art exhibition in a theatre lobby is being tried out in Washington, probably for the first time in any city. The large promenade lounge of the Ambassador Theatre has been turned over to the Landscape Artists Club of Washington and some 25 paintings by members of the club have been put on exhibition. Exhibits of the work of Washington artists have been housed at the Ambassador in the past, but this is the most pretentious exhibition yet staged.

Visitors to Washington last week included Colleen Moore and her husband, John McCormick, production manager for First National on the West Coast. The two spent April 29 and 30 as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Crandall, while en route to New York preparatory to making a tour of Europe.

James V. Carney, the youngest house manager on the Universal circuit, has been appointed house manager and treasurer of the Rialto theatre, succeeding Harold Bassett, who is to be promoted and transferred to another theatre. Mr. Carney comes to Washington from the Broadway-Strand, Detroit, previous to which he was in Buffalo. He is a native of the latter city, and has been connected with theatres operated by the Universal Pictures Corporation for the past three years.

A complete broadcasting studio is being installed at the Tivoli Theatre, on Fourteenth Street at Park Road, for the use of Crandall's Saturday Nighters, who broadcast from WRC, the Radio Corporation station across the street. Crandall's Saturday Nighters have now been on the air for more than a month, broadcasting as the name implies, each Saturday night, and their programs have been well received, letters coming in from long distances.

Buffalo

F. J. A. McCarthy, New president of the Film Board of Trade of Buffalo.

FRANK J. A. McCARTHY, one of the most popular film men in the state, and manager of the Buffalo office of First National, has been elected president of the Film Board of Trade of Buffalo, succeeding Sydney Samson of Bond Photoplays, who has held the office for three years. Mr. McCarthy, who is a graduate of Harvard University, has been associated with Paramount and other companies in the Buffalo territory, prior to going with First National, where he has made an enviable record for himself. Other new officers of the board are: Vice-president, Colonel Howard F. Brink of Educational; secretary, Earl W. Kramer of Universal; treasurer, Henry W. Kahn of Metro-Goldwyn. The board of directors is composed of the following: Norman L. Sper, Dependable, chairman; Sydney Samson, Bond; Fred M. Zimmerman, Producers Distributing Corporation; Basil Brady, Pathe and Charles W. Anthony. The Film Board is now occupying new and commodious quarters at 59 Root building on the fifth floor. Installation ceremonies will be held at Stein's Hotel in Orchard Park on the evening of May 4. A committee composed of Messrs. Samson, Zimmerman and Kahn is now busy arranging for this annual event.

C. Sharpe-Minor, former organist at the Lafayette Square, Buffalo, is playing an engagement at the New Family theatre in Batavia, N. Y. Incidentally he spent much of his off time visiting his friends in Buffalo.

Allan Moritz has reduced his prices at the Lumberg, Niagara Falls, and installed a double feature policy for the summer. Lionel Edel, assistant manager, is said to be making plans to go over the falls in a barrel as an exploitation stunt.

Howard Sheehan, district manager for Fox on the West Coast, was in Buffalo last week-end, stopping off on his way to the New York convention. He was accompanied to Gotham by Branch Manager Bill Rowell. J. Emerson Dickmon and J. Horen. O. T. Schroeppel, booker, was in charge of the office during the absence of Mr. Rowell.

The Columbia theatre, Erie, Pa., which was visited by a destructive fire the other day, will be rebuilt. The damage, exceeding $100,000, is covered by insurance.

"We do not know whether or not we are going to succeed in one year, but we're going to keep right on trying," said Al Beckerich, manager of Loew's State and president of the Buffalo Theatre Managers' Association in commenting on Buffalo's Go to Theatre Week. "We are after those people who have dropped away from the theatres. We're going to get them back. Maybe we can do it in one year, maybe not. But we'll have a Go to Theatre Week every year." Vincent R. McFaul, managing director of Shea's Hippodrome said: "Spring weather is the chief enemy of the theatre at this time. We've never made an effort to fight it before. But it was always true—at least for a good many years—that as soon as the warm days came and the autos were out from their winter naps, everyone went for a ride. Outdoor sports are a great foe of the theatre. But during Go to Theatre Week we put on extra attractions to show the folks what they were missing in letting the shows slide all summer." Incidentally Buffalo's Go to Theatre Week was a huge success and houses were packed all week.

Al Sardino who operates the Crescent in Syracuse has taken over the Thompson and Brown theatres in Old Forge, N. Y. The Schine Theatre Corporation has taken over the picture houses in Boonville and Lowville, N. Y.

Kansas City

GLORIA SWANSON, the marquise de la Falaise, and her husband received a hearty welcome in Kansas City Wednesday morning when they stopped off for half an hour. They were aboard the Paramount special for California.

The lobby of the Garden theatre, Kansas City, gave birth to a most unusual and humorous incident this week. An intoxicated man, later discovered to be Earl Wilson, a painter and paperhanger, started an impromptu "song and dance" act of his own in the lobby for the amusement of patrons who had not yet entered the theatre. The police were called, Wilson later jumping from the patrol wagon, shots being fired at him as he ran up the alley, only to collide face first with a brick wall and drop unconscious to the pavement. And the crowd around the Garden theatre made it look like Saturday night in a mining camp.

The last landmark of what once was Kansas City's film center—the 17-story Film Building at Seventh and Main streets, now the Davidson Building — was wiped out this week with the removal of the Vitagraph branch office, the last remaining film company in the building. The new Vitagraph office will be at Nineteenth and Wyandotte streets. Two years ago the building housed virtually every film exchange in the city, high rent and lack of sufficient floor space being the cause of the exodus.

The new Indiana theatre, a suburban house of Kansas City, located at Forty-first street and Indiana avenue, opened its doors for a debut in its community last week. The house, owned by Daly & McGrath, seats 800 persons.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: George Koch, Star, Holten, Kas.; M. G. Kirkham, Hays, Kas.; C. A. Rehm, Baxter Springs, Kas.; J. J. Newcomb, Newk's theatre, Burlington, Kas.; Charles Sears, Sears Circuit, Nevada, Mo.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kas.; S. E. Wilhoit, Jefferson, Springfield, Mo.

The Benton theatre, Kansas City, the property of the late James W. Watson, who was vice-president of the M. P. T. O., Kansas-Missouri, will be managed temporarily by L. J. Lenhart, owner of the Roanoke theatre, for the Watson estate. The new El Ray theatre, now under construction, in accordance with the plans of Mr. Watson prior to his death, will be completed and the new house opened the latter part of July.

Another week of plentiful exchange activities in Kansas City. W. E. Truog, district manager for Universal, made a business trip to Des Moines, Iowa, and Omaha, while E. C. Rhoden, Midwest manager, was busy in the territory. S. J. Maurice of New York, special representative for Fred J. McConnell, Universal short product manager, was a business visitor in Kansas City. Russell Borg of Educational was one of the three bookers of that company who won brief cases for March increases. "Rube" Melcher, Midwest representative, spent the week-end on movie row, while J. A. Epperson, Pathe branch manager, had what he termed a "red hot" sales meeting Sunday. "Red" Jones, Pathe representative, was severely bruised when his "flivver" did a nose dive into a ditch in the territory, but he's up and about again. C. E. Gregory, Metro-Goldwyn branch manager, was busy in the territory, as was Louis Reichart, P. D. C. branch manager. Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Castle, Pathe city salesman, were grieved to learn of the death of their 2-year-old son, "Dickey" Castle. J. A. Epperson, Pathe branch manager, was rejoicing all week over the fact that a Pathe cameraman in Indianapolis "shot" the opening baseball game with Kansas City and rushed the prints to Kansas City for week-end showing. C. F. Senning, Educational branch manager, and "Bob" Withers, Enterprise branch manager, were territory hustlers last week. Truly B. Wildman, who returned to Kansas City after resigning as P. D. C. branch manager in Omaha, says he is going into business for himself, but that his plans are not completed.

Fair weather crowds brought out "S. R. O." signs in more than one downtown first run house Sunday in Kansas City, the Newman, Royal, Liberty, Mainstreet and Pantages doing a big business.

The following Kansas Citizens boarded the Paramount special for California in Kansas City Wednesday: R. C. Libeau, Ben Blotcky, Arthur Cole, Earl Cunningham and John States, all of the Kansas City Paramount office, and Frank L. Newman of the Newman theatres and Milton Feld, managing director of the Newman theatres.

The safe of the Roanoke theatre, a suburban house of Kansas City, was broken into Monday night and in addition to $389, the robbers helped themselves to a liberal supply of tickets, which may prove their downfall in the event an effort is made to use the tickets.

The Chetopa theatre, Chetopa, Kansas, has changed hands and is now under a new management. The new managers in order to increase business, has arranged for what is to be called a "family night," at which time one entire family may attend the show for .30 (cents). Regardless of the size of the family. This is a farming community, and the farmers are quick to take advantage of "family night, which is Wednesday of each week. This has proven a profitable form of advertising.

Arthur S. McNay, of Galena, Kans., who has been appointed movie house inspector, for the state, by Governor Ben Paulen, left the first of the week, on a several days' trip to Kansas City, Topeka, and other points in the state, looking after matters pertaining to the office to which he was recently appointed.

An out of town visitor at Kansas City, this week was C. A. Rehms, an exhibitor of Baxter Springs, Kansas.

The plans that had been under way for the circulating of a petition regarding Sunday closing at Miami, Okla., all came to naught at the vote taken there on April 7, 1925, to determine the matter. The referendum on the proposition to prohibit Sunday shows resulted in an overwhelming defeat for the "blue law." The largest majority of the people voted against it. The votes for the ordinance was 827 votes, with 1,222 persons against the ordinance.

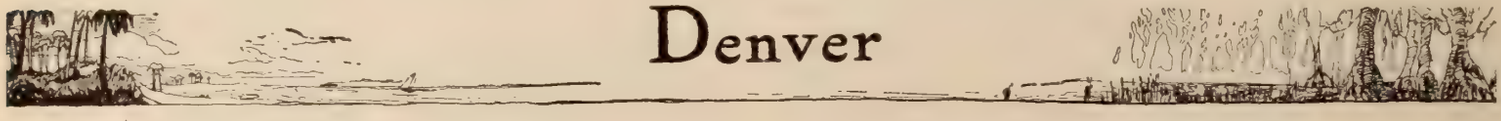
Butte

THE Liberty Theatre, which was opened for the first time in three years, last month, by the West Coast theatre company under the management of Mr. Gavan, is playing to a fine business and while it is not a "first run" Photo-play house, the character of the programs are such as to attract a big patronage. The educational features of the program have been especially fine and much favorable comment is being made on this feature.

All employes and attaches of the Rialto theatre and the American theatre were the invited guests of the management to a get-together dance a few nights ago. The dancing was for the hours between 11:30 p. m. and 2:30 a. m. At the close of the merry evening a bounteous lunch was served. The music was furnished by the Rialto theatre orchestra, under the leadership of Jack Durval, with the added orchestra from the American theatre. Some music, I tell you. Mr. Sullivan believes that "All work and no play make Jack a dull boy" and because of the strenuous hours of work with little chance for amusement the custom of an occasional dancing party was inaugurated more than a year ago. It is strictly an invitation affair and cards are issued which must be presented at the door of the American hall, where the dances are held.

A nationally famed musical organization appeared at the Rialta theatre for one week's engagement last week. The members of the orchestra were on their way to the coast to fill engagements on the Orpheum circuit. Manager Sulliven of the Silver Bow Amusement company says it certainly pays to have additional attractions, with the regular programs and at very little additional cost in price per admission.



C. M. Van Horn, who was formerly head of the local Pathe office, is here from Denver, where he is Manager for Pathe's Exchange. His visit to Butte this time is in the interest of his wonderful automobile, which he has had stored during the winter months. He will make the return trip to Denver in his car. His many friends here were glad to see him in Butte and extend the glad hand of sincere welcome.

Frank Boedecker, president of Motion Picture Theatre Owners' association of this state, who has been visiting a number of the neighboring cities, called in Butte last week and did a little shopping in films for his theatre, The Ellen of Bozeman. He was accompanied by Mr. White of Dillon.

The Intermountain Film Board of Trade was host to its second annual district meeting early last month at the New Finlen hotel. Following the business session a tenderloin steak dinner was served to the members and their guests. Salesmen, bookers and officials were loud in their praises of the affair and voted the dinner as well as the following program an enjoyable success.

W. J. Heineman, local manager of Kwalty Pictures, Inc., has just returned from Helena and other key cities. It is reported that he has placed several large orders for his company.

The old Grand Opera House at Great Falls, Montana, was recently sold to the Jensen and Von Herberg interests. The warranty deed signed by Fannie A. Sutton gives the sale price at $32,500 in addition to a $20,000 mortgage. Will Steege, manager of the Grand and associated with Jensen and Van Herberg in the Liberty theatre, also becomes interested in the Grand as part owner.

Denver

FRANK W. BRONTE, owner and manager of the Gem Theatre, Yuma, Colorado, has just returned home from the hospital at Rochester, Minnesota. His friends will be interested to know that his condition has somewhat improved, but also that he expects to return within the next ninety days and submit to an operation. Mr. Bronte is one of the best known exhibitors in the Denver territory. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery.

C. M. Van Horn, local manager of Pathe, left a week ago for Butte, Montana, his former home. Mr. Van Horn left with the idea of driving back in his automobile, but the latest reports are he is somewhat delayed on account of recent blizzards up in that country.

The America Theatre in Longmont, Colorado, is being completely overhauled and remodeled. When it is completed its seating capacity will be increased over one hundred seats and new equipment will have been installed. From outside appearances, Longmont will have another high class theatre.

The entire Paramount sales force including H. W. Braly, manager of the Paramount office and Rick Ricketson, manager of the local Paramount first run houses, left Tuesday for the convention in Los Angeles.

Sid Wiesbaum has just returned from a long trip to the Arkansas Valley. Mr. Wiesbaum is the local F. B. O. manager. He reports that it looks like an exhibitors' year in that part of the territory.

Harry Cassidy, manager of the local Fox Exchange, left Thursday for New York City, where he will attend the annual convention of his organization. Harry expects to stop for a short time in Cleveland, Ohio, where he will be joined by Ward Scott, whom he succeeded in Denver.

J. H. Ashby, manager of First National, disappeared last Wednesday, but was soon heard from down in Colorado Springs and Pueblo.

Eugene Gerbase, local Universal manager, made a hurried trip last week to La Junta, Rocky Ford and other points in the Arkansas Valley territory.

The first baseball game of the season between the Film Board of Trade and the employees of the various exchanges is scheduled for Saturday afternoon. From advance reports, there will be a real game, and a good time will be enjoyed by all. James S. Hommel, local manager of Producers, has been elected captain of the managers' team. Jack Krum of United Artists has been designated as the umpire.

William Menagh announces that he has sold the Park Theatre in Greeley to the Barret Brothers, residents of that city. Mr. Menagh announces that he is coming to Denver and intends to secure another theatre, preferably in the Southern part of the city.

Gus Kohn of the Kohn and Fairchild Amusement Company was a visitor in the city last week. With the adjournment of the Colorado Legislature, Senator and Mrs. Frank Kelly of Salida have returned home. No new laws of the censorship bills passed this year, all having died in their committees.

Detroit

THIRTY guests were present at a dinner given by the Motion Picture Theater Owners to members of the Film Board of Trade in the French Room of the Wolverine Hotel on April 29. Mutual problems were discussed, while prominent speakers were listed.

W. S. Butterfield, head of the Bijou Enterprises, and his wife will arrive on the S. S. Berengaria from an extended European trip on May 2.

Equipment of the Maryland Theater at Addison, Mich., has been purchased by Estes and Estes from B. H. Growt. The former owners of the Square Town theater in Brooklyn, plan to open the newly acquired house this week under the name of "Merry Land."

Jack Schreiber of the Frontenac and Blackstone theaters, who has been spending some weeks in Florida, expects to return shortly.

John H. Kunsky and George W. Trendle of the Kunsky enterprises spent the past week at French Lick in attendance upon the First National convention there. Both Kunsky and Trendle are officers and directors of First National.

The Rotary club of Manistee is sponsoring the new "Rotary Hall," a community theater which has just opened. It is modern in every detail and has a large seating capacity. E. L. Merkeley is manager.

Several thousand dollars were lost by local exhibitors because of a record-breaking heat wave during the past week. Temperatures jumped more than 30 degrees and for three days remained around 87 degrees.

Art Elliott, Detroit manager for F. B. O., has completed arrangements for the journey of his sales force to the annual convention of National Exhibitors at Milwaukee, at which time F. B. O. will hold its annual conference.

H. M. Richey of the Motion Picture Owners, returned Saturday from New York where he was in conference on the music tax. He also discussed the Greater Movie Season with Will Hays.

The Kunsky houses are about to issue a new house program, the "Photoplay News." It will be attractively arranged with a two-color cover. The publication will consist of about 30 pages. It is a continuation of the same idea as carried on by Kunsky theaters for many months and which was recently discontinued.

Royal A. Baker, local police censor, has just completed the continuity on a play for Byron and Lester Park. It is a proposed twelve reeler dealing with the birth of Kentucky.

Frank Drew of the Fox exchange is in New York attending the national meeting of the Fox organization.

The two main girders for the new State theater were set in place this past week. The girders, for the balcony, weigh over 40 tons each. Steel work is rapidly progressing and has now reached the fifth floor level. Seating capacity will be approximately 4,200.

A special showing was given on Friday evening at the Broadway-Strand theater for exhibitors and their friends.

GENEROUS contributions were made by motion picture interests of Harrisburg to the Community Fund Campaign for $300,000, raised in the last part of April, for the support for a year of various welfare and charitable organizations in the city. The Wilmer & Vincent Theatre Company, which controls half a dozen theatres in Harrisburg, was listed in the newspapers among the contributors who gave between $500 and $1000, while C. Floyd Hopkins, head of the W. & V. theatres in Harrisburg, contributed jointly with Mrs. Hopkins, in the $100 to $250 class. In the same classification was Peter Magaro, owner of the New Regent theatre, which he sold recently to the Marcus Loew interests, of New York, which took over control of the property on May 4.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins were captains of team of canvassers in the men's and women's divisions, respectively, and Mr. Hopkins made addresses at practically all the daily luncheon meetings of the workers during the period of the campaign. At each of these meetings Wilmer & Vincent presented the captain of the leading women's team with a doll baby and appropriate prizes to the leaders of the men's teams.

With the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner" and a program feature, the new Roosevelt picture theatre, the latest addition to the M. E. Comerford circuit, was opened in the Green Ridge suburban section of Scranton on the evening of April 8. The theatre is very ornate in design and modern in appointments and has a seating capacity of 1,000. Lempert & Sons, of Rochester, N. Y., were the architects of the building.

A twenty-foot driveway to permit the parking of machines will be a feature of a new picture theatre to be erected in Allentown of Raymond W. Reichard, of that city. There will be 600 seats in the theatre and above will be an auditorium designed for community gatherings and conventions. Work will start at once by Ritter & Smith, of Allentown, contractors and builders.

A small theatre will be installed in the $150,000 lodge building to be erected by the Masonic Order in Lehighton. The plans for the structure are being prepared by Jacoby & Everett, Allentown architects.

George Ritter, Jr., 7 years old, son of George Ritter, of Harrisburg, is such an admirer of Tom Mix that he spent seven hours in the Victoria theatre, on Saturday, April 18. George went to the theatre at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and was still there at 9 o'clock at night and without any intention of leaving when his parents, who had been frantic because of his absence from home so long, traced him to a seat very close to the screen. Prior to that the parents had instituted a search through the police department and hospitals. One of George's playmates late in the day had recalled George had expressed an intention to "see Tom Mix twenty times," and that finally led the searchers to the theatre.

Bob Lynch, general manager of the Metro-Goldwyn Corporation, was host to a gathering of Metro-Goldwyn exhibitors in the Hotel Allan, Pottsville, the object of which was to bring about a better understanding and closer cooperation between the exhibitors and distributors. There was a luncheon at which addresses were made by Mayor Bearstler, of Pottsville and Mr. Lynch, followed by informal talks by State Treasurer Charles Snyder, whose home is in Pottsville; Dr. Schad, of Reading, president of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern Jersey and Delaware; John Cook, of the Carr & Schad organization in Reading and E. S. Rudloff and Charles Haussman, of the Hippodrome Theatre, Pottsville. After the luncheon meeting the party was photographed and then the guests were entertained by Mr. Haussman at the Hippodrome. Members of the Metro-Goldwyn organization present in addition to Mr. Lynch were: Felix Mendelssohn, district manager; Jack Flynn, branch manager; Albert Fischer, Jr., Joseph Morrow, George Schartz and Herbert Given, of the sales force.

The exhibitors present included: Edward Whelan, St. Clair; Charles Kear, Minersville; William Crozier and Charles Haussman, Pottsville; George W. Osman, Tremont; Ed. Wagner, Tower City; Messrs. Donnelly and Kurtz, Williamstown; R. J. Budd, Lykens; Lester G. Holtzman, Millersburg; R. Hocman and D. Schleer, Hamburg; A. H. Edwards, Orwigsburg; Edward Zimmerman, Schuylkill Haven; S. J. Flood, New Philadelphia; L. J. Chamberlain and J. J. Higgins, Tamaqua; B. Freed, Nesquehoning; John McTague, Coaldale; D. McElroy, Lansford; Charles Bayer, Lehighton; B. M. Hofelich, Slatington; H. C. Werner, J. Levy, John Cook, F. Hill, and M. Mickley, Reading; William J. Noll, Robesonia; John Etticoffer, Womelsdorf; M. E. Holstein, Richland; A. B. Kreiser, Myerstown, and L. Gring, Pottstown.

The borough of Mauch Chunk has appropriated $20,000 to be added to an equal amount to be spent by M. E. Comerford in improving the Mauch Chunk Opera House, a motion picture theatre of which Comerford recently got control. R. A. Robillard, for some time in the employ of the Comerford organization, will be resident manager.

Improvements are to be made to the Pastime picture theatre, Lewistown, which is owned by I. Berney. Hodgens & Hill, of Philadelphia, are the architects for the alterations, and J. Steinback, of Lewistown, the contractor.

Fred G. Johns, for a number of years connected with the official staff of the Hamilton and Aldine theatres, Lancaster, died in that city recently after an illness of months. He was sixty-nine years old and is survived by his wife, two sisters, five daughters and one son.

William J. Frees, treasurer of the Hippodrome Theatre, Reading, was in charge of a recent entertainment on the Hippodrome stage, following the final show of the evening, at which the guests were the members of the official staffs of the Hippodrome, Rajah, Orpheum and Capital theatres, in that city.

Atlanta

MR. P. J. BRUNER is taking over the Liberty theatre in Chickamauga, Ga., which was formerly owned and operated by P. J. Herin. Mr. Herin's plans have not yet been ascertained, but it is understood that Mr. Bruner took over the theatre this week, and is continuing its running under the same policy pursued by its former owner.

Ralph B. Williams, branch manager for the local Universal office, is the recipient of an unusual honor, conferred upon him by the salesmen working out of the Atlanta office. There has been designated a Ralph Williams Week, which will begin June 8th and end the 13th, to be called, for short—"Williams Week." It will be a sales drive week, during which the four men who work under the jurisdiction of Ralph Williams will attempt to bring in tremendous new business in compliment to their chief. The salesmen are H. M. Williams, who covers the Tennessee territory; C. T. Jordan, working Georgia and Alabama; R. S. Campbell, traveling Alabama; and W. B. Fulton, who covers Georgia and South Carolina.

Jack K. Adams, of the Home State Film company, in Arkansas, came to Atlanta this week to look after the establishment of an office.

L. L. Drake, manager of the Ansonia theatre in Wadesboro, N. C., and one of the oldest exhibitors in the state, is doing a prosperous business with the Ansonia, and is to have a new theatre, which is rapidly nearing completion. The new house will seat about eight hundred, and will show first run pictures, high class vaudeville, and road shows. Wadesboro is one of the most enterprising towns in that part of the state.

George Eschenfelder, formerly exploiteer for th Charlotte and Jacksonville Paramount exchanges, working out of the Jacksonville office, has severed connections with Paramount. His immediate plans are not known, but it is understood that Mr. Eschenfelder will do advance publicity for a legitimate show in the fall, although what show it will be is not announced.

J. E. Simpson, of the Ideal theatre in Gastonia, North Carolina, spent last week end in Atlanta, and left again Monday morning of this week.

J. A. Etheridge, of the Gastonia theatre in Gastonia, N. C., was another well known North Carolina exhibitor to spend a few days of last week in Atlanta.

W. W. Anderson summoned all five of the Pathe salesmen working out of the Atlanta office in last week, for a sales conference.

C. E. Kessnich, district manager, and Jimmy Hanlon, branch manager for Metro-Goldwyn, are in New York this week. Mr. Kessnich went up on Friday and Hanlon on Saturday of last week. They are expected to return by Sunday or Monday of next week.

Oscar Morgan, district manager for Pathe, has purchased the Home Beautiful in Morningside, which was on display about a week ago. Over 5,000 people saw this handsome residence, which is artistically furnished and so completely equipped.

C. R. Beacham, Atlanta branch manager for First National, will leave for New Orleans about May 4th, to be several days in sales conference with W. E. Callaway, district manager. Mr. Callaway has called in all branch managers from this district to attend the conference for sales of forthcoming First National product.

Perry Spencer, formerly assistant manager of the Howard theatre, and in charge of publicity and advertising, has left the Howard. Mr. Spencer severed connections with the theatre this week, and as yet his plans are not known. Howard Price Kingsmore, manager of the Howard theatre, states that as yet no appointment has been made to fill the vacancy left by Mr. Spencer's resignation.

C. E. ALMY, manager of the local Metro-Goldwyn exchange was in New York last week to attend the M-G convention.

Eddie Fontaine, Cleveland exchange manager for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation returned from the Paramount convention just in time to go to Pittsburgh to attend a central district convention.

Norman Moray, the big chief of the local First National exchange is back in town after a three week' stay in Indianapolis, where he took Mrs. Moray for her health.

J. O. Brooks, assistant sales manager for the Universal Film company is temporary manager of the Cleveland office until a resident manager is appointed to succeed Lou C. Thompson who resigned several weeks ago.

Berthold Berger, of Gerson Pictures, Califorina, was in town last week calling on the independent distributors.

J. M. Goldstein of Cauyon Pictures, spent a day in the city, renewing old friendship among local film distributors.

Miss E. McNamee, secretary of the Cincinnati Film Board of Trade spent several days of last week in Cleveland, consulting Howard Christman, secretary of the Cleveland Film Board of Trade, on organization matters.

George Zegiob has purchased the Paris theatre, South Lorain, from Mrs. Feuerstein. Mr. Zegiob owns two picture houses in Lorain.

Fred Clemens takes possession of the Pleasant Hour theatre, Woodsfield, on May 1st, having purchased the house from F. Norris.

The Liberty theatre, Pleasant City, has reverted back to its former owner, W. F. Troth. The house has been under the proprietorship of L. Troyan for the past season.

Morris Kaplan, who has a chain of local picture neighborhood houses has taken over the Park National.

Al Ritzler has bought the Majestic theatre, Lima, and will manage the place himself.

The father of Harry Horwitz, associated with M. B. Horwitz in the Hough East 79th St. theatre, one of the chain of picture theatres belonging to the Washington Circuit, died suddenly last Thursday en route from Cleveland to California.

John Grieble, owner of the Marvel theatre, West 25th St., Cleveland, has a new plan for standing in solid with his patrons. Grieble admits all of his patrons who are seventy years old, or older, free at any time. He has been operating a show in the same neighborhood for almost seventeen years. He knows all his customers personally. He has watched the older generation growing old. And all those who reach, or pass the seventy mark, are his pensioned patrons. There aren't more tha i five or six pensioners. But the idea is pleasing to the neighborhood, and as a result Grieble is on the best of terms with all his paying guests.

R. C. Steuve, of the Orpheum theatre, Canton, was in town last week and began saying his adieux to his many friends. Steve is going to spend the summer in travel abroad. He sails May 28th.

The Film Exchange building register showed that most of the exhibitors preferred staying home to traveling. There were very few guests in the building during the week. However, among them were Ray Wallace, Ohio theatre, Alliance; and J. R. Johnson, Palace theatre, Ashtabula.

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association held its monthly meeting last Tuesday at the Statler Hotel. There was a representative showing of the members present, who enjoyed a peaceful discussion of minor local matters.

SPRING'S gotten into their blood and the ball diamond again lures. Paramount, F. B. O. and Metro-Goldwyn are organizing a team for the purpose of challenging to the bat the rest of the exchanges, all the others being exchanges located in the Film Exchange Building. Park Agnew, booker for Metro-Goldwyn, is one of the chief organizers and chief publicity man for the outside-the-Exchange Building team. Johnson of F. B. O. is to be pitcher. No this is not the famous Johnson of baseball. But with such a start, the team is bound to be a world beater. And they challenge the world to meet them anywhere and any place.

The Veenchotan Brothers of Elcador have recently purchased a new theatre. Veenchotan Brothers are owners of the Rivoli theatre at Elcador. They have purchased a theatre at Storm Lake.

C. E. L. See recently purchased the theatre at Lorenz, Iowa.. He bought the house from Mr. Cookingham who has a theatre at Ayreshire.

John Graham of the Princess theatre at Eagle Grove is evidencing prosperity. He purchased a very latest model Willys Knight on his last visit to Des Moines.

"Andy," cashier of the Pathe exchange, is getting along nicely after an operation for appendicitis. He is convalescing at home now.

Mr. O'Connor who represents Metro-Goldwyn in northeastern Iowa, succumbed to an attack of the 'flu. He spent the week in Waterloo in bed.

The Victory theatre at Fairfield of which Mrs. Tessie Patterson is owner and manager is equipped with a new machine sold for Esco by Salesman Lester Phillips.

Alice Gannon, biller for F. B. O., has left their employ to take a place with the Des Moines Clay Company.

H. W. Davis, cashier for Metro-Goldwyn, is keeping the pavements hot. He's looking for a home out in the suburbs far from the maddening crowd.

Donald West, the fire chief of the Metro-Goldwyn branch, was highly complimented by Mr. Will Hays' representative fire inspector when inspection was made of the building last week. A plan, which has long been on foot to raise a collection for a fire helmet for Chief West, was furthered by this praise.

Manager Banford of the Metro-Goldwyn branch returned from the New York sales convention Sunday all pepped up over the new crop of pictures.

The eight good men and strong headed by Manager Frank Crawford who left the Famous Players exchange to attend the convention in California, send back word that they met the Paramount special in Kansas City and that they are going great in Los. Evidently the knock-'em-dead wardrobes purchased before they left Des Moines are making the movie stars sit up and notice.

Mr. Youngclass of Jefferson visited the Des Moines exchanges last week. Also W. M. Thrall, who is owner of the Princess theatre at Montezuma. Jess Collins of the Rex theatre at Perry reports that things are looking good while W. W. Watt of Sac City stopped in at Educational to line up pictures.

Dallas

LOCAL Paramount branch offices are practically bare of executives, the following having gone to the national convention in Los Angeles: J. B. Dugger, branch manager, and Mrs. Dugger, his manager; Curtis Dunham, exploitation representative; Earl L. Crabb, district manager theatre department and Mrs. Crabb; and D. K. Reed, M. J. Helms, Neal B. Houston, C. E. Hilgers, Jack McCarthy, J. H. Elder, Hal C. Norfleet and Preston P. Reynolds.

A. W. Lilly, operator of theatres in Greenville, Commerce and Sulphur Springs, and member of the State arbitration board, was a visitor along film row last week.

Extensive improvements are being made in the Old Mill theatre, now controlled by the Texas Amusement Company with B. W. Bickert as manager.

For the first time since it was built, the Majestic theatre will continue its program of vaudeville and first run motion pictures during the summer, it was announced by Karl Hoblitzelle, president of the Interstate Amusement Company, before he left for New York for an extended yachting trip.

The new De Andi theatre is to be opened at Armarillo, May 4, it was announced by H. S. Ford of Wichita Falls, operator of houses in the two cities, who visited Dallas last week.

Vaudeville is to be discontinued at the Melba theatre and a straight picture program with presentations, instituted July 1, according to present plans.

John Paxton of the Grand and Parisian theatres at Paris, Tex., was a visitor along film row last week.

Bob McIlheran, Universal branch manager, and Bill Underwood, manager of the Specialty Film Company, took the Shrine last week. Leslie Wilkes, First National manager, was chairman of the parade committee and saw that the two were given special attention.

Pete Pate and his musical comedy company, at the Jefferson theatre for more than a year, gone to California but the house will remain open for a mixed program of pictures and dramatic stock by the Harley J. Company.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Free and Equal

(Frequal—About Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE racial issue of intermarriage between blacks and whites was tackled by the screen nearly ten years ago—and after all these years on the dusty shelf it has finally been presented. Probably through fear of popular prejudice it was kept out of sight only to be yanked out of obscurity at this late day because "All God's Chillun Got Wings" got by on the stage. After looking it over it is easy to see that it was made a decade ago—what with its "spotty" production, its exaggerated acting—and the crude way in which its story is told. If it serves any purpose at all it is in bringing out the comparison between this product and what is presented in this modern day. The screen has surely advanced.

We would call it a lurid melodrama told in terms of a preachment. The author, who never emerges from oblivion, tries to show the awful things that may develop from such racial intermarriage—its message being that the whites should leave the solution of the Negro problem to the Negroes themselves. The central figure is an idealist who, to prove his theory that a black is a white man's equal if given the same opportunities, brings an octoroon to his Northern home as his secretary. To the world this man is white.

The author proves nothing and sheds no light on the race question. The mere fact that the octoroon knocks his benefactor's theory for a goal by secretly marrying his daughter and killing a maid doesn't solve the problem. He is neither black nor white—but a hybrid. Consequently the equality of the races is not touched upon at all.

The film does no good—and it may do harm if it is taken too seriously. For one thing it doesn't touch life. The race problem does not exist to any extent in the North—and the South will certainly turn thumbs down upon it. There are some moments of gripping melodrama, but these are overwhelmed by the crude touches—the tawdry settings—the bad acting—and direction of a distinctly old-fashioned type. It contains so much lurid stuff that it will probably invite more laughter than censure. There's really no place for it in this modern day.

THEME. Melodrama which attempts to carry out an idealist's theory that blacks are the equal of whites if given the same opportunities. Protagonist commits murder and bigamy and dissipates the theory.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. A few of the scenes which carry suspense. The courtroom trial.

DIRECTION. As this was made nearly a decade ago it shows old-fashioned direction which is in the discard these days. Makes players act all over the place—and builds scenes to point crude melodrama.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Better go easy on this—and you better know your crowd. Might stimulate interest by exploiting it as a sensational melodrama on the race question.

DRAWING POWER. Has no drawing possibilities except for the sensation seekers. They are apt to be disappointed. Not for south of the Mason & Dixon line.

SUMMARY. Nothing but lurid and crude melodrama which is treated so badly as to become ridiculous. Some may take it seriously. But it fails to solve the question of equality between the whites and blacks. Is acted in hectic fashion and never convinces. The sole redeeming touches are the subtitles. Contains terrible lighting and tawdry settings.

THROUGH the director guiding the players in acting like real human beings—and combining the heart interest moments with several which contain romantic appeal this picture succeeds in offering a satisfactory hour of entertainment. It isn't very "great shakes" when it comes to plot. In fact it develops into a mild little romance until the climax brings a tragedy and upsets things for a while. The director has erred, however, in prolonging his scenes since they are not substantial enough to carry such stress—and when these same scenes are weighed down with long subtitles the result does not spell rhythm. He might have toned down some of the sets—many of which are too elaborate and too large—especially those which pass as the quarters of the wealthy bounder.

What we like about this picture is its lack of any moral lesson. No sermon is preached to the army of working girls who labor as typists. It just details the romance of a particularly personable stenographer and a young law clerk. She is just charming enough to interest people of wealth—and because her mother wants her to marry money no attention is paid to her affair with the hero.

There is a pleasant surprise in store for the "I told you Sos." No indeed, the wealth bounder does not seduce her. The disgrace is brought upon her and her family by the law clerk. The bounder had played square with her by offering to marry her once he had lured her into his home. The tragedy is brought forth with real human highlights—the father fuming at the disgrace without saying to the girl—"Go and never come back." But he does lug out the revolver when the youth comes to claim her—and disaster is averted by the quick-witted girl who thrusts her father's arm upwards—with the bullet speeding toward the ceiling.

The story has not been altered except in the drawing of the hero. In the original he becomes a cad. It is a picture which is acted with genuine sympathy and feeling by Dorothy Mackaill. When it threatens to sag she helps it out with her imagination and humor.

THEME. Drama of stenographer who climbs into social circles, her mother being ambitious that she marry a millionaire. Man of wealth has honorable intentions. It is the poor law clerk who disgraces her. However, he makes amends.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The charm and feeling that Dorothy Mackaill puts into her work. The pathos when heroine brings disgrace upon her family. The moment when her father would kill her seducer. The settings. The performances by Bosworth and Brockwell.

DIRECTION. Extracts everything possible from story. Uncovers some different twists in having hero painted as seducer instead of wealthy bounder. Holds some scenes too long. Makes players act like human beings.

DRAWING POWER. Cast and title—not forgetting popularity of serial should draw patronage. Suitable for all types of houses.

SUMMARY. The picture turns out to be a combination of heart interest and romantic drama—with the characters acting like real human beings. Even gets away from obvious in the concluding scenes when hero is not shown as above sin. Good settings and detail. First rate acting.

THE CAST

Chickie	Dorothy Mackaill
Barry Dunne	John Bowers
Jonathan	Hobart Bosworth
Jennie	Gladys Brockwell
Jake Munson	Paul Nicholson
Janina	Myrtle Stedman
Ila Moore	Olive Tell
Bess Abbott	Lora Sonderson
Mrs. Dunne	Louise Mackintosh

By Elenore Maberin. Directed by John Francis Dillon.

SYNOPSIS. Stenographer is attracted to law clerk and develops romance with him. Also enters society and wealthy philanderer becomes sincere enough to want to marry her. The girl girl brings disgrace upon her family through an affair she has with the law clerk. When he returns to her the girl's father threatens to kill him. But the love the young people show for one another inspires a parental blessing.

The Crowded Hour

(Paramount—6558 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ONCE in a while Paramount gives Bebe Daniels a good story—and this is one of the occasions. The picture is adapted from a war play in which Jane Cowl starred a few seasons ago—and while it serves up nothing new in theme or treatment it succeeds in building a crowded hour of incident and action. Naturally it is obvious all the way. It capitalizes heroics just as any war play would have it. In other words when the central characters are cut off from the world by high explosives bursting about them they undergo terrific sacrifices and have their souls purified by the glory of it all.

There is just the suggestion of a triangle when the actress, played with good feeling by Bebe Daniels, follows the man she loves to war—unmindful of the fact that he is married and belongs to another. Their motive for enlisting is not particularly ennobling—for the man goes to avenge his brother's death while the actress follows to be near him.

The rest of the picture presents a lot of conflict—which while it is exciting is more or less vague in its depiction. We see soldiers retreating hurriedly or rushing to shelter. There are shots of dugouts—and other shots of bombs bursting on all sides. This all goes under the head of action. The highlight comes when the actress is torn between love and duty. Should she sacrifice one man to save a battalion or sacrifice the battalion to save the man she loves. She finally decides in favor of the battalion. But the suspense is dissipated when the two women confront each other and mourn their loss. It is certain that the hero will bob up to avert an unpleasant ending. And the actress, now guided by unselfish sacrifice, gives him up to his wife.

There are some scattering moments of heart interest—and when the plot gives evidence of wearing out library shots of the war are used to give it a semblance of reality. Being a war picture it lacks anything new. But as seven years have expired since the armistice the patrons should not turn thumbs down on it. A first rate offering of its kind.

THEME. Romantic drama of the war in which actress and husband, who has run away from his wife, experience the ennobling influence of sacrifice. She gives him up to his wife.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The war atmosphere. The photography and lighting. The scene when heroine tries to signal the battalion. The problem she has to face here. The performances by a well-balanced cast.

DIRECTION. Has taken routine story and made it enjoyable through balancing war scenes with moments of heart interest. Creates good atmosphere with war shots and gets results from cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as successful play in which Jane Cowl starred. If you are sure of your crowd tell them it is a vivid romance of the war. Tie up with Legion posts, etc. Put on cantonment scene for prologue.

DRAWING POWER. For average houses. Title and cast should draw them. O. K. for first runs if patrons have not tired of war plays.

SUMMARY. While this is a romance of the late war it is executed in first rate style—showing plenty of war atmosphere, plenty of romance and the usual heroics. Obvious of course, but interest doesn't lag. Competently acted.

THE CAST

Peggy Laurence	Bebe Daniels
Billy Laidlaw	Kenneth Harlan
Matt Wilde	T. Roy Barnes
Bert Caswell	Frank Morgan
Grace Laidlaw	Helen Lee Worthing
Captain Soulier	Armand Cortez
Grandmere Buvasse	Alice Chapin
Operator	Warner Richmond

By Channing Pollock and Edgar Selwyn. Scenario by John Russell. Directed by E. Mason Hopper. Photographed by J. Roy Hunt.

SYNOPSIS. Actress gives up profession to follow the man she loves to the trenches. He is married, but has grown indifferent towards his wife. So he enlists to avenge his brother's death. The actress and the husband continue their romance in fleeting moments between battles. But she is willing to sacrifice him to save a battalion. She meets his wife and appreciates the latter's overwhelming love for him. When he returns she sacrifices her happiness in giving him to his wife.

She Wolves

(Fox—5783 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WITH a story in which the conflict is lost in the shuffle of plot and background—with the comedy possibilities never developed—and with its leading player miscast in that he fails to catch the humorous values of his role this picture will disappoint those who are looking to be thrilled or amused. Not only the original title, "The Man in Evening Clothes," but the plot and characterization are suggestive of humor—and this very necessary element is never developed. There are other points that are not developed either. For one thing the plot lacks motivation in the way the characters are shuffled about. It hinges upon the separation of a newly married couple because the bride is disillusioned in discovering that her husband is not a Prince Charming in evening clothes.

The marriage and the separation come too quickly to carry any dramatic weight. The next thing we see is the husband in Paris where he proceeds to live high and flirt outrageously with all the girls. The pathos of their separation is never developed. A scene shows the bride having an affair with a Parisian fop but it doesn't mean anything. Meanwhile the husband has become a bankrupt in trying to live up to his wife's ideals.

The director has missed a chance to make the story sparkle with deft comedy touches. Jack Mulhall is miscast in the leading role. It would be a great part for Adolphe Menjou who would enliven the incident with his keen sense of humor. But Mulhall is no light comedian, and while his clothes fit him well—he fails to carry out the necessary swank and careless abandon. Moreover he fails to suggest a Frenchman.

The story loses whatever substance it indicated in the opening scenes. There are no big situations for the players—and while the cast comprises some talented light comedians they never have any opportunity to create laughs. The finish brings a reconciliation between the husband and wife. It never settles down to tell its plot—and the new title has no meaning. What should have been a neat light comedy succeeds only in being just a fair romance.

THEME. Drama of domestic disillusionment revolving around bride's ideals being shattered because her husband does not dress like a gentleman. He leaves her and becomes bankrupt in trying to set a high standard of deportment. They are reconciled.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The restaurant episode. Scene when wife surprises husband in his apartment. Scene when hero's goods are seized. The settings and atmosphere.

DIRECTION. Fails entirely to bring out the light comedy that plot suggested. Doesn't get good results from dramatic sequences and fails to make characters convincing. Scenes not well dovetailed. Best with mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Would tie up with men's shops on new styles, etc. Bill as a Belasco play. Teaser the title and bring out that it is a drama of Paris. Use such catchlines as "Do clothes make the man?"

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for average houses, though average patron will be disappointed in lack of action and comedy.

SUMMARY. Should have been made into a light comedy. Never convinces because figures are moved about without any meaning. Misses fire with its dramatic sequences. Lacks action as well as humor. In fact it lacks a plot.

THE CAST

Germaine D'Artois	Alma Rubens
Lucien D'Artois	Jack Mulhall
Andre Delandal	Bertram Grassby
Henri de Latour	Harry Myers

Celeste	Diana Miller
De Goncourt	Josef Swickard
Mme. de Goncourt	Helen Dunbar
D'Artois	Charles Clary

From Belasco's stage play, "The Man In Evening Clothes." Directed by Maurice Elvey.

SYNOPSIS. Youth and girl have marriage arranged by their fathers. She is quickly disillusioned because her husband does not dress like a gentleman and act like a man of the world. He leaves her and becomes bankrupt in trying to keep up appearances. He wins back her affections through his indifferent manner and feeling sorry for him she stakes him. Eventually she learns to appreciate him—and there is a reconciliation.

(Vitagraph—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

MAE MARSH comes back to the screen after a long absence in a role which gives her the chance to play up the heart appeal. It is a triangle story, simple enough in outline, but is treated in heavy fashion. The director has overstressed his situations in order to wring all the emotion possible from them. What might have been developed as a simple conflict—a soul struggle—becomes instead an involved plot the points of which are hammered home too forcibly.

It is a story of the love of two women for one man. He marries the both of them and the burden of the plot rests on the reaction of the two wives to each other. For about three reels it offers satisfactory moving moments—there being sincere feeling in the characterization and the situations. The man—a soldier—marries the good girl on the eve of his departure for foreign parts—and being a philanderer he doesn't respect his marital vows. So the other woman comes into his life and he commits bigamy. This is the point that the story sags in interest and loses its human touch because of the theatric melodrama introduced.

The storms of passion which engulf the two women are accompanied by Nature's pictorial storms. The soldier not only casts off the good girl, but makes it very plain that he cares little for the bad girl. So in revenge the latter brings about his death by permitting him to die of exposure on a lonely ledge of rock. The good girl takes the rival wife and the babe into her cottage where after a sufficient lapse of time her hatred is conquered. There is one final burst of emotion as the bad girl would drown herself, but she is saved. And the picture is over.

There are several flaws here. There is a ten year time lapse, but the heroine and her soldier husband never age. Both characters respectively register long-suffering patience and devilishness. It drips too much old-fashioned sentimental hokum—is obviously plotted—and the subtitles are out of order. One reads—"the winter was long in passing; but it passed." Miss Marsh's task is heavy. She is unable to make her character ring true. Laska Winter is much more convincing.

THEME. Melodrama of the love of two women for one man. Being entirely unworthy he marries both and when he dies the good woman wins over her rival with her kindness and sympathy.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The exteriors. The effort made by Mae Marsh to be sincere. Laska Winter's convincing portrayal as the bad woman. The rescue of the girl who would commit suicide. The atmosphere.

DIRECTION. Puts it over in heavy theatric fashion, dissipating his treatment in early scenes by over-stressing the emotions. Doesn't cover time lapse with convincing detail.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Mention that Mae Marsh returns to screen after long absence. Play up as vivid melodrama of two women in love with one man. Feature the exteriors.

DRAWING POWER. Mae Marsh might attract them if her name is well advertised. Suitable for program houses, community theatres and small towns.

SUMMARY. A heavy, sticky melodrama—which starts out promising enough but develops into old-fashioned hokum. Is obviously plotted so that suspense never enters. Also uncovers several flaws in time lapses and the manner in which convenient tricks are used. Subtitles tend to make action ridiculous. Acted well enough by Mae Marsh and Laska Winter.

THE CAST

Charity	Mae Marsh
William Pennland	Ben Hendricks
Hagar	Laska Winter
Jonas	Earl Schenck
Alick	Ivor McFadden
Michael	Thomas Mills

Adapted from Basil King's novel, "In the Garden of Charity." Directed by J. Stuart Blackton.

SYNOPSIS. Girl in fishing community marries a soldier on eve of his departure. Waits ten years for his return—but he comes back into her life as the husband of another woman. When the wives discover his faithlessness, the second bride allows him to die. The good girl takes her rival and the babe into her cottage and through kindness and sympathy conquers the hate in her heart.

Friendly Enemies

(Prod. Dist. Corp.—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

WEBER AND FIELDS, household names the country over, have arrived on the screen in the roles of Carl Pfeiffer and Henry Block, the famous characters of the popular stage play, "Friendly Enemies," a comedy drama of the stirring days of 1917 when Uncle Sam decided to get in the big scrap.

George Melford was given the job of transplanting the play to the screen and he has done a rather acceptable bit of directing. Of course the screen play is handicapped in not having the quaint spoken German dialect and not even the subtitles can make up for this. However, there is a wealth of appealing incident, human interest moments that reach for the heart strings and many situations which are sure to make the most jaded fan laugh.

Lew and Joe are as funny as ever and the passing years have been exceedingly kind to them. Laugh and keep young seems to be the idea. The team is fortunate in having an excellent supporting cast, including Virginia Brown Faire, Jack Mulhall, Lucille Lee Stewart, Stuart Holmes, who is an admirable type for the role of Miller, German agent, and Eugenie Besserer, who is immense as Mamma Pfeiffer.

The settings are attractive and accurate. The old German beer hall will recall fond memories. The explosion aboard the U. S. transport is a fine piece of realism and a good climax. There is drama in the scene in which Pfeiffer bids his son farewell and more stirring moments when the old man realizes he has been contributing to a fund to blow up transports. His son was on the last one sent to the bottom. There are many fine comedy scenes and the subtitles are well written. The picture is clean, wholesome entertainment and being a bit off the beaten path should find a welcome reception in most theatres of the land.

THEME. A comedy drama of the days of America's entrance into the World War with two old Germans as the central characters, who are torn between love for Germany and the United States.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The delightful comedy scenes between Weber and Fields. The sequence in which the friends seek to trap Miller, the German agent. The blowing up of the ship. The scene in which Pfeiffer bids farewell to his son.

DIRECTION. Considering the handicap at which he worked because of the lack of the quaint Weber and Fields dialect, George Melford did a good job. Has mounted the picture in correct manner and has put over the comedy.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Of course your best bet here is to boost the names of Weber and Fields. Window display of the book. Put on a German comedian prologue in imitation of the famous musical comedy team.

DRAWING POWER. Interest in screen appearance of Weber and Fields will probably excite the interest of the public everywhere. Should do business if exploited.

SUMMARY. A good screen version of a very popular play, lauded by the late President Wilson for its patriotic sentiment, marking the screen debut of Weber and Fields and a fine supporting cast. Comedy, drama, pathos and romance are well blended into a satisfactory whole.

THE CAST

Carl Pfeiffer	Lew Fields
Henry Block	Joe Weber
June Block	Virginia Brown Faire
William Pfeiffer	Jack Mulhall
Miller	Stuart Holmes.
Hilda Schwartz	Lucille Lee Stewart
Mrs. Marie Pfeiffer	Eugenie Besserer
Nora	Nora Hayden
Frederick Schnitzler	Jules Hanft
Adolph	Fred A. Kelsey
Messenger Boy	Johnnie Fox
U. S. Naval Officer	Ed. Porter

Adapted by Alfred A. Cohn and Josephine Quirk from the play by Samuel Shipman and Aaron Hoffman. Directed by George Melford. Photographed by Charles G. Clarke.

SYNOPSIS. Pfeiffer, shoe dealer, and Block, banker, have been friends since boyhood. When war is declared Pfeiffer leans a bit toward Germany, while Block, of course, sticks up for the Allies. Then Pfeiffer's son enlists. The old man is heartbroken. In fact to try and keep the soldiers from going across he has contributed to a fund for that purpose. The fund, however, was to blow up a transport. The ship is blown up but the son is saved. The two friends trap the German agent responsible and then start arguing again over new subjects.

Eve's Secret

(Paramount—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

AN ELABORATELY mounted production filled with eye-pleasing settings, many of them gems of natural beauty, especially those shot along the shores of the Mediterranean (in California) but with a story conventional in theme and one which has many moments with a tendency to drag. In fact much footage has been used in getting the tale under way and one is required to wait several reels for something to happen.

The picture is an adaption of the play, "Moonflower," by Lajos Biro and has to do with a cobbler's daughter who rises suddenly in the world because of the fact that a duke has picked her out as his future wife following an argument with an overbearing aunt over the subject of continuing the family name. Betty as Eve is sent from her lowly home in Poltava—wherever that is—to Paris and made over into a lady. Several seasons later we find her at Ville D'Or, the center of the admiring eyes of the idle peerage.

The duke is a jealous fellow and anyone who casts admiring eyes on his Eve risks a duel with him in the morning. There are several of these affairs during the action. The acting is really the best thing about this picture, in fact in less able hands as well as less popular players this one would not cut a very wide swath. Betty Compson as Eve is a voluptuous little person who wears clothes in charming manner—from one piece bathing suits to gorgeous evening gowns. Betty is not called upon to do much more than look pretty. She can do this, but her talents deserve better things. Jack Holt is acceptable as the duke, William Collier, Jr., does well as Pierre, the tailor's son, also in love with Eve, and Lionel Belmore is a good type for Baron Abel.

There are some good comedy moments especially those in which Baron Abel seeks to save admirers of Eve from duels with the duke. There is some suspense in the scene in which the Duke lures Eve to an inn with a naughty reputation hoping to force her into marriage but loses her when she escapes. The climax has some interest.

THEME. A romantic drama laid in a mythical kingdom dealing with the rise of Eve, cobbler's daughter to the Duchess of Poltava, a road strewn with the wrecks of many lovers and divers duels.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The elaborate backgrounds. The scenes at the Mediterranean bathing resort. The sequence in which Eve escapes from the duke at the inn. The scene in which Pierre forces the duke to fight a duel with him. The climax. The gowns worn by Miss Compson.

DIRECTION. Not the best thing Clarence Badger has done by a long shot. Has been handicapped with a weak story. Has given it a very satisfactory mounting, however, and has been aided by a good cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the names of Betty Compson, Jack Holt and William Collier, Jr. Use stills of Miss Compson in tie-ups with style, lingerie, stocking, etc., shops. Use teaser ads week in advance asking "What was Eve's Secret?"

DRAWING POWER. Popularity of the stars will probably draw business in the larger houses. Also O. K. for towns and community houses.

SUMMARY. A light and feathery offering with Betty Compson frolicking in drawing rooms, inns, the surf, gambling parlors, hotels, etc., as she is pursued by Jack Holt and William Collier, Jr., with the former winning at the post by a nose. We did not discover Eve's secret, however.

THE CAST

Eve	Betty Compson
Duke Georges	Jack Holt
Baron Abel	Lionel Belmore
Pierre	William Collier, Jr.
Prince Boris	Mario Carillo
Aunt Estelle	Vera Lewis

From Zoe Akin's adaptation of the play "Moonlight," by Lajos Biro. Scenario by Adelaide Heilbron. Directed by Clarence Badger. Photographed by H. Kinley Martin.

SYNOPSIS. Duke George meets Eve, daughter of a cobbler. He decides to make her his bride regardless of her station in life, so sends her to Paris to be educated. Several seasons later she is the cynosure of all male eyes at a Mediterranean resort. Because of jealousy for her the Duke fights several duels. One day Eve meets her girlhood chum, Pierre, the tailor's son now wealthy, thru luck at the wheel. She dines with him, incurring the wrath of the Duke. There is a duel, but the duke thinking Eve loves Pierre, allows the latter to hit him. However, he is only wounded. Eve learns she really loves the duke and all ends well.

Beauty and the Bad Man

(Prod. Dist. Corp.—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

LAID in California in the gold rush days of 1870, with its characters costumed in the styles of that day, this one may be set down as a fair program picture. It is an adaptation of Peter B. Kyne's story, "Cornflower Cassie's Concert," which was published in the Cosmopolitan magazine. While the interiors are perhaps correct because of the period in which they are laid, they present a rather sombre background for a somewhat old-fashioned tale.

Certain it is that Mabel Ballin is at a decided disadvantage in having to appear in the modes of grandmother's day when the fair figure resembled the well known hour glass. The plot presents familiar incidents of the usual western although springing an original idea when a bad man slips $10,000, half his winnings, at the gambling table to a young girl who has come to the mining town to sing in the concert hall-saloon-gambling parlor. She has run away from her worthless husband of a day. The bad man, Modoc Bill, shows he's a regular fellow under the skin and tells her to go to Europe to study.

The scenes alleged to show Cassie winning fame in the capitals of Europe are not very convincing, the backgrounds being somewhat bizarre. There are a few moments of life, the first comes with the arrival of Cassie in the town and her debut in the concert hall where Modoc Bill falls for her to the tune of $10,000. The next comes with the arrest of Bill for murder. Then follows his return and celebration which is interrupted by the arrival of Cassie's husband and the bet made by Bill and the saloon owner that he will die in 30 days.

The incidents built around this sequence have some comedy in them and there is a fair climax when Cassie, faced by her one day spouse, refuses to have anything to do with him whereat there is some gunplay with Bill's pal getting in some quick work through a window and making the husband "bite the dust." Russell Simpson is good as Chuckwalla Bill and Forest Stanley, a good type for Bill.

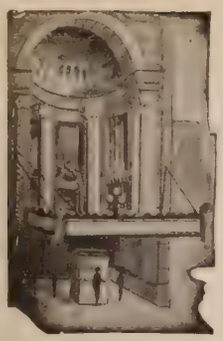
THEME. A western laid in the California of the 1870's in which a "bad man" puts an orphan girl on the road to fame as a singer, and after disposing of her worthless spouse, weds her himself.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The arrival of Cassie at Coolgardie and her debut in Cassidy's saloon. The sequence in which Modoc Bill "breaks the bank" and gives his winnings to Cassie so that she might study abroad. The climax. The comedy injected by Russell Simpson.

DIRECTION. William Worthington has achieved a fair bit of direction and has given a faithful screen version of an old fashioned story which has little appeal. Has given the picture a fair mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the title and the fact that this is a Peter B. Kyne-Cosmopolitan story. Boost the names of the stars. Might use still of Mabel Ballin in her 1870 gowns as the basis for a style window tieup showing modes of yesterday and today.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for program houses, community theatres and the towns.



SUMMARY. Familiar ground is tread by this one and we recommend exhibitors booking it not to promise their patrons too much. The picture is really just another western with a good cast and some comedy moments as redeeming features. The backgrounds are just fair. O. K. if you change your bill several times a week.

THE CAST

Cassie	Mabel Ballin
Modoc Bill	Forrest Stanley
Chuckwalla Bill	Russell Simpson
L. I. B. (Liberty) Hall	Andre De Beranger
Mayme	Edna Mae Cooper
Gold Hill Cassidy	James Gordon

By Peter B. Kyne. Directed by William Worthington. Scenario by Frank E. Woods. Photographed by Joseph A. Dubray.

SYNOPSIS. Deals with the adventures of Cassie, an orphan, with vocal ability, who fleeing from her worthless husband of a day, lands in Coolgardie, mining town, where Modoc Bill, a "bad man," after cleaning up the bank in a faro game, gives his winning to Cassie so that she may study in Europe. Cassie wins fame, returns to Coolgardie where her old husband insists she come to live with him. Modoc protects her, the husband fires but is too late as he is winged by Modoc's pal, Chuckwalla. Modoc takes Cassie in his arms.

Eliminating the Summer Business Slump

This Season to Test New Engineering Development Designed to "Manufacture Weather"

THE summer business slump is an unquestioned and expected condition in this business. But what a difference in profits to the average exhibitor, and as far as that goes, to everyone connected with this business if this seasonal depression was eliminated and in its place substituted a well paying season. Here is a prophesy based on excellent grounds; this seasonal depression will soon cease to exist, at least in part, and in its place will exist normal or even better than normal business.

Engineering again is the boon for this prospective increased theatre attendance, through the development of special "refrigeration" systems which make possible the complete control of atmospheric conditions in any house regardless of the hottest and most humid weather. In other words, exhibitors will be in a position to manufacture their own weather as far as their individual theatre is concerned—a dream come true.

There are today a few theatres which have been equipped with this atmospheric conditioning apparatus. These houses are a vanguard of a general movement toward the universal use of this type of apparatus in the larger and first class houses throughout this country. A very brief analysis of the possibilities for increased summer business through the control of temperature and humidity readily shows justification of the necessary investment required for the installation of the needed apparatus. A theatre that is not only as comfortable as the prevailing out-of-doors conditions (most theatres are far from that comfortable during the hot weather, even though they have what is considered an adequate ventilating system) but actually proves to be refreshing and a refuge from the heat, can look forward to enjoying the patronage of many people, not only for the sake of the entertainment afforded but also as a haven from physical discomfort.

It would pay every exhibitor operating a theatre that represents an investment of $200,000.00 or more, to investigate this latest engineering development, which promises to place the theatre business on the basis of twelve paying months. The initial investment required for a thoroughly efficient system that will actually permit an exhibitor to manufacture his own weather, is relatively high. However, it is not the initial cost that is of interest to the progressive showman—it is the eventual profits.

This summer will mark the first actual tests in an extensive way, of the increase in business that may be expected by a theatre installing an atmospheric conditioning system. Exhibitors in whose houses these installations have been made are exceedingly optimistic of the outcome. An example is even now available—one large house that previously ran at a loss which finally prohibited its operation, has been reopened and now finds that the increase in revenue, due to the complete control of temperature and humidity along with sufficient ventilation provides a paying proposition.

However, there is one precaution that an exhibitor should bear in mind when invest-

West Coast Theatres to Erect $250,000 House

WEST COAST THEATRES INC., following out the five million dollar building policy in Northern California, closed an arrangement with the Paramount Theatre Corporation and George Peltier, president of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank of Sacramento and Isadore Morris, Sacramento capitalist, for the erection of a quarter million dollar theatre in Marysville. Michael Gore, president of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., and A. M. Bowles, now General Manager of this Company, handled the arrangements for the theatre company. A theatre of 2000 seating capacity, plans for which are now being drawn, will be erected. The house will be similar in design to the Senator in Sacramento considered to model of beautiful design and comfort.

Two views of the New Granada theatre, recently opened at La Jolla, Cal. The left view shows the unusual design incorporated in the proscenium. The attractive style followed throughout the house is illustrated in the view of the auditorium.

Plans for New San Diego Suburban Theatre

A. F. Ahrens, who operated the Broadway Theatre, San Diego, Cal., for a time and who is now connected with the Pacific Southwest Theatres, Inc., has been made resident manager of all the San Diego houses controlled by the corporation.

Ray Ericsson, who operates the Ocean Theatre, a motion picture house at Ocean Beach, a suburb of San Diego, has purchased two lots in that community upon which he plans to erect soon a new theatre and store building, two-story, hollow tile construction, occupying 50 by 100 feet.

Contract Let for Building of Kenmore Theatre

A contract has been let to the Rowland corporation of Kenmore, N. Y., for the erection of a theatre and business building in Delaware avenue between Chapel and Landers roads. Work will begin immediately and the house is expected to open in the fall. The house will have a seating capacity of 1800. There will also be a public hall seating 900, bowling alleys and 16 stores. The cost will be $300,000. The stock in the building corporation is being taken mostly by Kenmore people, the plan being to make it a community theatre owned by Kenmore people.

igating the subject of atmospheric control, and that is that every system designed to ventilate and cool will not produce the most desirable and effective results for theatre use. Great care therefore must be exercised in determining the proper system.

There are at least 1000 theatres in this country today that should be doing an excellent summer business, as the results of manufacturing their own weather. It is safe to predict that several of this number will be showing a profit during summer months in the near future.

Aurora Theatre Installing New Equipment

E. Price of the Aurora theatre, East Aurora, N. Y., has ordered the following equipment for this new Roycroft town house: Two Powers improved machines, two Peerless low intensity arc control lamps, one Hertner transverter-generator, one Raven screen, two Superlite lenses and ticket machines. Haywood-Wakefield seats will be installed. The Becker Theatre Supply company installed the booth equipment. The house will open in May.

Bethlehem House Installs a Marr & Colton Organ

Harlon E. Woehrle, well known Pennsylvania exhibitor and organist, has just purchased a two manual Marr & Colton Organ for his New Lehigh-Orpheum Theatre at Bethlehem. This will be the 7th Marr & Colton Organ in this vicinity in the past two months.

Ala. Theatre, Rebuilt After Destruction by Fire, Opens

THE Grand theatre, which reopened recently after being almost totally destroyed by fire in December, 1924, is the third theatre in Huntsville, Ala., owned and operated by C. L. Hackworth. This house is situated in the heart of the business district, across from a ten-story office building, now under construction. After the fire in December it was rebuilt immediately with improvements that make it compare admirably with any theatre in the smaller southern cities.

The exterior of the theatre is quaint Spanish architecture with a 12 by 30 foot solid metal marque. The interior is equipped with every modern convenience, including a cooling system, a steam heating system, a minusa gold fibre screen, two Power's projection machines of the latest type, and a Hertner double 75 transverter. The house is equipped for presenting road shows as well as motion pictures. It has a large assortment of scenery and stage effects, twelve dressing rooms with hot and cold water, and an orchestra pit large enough to accommodate a fifteen piece orchestra.

The Grand is furnished with handsome green velvet draperies for boxes, doors and windows, and a stage curtain of the same material. It has an attractive lighting arrangement with an indirect lighting effect, an elaborate central chandelier and beautiful bracket candle wall fixtures. The comfort of the theatre's patrons is insured by a beautiful ladies' rest room and gentlemen's smoking and lounging room, furnished in wicker. The seating capacity of the remodeled structure is 1000, 400 of these seats being in a well-arranged circular balcony.

Jack A. Marshall, new manager of the Grand, is one of the best showmen in the state. Mr. Marshall was formerly associated with the Grand, but more recently has been connected with the United Theatre Enterprises of West Virginia.

The Grand theatre is Mr. Hackworth's third theatre in Huntsville. He owns and operates also the Jefferson, catering mostly to Western fans, and the Elk's Opera House, which is in use only at intervals. Mr. Hackworth is one of the pioneer exhibitors in Alabama, having been in the show business for a number of years and having won recognition throughout the south. In addition to his theatre interests, he is prominently identified with all civic enterprises in Huntsville.

Fire Destroys the Palace at Cedartown, Ga.

The Palace theatre, Cedartown, Ga., was destroyed by fire early Sunday morning with an estimated loss of about $70,000. The fire, which is the largest Cedartown has known in many years, was discovered after the interior of the theatre was in full blaze. Before the fire department arrived, the roof was falling in. The Palace tea room and other adjacent property, including several thousand dollars worth of film were saved, and the brick walls of the house were not damaged.

The origin of the fire is not known. Although the house was partially protected by about $25,000 worth of insurance, Thompson has suffered a heavy loss, and it will be several months before the theatre can opened again.

Good photography plays no small part in making a picture popular. It has a definite box office value.

All Space For Booths Reserved At Equipment Exposition

WITH all available space for booths reserved and elaborate preparations made for their decorations, the exposition to be held by the Manufacturers' Division of the Association of Motion Picture Equipment Dealers at Milwaukee on May 12-16, promises to be the most successful and comprehensive trade exposition held to date.

Sam Lears, president of the Manufacturers' Division, and also chairman of the Convention Committee promises that every exhibitor or supply dealer who enters its portals will find much to interest and benefit him.

The exposition will be held in the same building as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America annual convention and the convention of the Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America, so it will be extremely convenient to both classes of Milwaukee visitors during the week of the two meetings.

The manufacturers and distributors who will be represented at the exposition include:

Enterprise Optical Buys American Arc

IT has been learned through a reliable source that O. F. Spahr, President of the Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., manufacturers of Motiograph projectors, has recently been in Boston, where he purchased for his company, the American Reflecting Arc Corporation of that city, manufacturers of American reflecting arcs. These reflector arcs which have been in use in this country for a considerable length of time, will in the future be manufactured at the Motiongraph plant in Chicago. However, it is understood that several changes are to be made in the design of these arcs, to make them conform with the ideas of the Motiograph engineering staff These changes, it is predicted, will add many desirable features to the present design of this arc.

It is understood that Mr. Spahr is to give his personal supervision to the perfection of this arc.

New Cameras Placed on Market by Debrie

Debrie of Paris announces the arrival in America of two new models in the Debrie Parvo regular speed Camera and a new High Speed Camera.

These new models contain innovations and improvements on which Debrie has spent many years to perfect—containing up-to-the-minute devices and attachments.

The Debrie High Speed Camera has a new and important feature incorporated into its latest model, which enables the operator to use a direct focusing device. With this he can see the actual image reflected through the lens, so that he may focus and get his composition before actually taking the picture. A speed indicator which is also a recent addition, shows the operator how many pictures per second he is taking. Various focus length lines can be easily fitted and interchanged.

This new cemera will take 240 pictures per second—15 times the normal speed.

The Parvo Camera which is the Debrie model "K", is the newest creation in the regular Debrie Camera. This new camera has among its features an increased length of dissolve to 4½ feet—a new style counter which not only shows the footage taken, but also the number of turns of handle, and also at the same time the number of single pictures. This has been built flush with the camera.

An interesting development in this new camera, is the fact that it may be used either with motor or six volt storage battery on any ordinary 110 volt circuit without any unnecessary fittings.

The new cameras are being displayed by the Motion Picture Apparatus Company, 110 West 32nd St., New York, who are the sole agents in the United States and Canada for the Debrie Apparatus.

French Lick Springs Hotel

The All Year Convention Site

WITH the completion of its 1500-seat convention auditorium, occupying the ground floor of the new wing of the French Lick Springs Hotel building, this delightful resort, in the Cumberland foothills of Southern Indiana, steps into first place among America's convention sites.

You Get More Accomplished

At French Lick Springs all the participants in your convention activities are housed under one roof—in the magnificent modern hotel building. This means full attendance and prompt disposal of all matters under consideration. It means elimination of taxicab and other expenses. It means more time for amusement and recreation.

Two 18-Hole Golf Courses

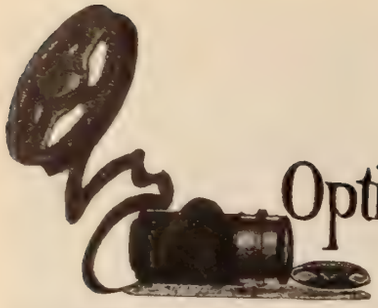
Here are two of America's best-liked golf courses: one, an easy, older course practically at the hotel doorstep; and the other, the celebrated new Upper Course where Walter Hagen won the 1924 professional championship. Convention delegates may play either course; and, if desired, special championship tournaments will be arranged.

Tennis, Swimming, Horseback

Two well-kept tennis courts. A swimming pool in the bath department where one can go for a refreshing plunge or for any of the many therapeutic bath treatments. A special bath department and swimming pool for ladies. A large stable of thoroughbred saddle horses. These are some of the diversions that French Lick Springs provides.

Miles of Alluring Countryside

To the person who is disposed to hike or ride horseback for recreation, the miles of winding trails through forest and meadowland make French Lick Springs unforgettable. And while many who come to French Lick Springs do not partake of the curative Spring waters that gush forth from the ground on the hotel property, there are hundreds who find new health and invigoration in the famous Pluto, Bowles and Proserpine Waters.



Tell Us Your Requirements

Write today, stating the time when your convention will be held and the accommodations you will require. We believe we can convince you that the many advantages afforded by French Lick Springs Hotel will make it the most desirable place you could possibly select. And remember this: French Lick Springs Hotel is ideal in every way for the small meeting as well as the large convention. Rooms and meals are included in the rate you pay. Costs are definitely known in advance. Do yourself and your organization the justice of asking for all of the facts about French Lick Springs now.

Analysis of Flicker

Increasing Efficiency of Shutter

IN ANALYZING the vanishing-flicker curves shown in Fig. 2 of last week's article, an explanation is found for the claims advanced by manufacturers of patented shutters, designed to improve the efficiency of the projector optic system.

The shutter is not, strictly speaking, a part of the optic system. Rather, it can be looked upon as something in the nature of a necessary evil. With the method picture projection now employs, it is necessary to interrupt the projector beam during that period while the film is in motion past the aperture.

This immediately introduces a loss of screen illumination, according to Talbot's Law, and also lays the system open to visible flicker with the result that further interruptions of the light beam are necessary to produce flickerless illumination on the screen.

The net result is that approximately 50% of the effective illumination of the projector system is absorbed by the shutter. In an effort to reduce this waste, several forms of patented shutters have made their appearance on the market during the past years, all working toward the end of permitting some light to pass to the screen during the time the light beam is interrupted, or "cut off."

In one of these forms of shutters, small perforations are evenly and symmetrically spaced over the area of the shutter blades, these perforations permitting a certain amount of light to pass to screen during the period of cut off.

The increase in screen illumination with this shutter will be directly proportional to area of the perforations in accordance with Talbot's Law.

In another form of shutter different colored translucent blades are employed which permit a certain amount of light to pass to through the blades during cut off, the remainder being absorbed by the blades. The increase in screen illumination in this case will be proportioned to the transmission of the respective colored blades.

We are not here concerned with the quality of screen illumination provided by these various shutter blades during the period of cut off. Suffice it to say that the resultant picture definition and freedom from travel ghosts are not as good as with the ordinary solid opaque shutter commonly employed.

An increase in screen illumination is obtained with these various shutters which ranges from 10 to 20 per cent. Furthermore the claim that visible flicker on the screen is reduced is substantiated by the curves in Fig. 2 in last week's article.

The extent of this flicker reduction tendency, however, will depend upon the ratio of maximum to minimum screen illumination obtained these shutters. If the ratio is large the flicker reduction will be small, and if the ratio is small the flicker reduction will be large.

Now the comparatively small increase in screen illumination which is obtained with these shutters is a good indication of the reduction of this ratio of maximum to minimum screen illumination. Anything which tends to reduce this ratio will also reduce the likelihood of visible flicker.

Vanishing Flicker-Formula

When replotting the curves shown in Figs. 1 and 2 (See preceding articles) on "semi-log" paper, Dr. Kennelly found that they formed a system of parallel straight lines. This immediately indicated that a mathematical relation existed between the vanishing-flicker frequency and the intensity of screen illumination.

Thus, every time the screen illumination is doubled the average vanishing-flicker frequency is increased by approximately 3.3 cycles per second.

The formula expressing the relation between the vanishing-flicker frequency and the screen illumination is naturally a log arithmetic one. The general formula is as follows:

$$F = 11 \log (KI)$$

Where F=vanishing-flicker frequency.
K=a constant depending upon color of screen and flicker range.
I =intensity of screen illumination in foot-candles.

Values of K for different conditions are shown in Table I.

Table I.

Screen	Flicker Range in percent	Flicker-Frequency Formula
White	100.0	F=11 log (3060 I)
White	44.0	F=11 log (1200 I)
White	33.0	F=11 log (1080 I)
White	7.5	F=11 log (570 I)
White	3.0	F=11 log (86 I)
Red	100,0	F=11 log (710 I)

For intermediate values of K, between those shown in the table, the curve in Fig. 3, can be used as a fair approximation. While apparently not following any general law, the curve of constants (Fig. 3), will enable one to make a close guess, as to the proper constant to use for any particular Flicker Range.

Projections, Optics, Electricity, Ideas and Advice

The General Flicker-frequency formula is used in the following manner: suppose it is desired to learn the frequency at which flicker will entirely vanish given a white diffusing screen and a screen illumination of, say 8 foot-candles. An ordinary solid, opaque, bladed shutter is used so that the flicker range will be 100 percent.

From Table I, we would choose the proper formula,

$$F = 11 \log (3060\ I)$$
$$= 11 \times \log (3060 \times 8)$$
$$= 11 \times 4.$$
$$= 44$$

"Charley's Aunt"—Prod. Dist. Corp., Tivoli, London, England

Referee: "One could hardly find a better tribute to the genuine, right-down goodness of 'Charley's Aunt' as a farce, than the way in which the familiar but immortal original shows up in this American film."

Standard: "If a critic may confess to having laughed, it is a mere duty to record that I have never seen a film so wholly diverting."

News: "'Charlie's Aunt' is an entertainment that should appeal to the holiday mood of everyone."

News of World: "The film version of the famous old play is quite as good if not better than the original. Indeed the film when we saw it was shown to an accompaniment of laughter that only paused to become more hearty."

"My Son" First National, Strand, New York

American: "Nazimova's colorful personality and her ability as an actress unite to make 'My Son' an exceptionally good picture. In many ways an improvement over the spoken version. There is a story that has an appeal and an element of realness that holds the interest. A most satisfactory picture."

World: "A good picture. Nazimova gave the best performance that we have witnessed in her recent pictures. It had sympathy and charm and understanding."

Herald-Tribune: "Nazimova's best role. She also looks very handsome. Constance Bennet is pretty, cute and plausible."

Morning Telegraph: "Nazimova is a wonderful mother. The writer is more than ever convinced of her supreme ability in difficult portrayal. As the mother in 'My Son' she does the best work of her career. The treatment of the story, the sea coast scenes, the excellence of direction, titles and continuity and Nazimova's fine work, make this picture most interesting."

Evening World: "An excellent picture. It is handled in an unusually intelligent manner. It is charmingly done by Nazimova, Jack Pickford, Constance Bennett, Hobart Bosworth, Ian Keith, Charley Bennett, Dot Farley and Mary Akin, Nazimova has never been better, a splendid feature."

The Sun: "Nazimova gives a fine performance. 'My Son' is the best photoplay she has graced in many blue moons. A sincere and interesting 'mother' film. Nazimova plays her with charm and understanding.

"Capital Punishment"—Schulberg, Castle, Chicago

Herald-Examiner: "Its story is novel, its action swift and its cast above the average. George Hackathorne gives a beautiful performance. The picture concludes thrillingly and happily. Many effective moments."

Tribune: "See the picture: 'Capital Punishment' is well directed. It interests you and the players do well with their roles."

Post: "An interesting narrative. The story has been well presented, well staged and clearly photographed. It is good entertainment. Its characters are interesting and it certainly has plenty of plot."

"Chickie"—First National, Strand, New York

American: "I am perfectly sure that this melodrama will please a great majority. Dorothy Mackaill looks lovely and charming John Bowers is better than I have ever seen him. He gives a very good performance."

Herald-Tribune: "'Chickie' is an entertaining picture. We always take hope into the theatre with us and in the case of 'Chickie' our confidence was not misplaced. John Francis Dillon has made his people act like human beings. That brilliant little actress Dorothy Mackaill, plays the title role."

Mirror: "'Chickie' is a box office knockout. It throbs. with impassioned love. Dorothy Mackaill is ideal in the name part. Not a single trick has been overlooked, to pack pathos and heart interest into the film. Miss Mackaill infuses a wealth of feeling into her role. There are beautiful gowns and women galore and amazing sets."

Morning Telegraph: "Without the shadow of a doubt the attraction at the Strand will draw enormous crowds. Certainly the flappers will eat up 'Chickie.' It was built and directed from one specific angle, box office."

The World: "Miss Mackaill has imagination and humor and a certain confiding quality. She also contrives to be distractingly pretty without looking like something painted on a sofa pillow, which is a novel achievement for any screen actress."

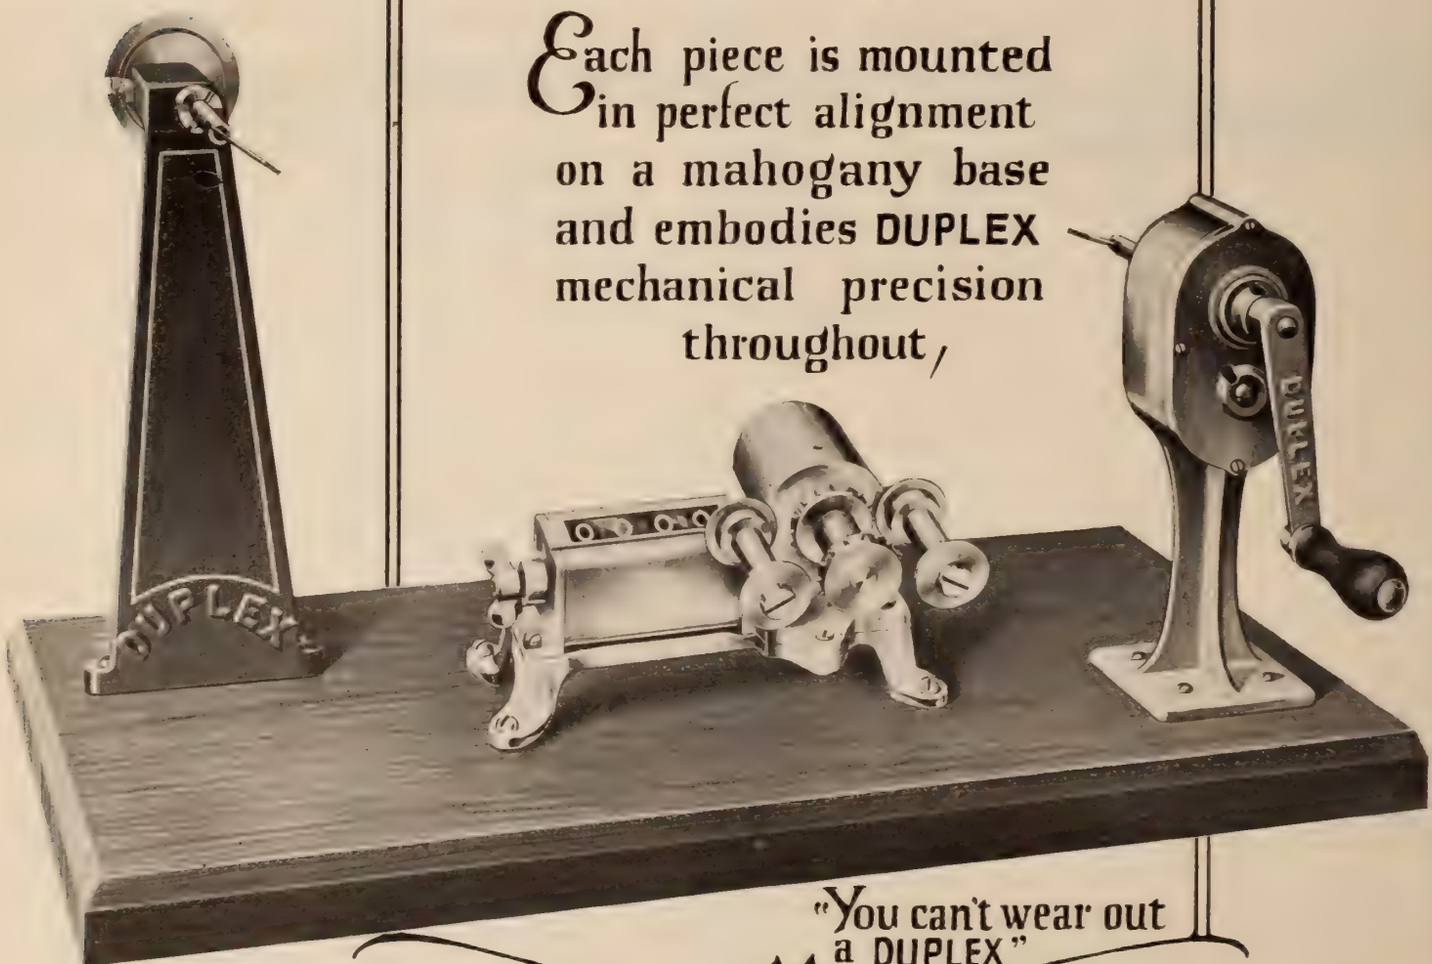
Evening Journal: "Dorothy MacKaill does excellent work in 'Chickie.' Hobart Bosworth and the others are well cast.

Post: "'Chickie' will delight the great stenographic public, and bring many tears from those who dote on shedding them. Dorothy Mackaill may surely be counted on for a sincere performance. There is an intelligence about her acting which demands attention. An imposing cast has been gathered for this film. 'Chickie' will be very popular with the movie-goers or we are very much mistaken. It will also add a plume to Dorothy Mackaill's rapidly increasing collection."

Evening World: "Good entertainment. Dorothy Mackaill is charming. John Francis Dillon, who directed, lost no opportunity to point his picture at the box office."

"Romola"—Metro-Goldwyn, Lyceum, Baltimore

Sun: "If there is one director today who understands, to an almost ravishing degree, the creation of a genuinely 'moving' picture, that director is Henry King. In his latest production, 'Romola,' he has composed a steady succession of scenes that makes a visit to the Lyceum, where this picture opened an engagement last evening, a veritable exposition of the pictorial beauties possible, but so seldom seen, upon the silver sheet of the present day."



News: "Lillian Gish's appearance in a film play is always an event to me, as, in my opinion, she is far and away one of the best actresses on the screen. And now she comes in 'Romola,' based on George Eliot's famous novel of life in Florence during the Italian Renaissance. In 'Romola' you will find drama and beauty and, above all—the exquisite Lillian Gish."

Incandescent Projection

The Simplex Incandescent lamp projector, with Cinephor Condenser mount, makes all the advantages of incandescent projection available at a minimum cost.

The condenser mount and exclusive patented slide carrier device makes it possible to project stereopticon slides in the same manner as with the carbon arc lamp.

This new projection equipment operating the 900 watt, 30 volt, Mazda Lamp is adaptable to all Simplex installations.

The Simplex incandescent projection equipment is simple to operate. When properly adjusted it gives a clear, steady light of high intensity. It greatly improves the presentation of the picture on the screen and it affects a saving of from 25% to 75% in your electric service bill. It pays for itself in a short time.

Simplex engineers will gladly advise any theatre owner or projectionist on the requirements of his theatre and on the cost of installing and operating incandescent projection.

Telling the World

Warner Bros. are now preparing a powerful national advertising campaign on their coming FORTY Classics of the Screen.

Without doubt this will be the most impressive—most dominating—and we believe the biggest in direct results, as measured in increased theatre attendance, of any advertising campaign in the history of motion pictures.

You remember the great campaign on the 1923-24 Warner Classics. That was admittedly the biggest thing ever attempted up to that time. The present campaign will overshadow that by far. It will surpass the former in number of publications used—surpass it by millions in number of people reached—and greatly exceed the former in cost.

This campaign in its plan and magnitude will be unique and absolutely without precedent or parallel in motion picture advertising. Never before in this industry has any producer backed up his product and the Exhibitor with such forceful, timely and direct selling help.

Heralded by this mighty volume of advertising, the new Warner pictures will be FIRST in the minds of the motion picture public.

Hold your dates open till you get all the details of the coming FORTY WARNER pictures. Warner Bros. never stop with half-way measures. They are in a position now as never before to do big things in a big way and the coming pictures—and the advertising of these pictures—will awake the entire country to Warner Bros. Leadership. Wait for the FORTY winners!

"The Fool" — with Edmund Lowe

(Fox, no data available)

Channing Pollock's successful stage play has been made into a powerful religious melodrama. Harry Millarde, who directed "Over the Hill," has directed also this picture, and once more makes his genius apparent. Edmund Lowe, in the leading role, gives an irreproachable performance. It is, indeed, difficult to think of any actor on the screen today who could have handled the title role as well as has Mr. Lowe; he does not act, he lives the part. It is one of the most perfect pieces of acting seen in months. And Anne Dale, a child actress, who has been given the difficult role of Mary Margaret, a little cripple, gives a performance so striking that it is second only to that of Mr. Lowe. Paul Panzer, too, who takes the part of an unhappy capital-dominated miner, is excellent. The remainder of the supporting cast is likewise deserving of praise, Mary Thurman and Raymond Bloomer especially. In the scene where Mr. Bloomer represents a broken victim of locomotor-ataxia he does as finished a piece of pantomime as the screen has ever offered. The heroine, Brenda Bond, is a newcomer; she does pretty well.

By its simple directness and sincerity the picture holds the spectator's undiminished interest from beginning to end. Many scenes are so affecting that there was a noticeable hush in the audience. The most important of such scenes is the one where the crippled little girl, having acquired sufficient faith, drops her crutches and, for the first time, walks without their support.

Though the picture has a strong religious flavor, yet it is not "preachy." Its author knew that theatregoers detest obvious moralizing and therefore he kept it out of his play.

The story revolves around the efforts of a conscientious young clergyman (hero) to live as Christ-like a life as possible. and to practice exactly what he preached. In carrying out his self-assigned program he loses most of his friends, and the girl (heroine) whom he loved and had hoped to marry. She, like the others, considered him a fool for trying to live according to the Golden Rule. So it comes to pass that he loses her to another, a richer but much less scrupulous man. After enduring degradation as his wife, the heroine tries to return to the clergyman. But he assures her that, in spite of the fact that he still loves her and always will love her, there can never again be anything but friendship between them. And so it happens.

"The Fool" should direct a profound appeal to Christian picturegoers everywhere, and it should be considered decidedly worth-while by all intelligent picturegoers, no matter what their faith.

Motion Picture News

VOL. XXXI NEW YORK, MAY 16, 1925 NO. 20

At Milwaukee

THE attitude of the Michigan State Convention of Exhibitors towards the Milwaukee convention is altogether admirable. "Hoping," their statement reads, "that definite steps will be taken to insure the continuance of the independent exhibitor and the independent producer, Michigan will be represented at the coming convention . . ."

It will be recalled that at the Chicago convention, two years ago, Michigan withdrew from the National body. Replying then to the effort made to have them reconsider this step, the Michigan spokesman firmly declined, but stated that in all movements to advance the exhibitor welfare Michigan would join as a state body. The Association is making good its promise.

Coming close on the Michigan announcement and couched in much the same words is the statement from the Allied States Association that the entire organization will add its "hearty cooperation" "if anything constructive is presented" at the convention, "as it is the intention of the Allied organization and all states represented therein to cooperate with any body of theatre owners or any other organization that is working toward the interests and betterment of the independent theatre owner."

This is fine. Leaders of the Allies group will help in the councils at Milwaukee. The entire exhibitor strength is needed there.

We are told that election proceedings will not monopolize the Convention—as has been the case mostly with previous ones; that the election of the slate will be made by the board of directors; that therefore the Convention will be left free to do constructive work.

This looks like business; more than that, it looks like sincerity.

And without sincerity nothing definite will come from the potentially important gathering.

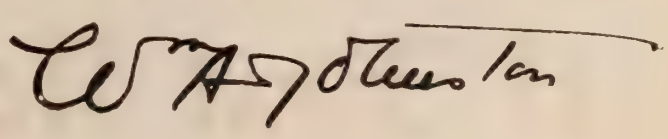
It seems to us that the one thing most needed in Milwaukee is information—facts, as many and as exact as possible, about the supply of pictures for the coming year, their quantity and quality.

The problem—at least the main problem—of the independent exhibitor today is a buying one. Can he get pictures, and good enough pictures, to make his theatre pay?

If he solves the problem for himself, he will in turn indicate to the independent producer whether he can give the latter enough play dates to insure said independent producer a place in the sun.

Many speeches and much sentiment and a lot of resolutions won't get anywhere. To decry competition just because the weaker man is a good fellow is good food for emotion, but not for box-offices. It is also plain sophistry: The shrewdly built program of pictures will get the bookings; the theatre that fills its community demand will prosper; and that is the law of business and of the land.



If the situation today is vague, and therefore ominous, for both independent exhibitor and producer, then let the light in.

The light of market information.

How many and what kind of pictures will 1925-26 deliver? From what sources?

How many play dates are yielded by the combined strength of the independent exhibitor today?

There's the direct answer to the problem; there's the one and only basis for any commercial move that the Convention may properly make.

The Paramount Announcement

IN THIS issue, Famous Players-Lasky present their program for 1925-26. It is the largest announcement thus far presented in a trade paper. In addition to a specific presentation of each of the forty pictures, there is added information upon accessories and the national advertising campaign to the consumer.

It is all impressive; so also is the result of a careful analysis of its box-office weight.

First, a birdseye view of the entire program. Quite evidently it has been carefully and cleverly constructed to appeal to all classes of theatres—the big picture houses, vaudeville theatres, the neighborhood and small town theatres; and the divided appeal to men and women is well maintained.

There's a noticeably large share of westerns—from noted authors, moreover, such as Harold Bell Wright, Zane Grey, James Oliver Curwood, Peter B. Kyne, and including also such obvious attractions as "California or Bust," "The Pony Express," etc.

The lighter attractions include such titles as "Stage Door Johnny," "Night Life of New York," "The Wild, Wild Girl," "The Coast of Folly," "The American Venus," "Polly of the Ballet," etc.

"The Ten Commandments" and "The Wanderer" are leaders among the special and spectacular pictures, which group also will include the more pretentious westerns. Robert J. Flaherty, maker of "Nanook," offers "Moana of the South Seas," which has been in preparation for two years.

Harold Lloyd, Douglas MacLean, Raymond Griffith are known quantities of a high order in the comedy division.

As for stars, stories, directors, the lineup is notable in each division:

Gloria Swanson, Harold Lloyd, Rudolph Valentino, Pola Negri, Thomas Meighan, Richard Dix (coming along strong, by the way), Bebe Daniels, Douglas MacLean, Raymond Griffith. The popular Adolph Menjou has two pictures. Betty Bronson, Gretta Nissen, Ricardo Cortez are being ushered into the limelight.

Stories have been selected, to some extent, with a view to the advertising values of the stage and the big circulation magazines. From the stage: "Beggar on Horseback," "New Brooms," "Cobra," "The Wanderer," "Quarantine," "The Best People," etc.; Harold Bell Wright's "Son of His Father" is running serially in McCall's, the first Wright novel, by the way, that has been serialized; Zane Grey's "The Vanishing American" ran in Ladies' Home Journal; Curwood's "The Ancient Highway" is now a Cosmopolitan serial; "Womanhandled," by Arthur Stringer, who wrote "Manhandled," has just appeared in the Saturday Evening Post (not a strong story, by the way); "Rugged Waters," by Joseph Lincoln, ran in The Country Gentleman.

Prominent, also, among the famous authors represented are: James M. Barrie, Joseph Conrad, Booth Tarkington, Joseph Hergesheimer, Michael Arlen, etc.

Directors include: D. W. Griffith, whose first picture is "That Royle Girl," Cecil B. DeMille, James Cruze, William de Mille, Monta Bell, Allan Dwan, Herbert Brenon, Clarence Badger, Sidney Olcott, William Howard, Irvin Willat, Raoul Walsh, etc.

"Five men in a room," states the announcement, all experts in their various branches, meeting forty times over a period of six months, arrived by a process of elimination at these forty pictures. However, it was done; the work was well done by a good organization; and we feel, also, that those other experts who made this colorful and informative announcement—A. M. Botsford and his assistants, Russell Holman and Vincent Trotta—deserve a lot of credit.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

John W. Hicks, Jr., Paramount manager of distribution in Australia, wife and son, are entertained by Doug Fairbanks, Jr., at the West Coast studios.

Blanche Sweet is a graceful and patrician figure as Lady Gwendolyn in "The Sporting Venus" (Metro-Goldwyn), her latest characterization.

Reading from top to bottom: Bryan Foy, director, Syd Wagner, cameraman, King Leo, and Fred Spencer; filming a scene for "The Scientific Husband" (Fox). We'd prefer to be the director.

A JOURNEY TRIUMPHANT

IF Harold Lloyd never knew the hold he has on the public of the U. S. A. and Canada he learned it on the trip he has just concluded to New York, the first half of a much-needed vacation for the comedian and his wife, Mildred Davis, which is yet to take them through the South, over to Havana, and back to Los Angeles via New Orleans.

The star made his first trip through Canada and it became a triumphal procession—on the style of the Prince of Wales' last tour in the Dominion. Crowds greeted him everywhere—and at Banff, Alberta (the home of fine exteriors) a special detachment of the R. N. W. M. P. extended the greetings of the world famous force to the Lloyds. Stopovers were made in Portland, Tacoma, Seattle, Victoria and Vancouver. And like real honeymooners they paid a visit to Niagara Falls. In Tacoma, where the Missus went to school, virtually the entire population turned out to greet the party. All in all it was a journey punctuated by much hand-shaking, arm-waving, back-slapping and cheering.

THE ASTERISKS

THE National Board of Review passes judgment on several pictures in its selection of worthy pictures of the past three weeks. For the week ending April 18th it picks Paramount's "Madame Sans-Gene" as the only film entitled to the little star. For the week ending April 25 it chose Warner Brothers' "Kiss Me Again," First National's "My Son," and Pathe's "Black Cyclone." For the week ending May 2, it selects Metro-Goldwyn's Cosmopolitan production, "Zander the Great," and Paramount's "Are Parents People?"

EULOGIES FOR MIX

ACCORDING to all the accounts from the British press the one and only Tom Mix made a smashing hit in his personal appearances over there. The London Star featured him in a front page column story—telling of how he was greeted by a round of cheers

And here, all dressed up 'n' everything, is our own Tom Mix in London, where the Fox star was greeted by tremendous crowds on every public appearance.

Harold Lloyd and his director, Sam Taylor, displaying the latest thing in stripes. Taylor is now planning Lloyd's first for Paramount distribution.

Dorothy Mackaill, playing in "The Making of O'Malley" (First Nat'l), finds Alma Mamay, with whom she started in the Follies, on the set as an extra.

Mary Pickford and her "double", chosen in a contest — Charlotte Jones. Like Miss Pickford, Charlotte is a native of Toronto.

Childhood favorites come to life in "Perils of the Primitive" (Universal), which is nothing more or less than our old friend, "Swiss Family Robinson", with Joe Bonomo, the strong man, playing the lead.

from hundreds of film fans who saw the westerner in the flesh for the first time. In an editorial comment this paper paid him a fine tribute in a grouping of five dollar words. We quote:

"Tom Mix, riding his pony down the gangway at Southampton, was a spectacle that deserved to be immortalized by an artist . . . Tom, the cowboy, represents nearly the last remaining of the romantic occupations. The trappers trap no more, the pirates

George O'Brien had a whole troupe of prize fighters to manhandle him in "Once to Every Man" (Fox), and he's still smiling the famous "O'Brien smile."

of old are now respectable limited companies with offices in the city, even sailors have degenerated into deck hands ignorant of chanties. But the cowboy is still a going concern, and Tom Mix is his prophet . . . He is the trustee of the tiny bit of romance that is left in the world."

The Daily Mirror carried three pictures of him and a column story. All the other London papers carried pictures and stories too —playing up the star's huge sombrero in glowing terms.

Tony came in for his share of attention. Tom punctured the British reserve by riding the horse through a banquet hall—both star and steed being the guests of the British film exhibitors.

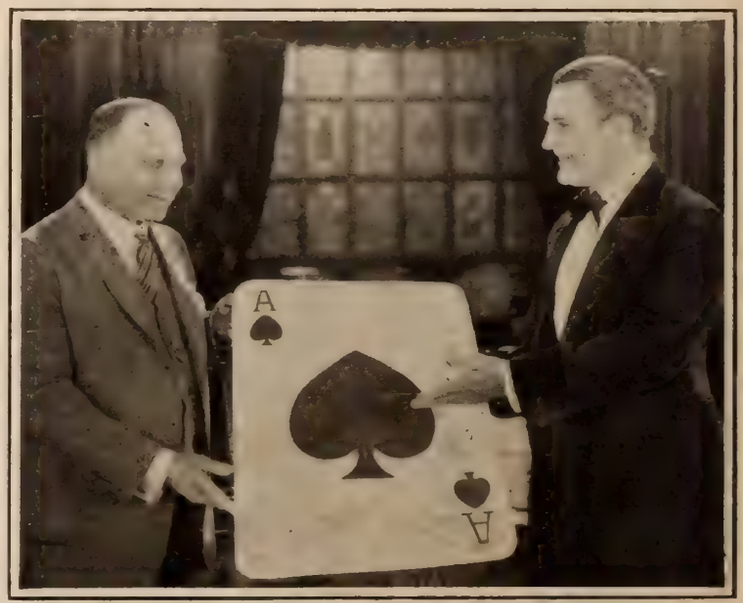
So Mix is putting himself over—with the aid of his own picturesque personality and popularity. Not forgetting the assistance of Tony and Joe Lee, the press representative of the star.

JOHN BARRYMORE IS BACK

JOHN BARRYMORE is back in New York from London — and he looks the picture of health. He is also registering pride over the successful season in "Hamlet" which brought him generous praises from the English critics, and the winning of the Valentino Medal for the best screen performance in 1924. After a short stay in New York he will proceed to Hollywood and the Warner studios where he will make two pictures before the opening of the next theatrical season.

MARION DAVIES' TALENT

THAT Marion Davies' forte is comedy cannot be disputed after one has appreciated her work in "Zander the Great." There are moments in this picture which she makes unroariously amusing through her skill at burlesque. She is a comedienne who has the gift of representing what she pretends to be—without spoiling the effect through exaggeration.



Take her sketch of the orphan girl here. With short skirt, pigtails—and a gift for crying real tears which course down a face, the features of which are distorted to indicate hurt pride, she flashes a genuine picture. Her pantomime is so real that she might have stepped out of one of Briggs' cartoons—"When a Feller Needs a Friend." The tough boy might have broken her doll or called her "'fraidy cat." So she cries and tries to mop up the tears with her hand or the cuff of her sleeve. And a good time is had by all in watching her.

Miss Davies has flashed her comedy talent before. She showed her gift of mimicry in "Little Old New York." She should stick to the type of stories which brought Constance Talmadge into the limelight—the light, frolicsome roles—that were founded entirely on a humorous theme. There is a limitless field of the light comedies. But there are very few comediennes who can do them justice. Gloria Swanson shines best in this field. So do Mary Pickford and Constance Talmadge. Their places are secure here. There is room enough for Marion Davies. She can give the screen public many, many joyous hours if she accepts light comedy as her forte.

MOVIES ALL AT SEA

A SMALL unit of motion picture workers has just returned to New York on board the Leviathan, having completed a greater part of the scenes in a two-reel comedy, "A Fast Sea Knot," while at sea on the big liner. The unit made the round trip to France on the steamer and were gone from New York eighteen days. During eleven of those days the company shot scenes in 100 different locations on the big United States liner, in which one of the actors portrayed the part of a first cabin passenger who becomes involved in many amusing situations while searching for the heroine, traveling third cabin student tours.

It is said that the picture is the first ever made on board an ocean liner while at sea, in which practically all the passengers and many of the ship's personnel appear either as supers or in the role of principals. It is believed that this is the first time the ship was actually at sea while such a picture was being made.

O. L. Meister, owner of the White House theatre, Milwaukee, was a visitor at Universal City the other day, whereupon William Desmond proceeded to give him a sales talk on "The Ace of Spades" (Universal), his latest starring vehicle.

A NEW STAR

A COMEDIAN who has established himself as one of the real top-notchers is Raymond Griffith. He has surely won himself a place among the elite, but it is surprising that his talents weren't appreciated before. Certainly if any player deserves stardom it is this dapper comedian who may be called a silk-hatted Chaplin. Now after lending his personality to various pictures—which have sparkled the more because of his presence—he has been rewarded with stardom in "The Night Club."

Griffith is no budding star who might blossom for a time and fade out over the film horizon. His manner is too individual for that. He has a definite style and personality all his own—a style which makes him a sort of artful dodger of comedy. He might be classified as a comic go-getter who times his scenes perfectly. He never overdoes the facial pantomime. Each expression has a place in denoting the meaning of his antics. His pathos is not of the wistful type, but more of the type which registers shock and surprise over some sudden hurt.

There is a touch of the clown in him which tempers his touch of satire. As a result one is never sure what he is going to attempt to score his points. But you can rest assured he won't employ slapstick unless the script calls for it. He is not a knockabout comedian. His field is light comedy—and the role he should play is the dapper, debonair little fellow.

Some of the motheaten plots won't be taken so seriously when he gets on the job. Incidentally, isn't it about time that a little good natured kidding was given them? It won't hurt them any. It will make them more appreciated when the pendulum swings too far toward burlesque.

The screen can well afford all the light comedies it can get. There is a general belief that just the established comedians should exploit the comedies. But the far-sighted producers are those who understand that these established favorites have no monopoly on comedy. As a result Griffith, Beery, Menjou, Matt Moore and a dozen others are stepping into their rewards. The thing for the player to do is find his groove—and then INSIST that the producers keep him there. It looks like good days ahead for Raymond Griffith. He has worked hard to get where he is. Perhaps that's why his performances are so spontaneous.

We often hear the complaint that a player should not try and take on the combined duties of cook and bottle-washer. But Griffith has qualified as an expert scenarist, a clever gag-writer and a first rate director. We believe that he could write his own pieces and direct them—and then placing himself in the chief role, get everything possible out of them.

THE RIVIERA'S IDOL

ANTONIO MORENO has become the idol of the Riviera (not a motion picture theatre). He has been engaged in all kinds of social activities. At the height of the season the star and his wife were the guests of honor at a brilliant Spanish fete at the Hotel Ruhl in Nice. They were two of the five judges selected to pass the verdict on a Spanish shawl contest. Out of the sixty shawls entered they picked a beautiful silk one of red and white—which had been made in Madrid. During Carnival week, Moreno led the grand march in the masquerade ball at the Municipal Casino.

Monte Blue, Warner Brothers star, craves outdoor stuff, and is getting his wish in "The Limited Mail." While waiting to go on location he practiced on a steam shovel at work at the Warner Brothers Studio.

Interesting shot at the Warner Brothers' West Coast studios showing Harry Beaumont at the right, directing "Rose of the World" and Millard Webb, left, directing "The Golden Cocoon".

A demonstration of modern tank tactics was held the other day at Miller Field, Staten Island, N. Y., to show the usefulness of tanks against mines, grenades, and so on. This remarkable shot of a bomb exploding was obtained for a recent International Newsreel.

AN ODD ASSORTMENT

WE have it on the word of Mrs. E. K. Adams, chief reader for the De Mille studios, that Cecil De Mille has become the target for the worst as well as the best dramatic material since he took charge of the erstwhile Ince plant.

"On top of choice and picked offerings from every American and European agent and publisher," says Mrs. Adams, "we are receiving a deluge of quite the worst material I have seen in a long experience. Some peculiar psychology is forcing individuals whose stories have been repeatedly rejected to offer them again to this new concern.

"To these people let me say this: Cecil De Mille is constantly in the market for stories of genuine merit. But those who consider the De Mille organization, because it is new, a dumping ground for 'last hopes' are doomed to a disappointment."

Bobby Vernon, Christie comedy star, takes a fancy to the Woolworth building and buys it from Gordon S. White, Educational's publicity and advertising director.

POLA NEGRI RETURNS

POLA NEGRI is back with a dazzling diamond ring on the third finger of her right hand (not left) and a hard cold. She stepped down the gangplank of the Berengaria the other day—a picture in brown. She had occupied the same suite as the Prince of Wales on his last visit, and she never left it during the trip. As a result the passengers registered terrific suspense wondering when she would emerge and promenade the decks and dine at the skipper's table. But Pola being tired and nervous—and afflicted with a heavy cold, remained secluded in Wales' erstwhile suite.

She admitted to the ship news reporters that European men are far more sophisticated than Americans, but if she married she would pick an American. They have won a tribute from Pola. She calls them more simple and restful. And she wants a simple, restful husband. She would not say she had already found her simple, restful American. But she was emphatic that she would never marry an actor, no matter how simple and restful he might be.

While in Poland Miss Negri—with the aid of the government—laid plans for an orphanage to care for a thousand children. She hopes to interest generous Americans to the extent of contributing $150,000. She has given $75,000 toward the project. The star bought the rights to two plays while abroad, and said she expected to begin work in the latter part of May on a picture to be made on Long Island. Meanwhile she will make a short visit to Hollywood.

UP AND AROUND

R. E. PRITCHARD, who was formerly an associate editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, but who for the past two years has been studio sales representative of First National, has come out of conference with the "flu." His many friends are glad to see him up and around after a month's siege with the deadly germs.

Constance Talmage, First National star, talks direct to Australia from Station KFI, Los Angeles, when "Learning to Love" opens at a Sydney theatre.

WELL I DECLARE!

OUR own private census reporter went out the other day and doubled on his track. He brought in the glad tidings that William Fox has become a grandfather for the second time within a month. His first grandson was born to Mr. and Mrs. Douglas M. Tauszig—and was named for his granddaddy. Mrs. Tauszig was Miss Nona Fox. The second grandchild was born April 8th to Mr. and Mrs. Milton J. Schwartz (nee Belle Fox) and will carry the monicker, William Fox Jerome Schwartz.

An unusually charming pose of an unusually charming player—Florence Vidor, who appears in "Are Parents People?" (Paramount), soon to be seen.

A SPORTING CHANCE

WILLIAM DE MILLE, his brother Cecil, and Douglas Fairbanks, have become partners in a sporting goods store in Pasadena, Calif., which will be managed by Fred B. Alexander, famous Davis Cup veteran, and Robert Allan, former Pacific coast junior champion. William de Mille, although president of the company, was unable to attend the gala opening owing to his production activities.

"There's gold in them thar hills, stranger!" says Bob Custer, starring in "The Texas Bearcat" for F. B. O., his latest vehicle.

It was real winter when James Cruze went to the High Sierras for the first scenes of "The Pony Express" (Paramount). Karl Brown, head cameraman, may be seen in the middle of the bundle of fur at the camera.

Lois Wilson and Warner Baxter made Luke Cosgrave feel right at home when they started production on "Welcome Home" (Paramount) the other day.

Stage Is All Set For Record Convention at Milwaukee

Cohen and O'Toole Issue Important Statement

THE stage is all set for the sixth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in Milwaukee, May 12–15, inclusive. It gives every indication of being the most important gathering in exhibitor history, in fact in the annals of the motion picture. A record attendance is expected in view of the momentous questions confronting the industry.

Sydney S. Cohen, Chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Administrative Committee and M. J. O'Toole, President of the organization, in a pre-convention statement declared that Milwaukee would be a "great clearing-house."

In many ways, Milwaukee — there will be three conventions in all — will be unique. In addition to the M. P. T. O. A. sessions, the Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association and the Equipment Dealers will meet, and the latter will hold an exposition.

There will be an unprecedented attendance of representatives of producing and distributing companies. Practically every concern in the business will be represented, and interest will focus on the "independents," with whom leaders of the M. P. T. O. A. have been in conference for several months.

For the first time also, a delegation from abroad will meet with American exhibitors. The convention will thus have a distinct international flavor.

It is upon the contemplated alliance between the independent producers—national and state rights—and the independent exhibitors that the main interest will center. Statements issued from National headquarters of the M. P. T. O. A. have named Fox, Universal, Warner, F. B. O. and Vitagraph as the companies ready to talk business in view of the so-called "menace" of producer-controlled theatres and circuit expansion.

No less important than these outstanding features of Milwaukee is the decision of the Allied group of exhibitors to meet with the M. P. T. O. A. Thus the door is swung open for complete harmony and unity in exhibitor ranks.

The first group to convene will be the I. M. P. P. D. A. which will open its meetings on May 10 and conclude them on May 12, the day the M. P. T. O. A. is called to order. It is expected the I. M. P. P. D. A. will formulate a product plan to be submitted to the exhibitor convention. It is also expected to write new history of its own, and it would not be surprising if the association selected a man of conspicuous prominence to lead it. Reports in New York this week again connected the name of Senator James J. Walker with this post. It is known that overtures, rejected some months ago by the Senator on account of pressure of his legislative duties, have been renewed, but with what success remains to be seen.

On the eve of the convention, the Board of Directors of the M. P. T. O. A. will meet and formulate the general plan of campaign which will be carried through the sessions. This meeting will be held in the Hotel Wisconsin, where National Headquarters will be established, on Monday, May 11.

The playdate phase of the convention will take the foreground. The leaders of the National organization have urged independent exhibitors to bring their playdates to Milwaukee, ready to mobilize them for independent pictures through the medium of the Trade and Commerce Bureau, a new department of the M. P. T. O. A. and the point at which, it is expected, business contact will be made between independent producer and independent exhibitor.

Following is the statement issued by Messrs. Cohen and O'Toole:

"The cohesion of Exhibitor forces at Milwaukee is most indicative of the fact that National Organization is essential in the solving of problems affecting the Industry as a whole.

"It is a very auspicious situation and the cooperation thus effected will be a power for good in our business and lead us to higher and better lines of practice which will dignify and advance every division of the Industry.

"We have always contended that there is nothing in the motion picture business which makes it radically different from other lines of effort. Honest, sane and square business practices certainly can be made the basis for all our dealings. We have been adversely affected with distrusts and suspicions but these are being resolved in the interests of the Industry as a whole and better understandings are certain for the future.

"The coming Milwaukee convention will witness the assembling of the greatest exhibitor force and representatives of other branches of the industry known in the history of motion pictures. We have a practically perfect North America in this wonderful map of constructive effort. No place is left out because there is room for all and cooperation and helpful effort will be the guiding principles of this convention.

"The National Officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America have labored hard and with determined zeal to bring unity to the front at Milwaukee and give the gathering that great clearing house aspect so essential to effecting the genuine coordination of all independent forces.

"Every state in the Union will be represented as well as all of Canada, Great Britain, France and other parts of Europe. This is the first big international meeting of Motion Picture Theatre Owners and their independent allies. It can and will be made of the greatest constructive value to the Industry.

"All of our sessions will be open, except a brief period which will be devoted to the election of National Directors. Debate will be encouraged on all questions presented as we desire the fullest and freest discussion. The more any situation is intelligently considered, the more facts are brought out and these are the real helpful situations.

"We congratulate the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the United States and Canada and our fraternal visitors from abroad on the wonderful prospects for remedial action and general development presented by the coming Milwaukee convention. It means advancement of the highest order and the Theatre Owners and others present may be depended upon to make the occasion count for permanent good in the Industry."

Daylight Bandits Rob "U" Exchange Cashier

Barnard Temborius, cashier of the Universal exchange in St. Louis was the victim of a daylight holdup in film row last Friday afternoon. As Temborius backed his car to the curb a few doors east of the exchange in Olive street two well dressed young bandits entered the car, forced him into the back seat and one of them took the wheel and drove off. After driving through several of the main thoroughfares they compelled Temborius to leave the car.

While proceeding over the route the second bandit relieved Temborius of the company's payroll amounting to $865.25. The yeggs deserted the car several miles further on. The robbery occurred at 2.30 in the afternoon.

YEAR'S LINE-UP

List of features scheduled for release during 1925-26 given

FEATURE product will be plentiful next season. As indicated in a survey of the production schedules of producers distributing nationally and through independent exchanges there will be about 800 feature pictures for exhibitors to draw upon during the period beginning August 1, 1925 and ending July 31, 1926.

Producing companies whose pictures are released by national distributors will make more than 500 features, while the independents are preparing to make more than 200 features for release in the 1925-26 season.

These figures are based on a thorough survey and a digest of the present production plans of all companies made by the I.M.P.P.D.A. and are printed here through the courtesy of that organization.

While statistics concerning the projected productions are not available in full detail at present, the figures and facts now obtainable are sufficiently complete to indicate that new product will range from the most pretentious spectacular productions through a wide variety of subjects down to the low-cost features.

If production details as at present mapped out by the various companies are strictly adhered to productions next year generally will be of a much higher quality than in the season now drawing to a close. The arrangement of production schedules far in advance of release dates, an aim toward which the established producers have been working for several years, has reached a point where its greatest benefits can be realized. The time element as a strain upon the several units of production organizations has been practically eliminated, allowing greater freedom for the careful selection of story material and the most favorable working conditions for its development by the scenario departments and production units. An equally important advantage of this system is afforded the publicity and exploitation department of the distribution companies.

From the standpoint of the number and quality of pictures which will be offered next year the situation which faces the exhibitor is most favorable. The quantity and the extensive variety of subjects available to the theatres if the present production schedules are carried out, and every indication points to that end, will permit the fullest opportunity for the picking and chosing of pictures best suited to the character of the theatre and demands of its patronage.

Established Stories are Favored

Production plans for next season show that producers continue to favor stories of established reputation through their presentation as plays or works of fiction, though the original scenario will be as prominent next year as it has been for the past few seasons. So far as type plays are concerned the Western will continue to prevail, plans calling for a greater number of these stories than any other one style of play which will be made next season. The Western story will figure largest in the program groups which producers have planned, though there will be several special productions in which the western locale will figure as the basis for elaborately staged photoplays.

The distribution situation will be markedly altered by the combine of the Warner Brothers and Vitagraph companies. The move will take the Warner product, which will amount to forty feature pictures, out of the state right exchanges and place it among the nationally distributed productions. The most noticeable effect of the move will be felt in the independent field, in which there will be a wider scope for the operations of the state rights distributors.

Heretofore the Warner productions were handled by the largest and most important state rights exchanges in the country, and the loss to them of this company's pictures will provide independent productions with greater exchange facilities than they have had for a long time.

The following digest of the production schedules of the various companies which will make features for the 1925-26 season gives the number of productions each company will offer along with all the details now available concerning the titles, stars and directors of the productions arranged for those schedules.

Twenty-four from Associated Exhibitors

THE Associated Exhibitors releasing schedule for 1925-26 calls for a total of seventeen features, two of which will be reissues of Harold Lloyd comedies.

These are: "Never Weaken," a Harold Lloyd re-issue produced by Hal Roach, release in August. "Camille of the Barbary Coast," directed by Hugh Dierker with Owen Moore, Mae Busch, Burr McIntosh and Harry Morey in the leading roles.

"His Buddy's Wife," a Tom Terriss production featuring Glenn Hunter, Edna Murphy, Douglas Gilmore and Flora Finch. "Manhattan Madness," co-starring Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor, directed by John McDermott.

"Keep Smiling," starring Monty Banks with Anne Cornwall and Robert Edeson, directed by Albert Austin and Gilbert W. Pratt. "Fifty-Fifty," starring Hope Hampton with Lionel Barrymore and Louise Glaum, directed by Henri D. Berger.

"Ship of Souls," with Bert Lytell, Lillian Rich, Tom Santschi and Earl Metcalf, directed by Charles Miller. "Under the Rouge," produced by Lewis H. Moomaw with Tom Moore, Eileen Percy, Zasu Pitts, Mary Alden, Claire de Lorez and James Mason.

"Headlines," directed by E. H. Griffith. "Lovers Island," directed by Henri D. Berger with Hope Hampton, James Kirkwood, Trini and Louis Wolheim.

"The Miracle of Life," an S. E. V. Taylor production. "Two Can Play," cast with Clara Bow, Allen Forest, Wallace McDonald and George Fawcett, directed by Nat Ross.

"Two Gates," a Wallace Worsley production with Clara Bow, Ralph Lewis, Henry Walthall, Harry Morey, and Forest Stanley. "The Pinch Hitter," starring Glen Hunter, directed by John McDermott.

"I Do," a Harold Lloyd re-issue produced by Hal Roach. "Shine Inside," a Monty Banks comedy. A production, title not yet announced, starring "Strongheart."

Arrow Announces 32 Features

THE line-up of features promised by Arrow for the coming theatrical season embraces 32 features. This will include a May McAvay starring vehicle, "Driven from Home," and a series of four productions to be directed by Wilfred Noy, titles to be announced. Details regarding the remainder of the product will be available later.

Artclass Lists Nine for Season

FROM Artclass will come, accordingly to plans formulated to date, nine action dramas, including three starring Buddy Roosevelt, four starring Buffalo Bill, Jr., one Wally Wales production and one all-star cast feature. The titles of the Buddy Roosevelt features will be "Cyclone Buddy," "Gold and Grit" and "Reckless Courage." The Buffalo Bill, Jr., vehicles will be entitled "Full Speed," "On the Go," "Double Action Daniels" and "Quicker'n Lightnin." The all-star feature is "After Six Days." The title of the Wally Wales production is unannounced.

Eighteen in Aywon's Schedule

THREE star series of six each, a total of eighteen pictures, are announced by Aywon. These will star Kit Carson, Gordon Clifford and Alice Lake. The titles of the Kit Carson films will be "His Greatest Battle," "Riding Wild," "Ride 'em Cowboy," "Twin-Six O'Brien," "The Battlin 'Fool" and "The Pony Express Rider." Gordon Clifford will star in "Oil and Romance," "Queen of Spades," and four more to be announced. Alice Lake will be starred in "The Law and the Lady," with five others to follow.

Chadwick to Have 17 Features

CHADWICK'S schedule for next season embraces, at present 17 features; six starring George Walsh, four starring Charles Ray, two starring Lionel Barrymore, one starring Theda Bara, two by Larry Semon, and two all-star cast features. The title of the first George Walsh feature is "American Pluck," with five others to be announced later on. "Some Punkins" will be the first Charles Ray vehicle, with a series of three to follow, titles as yet announced. Lionel Barrymore will be seen in "The Bells," with one more to be decided upon. Theda Bara's appearance will be in "The Unchastened Woman." The two Larry Semon pictures will be "The Wizard of Oz" and "The Perfect Fool." The all-star cast features will be "The Transcontinental Limited" and "Winning the Futurity."

Columbia to Distribute 18

FROM Columbia (C. B. C.) will come 18 feature releases, according to the schedule now lined up. This will include a Perfection series of six; a Waldorf series of six; and the same number in the Columbia series. The titles of the Columbia series are to be "The Danger Signal," "S. O. S. Perils of the Sea," "The Price of Success," "The Unwritten Law," "The Lure of Broadway" and "Midnight Flames." The Perfection series includes "Fighting Youth," "The Speed Demon," "The Great Sensation," "The New Champion," "A Fight to the Finish" and "The Handsome Brute." Big Delegation From New York to Attend Convention

NEW YORK is sending a big delegation to the convention at Milwaukee. The contingent from the city and surrounding territory is traveling in two special trains, running on the schedule of the Twentieth Century Limited, leaving Grand Central Terminal, Monday, May 11 at 2:45 p. m., Eastern Standard Time, and arriving in Milwaukee on Tuesday at 11:30 a. m.

The T. O. C. C. delegation is headed by President Charles L. O'Reilly and Nathan Burkan, counsel for the organization.

Sam Sonin, Clarence A. Cohen and S. A. Moross, the Transportation Committee of The T. O. C. C., issued this statement:

"According to the records of the Transportation Committee, the actual paid reservations by the members of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce who are going to attend the Milwaukee Convention, will fill two full ten car sections of the Twentieth Century which leaves New York on Monday, May 11th.

"A large number of up-state exhibitors wired their reservations to be picked up en route at Albany, Utica, Syracuse and Rochester, in addition to the above two full cars will be picked up at Albany with the Boston contingent.

"The enthusiasm and eagerness displayed by those going is very encouraging to the highest degree and indications are that this is the largest delegation of exhibitors that ever attended a National Convention."

It was planned originally to utilize one special train for the delegates from the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, and exhibitors who will join the party from upstate cities, but the demand for transportation space became so great as time for the convention neared two trains become necessary. The train equipment will go straight through to Milwaukee, being transferred in Chicago from the New York Central Lines to the Chicago & Northwestern.

The convention specials will be in charge of George Stanton, City Passenger Agent of the N. Y. Central.

Booking Combines Are Favored

Kansas-Missouri Convention Also Favors Non-Union School for Projectionists

THERE is a growing sentiment favoring booking combines or similar consolidations among exhibitors in Western Missouri. The M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri convention last week left no doubt of that, producer owned theatres being one of the most widely discussed subjects at the convention.

It generally was agreed that the producer owned house was not a matter for the association to take up, but, rather, an individual affair of exhibitors. However, as the discussion progressed, it finally ended with open suggestions that booking combines among exhibitors would be the most effective means of combating producer owned theatres as opposition.

Another feature of the convention was the enthusiasm with which the announcement of a non-union operators' school was accepted. C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. K.-M., who largely was instrumental in starting the school, which is in charge of an experienced operator, explained that it was not until after the World-in-Motion theatre of Kansas City was dynamited, that such a school was contemplated.

As the situation now stands it will be only a short time until the association will have dozens of non-union operators for distribution at all times in the Kansas-Missouri territory. Also, by way of supplying the needs of exhibitor members, the association adopted a plan of sponsoring the Kansas City Juvenile Entertainers Association, composed of young talent, to be used in prologues in theatres in the territory.

The Kansas City Film Board of Trade met in session with the directors of the M. P. T O. K-M on the second day of the convention and voiced a protest to selecting a seventh man from the outside to come in and assist in settling disputes on the joint board of arbitration.

Censorship came in for another "censoring" in an address by the Rev. Earl Blackman.

Nation-Wide Search for Charles Pugh

A NATION-WIDE search has been instituted for Charles Pugh, manager of Associated Exhibitors office at Portland, Oregon, who disappeared mysteriously, without any apparent cause, on April 3rd and has not been seen or heard from since. His disappearance is a complete mystery to his friends and the police of the Oregon city.

When last seen on April 3rd at 11.30 P. M. Pugh was apparently in good health, happy with his wife and three children and in the knowledge that he would shortly receive a $2,500 bonus as winner of "The Spitfire" contest. He had only about $4 on his person when he disappeared and has not since drawn checks against his bank account.

When last seen Pugh was wearing a blue serge suit and gray hat. He is described as 5 feet, 9 inches tall and weighs 226 pounds. His eyes are hazel. Information regarding him will be appreciated by wire to Associated Exchange 8 North Ninth Street, Portland, Oregon or Associated Exhibitors, 35 West Forty-Fifth street, New York City.

Loew May Build Theatre in Harrisburg, Pa.

Marcus Loew will have a second theatre in Harrisburg, Pa., if the Regent theatre, just acquired by that organization from Peter Magaro, proves a financial success, according to a statement given to the newspapers by E. C. Schiller, general manager of the corporation, who arrived in that city on April 30 to arrange for the opening of the Regent under Loew auspices on May 11. He explained that the second theatre would be a brand new one to be built by the company and probably would be devoted to vaudeville.

"We had planned to build a theatre in Harrisburg before we purchased the Regent," said Mr. Schiller, "but have abandoned that project for the present in view of our having acquired the Regent. However, we propose to operate this theatre and see how Harrisburg responds. If the response is adequate and there is sufficient demand we will build a new theatre which would probably be devoted to vaudeville."

Quebec Cities Enforce Daylight Saving

Despite varied agitations, the exhibitors of numerous cities in the Province of Quebec are more up against the problem of Daylight Saving this year than ever before, practically all of the Quebec centres having "turned the clock" on May 3.

This is the first year that there has been any uniformity in the summer time arrangement, however, and it is the first year that Montreal has adopted summer time officially as a whole although for three years many business houses and others had informally observed daylight saving. The cities where Daylight Saving went into effect on May 3 include Montreal, Quebec City, Three Rivers, Sherbrooke, St. Johns, Drummondville and Hull.

Norwegian Picture House Receipts Decrease

Returns now available covering municipally-owned motion picture theatres in sixty-five Norwegian cities and towns, show that the gross receipts amounted to approximately 12.6 million crowns in 1924 as compared to about 13.2 million in 1923.

In Oslo the gross receipts fell from 5.8 million crowns in 1923 to 5.3 million in 1924; in Bergen from 1.5 million to 1.4 million; in Trondhjem from 853,000 crowns to 672,000 crowns; and in Drammen from 550,000 to 538,000 crowns.

In Stavanger gross receipts increased from 582,000 crowns in 1923 to 665,000 in 1924.

Film Industry Rallies to Palestine Fund

LEADERS of the film industry, now in Hollywood, have organized under the leadership of Joseph M. Schenck, to aid in the rebuilding of Palestine as the Jewish Homeland, through the Palestine Foundation Fund, the chief financial agency for the restoration of the Holy Land. Samuel Untermyer, the noted lawyer, is the President of the Fund, which since its organization four years ago, has raised $8,000,000 among the Jews of America, for building, agricultural, educational and public health activities in Palestine.

Among the leaders in the film industry's efforts in Hollywood for the rebuilding of Palestine, in addition to Mr. Schenck, are Carl Laemmle, B. P. Schulberg, Sol Lesser and Jack Warner. A mass meeting of the industry was held April 30th in Warner Bros. Studio in the interests of the Jewish Homeland movement. The industry has adopted a quota of $25,000 to be raised in Hollywood. Leading contributors thus far are Mr. Schenck and Mr. Laemmle, each of whom has contributed $2,500.

Penn. Governor Signs Act Against Carnivals

Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, has signed the bill passed by the session of the Legislature which adjourned April 16 in Harrisburg, prohibiting the manufacture of gambling devices. The motion picture interests regard this as a victory for them in the fight they have been waging for years against traveling carnival companies that detract from the summer business of the picture shows and which depend to a large degree for success on the use of gambling booths.

The bill, which was introduced in the House by Assemblyman Burke, of Philadelphia, makes it unlawful "for any person, partnership, association or corporation to make, manufacture or assemble any punch board, drawing card, slot machine or any machine or device used or intended to be used for gambling."

Australian Publicity Man Visits First National

Ken G. Hall, for the past year and a half First National publicity director in Australia is a visitor in New York after having spent a number of weeks in Hollywood looking over the production and presentation of pictures.

While in the east Hall will inspect the company's New York studios and productions with the view of absorbing ideas for the publicity, advertising and exploitation campaigns on those productions in Australia. He is scheduled to sail for Australia from Vancouver May 28th.

License Fees Decrease in Ottawa

The City of Ottawa, Ontario, collected in license fees from the local theatres the sum of $398 during the year 1924, according to an official report for the year published April 30. This compared with $506.20 for the previous year, last year showing a decrease of $108.20. These fees were in addition to the Provincial theatre license charges imposed by the Ontario Government.

Way Opens For Unity As Allied Decides to Attend

Al. Steffes Calls Group to Meet in Milwaukee

THE door stands wide open for exhibitor unity at the Milwaukee Convention. The Allied group will be in attendance: Michigan, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Texas and North Carolina.

W. A. Steffes, President of the Allied States Organization, this week sent out wires to the leaders of the association, calling a meeting in Milwaukee on the same days as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, instead of holding a separate convention in Chicago.

This action, which is regarded as a very significant development, followed closely decisions by the Missouri-Kansas and Michigan organizations to send representatives to Milwaukee.

The statement issued by Mr. Steffes follows: "Hoping that something definite might be done at the Milwaukee convention, we believe that the Allied should do nothing to hamper or retard the progress of the independent theatre owners of the country. On the other hand, if anything constructive is presented and the Allied States can be of assistance, the independent theatre owners of the United States may depend on a hearty co-operation, as it is the intention of the Allied organization and all states represented therein to co-operate with any body of theatre owners or any other organization that is working toward the interest and betterment of the independent theatre owners."

The official statement of the Michigan attitude was made by H. M. Richey, General Manager, as follows:

"Hoping that definite steps will be taken to insure the continuance of the independent exhibitor and the independent producers, Michigan will be represented at the coming convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to be held in Milwaukee, May 12-16, inclusive.

"At the Board of Directors meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan held Wednesday, April 29, at the Association offices in the Hotel Wolverine, Detroit, President G. A. Cross appointed the following committee made up of Past Presidents of the association to represent the Michigan organization at Milwaukee: James C. Ritter, Detroit; W. S. McLaren, Jackson; J. R. Denniston, Monroe; G. A. Cross, Battle Creek, and H. M. Richey, General Manager.

"The presence of the Michigan delegation at Milwaukee does not mean that Michigan has again become a member of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Neither does it mean that Michigan is forfeiting its valued membership in the Allied State Organizations. The sending of a committee to Milwaukee was prompted by the realization on the part of Michigan theatre owners that a serious national situation has presented itself—a common problem that affects all theatre owners in the United States, regardless of what their affiliations may be and a desire on the part of the Michigan organization to lend whatever assistance it can to the solution of this national issue.

"At the time that Michigan ceased to be active in the present national body the statement was made that if at any time a common problem affecting the industry presented itself Michigan stood ready and willing to offer its co-operation to the national body or any other organization working toward the interests of independent theatre owners. Suitable headquarters for the Michigan committee have been reserved."

Sydney S. Cohen, on behalf of the M. P. T. O. A., issued this statement:

"The decision of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan to send a delegation to the Milwaukee Convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, is very gratifying, as evidence of the fact that independent exhibitors are prepared to join forces, regardless of their organization affiliations, in the common defense of their business.

"Michigan is one of the strongest states. Entrenched within this territory are Independent Theatre Owners who reflect creditably upon our Industry—men of sound judgment, men searching for that which is deemed by all men as Right, and since our interests and theirs are mutual, since we feel that the good they accomplish in their state cannot help but benefit the Independent situation in every state, that the good we have accomplished and will accomplish as a National Organization, has helped and will continue to help Michigan, we welcome Michigan to our conferences, feeling certain that some very constructive proposals for the good in general will be forthcoming from their representatives.

"Differences of opinion are bound to occur between men who are not 'yes sirs,' but there is always this platform of cooperation, of a coming together, the motive which actuates any action. Independence is the goal or destination of our travail or travel. It matters not whether we approach Independence men from the North, South, Easterly or Westerly direction, when a problem presents itself it does not matter how we attempt to solve it, although some methods of procedure conserve energy, the vital necessity is that the problem shall be solved.

"To meet the encroachments of the distributor-theatre combine we need the cooperation and active participation of every independent factor in the business. Trade and organization politics should be entirely put aside, while we concentrate every effort and consolidate all our power on the one big issue.

"The help of the Michigan theatre owners and of all other independent theatre owners is urgently needed and most cordially welcomed by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. As we write, we have been informed that a large delegation of independent theatre owners from Kansas will also meet with us at Milwaukee. The same cordial welcome is extended to them."

Change in Policy Brings Advertising Suit

As a result of his recent change from a straight vaudeville show to a combined motion picture-vaudeville program, Alexander Pantages, through his Seattle manager, E. C. Bostick, is being sued for $11,099.50. The suit has been brought by E. F. Gunn, advertising specialist, against the Pantages Theatres, Inc., in the Washington superior court.

For more than seventeen years, the complaint sets forth, Gunn has had the exclusive right to supply the ad curtain and the advertising appearing thereon for the Pantages theatres. It was agreed that the curtain should be displayed forty-five minutes prior to each performance, and five minutes between at least one act, it is claimed.

With the continuous show now in vogue, Gunn alleges, the advertising curtain has been practically eliminated except for its display before the first performance at noon, when it is seen by practically no one. The suit alleges damages of $3,979 in the Seattle theatre; $2,659.50 in the Spokane house; $2,526 in Vancouver, B. C.; and $1,935 at Tacoma; as a result of the new policy's effect on existing contracts. Gunn has been paying the Pantages Theatres, Inc., $825 a month for the curtain privileges in these four houses, it is said.

Sparks Buys More Property in Palatka, Florida

E. J. Sparks of the Sparks Enterprises has just made his third purchase of city business property in Palatka, for which he is said to have paid $57,500. The realty includes a frontage of sixty-one feet on Lemon street, with a depth of seventy-five feet, now occupied by the Howell theater arcade and the show rooms of an automobile dealer, and a frontage on First street of 120 feet with a depth of 150 feet.

Hays Morning Show Tried Out

Eastman Theatre First to Present Program of Pictures for Children

SATURDAY Morning Movies under the plan sponsored by Will Hays and the other officials of the Motion Picture Producers and distributors of America were inaugurated at the Eastman Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., on Saturday morning, April 25.

The performance, at which pictures specially selected for the entertainment of children by Major Ward P. Wooldridge of the Committee of Public Relations, co-operating with the Hays Organization were presented, drew an audience of 2,700 children and demonstrated beyond question the practicability of the Saturday Morning Movies for application throughout the country.

The first program offered at the Eastman was started by the members of the audience singing "America." A short health talk, from the screen, preceded the entertainment.

Douglas MacLean in "The Hottentot" was the feature picture. The picture had been cut 1,500 feet, not because of objectionable "business" in its action, but because the reel in its original form was considered too long to sustain the interest of the young audience.

An "Out of the Inkwell" reel, a Bruce scenic entitled "Nights of Many Shadows," and an animal picture completed the program.

Major Wooldridge, who attended the performance and supervised the details of the entertainment, expressed himself as greatly pleased with the results of the initial experiment of the Saturday Morning Movie plan.

"I am sure this Saturday morning movie idea is going to be a great success," he said. "The enthusiasm of the children at the first performance shows that we have picked the right things in the way of pictures. An hour and a half of wholesome fun, with perhaps some small message, is what we are aiming at. I, personally, want to thank the management of the Eastman for the splendid co-operation given us in this trial."

Mammoth Picture House for Birmingham

ONE important and definite announcement has crystalized out of the vague rumors that have persisted for several weeks concerning the development of a big motion picture theatre enterprise in Birmingham, Ala.

An announcement comes from W. S. Mudd and B. H. Mooney, prime factors in the Mudd and Colley Amusement Company operating the Trianon and Rialtao Thetres in Birmingham. In a joint statement issued by Mr. Mudd and Mr. Mooney plans for a mammoth motion picture theatre that will be the last word in architectural beauty, artistic decoration and perfect equipment are divulged.

The site for the new theatre is one of the most coveted locations on Second Avenue which is Birmingham's most important thoroughfare. The house will have a seating capacity of 2500 and will rank with the finest in the United States. Work will begin almost at once nd it is scheduled to be ready for opening in the spring of 1926.

The plans represent an investment of $750,000. Coming on the heels of conflicting rumors involving Marcus Loew and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as well as Birmingham's First National franchise holders, the announcement is creating intense interest. While the acquisition by Marcus Loew of the lease on the Temple Theatre indicates that he will not build the million dollar house he promised Birmingham. It seems certain that Famous Players will get into the competition. Rumor insists that they are quietly negotiating for an important location and an announcement is expected at any moment.

New Directory Shows 3,737 Houses in Germany

According to a new directory of the German film industry, just published, the total number of moving picture theatres in Germany is 3,737. This does not include exhibition halls where educational and advertising films may be shown from time to time, but only theatres proper.

Of this number 308 are in Berlin which now has a population of slightly over four million people. At this rate the capital of Germany is better supplied with moving picture theatres than any other part of the country since the entire population of Saxony has only 334 establishments and Bavaria, which is considerably larger, has only 360.

Although it is asserted that Germany has the largest number of moving picture theatres of any continental European country, this total is comparatively modest in view of the fifteen thousand or more film theatres in the United States.

Arthur S. Kane Speaks at A. M. P. A. Luncheon

Arthur S. Kane, contact manager for Universal Pictures was the principal speaker at the weekly luncheon of the A. M. P. A. at the Cafe Boulevard in New York last Thursday. He spoke in a humorous vein, declaring among other things that the first problem of the contact manager was to get the job, the second to hold it and the third to ascertain what its duties are.

Nat Rothstein was the guest of honor at the meeting and in commemoration of his attendance after a lengthy absence he was presented with a half dozen golf balls.

Mary Pickford's Leading Man Injured

Hugh Allan, whom Mary Pickford selected as her leading man in "Little Annie Rooney" after he had been in pictures only six months, has suffered an accident which deprives him of his opportunity temporarily. He fell from the roof of his home while repairing a wireless aerial and broke several small bones in his wrist.

Allan's place has been taken by William Haines, a contract player with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He has been in pictures for the last three years. He won his part with Miss Pickford through his work in "The Midnight Express," an independent production in which she saw him perform.

McKenna Duties Again Imposed in England

THE Department of Commerce has received official confirmation from its London office of the reimposition of the McKenna duties on motion picture films as follows: Negatives, 5 pence per linear foot, positives, 1 penny per linear foot. In American currency this amounts to approximately 10 and 2 cents respectively. The new rates will not be effective until July 1st.

Ontario Government Adds to Picture Budget

The Ontario Government has increased its budget of expenditures on motion picture production for the current fiscal year which ends October 31st next. The sum of $91,350 has been authorized as compared to $87,050 last year.

The estimates for this year provide the sum of $60,000 for the purchase of additional equipment at the Trenton studio, including motion picture printing machines and projection machines, film material and the operation of the studio.

The Ontario Government purchased the Trenton studio from the trustees of the defunct Adanac Film Corporation for approximately $30,000. The Government decided it was cheaper to produce its own industrial and scenic reels after disclosures of alleged irregularities in connection with the making of these films by private individuals under contract with the Government.

Walkout Follows Danz Purchase of Stock

A walkout of musicians, stage hands and picture operators of the American Theatre in Spokane, Wash., occurred recently as a result of the purchase of a large share of stock in the house by John Danz, general manager of the John Danz Theatres, Inc., of Seattle, and proprietor of a number of non-union picture theatres in the latter city.

The strike and walkout order was issued by the Internationals of the trades involved, according to reports. The purchase of an interest in the American is Danz's first venture outside Seattle, in an effort to break the union control. His recent victory in the State Supreme Court, ruling that picketing of any kind in front of his theatres is illegal, has only served to embitter the unions toward his activities and enterprises. Unions in Washington are now preparing to fight the anti-picketing decision to a final conclusion.

Iowa Exhibitor to Make Sunday Test Case

E. P. Smith, exhibitor of Sheraton, Iowa, will try out the feeling for and against the Sunday show in his town on Sunday. It is Smith's feeling that the people of Sheraton are fifty-fifty on the proposition, while the city council is for Smith in having the Sunday show, while the mayor is opposed to the Sunday opening.

Smith plans to show at his theatre on Sunday and make a test case of the discussion. If his license is revoked by the mayor it is his intention to take the matter to the Supreme Court for trial.

Greater Movie Season Wins Approval

Civic, Industrial and Public Organizations Pledge Their Support to Movement of Hays Organization

CIVIC, industrial and public organizations representing a national membership of millions are directing their efforts toward the success of Greater Movie Season and enthusiastically endorsing the project in letters to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., which is inaugurating the plan nationally.

"The Greater Movie Season suggests interesting and important possibilities," wrote Lee F. Hanmer, director of the Recreation Department of the Russell Sage Foundation in enlisting his organization in the movement. "It should serve as a further stimulus to productions of merit. It ought to afford an occasion for turning public attention to the progress that is being made toward higher standards of excellence, and it will be a practical demonstration of the purpose of the producers, distributors and exhibitors to provide right moving pictures if the public will do its part in giving such productions the necessary support."

The Rev. Charles N. Lathrop, executive secretary of the Social Service Department of the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church, expressed great satisfaction in motion pictures. He stated his belief that the public would respond to Greater Movie Season and assured his organization's co-operation to the utmost. Similar assistance was promised by the American Sunday Union and the Community Center Association.

The campaign also will be carried into the motion picture halls of the Chautauqua Institution during August.

"There is no question in my mind about the people generally supporting a movement of this kind." Thomas E. Finegan of the National Educational Association, wrote, "Some of the most appealing and attractive entertainments provided for the public are moving pictures. There are moving pictures which exercise a fine influence upon the social fabric—that appeal to the intelligence and imagination of an audience. Some of the most dramatic entertainments produced are among moving pictures. You may count upon the co-operation of the National Educational Association."

Hearty endorsement by the twenty thousand citizens of Revolutionary stock composing the Sons of the American Revolution was conveyed to Mr. Hays in a letter from W. I. Lincoln Adams. The support of all those working in the interest of young people will be forthcoming from the Boys' Club Federation, according to C. J. Atkinson, Executive Secretary.

"Many of the best films are difficult to popularize and the financial risk of producing them is proportionately great," stated Harold A. Caparn of the American Civic Association. "All the more praiseworthy therefore is this programme of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors. All the more therefore should every citizen and every organization interested in raising the standard of motion pictures, do anything they can to encourage this important enterprise."

Other endorsers of Greater Movie Season include the National Board of Review, the National Committee for the Prevention of Blindness and the New York Knights of Pythias. State branches of many more bodies are active in conjunction with exhibitor organizations.

With wide national support thus guaranteed, the Hays organization has put into effect plans by which these forces can be marshalled and a concrete alliance with theatres brought about for complete exhibitor benefit when Greater Movie Season opens in August and every avenue of publicity and advertising stimulates public interest.

Astor, New York, Changes Hands—Universal to Build Ultimately in Chicago

SEVERAL important developments were noted in the theatre field this week, chief among which were the announcement that Walter Reade, one of the leading Jersey theatre owners, had bought 50% interest in the Astor Theatre, Broadway and 45th street, New York, and would operate it in association with B. K. Bimberg; and the statement made by Carl Laemmle in a letter to "The Spotlight," that Universal will ultimately build in Chicago.

Reports that Balaban & Katz would take over the Gregory chain of nineteen houses in the Middle West failed to materialize. Control of the chain has been bought by S. J. Gregory and William Kliehge.

Mr. Readem who operates the Savoy Theatre in New York, purchased from E. R. Thomas the latter's interest in the Astor Theatre. The deal was said to involve $900,000. The Messrs. Shuberts have a lease-hold on these premises which is subject to cancellation; they will give Mr. Reade possession of this building on January 1st.

It is Mr. Reade's intention to alter the building upon obtaining possession to the extent of about $500,000 redecorating, reseating and generally modernizing the structure.

The theatre will continue to be used for the presentation of the better class of motion pictures for extended runs and at other times will house dramatic and musical plays. Negotiations are now pending for the presentation of "Ben Hur" at this theatre upon its completion by Metro-Goldwyn.

Mr. Thomas' interest in this property was held at $900,000. The terms were all cash and there were no brokers, the transaction having been made direct between Mr. Thomas and Mr. Reade.

Mr. Laemmle's letter to Miss Ray Lewis, editor of "The Spotlight," read in part:

"You tell me to build downtown in Chicago. Fine. That's what I intend to do, but it isn't a thing that can be done over night and done right you know. I am going to build there Ray, in spite of the fact that I have been threatened with the loss of all booking in Illinois if I dare to build downtown in Chicago."

Another important development of the week was the purchase by Fitzpatrick & McElroy of six theatre sites in Chicago.

One is at 63rd St. and Kedzie Ave. and is worth $400,000; another at 59th and Kedzie, known as the Gage building, valued at $300,000; southwest corner 63rd and Western, on which is the Bain building, valued at $450,000; northwest corner 63rd and Western, valued at $375,000; and a site at 62d Place and Kedzie, valued at $240,000.

Warner Brothers have acquired a 99-year lease in Youngstown, O., for a plot on which they will build a 2,500 seat theatre to cost $1,000,000.

Around New York the following deals were reported:

A site 115 by 200 ft. on Amity Ave near Main St., Flushing, has been sold to a New York Syndicate which will build a 3,000-seat theatre.

The Jamaica Operating Co. will build a house on Jamaica Ave., Hollis. The Hempstead Theatre Corp. plans a theatre, store and apartment building in Hempstead.

Contracts for a $1,000,000 theatre in Port Chester for the Rhebem Theatres Corp., have been awarded to the Longacre Engineering and Construction Co. The theatre will be on Westchester Ave., near the New Haven railroad station and will seat 2,000. Thomas W. Lamb is architect.

In addition to the theatre at Surf and Stillwell, built by Chanin Construction Co. at a cost of $1,000,000 and leased to Marcus Loew, another theatre is being built at Surf Ave., and West 17th St., Coney Island, at a cost of $600,000.

National Better Films Committee Pamphlet Outlines the Plan of Operation

THE plan of organization and operation of Motion Picture Study Clubs advanced by Prof. Leroy E. Bowman, of the Department of Social Science, Columbia University, at the recent Conference of the National Committee for Better Films, has been published in pamphlet form by that organization.

The Study Club Plan, which met with the endorsement of the National Committee, is a development of the Better Films movement among community groups and embraces the best features which have been evolved by these groups and the National Committee since its inception ten years ago.

Announcement of this new service has been made from the headquarters of the Committee at 70 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

While drawn for the most part from the procedures of citizen groups in various cities there is one feature which makes this Study Club Plan distinctive, and that is its emphasis upon study, upon knowledge of the facts and understanding of the motion picture as a basis for action. To facilitate the carrying out of this idea the National Committee intends to supply motion picture study clubs with a series of papers for presentation at monthly meetings commencing September, 125. These will cover such subjects as the history of motion pictures, the social problem they have raised, the psychology of censorship, the psychological reactions of audiences, the means of improvement likely to prove successful, the questions of taste and morals, the nature of the motion picture as a popular entertainment, as a visual educator, as a medium of artistic expression, as a thing of social meaning, as a form of expression in relation to other arts, etc.

Other services supplied by the National Committee to the secretary of the study club comprise the monthly and weekly selected lists of the National Committee, its annual catalog, "Film Progress"—its monthly bulletin-magazine, "Exceptional Photoplays"—which critically reviews the outstanding productions, and the Weekly Official Bulletin of the National Board of Review. In addition each and every member of the Study Club will receive the monthly selected list (known as the Photoplay Guide), "Film Progress" and "Exceptional Photoplays." All this the Committee officers state is offered at terms within the means of any organization applying for membership.

Paprocki, H. B. Holland, F. C. Taylor, 37 Wall Street, New York city; Gaycort Amusement Corporation, $20,000, Leon Greenfield, Bernard and Abraham Greenfield, New York city.

Norristown Colonial Theatre Destroyed by Fire

The Colonial Theatre of Norristown, Pa., and an adjoining junk shop were destroyed by fire the night of April 28th with a loss of $100,000. The blaze started in a rag shop and stable in the rear of the theatre.

Before the flames became uncontrollable a small audience which had gathered in the theatre was dismissed. The house, located at Main and Arch streets, had recently installed a $12,000 organ.

Warner Players Injured in Train Wreck

MARIE PREVOST, Warner Brothers' star, Louise Fazenda, Kenneth Harlan and Walter Long suffered slight bruises and shock when the train in which Warners' "Bobbed Hair" company was wrecked one night last week. The accident happened on the Santa Fe train near San Diego, the engineer of the train being killed.

The entire camera equipment for "Bobbed Hair" was demolished entailing a loss estimated at $10,000. Miss Prevost and the other injured players were treated and after a day of rest were able to proceed with production work.

Art Mix in Los Angeles Court Action

The Superior Court, in Los Angeles, Cal., has issued a decree fining Arthur J. Mix Productions Inc., $150 and Denver Dixon, its director $75 for contempt of court, according to a statement made by Fox Film Corporation.

It was explained by Saul E. Rogers, General Counsel for the Fox Company, that the offending company was originally enjoined from using advertising containing the name "Art Mix" on posters, press sheets and film titles in a manner alleged to mislead the trade and the public into the belief that "Art Mix" is a motion picture star. Such advertising it is alleged tended to confuse the name used with that of Tom Mix, the star of the Fox company, and was determined by the court to be unfair business competition.

The contempt charged was the alleged distribution of an inaccurate copy of the injunction which tended to lead exhibitors to believe that the injunction did not apply to pictures issued before the date of the restraining order.

Atlanta Film Trade Board Names Directors

At its weekly meeting on Monday afternoon the Atlanta Film Board of Trade held its semi-annual election of members of the Board of Directors, choosing for this body, George R. Allison, John T. Ezell, Dave Prince, R. B. Williams and C. R. Beacham.

The Board of Directors will meet and elect a chairman and appoint the standing committees. These committees are those on Arbitration, Grievance, Legislation and Public Information, Standing Rules, Transportation, and Entertainment. Due to the fact that Mr. Allison and Mr. Beacham are out of town, this meeting of the Board will not be held for about a week.

Fabians Acquire Newark Masonic Temple

The Fabians have taken over the 3000 seat Masonic Temple at Newark, N. J., and expect to open about September 1st. It will be run on the same basis as the Branford, except that first National pictures will be run at the Branford, and it is planned to run Paramount features at the Temple. Fourteen nights out of the year will be devoted to Masonic activities.

Federal Trade Commission Dismisses Complaint Against Saenger

THE Federal Trade Commission has formally dismissed, "without prejudice," the formal complaint against the Saenger Amusement Company, New Orleans, in which the latter was charged with attempting to compel certain film exchanges to cease supplying films to its competitors.

The commission charged the amusement company with having made threats to certain exchanges that unless they accepted its terms for the lease, sale or license of films handled by it, they would cause exhibitors to refuse to handle the films distributed by such exchanges. It was also alleged that the Saenger Company caused contracts between exchanges and exhibitors to be broken, and in other ways attempted to influence exchanges to handle its films on its own terms.

The Saenger Amusement Company in its answer to the complaint denied the charges in toto. The proceeding was dismissed by the commission after consideration of the complaint and answer thereto and the testimony in support of the charges.

British Delegates Will Be Present

W. Gavazzi King and Major Gale Represent Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association—Other Representatives From Abroad

THE Milwaukee Convention will be international in scope. There will be representatives from Great Britain, France and other European countries, in addition to the delegation from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Canada, who met with their American fellow-exhibitors for the first time last year at Boston.

Conspicuous among the visitors from abroad is the delegation from the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of Great Britain and Ireland, headed by William Gavazzi King, secretary of that body, and Major A. J. Gale, former president, who are the official representatives of the C. E. A. Others in the group are A. Cunningham, owner of twenty theatres in Leeds and throughout Yorkshire, and representative of the Leeds branch of the C. E. A.; G. F. McDonald, who represents Birmingham; Captain J. W. Barber, representing London, and Home counties; and F. H. Cooper, representing Norfolk, Norwich and Eastern counties. The latter three are acting in an unofficial capacity.

The British party arrived in New York on the Berengaria last week and were quartered at the Waldorf-Astoria. They left on Wednesday for the Middle West on an inspection tour of theatres that will culminate at Milwaukee. After the convention, they will go on to the West Coast for an extensive tour of the studios, returning to New York, whence they will sail for home on the Berengaria, June 17.

They will play a prominent part at the Milwaukee convention and will be given places of honor in the proceedings.

Warners Deny Combine Has Tied Up Product

INFORMATION has come to Warner Brothers that a big theatre combine is passing the word among independent exhibitors that the combine has tied up Warner product in their territory for next season and unless the exhibitors come into the combine by selling or leasing their houses, or permitting the combine to take over booking dates, they would be unable to obtain Warner and other product for next season.

Harry M. Warner has wired from the coast as follows:

"Please inform everyone that no theatre or circuit of theatres has our product after the present twenty features and that no arrangement for selling has been made or will be made until after the Milwaukee convention."

While in America, the visitors are making a close study of production and distribution, upon which they will base an official report to the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association.

One of the subjects to which they are giving close attention is that of rentals. Capt. Barber declared that exhibitors in England feel that they are being exploited by renters there. He also said that conditions in America are different from those in England and that exhibition values in England should not be based on those in this country. The delegation is gathering first-hand information on rentals and general conditions here.

The British delegates were royally received in New York, receiving the freedom of the port on entering. A number of entertainments have been given in their honor. Miss Elizabeth Lonergan of Kinematograph Weekly, London, was hostess at a dinner Monday night at the Hotel Woodstock, with the British delegates as guests. Bert Adler, who will represent Kine at the convention, was also a guest.

On Tuesday the delegation attended a luncheon given in their honor by William A. Johnston, editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Besides the honor guests, Fred J. Beecroft, advertising manager of THE NEWS and Mr. Adler were present.

En route to Milwaukee, Mr. Gavazzi King, Major Gale and their associates visited Niagara Falls, Detroit and Chicago en route. They will be quartered at the Hotel Wisconsin during the convention.

Representatives of foreign producers will also be present, including F. Wynne-Jones, of UFA; Guy de Valmorin, producer of "The Miracle of the Wolves," and Rene Batigne, American representative of the Societe Anonyme des Filmes Historique, the French concern which made "The Miracle." In some quarters, it was said a plan was on foot to enlist the interest of the M. P. T. O. A. in booking arrangements for pictures from abroad as part of the movement for the alliance with independent producers.

John C. Flinn Made General Manager

Wins Promotion to Board of Directors and Sales Direction of Producers Distributing Corporation

AT a special meeting of the division managers of Producers Distributing Corporation, held Wednesday at the eexecutive offices of the company, F. C. Munroe, president, officially announced the promotion of John C. Flinn to the position of vice-president and general manager, and a member of the board of directors of the corporation.

In his new position Flinn will take full charge of sales and assume the executive duties just resigned by Paul C. Mooney in addition to supervising the advertising and publicity policies of the company.

Flinn joined Producers Distributing Corporation less than eighteen months ago and in this short space of time he has, by tireless efforts and the close support and cooperation of F. C. Munroe, completely reorganized the company and placed the organization in the foremost rank of independent distributors. Since his affiliation with the company he has enlarged and strengthened its programs by product from the greatest producing brains in the industry and the meteoric advance of Producers' Distributing Corporation has, in a great measure been due to the confidence he has inspired.

Starting on January 1st, 1924, with nothing but the skeleton of an organization, Producers' Distributing Corporation now has the exclusive product of Cecil B. De Mille, the big feature productions of Al. Christie, the specials and Harry Carey features of Hunt Stromberg, and the productions of George Melford, Frances Marion, Renaud Hoffman and Belasco Productions Inc. And it is rumored that the new program to be announced shortly will contain the names of at least two other producers of international fame.

F. C. Munroe in announcing the elevation of Flinn to a higher position paid eloquent tribute to his qulities as an executive and a man of broad knowledge, keen judgment, strong personality and great ability. And it may be said without fear of contradiction, that everyone in the motion picture industry echoes and approves Monroe's estimate of Producers' Distributing Corporation's new vice-president and general manager.

Paul C. Mooney, vice-president in charge of sales corporation has resigned his office.

"My contract with Producers' Distributing Corporation," said Mr. Mooney, "has two more months before it expires, after which I had intended to make other connections. After discussing the situation at length with Mr. F. C. Munroe, preseident, and in view of the extensive plans of the corporation for the coming season, I regarded that the best interest of the company would be served by giving way to a successor at this time instead of later, in the middle of the selling season. The association with Producers' Distributing Corporation with its executives, Messrs. Munroe, Raymond Pawley and John C. Flinn has been pleasant and profitable. The record of the company during the past fourteen months speaks for itself and it is with extreme satisfaction and gratification that I review the cooperative achievements of these gentlemen and myself."

Mr. Munroe, president of the company, said, "Mr. Mooney's record in the motion picture industry both before his association with Producers Distributing Corporation and particularly during that time shows unusual ability and grasp of the problems of the motion picture industry. For myself and the other officers of the corporation, I can say that his resignation is taken with sincere regret but with a knowledge that his future undertakings will reflect the same qualities which have made so many friends for him in and out of the industry."

Exhibitors Join Canada Body

Are Included With Distributors in Group Affiliated With the Hays Organization

EXHIBITORS are included in the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada, which is the Canadian affiliation of the Will Hays organization in the United States. Formal announcement was made during the week at the Canadian headquarters of the association in Toronto of the inclusion of the exhibitors. Information received shows a substantial number of exhibitors from Montreal, Quebec and out to Vancouver, B. C., lined up with the new association.

The list of exhibitor members already secured comprises some of the outstanding theatre managers in the country. Cities already represented include Hamilton, St. Catharines, Kitchener, Brantford, Guelph, Galt, London, Stratford, Peterborough, Ottawa, Kingston, Montreal, Vancouver, Calgary, Winnipeg, Toronto and other centres. Organization details have reached the point where it is now possible to hold an annual convention and this is to be staged in the immediate future at Toronto, where representatives of many film exchanges, producers and the exhibitors will gather to discuss all phases of motion picture presentation.

The Canadian association has already been devoting considerable attention to the projection machine operators in the Dominion. Recently a copy of a book, "Film Mutilation and How to Prevent It," published by the Eastern Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y., has been sent to every operator in Canada by Col. John A. Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada, Toronto. This book was sent out with the compliments of the Canadian association and with the request to "Read, Preserve, Help." Similar meetings are also to be held at Toronto and Montreal, in Eastern Canada, during May.

"Lightnin'" Finished, Due for Broadway

"LIGHTNIN'" first of the John Golden productions made by Fox Film Corporation on the west coast has been completed and will probably be the first of the new offerings presented on Broadway on a large scale. It will be shown in the same manner as were "The Iron Horse," "As No Man Has Loved" and "The Fool."

"Lightnin'" will inaugurate the new Fox policy of filming only outstanding stage successes and novels. In the direction of the picture John Ford had the complete cooperation of John Golden, who was on hand all the time the production was in progress.

Jay Hunt was selected to play the role made famous by the late Frank Bacon only after hundreds of applicants had been passed upon. Others prominent in the cast are, Madge Bellamy, Wallace MacDonald, Ethel Clayton, J. Farrell MacDonald, James Marcus, Edythe Chapman, Otis Harlan, Richard Travers and Brandon Hurst.

Detroit Orpheum Seized by United States Officials

Federal authorities have seized the Orpheum theatre in Detroit on instructions from the commissioner of internal revenue at Washington, because of alleged improper disclosure of the income of the Wayne Amusement company, operators of the Orpheum.

Agents of Fred L. Woodworth, collector of internal revenue for this district, served a warrant in distraint upon George E. Guise, secretary, in which it was charged that incorrect returns for 1917, 1920 and 1921 income of the company was falsified.

According to the commissioner, the company owes the government $4,144.86 for 1917, $36,471.03 for 1920 and $18,709.76 for 1921, a total of more than $59,300. The Orpheum, which is one of the largest combination houses in the city, has been closed for two weeks, since it has not been paying expenses in recent weeks. When the government heard of the action being taken to cancel the lease, immediate action was taken to protect the federal claim.

When Guise declared that he was not in a position to pay the claim, the officers started an inventory of the company's assets and will be in possession of the theatre until the inventory is completed. The government's claim for taxes takes precedence of the Orpheum company's claim for rent, it is said.

Jesse Goldburg Delivers a Broadcasting Series

Jesse J. Goldburg, president of Independent Pictures Corporation, is broadcasting a series of addresses on subjects connected with the motion picture industry. The talks are being delivered from station KFI which is operated by the Los Angeles Examiner at Los Angeles.

The first of the addresses was delivered by Goldburg as a part of the Wampas program Wednesday, April 15th, when he took for his subject "The Making of a Star." The second will be delivered within the next two weeks on "The Relationship of Music to Motion Pictures."

Film Mutilated by Punch Holes Must Be Paid For

The Albany Film Board of Trade has issued a letter to all theatres in that exchange zone warning exhibitors and operators that hereafter theatres will be called upon to pay for film that has been mutilated by punch holes. The practice of punching holes in film to indicate that the reel is near the end of its run is said to have spread greatly in that district lately and the step by the Board is taken to eliminate the destruction to prints resulting therefrom.

Wilson Names Cobb as Sales Manager

SERING D. WILSON has officially announced the appointment of C. Lang Cobb as general sales manager of Sering D. Wilson & Company, Inc. He has been acting in this capacity for some time past, having just returned from an extended trip covering practically all key cities east of the Rockies.

Oklahoma Exhibitors Convene

Little Revealed as Result of Sessions, Most of Which Were Executive

PRACTICALLY all sessions of the state convention of the M. P. T. O. of Oklahoma at Oklahoma City last week were executive so that matters affecting the exhibitors might be discussed intimately and, it is said, with considerable tartness. No representatives of national distributors were present at any time, but three independent film exchange managers delivered brief addresses by invitation. This was considered extremely significant.

President A. B. Momand of Shawnee presided. His administration was enthusiastically indorsed and he was formally elected to represent the organization at the Milwaukee convention. Others at the state meeting who will go as delegates are Vice-Preseident L. W. Brophy of Muckogee, John Brown of Tulsa, W. Z. Spearman of Edmond and C. A. Runyan of Barnsdall. Others in the membership are also expected to attend.

United States Senator Harreld made a short talk, reporting that a senatorial subcommittee was investigating the music copyright laws and promising his cordial help in promoting in a national way the interests of Oklahoma theater men. He was introduced by Attorney W. F. McLaury, counsel for the M. P. T. O.

It is known that the convention threshed over the problems of music tax, uniform contract, arbitration clause and non-thearit cals, but definite action taken, if any, was not disclosed.

Col. H. A. Cole, president of the Texas M. P. T. O., was present throughout the sessions. He reported procedure in certain Texas propositions similar to situations interesting Oklahoma exhibitors, and gave advice to the convention.

As a result of the convention's authorization, the board of directors appointed Harvey W. Ferguson, reputed to be the "highest powered" publicity man in thee southwest, to be general manager of the organization with headquarters in Oklahoma City. It is understood he was clothed with unusual powers and also guaranteed the board's backing in his every action.

Universal Buys Rights to "The Old Soak"

With the production schedule for next year completed in detail, Universal is already planning the 1927 program, a year and a half in advance, and as an initial move in this direction has acquired the screen rights to "The Old Soak," the Don Marquis play successfully produced on Broadway and on tour. A star to enact the character of Clem Hawkins on the screen is under contract but Universal is not in a position to make announcement of his name owing to agreements under which he is now appearing in a play on Broadway.

Tom Mix Back For New Tour

Fox Star Will Visit Key Centers in Twenty-One Day Trip Over U. S.

THE Tom Mix tour in Europe has come to an end and the Fox star is scheduled to arrive back in New York late this week on the Mauretania. But Mix has not finished touring. On the way back from Europe he planned an American trip that will take him to as many of the leading American cities as he can cover over a period of twenty-one days

The Mix tour here will be on the circus order with Max Roth, Joe Shea, Jerry Rudolph and Roy Crandall serving as advance men. Tom will have to make the first part of the trip without his famous horse. Tony is not scheduled to join him until he reaches Buffalo.

Mix has not planned to make personal theatre appearances in any city, but will travel in a private car and meet leading exhibitors and the leading authorities in the various cities.

The first stop on the Mix itinerary will be Boston, which is scheduled for May 11th. The following day he will arrive at Montreal and on May 13th at Toronto. From there the jump will be made to Milwaukee where the star will be on hand for the convention.

The balance of the program is as follows: Chicago, May 15th; Detroit, 16th; Cleveland, 18th; Buffalo, 19th; Pittsburgh, 20th; Washington, 21st; Baltimore, 22nd; Philadelphia, 23rd; Atlantic City, 24th; Cincinnati, 25th; Indianapolis, 26th; St. Louis, 27th; Kansas City, 28th; Omaha, 29th and Los Angeles, June 2nd.

Warners Call Coast Meeting

Conference Will Outline Complete Program of Warner and Vitagraph Product

WARNER Brothers have called a sales convention on Warner and Vitagraph product for 1925-26 to be held at Los Angeles May 12th to 16th. It will be attended by all sales managers now operating the Vitagraph exchanges throughout the United States and Canada, and the departmental heads of the Warner organization.

Sam E. Morris, general manager of Vitagraph, Herman Starr, of the Warner firm, Meyer Lesser, in charge of national advertising and Gus Schlesinger, foreign manager of Warner Brothers left for the convention Wednesday. Harry and Jack Warner are already in Hollywood shaping up the production programs of both Warners and Vitagraph.

Among the subjects to be discussed will be new product not heretofore mentioned, the exact number of pictures to be made under the Vitagraph trade mark and the complete lineup of the Warner forty.

The headquarters of the convention will be at the Ambassador Hotel, but many of the meetings will be held at the Warner studio. One of the objects in taking the convention to Los Angeles was to show the exchangemen the Warner plant and to review pictures finished on next season's program.

In addition to the delegates who departed for the coast, Warners will also be well represented at the Milwaukee convention. Sam and Abe Warner and Watt L. Parker, head of the advertising department leave for the convention city Saturday morning.

Johnny Hines Feature Has Premiere

A capacity audience turned out at the Hotel Plaza in New York Friday night for the premiere showing of Johnny Hines' latest feature, "The Crackerjack." Stars, executives and exchange men were in attendance and the picture was roundly applauded.

"The Crackerjack" is the last picture for Hines under his state right contract for East Coast Films. He has signed contracts with C. C. Burr whereby he will make a new series of feature comedies for First National release.

Associated Exhibitors Buy "Two Can Play"

Associated Exhibitors has purchased screen rights to "Two Can Play," a Saturday Evening Post story, and it will be added to the production lineup for the 1925-26 season. The story was written by Gerald Mygatt. It will probably be released in the Spring of 1926.

Nat Ross will produce the film and supervise its direction. Clara Bow and Allen Forrest have been engaged for the leading roles.

Schulberg Signs Sterling for Character Role

B. P. Schulberg has signed Ford Sterling for a character role in "My Lady's Lips," in which Clara Bow, Frank Keenan, Alyce Mills and William Powell are appearing. The picture is under the direction of James P. Hogan.

Sills to Make Exteriors in Ottawa Camp

Exterior scenes for Milton Sills' starring vehicle, "The Come-Back," will be filmed in and about the Hawksbury Lumber Company plant 150 miles from Ottawa and the work will be done with the cooperation of the Canadian government. The Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce has turned its laboratories over to the Earl Hudson unit and will work with them throughout the making of the lumbering scenes.

Raymond Peck is the head of the Trade and Commerce bureau and his assistant, Fred Badgley, is already actively engaged with First National officials in laying plans for the shooting of the picture. The exteriors will be shot on the Ottawa, Gatineau and Beauchene Rivers in the heart of the biggest lumbering operations in the east. Lambert Hillyer who will direct the picture leaves in a few days for the Ottawa camp.

Schenck Productions Move to New Quarters

Joseph M. Schenck Productions will move its home office next week from 1540 Broadway to the offices of United Artists Corporation at 729 Seventh Avenue. Schenck recently became chairman of the board of directors of United Artists, of which Hiram Abrams is president.

Emil C. Jensen succeeds Felix Feist as booking manager of Schenck Productions, and Beulah Livingstone remains as publicity director of the Norma and Constance Talmadge and Buster Keaton Productions, with Dorothy Reuter as assistant. The Norma and Constance Talmadge pictures will continue to be released by First National for at least another year.

The invited speakers included Robert Lieber, president; R. A. Rowland, general manager; Samuel Spring, secretary-treasurer; E. Bruce Johnson, manager of the foreign department; C. S. Pinkerton, financial comptroller; Mrs. Florence L. Strauss, scenario editor; Robert Perkins, head of the legal department; and Johnny Hines, First National's new star, and his manager, C. C. Burr.

New Plays For Colleen Moore

First National Acquires Rights to Three Stories for Star Now Touring Abroad

FIRST NATIONAL has purchased three stories for production this fall with Colleen Moore as the star. The works are "Irene," the musical comedy success by James H. Montgomery, Harry Tierney and Joseph McCarthy; "Clarissa of the Post Road," by Grace Sartwell Mason and published in Saturday Evening Post; and "We Moderns," the play by Israel Zangwill.

Miss Moore, now fully recovered from the injury to her spine which she sustained several weeks ago while filming a scene for "The Desert Flower" in the Mojave Desert, is now on a vacation in Europe with her husband, John E. McCormick, Western representative of First National Pictures.

The star and her husband sailed on the Majestic from New York, May 2nd, having completed her work in "The Desert Flower" before leaving Hollywood for the east. During their stay in London, McCormick plans to take a number of scenes which later will be used in "We Moderns," the first of the new stories which Miss Moore will make. Before returning to this country in July they will visit England, Ireland, France, Italy, Germany, Austria, Switzerland and Belgium.

New Winnipeg Manager for First National

E. A. Eschmann has appointed J. C. James manager of First National's branch office in Winnipeg to succeed Frank Vaughan who recently resigned. James was booker in the branch office at Montreal before winning his promotion.

Western Star, Signs New Contract

F. B. O. has signed Fred Thomson, western star to a new contract under which he and his wonder horse, Silver King will make another series of Super-Westerns for that company. The new Thomson series will be made from novels and stories from the pens of some of the best known authors.

F. B. O. have in Thomson a man of unusual stunt ability, as in 1910, 11 and 13 he held the world's all around championship title with a point score of 7,577. His brother is the present champion with the second highest point score ever made, 7,519.

Silver King who stars with Thomson is a thoroughbred Irish hunter which was purchased by Thomson on his way home from the war from a New York riding academy where he was regarded as too vicious to ride. Several months ago the horse was insured for $100,000.

"The Bandit's Baby," by Leete Renick Brown, is serving Thomson as his next vehicle. Shooting on it is scheduled to be completed next week by director Del Andrews who also directed Thomson in "That Devil Quemado," the star's last picture. Andrews has directed a number of successful pictures, among them being "Galloping Fish" and the "Go Getters" series.

Fox Holds Annual Convention

Representatives From All Over Globe Discuss Sales Methods for Product

FOX representatives from all quarters of the globe gathered last week for the twelfth annual sales convention of the organization which came to a close at the New York studios on April 30th. It was voted the most enthusiastic and successful convention ever held by the company.

All of the United States and Canada exchanges were represented by district and branch managers and a number of salesmen and special representatives were on hand from different parts of the globe. William Fox returned for the occasion after a three month's absence at his west coast studios where he has been in active supervision of the casting and production of the big specials for the coming season.

Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of the company was present at all sessions, as was James R. Grainger, general sales manager, who has his first opportunity of getting in to touch with the complete personnel of the big field organization. Wild enthusiasm marked the announcement of the ambitious program for the 1925-26 season.

Following the conclusion of the New York convention Grainger left for Canada to attend conventions in Montreal and Winnipeg. The Montreal sessions were held from May 3rd to 5th and were attended by W. C. Gehring, branch manager of Montreal; R. G. March, branch manager at St. Johns; J. P. "Black Cyclone" Wins Commendation

The General Committee of the National Board of Review has given its unqualified commendation to "Black Cyclone," Hal Roach's latest feature production for Pathe which features Rex, the equine star of "King of Wild Horses."

The reports handed down by the committee says of the picture: "This is a remarkably interesting photoplay, with horses in a wild state on the range for its principal actors. It has thrill, love, adventure—all the qualities of intense dramatic action. Pictorially it is often superb."

"Black Cyclone" has been definitely booked to open the Capitol Theatre, New York, May 17th. An elaborate presentation is being planned for this world premiere showing.

Warners to Make "Black Diamond Express"

"The Black Diamond Express" will be a Warner Brothers production made under the Vitagraph trade mark and released on the Vitagraph progam for 1925-26. A picture of the same title was the first made by Vitagraph and the first motion picture to be publicly exhibited in the United States.

A peculiar feature of the coming production will be on the inclusion of the original film was just a few hundred feet in length and showed a train approaching from a distance and moving to what is now known as a close-up. The Warner production will be a great melodrama in which the original picture will serve to show the contrast between motion pictures of that and the present day.

Gertrude Short is Added to Schulberg Cast

Another addition has been made to the cast of "My Lady's Lips," the John Goodrich story which James P. Hogan is directing for B. P. Schulberg. Gertrude Short has signed for an important role. Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Six-Sheet Basis of Vivid "Dante's Inferno" Lobby

MANAGER EARLE SETTLE of the Capitol, Oklahoma City, used the six-sheet on "Dante's Inferno" for a lobby display, with excellent results. Pasted on muslin and placed in a shadow box with 12 50 watt lamps reflecting through the six sheet, the effect was striking. All lights, both in the lobby and on the marquee were dyed red. At night the entire building was flooded with two 1,000 watt spots with red torches burning on top of the canopy. Taken as a whole, the exhibit was most expressive of the weird atmosphere of the photoplay.

The usual billing was supplemented by the use of 100 special cards placed in vacant store windows a week in advance of opening. Twenty-five ¼-sheets were used on front of street cars and oil paintings were displayed in prominent windows.

Composer at Strand During Showing of "Declasse"

The personal appearance of Charles Wakefield Cadman, the composer-pianist, at the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre on the program which had "Declasse" as the feature film, offered the opportunity for a striking stage number. Managing Director Edward L. Hyman, who sends his stage presentations out over the air each Sunday night at nine o'clock through Station WNYC, decided to arrange a group of Cadman compositions for the theatre audiences and the invisible listeners-in.

The incident, presented in an elaborate special set painted by P. Dodd Ackerman, and with a special announcement trailer preceding it, was made up as follows, with Charles Wakefield Cadman at the piano: "Wolf Dance" by the Mark Strand Ballet Corp; "Land of the Sky-blue Water," Amund Sjovik, bass-baritone; "The Shadowless Hour," Edna Burhans, soprano; "My Desire," Richard Bartlett, tenor; "Love Like the Dawn Comes Stealing," Dorma Lee, contralto; "Welcome Sweet Spring," Charlotte Bergh, coloratura soprano; "Spirit of Spring," Mark Strand Mixed Quartette and the Mark Strand Ballet Corps.

The publicity campaign was begun a week in advance and as Cadman is excellent "copy" with music editors a great deal of space was secured.

Lobby centre piece for "The Air Mail" (Paramount) by Manager H. J. Gould of the Hippodrone, Fort Worth, Texas. The little plane above circled about, while that on the board appeared to be coming through the clouds.

Marquee Sign of Rags for "Ragman" Showing

DURING the run "The Ragman" at the Joie, Fort Smith, Manager J. P. Read had an unusual display on his marquee. The title of the photoplay was made of old clothes cut out to form the lettering and suspended by a heavy wire. This together with a six-sheet cut-out of "Jackie" which was illuminated at night by a spot, made a striking display.

Stills on mat board were exhibited in the foyer of the theatre several days in advance of showing. This was augmented by teaser slides, trailers, etc.

Colorful "Chu Chin Chow" Lobby in Charlotte

Manager Chas. H. Amos conceived a very effective lobby for "Chu Chin Chow" at the Alhambra, Charlotte, N. C. The color scheme was orange, black and yellow, consisting of a huge Oriental lantern suspended from the ceiling directly above the box-office. The title was cut-out and backed with yellow crepe paper, illuminated by concealed electric lights

On each side of the lobby, facing in toward the lantern, was an immense crescent painted with Oriental figures. Under each crescent, standing on the floor of the lobby, was a cut-out of Betty Blythe as the beautiful slave girl, each depicting a different scene from the photoplay. A framed still in front of ticket window and panels of stills completed the display.

Newspaper space was slightly increased and billing started a week in advance with oil paintings and 10 gold insert frames placed in prominent windows. The attraction also received a special announcement over the radio.

Here is a window display which can be gotten up in practically any town or village, however small, at trifling expense. It is a tie-up effected by the Merced theatre, Merced, Calif., with his local telephone exchange in connection with his showing of "Daughters of the Night" (Fox), a telephone picture.

Manager J. L. Cartwright arranged this lobby display on "The Roughneck" (Fox) at the Rialto theatre, Chattanooga. It consists of four cut-outs of Hawaiian girls pointed on compo board, with a background of a painted scene showing a man and woman looking out to sea where a boat is anchored with three men coming ashore. Palms bordered the display.

Sasseen Lines Up Windows to Aid "Forty Winks"

Manager Chas. E. Sasseen secured four excellent window displays on "Forty Winks," playing the Criterion, Enid, Okla.

One with a jewelry store displayed alarm clocks with cards and stills. A ladies' ready-to-wear shop had an attractive exhibit with a large mat specially painted. Small cut-outs were also used by this firm. A book store had a window full of kodaks with advertising copy on the picture. The fourth window display was with a furniture company who displayed a handsome bed in their window with card announcing photoplay.

Catchlines were used in all the windows, tying-up the merchandise with the picture. For instance in the furniture store's window was a card reading: "You can get 'Forty Winks' in a bed like this."

In addition to the regular billing and newspaper advertising, the changeable sign and new inside lobby advance three-sheets gained considerable publicity for "Forty Winks."

"Sinners in Silk" Windows Put Over in Kokomo

Elaborate window displays of lingerie and silk hose in the most prominent shops in Kokomo, Ind., each of which featured special display cards upon which were mounted stills from the picture, recently exploited the showing of "Sinners in Silk" at the Victory theatre.

Charles Glickauf, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, backed up these displays with a vigorous press campaign, achieving 75 inches of extra advertising space in addition to the 176 inches normally attained. The town was well posted and a slide was used in the theatre. Other window displays featured ladies' ready-to-wear garments and toilette articles, and there was a special lobby display as well.

"Cheaper to Marry" Week Put Over in San Diego

A "Cheaper to Marry" week was recently celebrated by a retail hat dealer in San Diego, California, where this picture played at the Plaza theatre. This "Cheaper to Marry" week was a feature of an elaborate and energetic campaign waged by H. D. McBride, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer. Every married man calling at this hat store with his wife during the week of the showing was offered a discount. Newspaper advertising exploited the discount.

A teaser campaign was run in the press, and proved effective. A special story and photograph on the new "knee garter" now being worn instead of a marriage ring found ready space, and one thousand cards reading "It's Cheaper to Marry" were attached to the radiators of all autos. The three leading and most popular restaurants, the Waldorf, the Golden Lion and the Cabrillo, consented to attach specially printed cards exploiting the picture to their menu cards. These cards were also inserted in the key boxes of the Waldorf Hotel.

A tie-up with the five Southern Service Company laundries netted the distribution of 6,000 inserts. Three windows were secured from the Monarch and Owl drug stores, in which stills and specially prepared cards were exhibited. Other window displays were contributed by jewelers, hat dealers, cigar and hardware stores. One hundred 1-sheets were posted and slides and trailers were used in the theatre.

Chinese Atmosphere Given for "East of Suez"

THE miniature Chinese display used in the lobby of the Noble theatre, Anniston, Ala., a week prior to the opening of "East of Suez," was an excellent visualization of the title. Manager Roy L. Smart's doorman, Clarence Saunders, made the entire exhibit at very little cost.

The display was built in three sections. The background was made up of old Chinese shades in front of which were placed cut-outs from 11x14's; purple and yellow sateen drapes on sides, and an odd-shaped top-piece on which was painted the title and date.

An 18-inch banner decorated the three sides of the marquee, and in keeping with rest of the lobby, was of Chinese design. Each lamp around the edege of the marquee was covered with a Chinese lantern, while in the lobby and the theatre itself a small quantity of incense was kept burning to intensify the oriental atmosphere of the photaoplay.

Scene From "Great Divide" in Imperial's Lobby

The lobby at the Imperial, Asheville, did much to increase interest in "The Great Divide." Manager A. S. Grist arranged an interior scene of a log cabin, complete with stove, bed, table, guns on wall, furs, etc., in keeping with the one shown in the photoplay.

The marquee was decorated with banners made on scrim, showing the sun setting between two mountains with the title "The Great Divide." Two cut-outs, one of Alice Terry and the other of Conway Tearle, in front of theatre, completed the display.

In addition to the above the picture was exploited through the usual channels.

Tiny, the Dinosaur, the street ballyhoo for the trade showing of "The Lost World" (First Nat'l) at the Palace theatre, London.

Porter Put on Street as "Excuse Me" Ballyhoo

When "Excuse Me" played recently at the Strand theatre in Steubenville, O., C. C. Deardourff, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, put a man on the street dressed as a Pullman porter. This man carried in one hand a travelling bag on which was printed in large letters "Excuse Me."

Miller's Display Piece on "Sackcloth and Scarlet"

THE lobby display by Manager F. J. Miller on "Sackcloth and Scarlet" consisted of a huge fancy beaverboard cutout, the center of which was cut out in the shape of a large heart and backed with bright scarlet cloth and burlap. In the center of the heart was a cut-out from the three sheet of Caldwell and Miss Sebastian. Although minimum in expense, the display attracted the maximum of attention.

The regular newspaper advertising and billing was used, with prominent shops displaying, a week in advance, attractive 8x10 still boards. One and three sheets and framed insert cards were also placed in store windows in the downtown section.

"Salome of Tenements" is Tied Up With Exhibit

"Salome of the Tenements" was the recipient of novel exploitation when Manager Jack T. Turner of the Galax theatre tied up with an exhibition of Russian paintings held in one of Birmingham's leading shops under the auspices of the local art clubs. In return for representation in the store's ads, and a special window display, a slide was run at the Galax regarding the exhibit.

The Jewish community was reached through the mailing of 2,000 letters to a list secured from the Y. M. H. A.

The lobby display, inspired by a mat in the Press Book, was made up of beaver board, hand painted and attractively decorated with the title, featuring Jetta Goudal with stills and photos from the picture.

With the caption line, "Spring styles as worn in Zane Grey's 'Thundering Herd,'" this window display of Indian costumes was tied up with the showing of "The Thundering Herd" (Paramount) at the Majestic theatre, Tulsa, Okla. The trophies and relics were obtained from Pawnee Bill by J. W. Clark, publicity man for the theatre.

We often hear of an exhibitor "crashing" into a circus parade, but not so often do we get actual photographic proof. Here is a sedan, bannered for "The Dressmaker from Paris" (Paramount), on top and sides, which Manager J. J. Madden of the Wells theatre, Norfolk, Va., slipped into a circus parade.

"Air Mail" Hooked Up with Model Building Contest

The "Air Mail", playing the Hippodrome, Fort Worth, was the recipient of a forceful campaign put over by Manager H. J. Gould.

Tying-up with the Fort Worth Press, Manager Gould launched an Aeroplane Building contest inviting all boys of Fort Worth to take part. Models, not over 3 feet in length, were to be turned in at the theatre, the prize winning ships to be judged by a squad of real aviators. Awards as follows—$5.00 in gold for first prize, $3.00 second and $2.00 third. This stunt met with overwhelming response, several splendid models being submitted. The winning ships were used in the lobby display.

The lobby exhibit was a real attention getter. An aeroplane, specially built, was placed in the center of a huge board carrying stills and title of photoplay. The aeroplane appeared to be coming through clouds. Small "ships", suspended from top of lobby circled around continuously, adding much to the atmosphere.

An outstanding unit of Manager Gould's campaign was the tie-up he effected with the Press on the Third Annual Marble Tournament staged by that newspaper, the winner to be given a free trip to Atlantic City to compete in the National Marble Tournament of the U. S. On the opening day of the picture, the newspaper printed a front page story inviting all boys and girls under 15 years of age to attend a special Saturday morning matinee of the "Air Mail" at the Hippodrome.

Oil Paintings Carried on Streets for "Greed"

When "Greed" played recently in Portland, Me., at the Jefferson theatre, Phil Kahn, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, popularized the showing by having oil paintings of scenes from the picture carried in the streets. These paintings were labeled with annoucements of the run in inconspicuous lettering which aroused the curiosity of passers-by, who took pains to find out why such paintings should be carried about the streets. This feat exploited the showing effectively.

Cross word puzzle contests were run in the Portland Evening Express and in the Portland Press Herald, both contests proving popular. Four window displays helped exploit the run and there was a specially built flasher box on display in the lobby. Two hundred window cards were used, and two hundred and fifty 1-sheets, eighteen 3-sheets, twelve 6-sheets and six 24-sheets were posted.

Strong Press Campaign in Fargo for "Greed" Run

A vigorous press campaign, beginning with teasers ten days before the opening and expanding in space until the day of the premiere, recently helped exploit the showing of "Greed" at the Orpheum theatre in Fargo, North Dakota. The Stone Piano company contributed a window display and a bird store donated another. Two thousand heralds were mailed out to a selected mailing list, and two hundred window cards were used. Four 24-sheet were posted and four 3-sheets. The Fargo Forum, in addition, used the "Greed" cross word puzzle from the exhibitor's service book. Special stories found space in all the newspapers.

Morris Abrams, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, received active co-operation from E. A. Phillips, manager of the Garrick and Orpheum theatres in Fargo throughout the campaign.

I·N·T·R·O·D·U·C·T·I·O·N

COLORED pages and extravagant phrases do not make pictures. A series of titles and the names of a stock company cannot, alone, be an assurance of box-office success.

Competition is keen in entertainment today; the public is crying for something important — pictures that have behind them something besides the blemishing stigma of "just another movie."

So many pictures pass along in the pageant of entertainment each season nowadays, that there must be something outstanding in the nature of each subject to make it the most important entertainment event in any town at any time.

The pictures that will be successful in 1925 - 26 are those that have a ready-made audience waiting for them.

How is this ready-made audience to be assured, aside from the one assurance of stars whose drawing power is unquestioned?

Paramount believes the answer to that question is in the Golden Forty, announced in these pages.

Paramount sincerely believes this Golden Forty to be the greatest audience - pullers of this or any season, not only as a group but individually, picture by picture, subject by subject.

They are pictures that will, we believe, appeal to every possible audience that the film theatre can attract.

Each subject is based on no haphazard selection of material, but on a popular idea, a great serial, a great book, a great play, with each story suited to star and director.

In securing these great properties of stage hits and best sellers, Paramount has taken advantage of the trend of public taste as already proven by the public itself. Books that sell in the millions, plays that attract audiences for a year and more, will assuredly make film stories that have a guaranteed audience waiting for them. The public interest in the stories of the Golden Forty already has been proven.

Paramount not only invites but urges the closest scrutiny of every picture in these pages.

Paramount technical quality, Paramount directors, Paramount stars, Paramount casts speak for themselves. But above and beyond that, an analysis will show and the future will prove that the subjects themselves constitute the important motion picture material that the exhibitor must certainly have this season if he is to run his theatre at a profit.

FIVE MEN IN A ROOM

FIVE motion picture men gathered in a room.

Each is the outstanding expert in his particular branch of the business.

The branches are: Scenario, Production, Sales, Exploitation, Public Opinion.

10. The scenario expert submitted to the meeting the ten choicest stories available from the whole world's supply of fiction. Every play, novel and original manuscript of any merit whatever had been read by his trained assistants. The ten pieces of material selected were unquestionably the best in existence.

5. The production expert studied these ten stories. With the foremost players and directors at his disposal, he could make the kind of picture each demanded. He announced that all ten stories would make good pictures, and five of them would make big, elaborate specials conforming to the highest standards of the screen.

3. The sales expert, with his intimate knowledge of box-office, analyzed these five potential specials. He liked all five of them. He added, however, that three of the stories were so exactly the type of material that every exhibitor in the country is eager to get, that they stood out above the others.

2. The exploitation expert declared that two of these three stories embodied such new and interesting ideas that nation-wide exploitation campaigns could be built around them, making them gold mines at the box office. He outlined the plans for these two campaigns.

1. The expert who knows to the minute the public's tastes at the box office, gleaned from continuous national investigations, stated that one of these two stories was on a subject that is the rage of the hour among all classes of people.

This one story, having been enthusiastically endorsed by all five men, was selected for production as a motion picture.

* * * * *

40. Forty such meetings were held over a period of six months. The same procedure was followed at each meeting, and at each meeting one superfine, guaranteed box office success was chosen.

These forty success-assured special productions are the kind of pictures you will find in the Golden Forty Paramount Pictures.

A FRANK TUTTLE PRODUCTION

RICHARD Dix is no longer the "fastest coming star of the screen". He has arrived. He is a full fledged star of the most exceptional drawing power. Folks like him and they want to see him. He is not only young, virile, good looking, magnetic, but he is every inch an actor, a comedian of distinction, and in addition, able to portray the deeper emotional roles. Paramount is proud of Richard Dix and knows that exhibitors are proud to show his pictures.

In "California or Bust" he has an ideal role in a fast moving romantic automobile comedy drama, in which he plays the part of a young clerk who wins an automobile at a charity bazar, the very machine which has revolved around a sensational breach of promise suit. Whe he starts on his cross country vacation and meets with a pretty young stenographer who is touring in a battered Ford, the mistaken identity theme, the chase the melodrama, the romance and the thrills begin to pile up in a marvelous plot of love and comedy. Better than "Manhattan", better than "Too Many Kisses, "California or Bust" is going to make new records as one of the outstanding hits of the Golden Forty.

with WARNER BAXTER, RAYMOND HATTON, BESSIE LOVE, and other artists

In his sphere, Harold Bell Wright is the most popular living author in America. In the past eight years, his books have sold over 10,000,000 copies, reaching 56,000,000 readers, more than half of the population of the United States!

Next to the Bible, Harold Bell Wright is the best-seller in the world! His books go everywhere, big cities and byways, into countless homes where Wright is the only author read. You have ready-made audiences for Wright as soon as you announce his name!

Harold Bell Wright's latest and greatest novel is "A Son of His Father," an action-romance of the Arizona Desert. It is now running in McCall's Magazine (circulation 2,250,000 readers), the first Wright book ever to be serialized.

In filming the Zane Grey stories, Paramount has set a high standard for outdoor pictures never before known in the industry. The same high standard will be adhered to in placing Wright's splendid sold-to-the-public-in-advance story upon the screen!

HAROLD BELL WRIGHT'S story

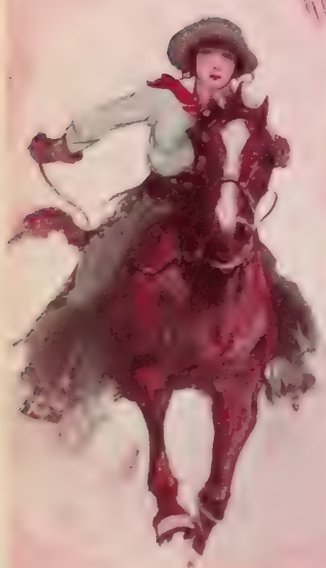
"A SON OF HIS FATHER"

THE public, which is turning away from the gaudy flapper to the age-old ideal of wholesome American manhood and womanhood, will find honest joy and real refreshment in "A Son of His Father." It is the most vigorous, the most stirring, and the most appealing of the famous line of novels which have made Harold Bell Wright pre-eminent. And Paramount is producing the picture with all the high talent, painstaking care, elaborate settings, and atmosphere of class that only Paramount outdoor pictures possess.



The setting of "A Son of His Father" is the fascinating story of the changing west as it noticeably shifts even in the little lapse of time between a son and his father.

The story in brief: Nora O'Shea, a pretty Irish girl, comes to Arizona, after the death of her mother, from Ireland to join her brother. Larry, a cowboy on young Jack Morton's ranch. Morton, a college man, handsome, but rather wild, has just gambled away his ranch to a man in the employ of Zobetzer, wealthy enemy of the Morton's and an unscrupulous man suspected of being a cattle-rustler.

Larry O'Shea, who has left Morton and caught on with a gang of smugglers, fails to meet Nora at the station, and Morton takes her in charge. Later Zobetzer attempts to kidnap the girl, but relents when he learned she befriended his little grandson on the train coming out.

The capture of Nora by smugglers, her thrilling rescue by Morton, the brave death of Larry, the love of Morton and Nora, and the recovery of his ranch by Morton, form the basis for a plot that is packed with excitement and action every second.

And remember — Harold Bell Wright's 56,000,000 readers are waiting to see "A Son of His Father" on the screen as Paramount is producing it!

GLORIA SWANSON
IN STAGE STRUCK

An Allan Dwan Production

by Frank R. Adams

IN "Stage Struck", Gloria Swanson returns to the type of production that registered her first great popularity and which branded her as one of the greatest character actresses of all time.

We have had a steady demand from exhibitors all over the country for more productions on the order of "Manhandled". This has been expressed in practically every exhibitor comment that has reached us since that production was released.

"Stage Struck" tells a most wonderful story. It has been the dream of every young girl to grow up to be a great actress—to go on the stage. Gloria Swanson takes this human theme and develops it into one of the greatest box-office attractions of her career. Those who witnessed her characterizations in "Manhandled" of Charlie Chaplin and others will realize the field that is open to her in "Stage Struck" where from Bernhardt down, in the interpretations that she will give, she will mimic practically every great character of stage and screen.

Nothing more human, nothing with a greater box-office appeal has ever been assigned to Gloria Swanson than this tremendously human story of the girl from the small town whose ambition led to the stage, prepared to pay any price to gain her end, and who in finding after all that the world responds to talent and nothing else but talent, also found the true love and true happiness that she had sought so long.

Bebe  Daniels

in "THE WILD WILD GIRL"

FROM THE LIBERTY MAGAZINE SERIAL

HERE is a wonderful story for Bebe Daniels, the Bebe of "Miss Blubeard" and "The Manicure Girl". In it she plays the part of Rowena Vanderhaydin who, by the time she is grown, has caused her parents more trouble than both her prim and proper sisters. At last she tells them she is all fed up on their way of living and means to toss a tooth brush and an extra frill into her suitcase and go where "women are women and don't have to be ladies".

Rowena craves action and she certainly gets it when she goes to work in a department store. She can handle the clerks alright but one night, Arthur, the dude floorwalker, is very persistent and Rowena threatens to use her fists.

Bunny Moore, another wild, wild child, has been disowned by his rich old uncle and is driving a taxi-cab for a living. Moore sees the crowd, stops his taxi and steps out in time to hear Rowena's remark to Arthur and to see Arthur lounge toward the girl. Moore's fist shoots out and Arthur goes to sleep right there on the sidewalk.

And then the fun starts. What happens in the life of the big city when this wild, wild pair gets together is enough to fill seven reels with a thousand gasps and laughs and thrills and an extra portion of pleasant romance. Bebe will wear the very latest modes and be in her element in this fast light comedy. It is modern, metropolitan, fresh, original, vastly, entertaining — the sort of quick-moving joy-romance that audiences are enthusiastic about these days. It is as up-to-date as to-morrow's newspaper and lends itself to a spectacular production that will be great news for any box-office. All in all, a de-luxe knockout.

RAYMOND GRIFFITH would be the last man in the world to hail himself as the new comedy king. But the truth is, exhibitors and public are doing it for him. The fact won't be downed that he is a real comedian of a different sort, a new method, a comedian who has already become a great box-office draw.

Paramount is therefore proud to announce a complete comedy unit to produce the highest type and most popular feature comedies it is possible to make. Raymond Griffith and his Paramount comedy unit are going to be worth a whale of money to exhibitors of every class of theater in the world, and don't let anyone tell you different.

RAYMOND GRIFFITH combines class with humor, good looks with the agility of a Fairbanks. He and his high hat are fast becoming as well known as Harry Lloyd and his spectacles. Much of the humor that Griffith injects into his pictures is spontaneous and out of his own head, so that it is always safe to predict that he will embellish any plot handed him so that it is many times as effective at the box office as is the original. Griffith broke into motion pictures as a writer of "gags" for Harold Lloyd and others; he is putting his best "gags" into his own pictures now. "When Knights Were Bold" is the famous play by Charles Marlow that some of the most notable stage comedians in history have won honors in. It abounds in humor, both high and slapstick, and it tells a romantic love story besides.

It is a wonderful combination of the "Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court", motif and "Captain Applejack" motif and a strictly modern love story, with the marvelous comedy talents of Raymond Griffith to make it a screen classic of humor!

Mr. Griffith is being provided with a complete comedy producing unit. Nothing will be spared to make these feature comedies the highest class in the business. The public has shown its appreciation of real comedians and real comedy pictures and has already registered emphatic approval for the new king of comedy, Raymond Griffith.

HOW often you've heard men start out that way and launch into a serio-comic rigamarole about the frailties and foibles of the poor dear ladies that leaves you undecided whether to laugh or shed a tear of sympathy. Well, here's a picture comedy that tells frolicsomely just what the trouble with wives is, and what's to be done about it. Sada Cowan, who wrote "Bluebeard's 8th Wife" for the screen, is the author. Howard Higgin is directing.

Adolphe Menjou will be seen as The Husband; Florence Vidor will play The Wife. The rest of the cast will be of similar strength. A national exploitation campaign will sell the picture in advance to the public.

Remember—no preaching, no heavy drama, no propaganda. Just a rollicking comedy that takes marriage apart and shows what makes it tick, or fail to tick.

A "COUNTRY GENTLEMAN" SERIAL AND THE BEST SELLING NOVEL OF 1925
by Joseph C. Lincoln
JOSEPH C. LINCOLN'S Cape Cod novels sell into the hundreds of thousands, and he is as popular in his particular field as Zane Grey is in his. "Rugged Waters" is Lincoln's newest and greatest novel. Like one other Lincoln classics, "Rugged Waters" is packed with heroic action, quaint humor and wholesome romance. It is a spectacular romance-drama of the life-saving service, the sort of actionful outdoor story that Willat produces so well.

DIRECTOR OF "NORTH OF 36"

by Joseph C. Lincoln Screenplay by James Hamilton

ONE of the best-selling novels in the country at this moment, rich in Lincoln's humor and quaint Cape Cod characters. A story of the storms and dangers of the New England coast, of a life-saver and his battle to keep the record of his life-saving station clean, though ambition and love and even honor tempt him to forget that duty. It begins with a terrific storm in which two men stand out prominently in the coast life-saving service. One of them, Calvin Homer, in temporary command of his station, leads his crew in a heroic rescue and qualifies to become a permanent commander. The other, Bartlett, older and belonging to another crew, has to be rescued himself, but in such spectacular circumstances that he becomes a national hero and is given the command that Homer expected and deserved. This man's terrible experience in the recent storm has shattered his nerve, and his acts as commander threaten not only to destroy the reputation of the station but also endanger many human lives. Homer's struggle to keep the station up to its mark in spite of a weak commander is complicated by two girls, one of whom, Myra Fuller, represents his ambition, and the other — the commander's daughter Norma — love and loyalty.

Calvin rescues Norma from drowning and, with her limp body in his arms, kisses her passionately. She responds and leaves him, believing they are engaged. Calvin writes a letter to Myra Fuller, telling her he loves another woman, but hasn't the nerve to send it.

In a storm a ship goes on the rocks, and Bartlett, stricken dumb with cowardice, refuses to allow the life boats to go out. Calvin, in a rage, usurps command and supervises the thrilling rescue of the crew of the wrecked vessel. Bartlett is taken sick and Norma, coming to care for him, encounters a garrulous villager who tells her that Calvin Homer mutinied against her father and that, moreover, Calvin has jilted Myra Fuller. Norma is turned against Calvin.

As a result of this, Calvin, now in temporary command of the station, in the midst of a winter of almost continuous shipwrecks, plunges into his work so hard, to forget Norma, that he is soon on the verge of a breakdown. There is another big wreck, and Bartlett, delirious and raving, rushes out of the house, into a lifeboat, and starts rowing out to the wreck amid the crashing breakers. Calvin, also ill, rushes after him and recues him at the risk of his own life.

Calvin becomes desperately ill, so bad that he cannot be told that Bartlett has died. In his delirium, Calvin talks of Norma, and his kindly old nurse goes to Norma and clears matters up. The whole story of the struggle is full of humor, heart interest and thrills, with a most heroic finish.

There is back of this picture the prestige of a real (not just an unproven) best seller by one of America's most popular authors. "Rugged Waters" is one of the most important and outstanding sold-to-the-public-in-advance productions of all the Golden Forty.

THERE is a point in the life of every great artist when, if he is free from cares, he can produce his greatest works.

Everything that has gone before, however distinguished, served but as preparation for what is to follow.

Some critics feel they can pick out the place where Shakespeare's art reached its richest period.

So it is with that master director, David Wark Griffith, who will soon be at work on a series of Paramount Pictures.

In complete freedom from all worry and with all the resources of the world's foremost film organization at his disposal, D. W. Griffith is now in the golden age of his art.

Every photoplay he makes will have back of it every resource of Paramount, to the end that exhibitors and public may be afforded the finest examples of this master craftsman's art.

There is no bigger box-office name in the directorial ranks of motion pictures today than that of D. W. Griffith. The new combination of the name of Paramount and D. W. Griffith is one that is fraught with many potentialities of good for the exhibitor who is seeking for a combination of the most popular box-office draw and the highest standard of motion picture quality.

A SPECIAL D. W. GRIFFITH PRODUCTION

"THAT ROYLE GIRL"

"THAT ROYLE GIRL" is a picturization of the Cosmopolitan Magazine serial by Edwin Balmer, the well-known Saturday Evening Post writer and novelist. You will not have the pleasure of screening a stronger or more unusual piece of dramatic material this season.

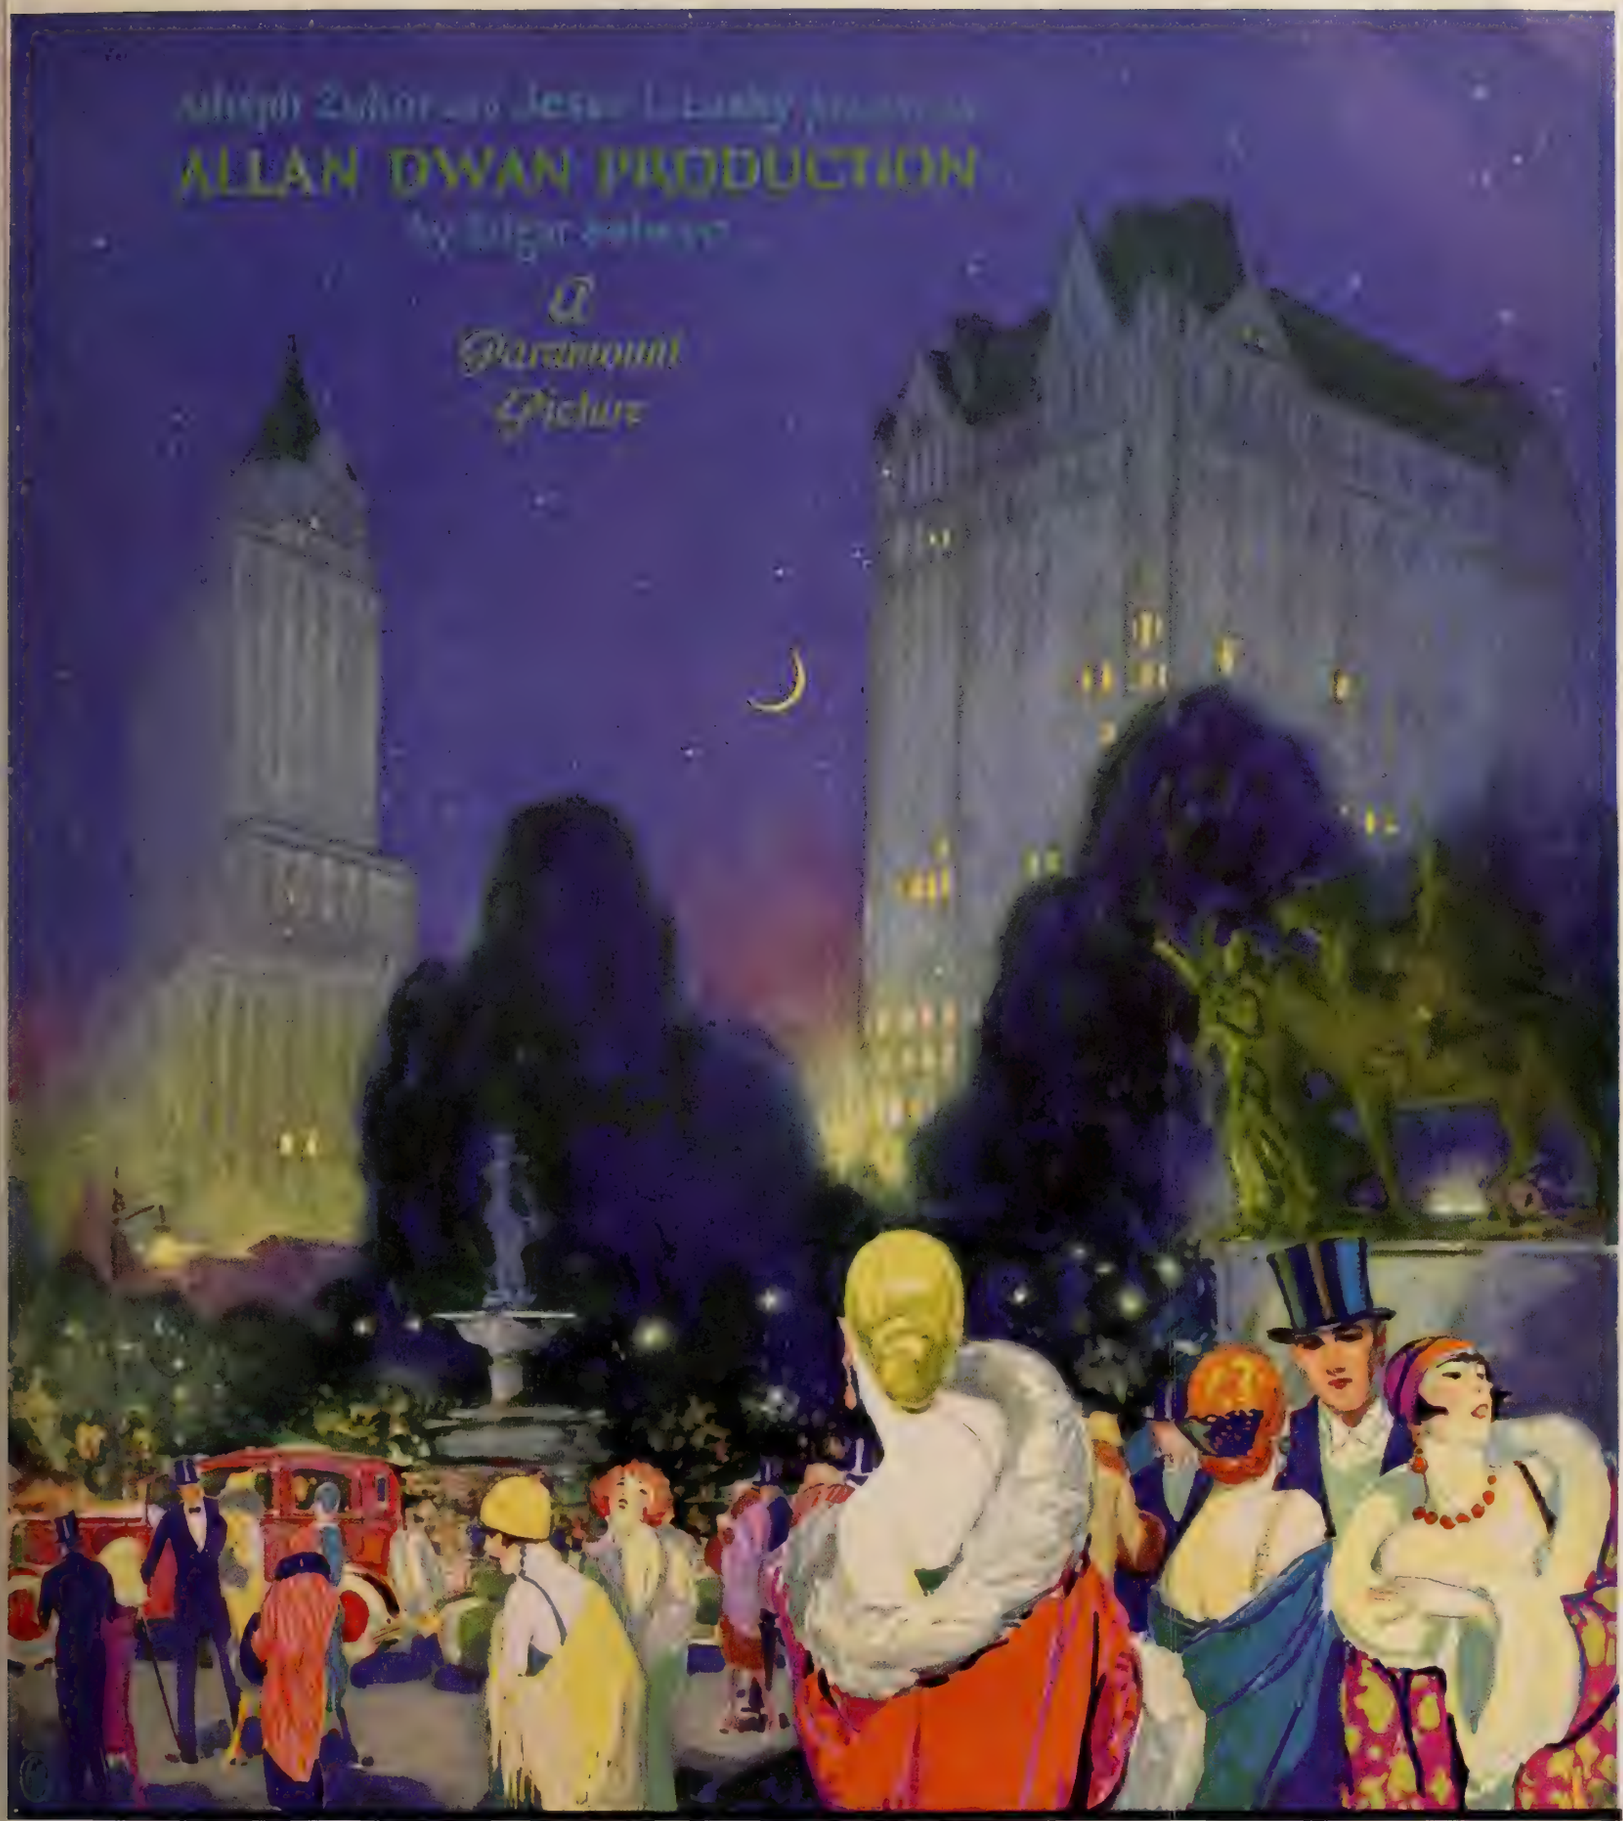
"That Royle Girl" is a story of today, a love-drama of the Chicago jazz zone. It is an amazingly truthful picture of life in circles that border on the underworld of a great American city, — circles where money and morals are "easy come, easy go," where the people divide their lives between cabarets and automats and go to their duplex apartment "homes" only to sleep,— circles that live for most people only in the headlines of the newspapers.

The story mingles love, jazz and a murder-mystery, with a hero reminding you of Meighan in "Manslaughter" and a heroine the public will take to its heart.

"That Royle Girl" is Joan Daisy Royle, daughter of a baby-faced, peroxide-blonde mother and a handsome, educated, but swindler father. Up to the time she is twenty, Joan has led a hectic life, jumping around with her parents from one hotel or apartment to the other, just one step ahead of the bill collector and the police. She has developed into a wonderfully attractive girl, especially appealing to men. She is worldly-wise, loves pleasure and excitement, but there is something fine, deep down within her.

She meets Fred Ketlar, handsome, a nifty dresser, a typical wise city sheik. Fred is leader of the jazz band at Chicago's leading cabaret, the "Echo." He lives in the apartment under the Royles, being separated from his wife, Adele Ketlar. The wife lives in an apartment in another section of the city. Fred is ambitious to become a composer. This attracts Joan at once. She sees in Ketlar a potential Mozart and resolves to help him climb the musical ladder. Fred becomes infatuated with her. They "do" Chicago night life together. One night Joan walks alone along the street where Fred's wife lives. She looks up and sees the shadows of Adele Ketlar and a man against the shade. She returns to the Royle apartment, and Fred appears. Then comes the shocking news, that Adele has been murdered that night. Joan and Fred are questioned by the police, and later by Calvin Clarke, state's attorney. Clarke is a stern, honest, rather narrow-minded New Englander of about thirty. Like the police, he believes Joan is Fred's mistress and that they conspired to kill Adele Ketlar. All his tradition and training react against a flippant, beautiful, worldly girl like Joan, and yet he is at once attracted to her. He fights against this. He is resolved to hang Ketlar and disgrace "that Royle girl."

Fred Ketlar hires an unscrupulous lawyer named Elman. Elman sees the value of Joan's beauty and sex appeal. She is his best bet for influencing the jury and saving his client. He furnishes Joan with the biographical dope on Clarke and persuades her to cultivate the man and study him. She does this. Something about his honesty and belief in the sanctity of the home and other things life has denied her, appeals to the girl's better nature. But she defiantly tells Clarke she is going to beat him and save Ketlar.



On the street one night while Clarke is with Joan, a mongrel type of criminal accosts Clarke in the shadows and whispers with a husky sneer, "Take a good look at George Baretta." Baretta who is wanted for murder, is head of a gang of gunmen Clarke has been trying to "get." Baretta's gang had drawn Adele Ketlar into the net of their activities just before her death, though Clarke does not know this.

At the trial of Fred Ketlar for murder, Joan tells lies valiantly for the jazz king and uses her charms upon the jury. Clarke, fighting between his duty and his infatuation for Joan, shoots her story full of holes and presents a very damaging case against Ketlar. The case goes to the jury, and Ketlar's life is in the balance.

Suddenly comes the news that Baretta, fatally wounded in a gang fight, has been revealed as the murderer of Adele Ketlar. Clarke immediately moves for the dismissal of the case against Ketlar. A mob of cabaret girls and jazzbo admirers of Ketlar's are on hand the day he is freed. Joan is there too. Clarke is sick at heart, thinking now the girl will go away with Ketlar, away forever.

Joan leaves with Ketlar. Ketlar is jubilant and has a big celebration with his friends together, rowdy and drunken. Joan is quiet, thinking of the contrast between Ketlar and Calvin Clarke. She sees now that Ketlar isn't a potential Mozart, that at heart he is no good. She refuses Ketlar's attempts at love-making, his demand that she marry him at once. She refuses to go away for a week-end with him, as he pleads. He is angry. He transfers his affections to Lola Nessen, a cabaret girl, who has always loved him and hated Joan.

Clarke, seeking Joan frantically, finds her and pours out his love. She goes to his arms.

JOHN BENTLEY, a former New Yorker who went west, married and made a fortune, retains a grudge against New York, and has always fobidden his son, Ronald ever to go there. Ronald, therefore, is crazy to hit Broadway. The young man, useless in business, is continually painting the old home town red. After an escapade with a one-night-stand actress, old Bentley decides that the only cure for the boy is to give him a fling at Broadway. So he arranges to get his son a New York job and to see that he gets into as much trouble as possible so that he will quickly sicken of the metropolis.

RONALD hits New York and the fun begins. A mix-up with a telephone girl, an acquaintanceship with all the night life of the city, the purchase of a taxi-cab, and the getting involved with a gang of yeggmen are all but incidents in this young man's New York career. The picture is big city life to the last detail, and contains New York material that has never been shown in pictures before. Dorothy Gish as the telephone girl, La Rocque as the youth, Ernest Torrence, George Hackathorne and others make up a remarkable cast of names for a spectacular Allan Dwan production, lavishly produced.

THIS picture has been completed at the Lasky studio, and we absolutely guarantee that it is a high class special in every sense of the word. It combines comedy with a romantic love story and elaborate settings in a way that cannot fail to please.

"In the Name of Love" was written for the the screen by Sada Cowan, who adapted "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife". This modern story was suggested by the love-classic "The Lady of Lyons", by Bulwer-Lytton, one of the real literary giants of the last century. Howard Higgin directed the special production unit which filmed this picture under the direct supervision of Jesse L. Lasky.

Ricardo Cortez was never so handsome and dashing as he is as the hero of "In the Name of Love". His role is that of a young Frenchman who, leaving his lovely boyhood sweetheart, Greta Nissen, behind, goes to America to make his fortune. She promises to wait for him. Ten years later he returns to France, his fortune still unmade. She, however, has grown rich and snobbish. Hosts of men make love to her, but her heart is set upon meeting a Prince of Como, who is visiting France. She will have nothing to do with Ricardo.

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, who have also been ilted by the coquettish Greta, suggest to Ricardo that he masquerade as the Prince of Como, marry Greta, and then humiliate her. Ricardo carries this plan through. She weds him. But she finds out the trick he has played and is furious. Her impetuous brother, discovering the fraud, attacks Ricardo and is about to kill him when Greta, realizing that she loves the masquerader in spite of everything, saves his life.

The whole country will be raving about the beautiful newcomer, Greta Nissen, when this picture is shown. Beery and Hatton are even funnier as a comedy team in "In the Name of Love" than they were in "Adventure".

And think of the exploitation possibilities in that title!

"The Street of Forgotten Men"

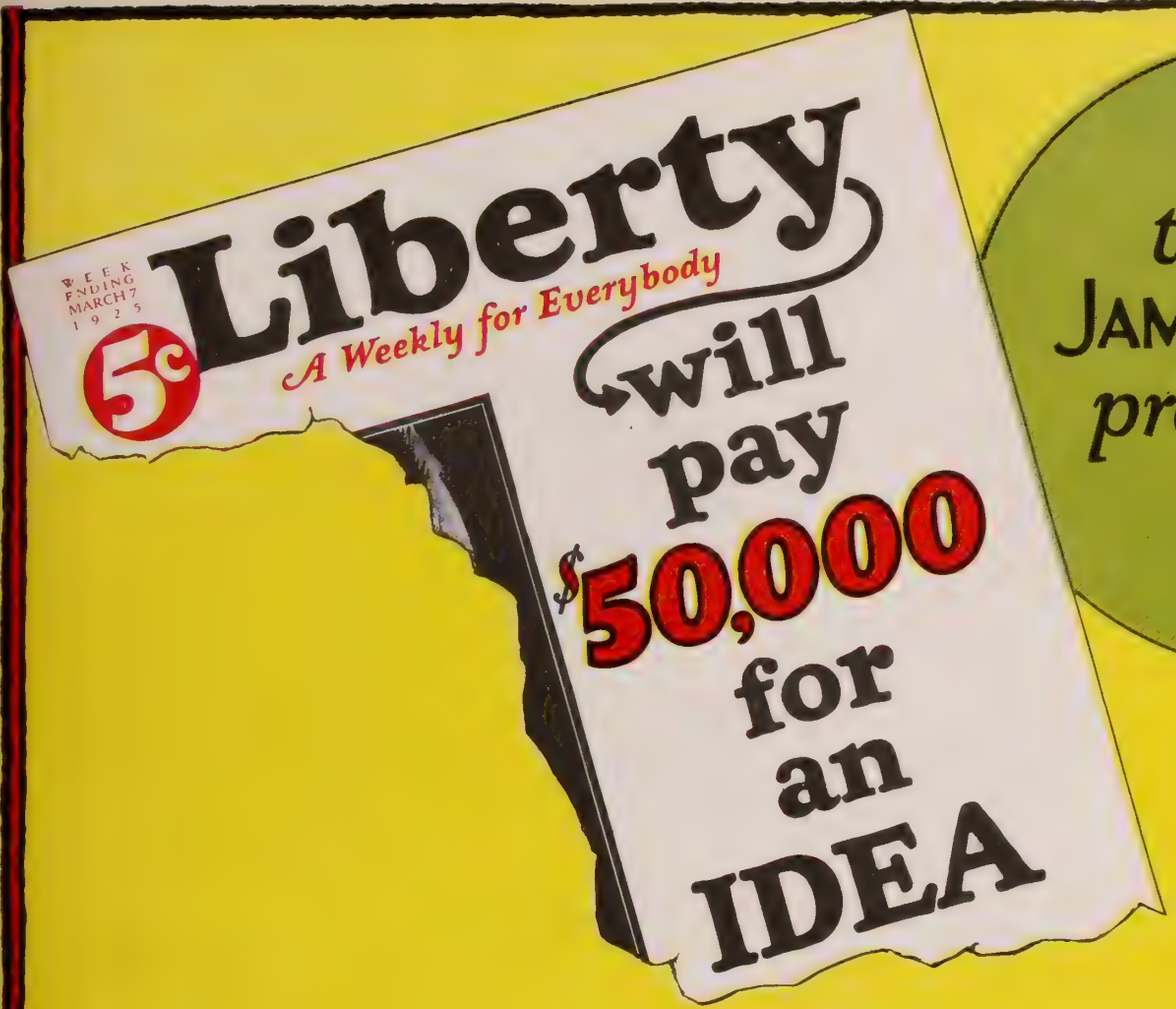
with PERCY MARMONT, NEIL HAMILTON, MARY BRIAN

IF there's ever to be another "Miracle Man," this is it! The story is even stronger than the Tucker-Meighan classic.

The Street of Forgotten Men is the dirty Bowery alley whence the professional beggars of New York sally forth to prey upon the silken Fifth Avenue crowds. Among them is Easy Money Charlie, really young and handsome, but concealing it with a fake plaster arm and ragged clothes. Charlie is hard, cynical, getting rich on his graft. A piece of female driftwood sends for him. She is dying and begs Charlie to look after her daughter, a little girl of eight, inmate of an orphan asylum. In the emotion of the moment, Charlie weakens. He promises. The mother dies, and Charlie sends for the little girl.



He installs her with a housekeeper in an apartment far from the Street of Forgotten Men. She thinks he is a well-to-do business man. When she grows into young womanhood, Charlie sends her to a fashionable school. He loves her now, but he doesn't tell her. He wants her to marry the millionaire who is in love with her. So Charlie arranges to "die" legally, have a lawyer send her money from his "estate." And Charlie goes on working his graft to the limit to give her every luxury.

The young millionaire asks the girl to marry him. But another beggar, a burly brute, White-Eye, the fake blind man, gets wise and threatens to blackmail the girl, ruin her. In a terrific battle, Charlie nearly kills White-Eye. The story develops more and more power in great human heart thrills and the climax is stupendous in its realism.

The million readers of Liberty Magazine hailed this story as a masterpiece. You can see its marvelous possibilities for the screen and can rest assured Paramount will realize them to the limit.

Liberty Will Pay $50,000 For An Idea

For A Story Suitable For Liberty And For A Motion Picture

Gloria Swanson

Thomas Meighan

James Cruze

Bebe Daniels

Adolphe Menjou

Herbert Brenon

Allan Dwan

Here Are The Rules of This Remarkable Contest

1. Liberty and the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation are seeking an idea for a thrilling story of love and action suitable for Liberty and for a Motion Picture. IT MUST BE CLEAN. Liberty will pay $50,000.00 in Cash to the person or persons who submit the best suggestion in accordance with these rules.

2. The winning suggestion will be written into a novel and will be printed as a serial in Liberty. By special arrangements already made, it will also be produced as a Motion Picture by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and will be presented on the screen throughout the world as a Paramount Picture.

3. In addition to the $50,000.00 which will be paid for the winning story, Liberty will buy for cash at standard publishing rates any other stories selected by Liberty from those submitted; offers to be made to the authors of such stories before publication.

4. What is wanted is AN IDEA. Ability to write fiction is NOT NECESSARY. Liberty wishes to give this opportunity to everyone regardless of ability as a writer. Therefore, the offer is divided into two parts as follows:

Part One provides that you may submit your idea in brief synopsis form. For this synopsis you may use 2500 words or less. By synopsis we mean, tell in your language the main features of the plot and describe the leading characters which take part in it—the hero, heroine, the villain, etc. For the best synopsis $25,000.00 in Cash will be paid.

Part Two provides that you may submit your idea in complete story form (ready for publication.) For the complete story another $25,000.00 in Cash will be paid.

Everyone who submits a synopsis will be eligible for a prize of $25,000.00.

5. The words "SYNOPSIS FOR $50,000.00 PRIZE STORY" must be written plainly at the top of each synopsis submitted. If the complete story is also submitted the words "COMPLETE STORY" must be written at the top of the first story sheet and a synopsis properly marked must be attached thereto. (A synopsis must in all cases be sent.)

6. The winning idea will be selected from the synopses submitted and $25,000.00 (Part One) will be awarded for it. If the complete story shall have been sent with the Synopsis that wins the prize and this complete story is acceptable to the Publishers of Liberty, another $25,000.00 (Part Two) will be paid for such complete story.

If the story sent with the winning synopsis is not acceptable to the Publishers of Liberty or if no story shall have been sent with the winning synopsis, the Publishers of Liberty will employ an experienced author to write the complete story and will award to such author the $25,000.00 (Part Two.)

7. Upon payment by the Publishers of Liberty of the $25,000.00 (Part One) for the synopsis and or $25,000.00 (Part Two) for the complete story, the synopsis and the story and all rights to each and both of every kind and nature whatsoever, including the copyright therein and the right to secure copyright thereon in all countries, shall become the absolute property of Liberty for use in any manner or for any purpose it may deem proper. The right is reserved to alter or revise the winning entry if necessary.

8. Through the arrangements made by Liberty with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation—the largest producers and distributors of Motion Pictures in the world—many of the most popular stars are available to produce your story on the screen as a Paramount Picture. Note these: Gloria Swanson, Thomas Meighan, Pola Negri, Bebe Daniels, Richard Dix, Adolphe Menjou, Betty Bronson, Ricardo Cortez and many others. And in addition such world-famous directors as D. W. Griffith, James Cruze, Herbert Brenon, Allan Dwan, Sidney Olcott, Irvin Willat, Wm. de Mille and others.

9. Liberty will also endeavor to make arrangements with the prominent theatrical producers—Chas. Frohman, Inc.—for the production of the winning story for the speaking stage.

Liberty will also endeavor to arrange with book publishers for the publication of the story in book form.

All royalties or other income received by Liberty from such speaking stage rights or book publication rights will be paid to the author of the synopsis and the author of the story. If two persons, such sums will be divided equally and an equal half share will be paid to each.

10. The synopsis and story must be one of love and action and must be the original thought and work of the contestant. It must be clean!

You've been to the movies. You know the kind of story you would like. Submit your idea. There are no restrictions.

Helpful suggestions will be published each week in Liberty as an aid to those who may wish assistance.

11. The judges will consider synopses and stories by the nature of the plot, the originality of thought, cleverness of idea, clearness of expression, form of presentation and wording. Writing, English and spelling will not count in judging synopses.

12. The Judges will be a Committee of three—one appointed by Liberty, another appointed by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and the third an experienced author. Their decision on all matters will be final.

13. Contestants may submit as many synopses or as many stories as they wish, but each must be submitted in good faith. The name and address of the sender must be written plainly on each entry.

14. All entries must be addressed "Stories," care of Liberty, Post Office Box 1123, Chicago, Ill. To facilitate matters, ideas should be submitted AT ONCE! However, no entries will be received later than midnight, June 1st, 1925. Entries with insufficient postage will not be received. The publishers of Liberty will not be responsible for the loss, delay or non-delivery of entries.

15. This offer is open to everybody, everywhere, except employees of Liberty and the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and their families. Acceptance of these rules is an express condition of each entry.

* * * * *

This offer is the largest of its kind ever made. It presents an opportunity to every person regardless of station in life. You do not have to be an experienced author to compete. Anyone may submit his or her ideas.

Because of the size and nature of the offer it is possible that the winner, in addition to receiving a huge cash prize, will become world-famous.

Ideas should be submitted at once. Do not wait! For further details watch Liberty from week to week. Helpful suggestions will be published weekly.

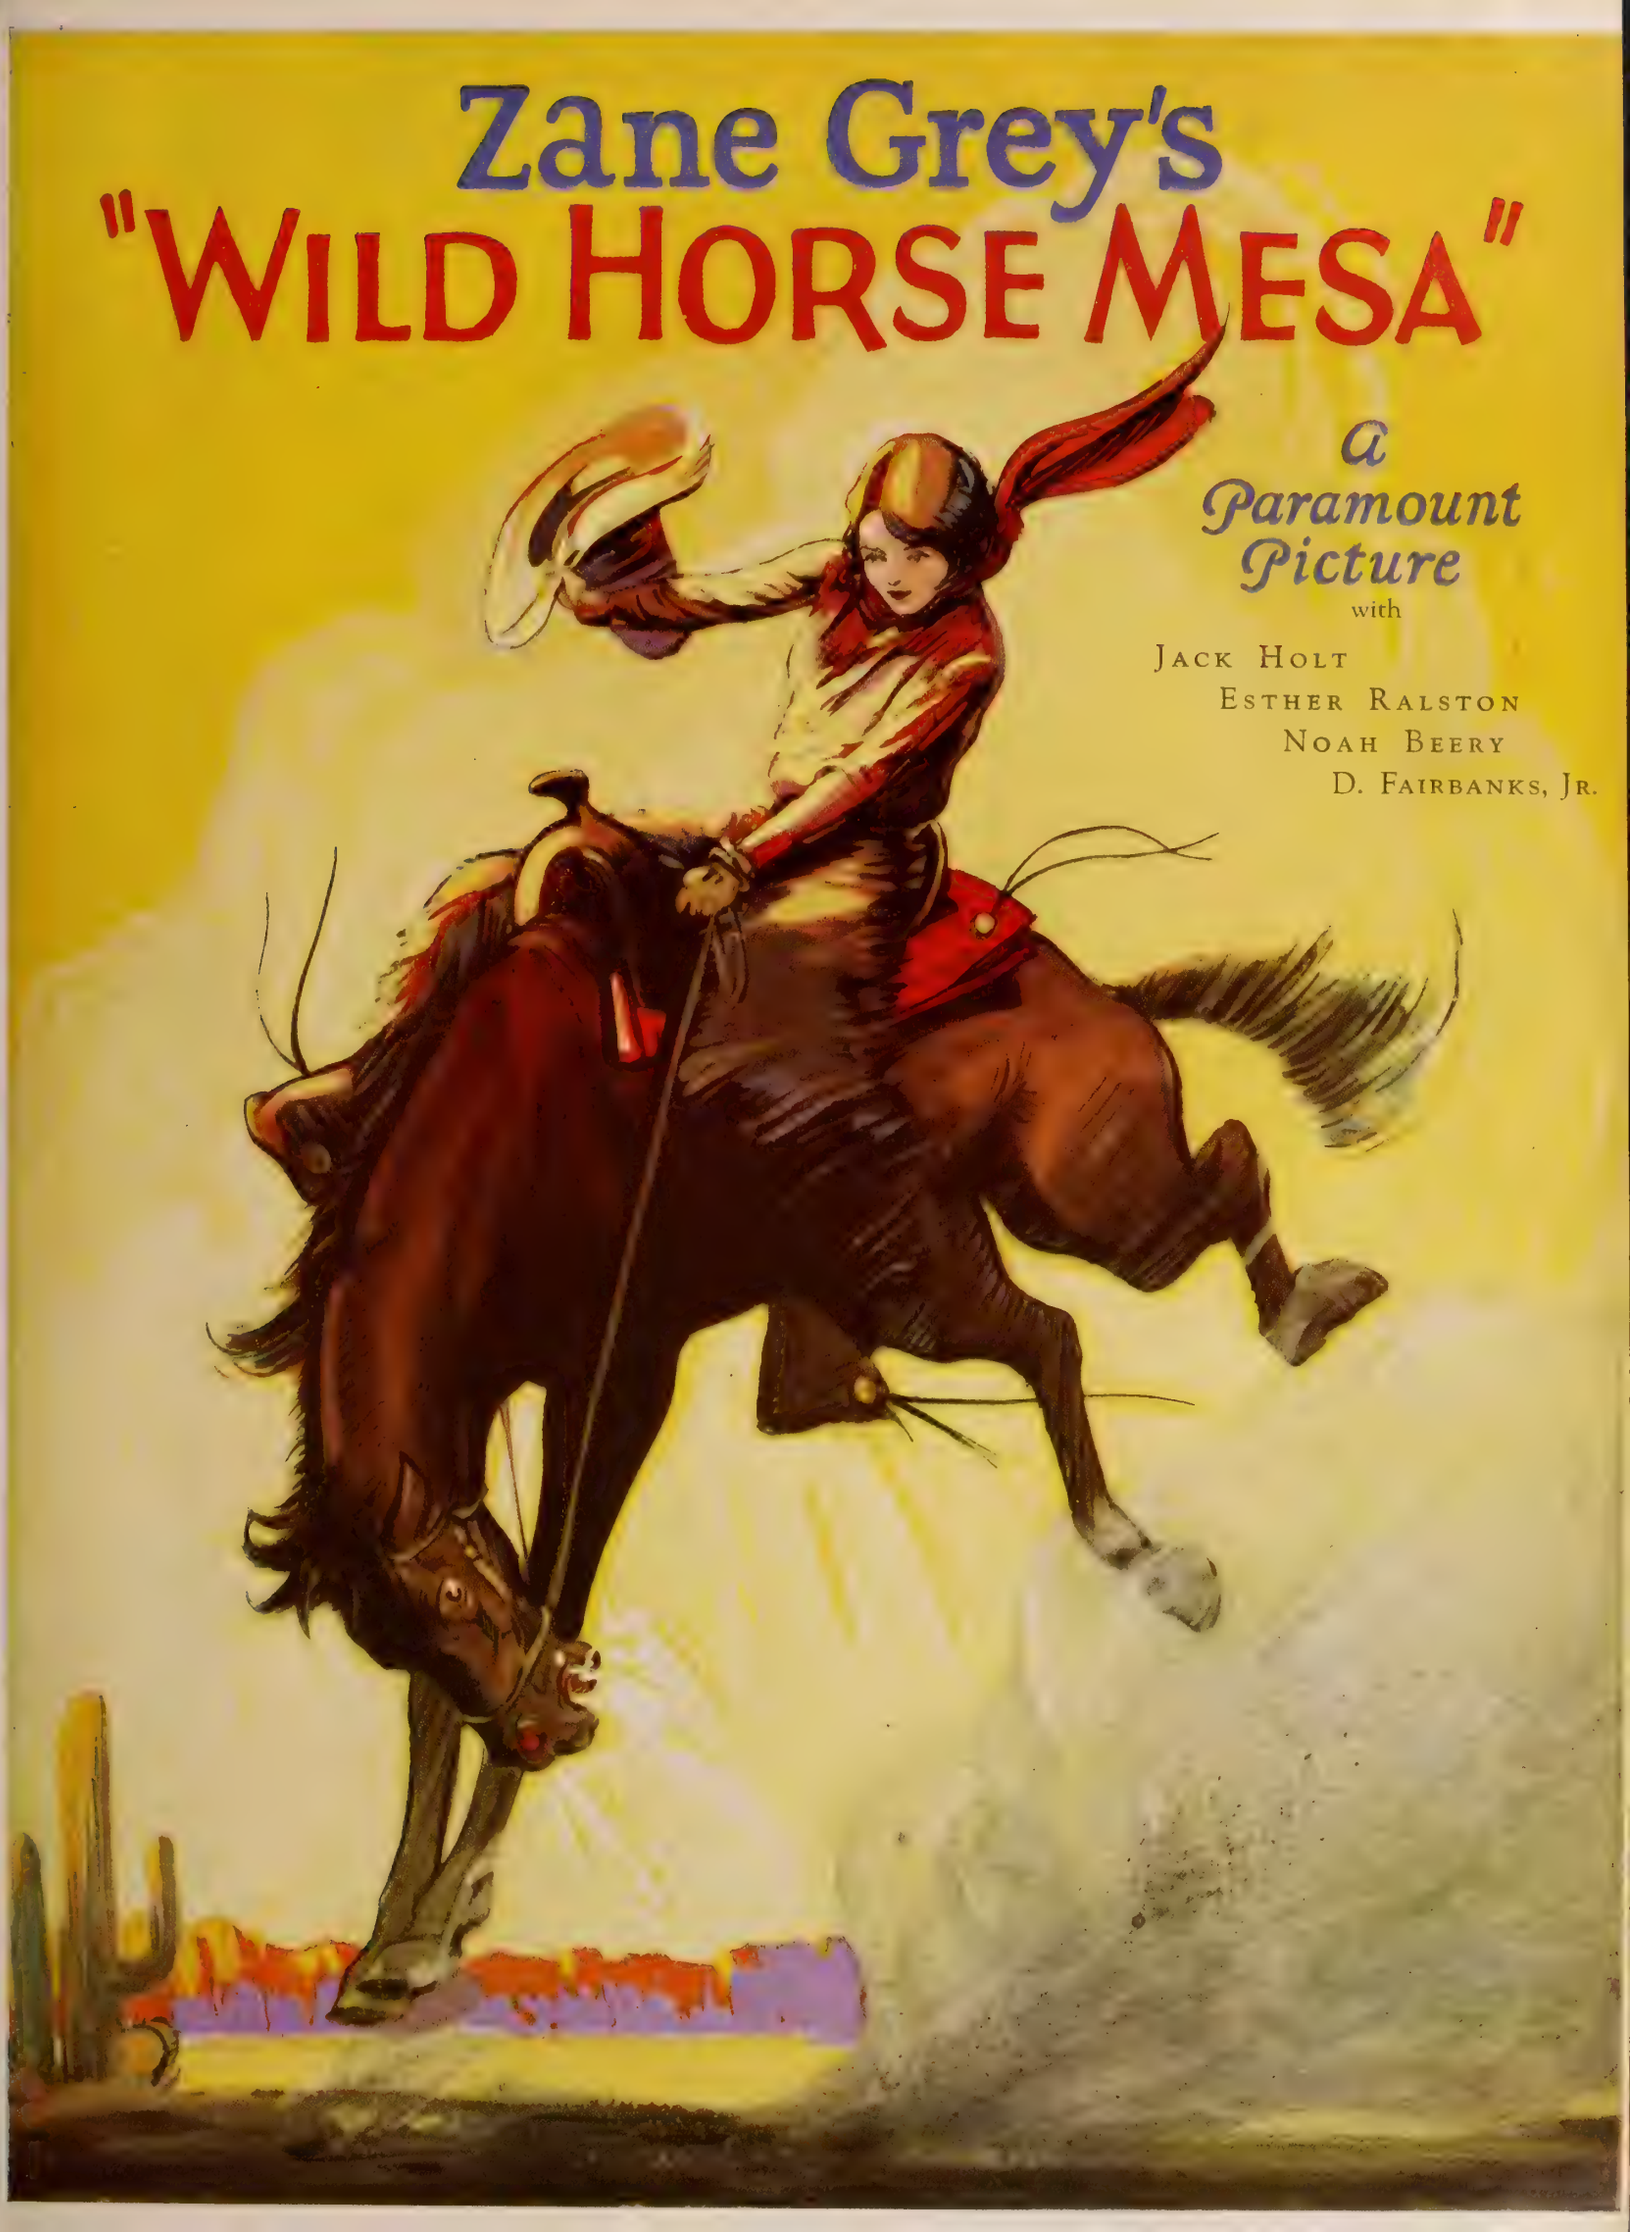
"THE KING"

with ON MAIN STREET"

Adolphe Menjou

ADOLPHE MENJOU needs no introduction to exhibitors as the ideal star to play such a marvelous comedy romance as "The King". For political reasons the king of Moldavia is married to an unattractive woman much older than himself. Because he is of a very philandering disposition, he finds frequent trips to Paris in search of romance are necessary, where he becomes known as "the great lover of Europe". He reaches the point, however, where even Paris bores him and he decides to try new territory. He comes to America, still in search of romance His reputation has preceded him and a very famous siren decides that she will teach the great lover a lesson. The King and the siren meet and the affair culminates in a distinct victory for the King.



Following this he is invited to spend the week-end at a small town as the guest of a young member of the legislature. There he meets a beautiful innocent young girl. At first he tries the usual professional lover methods but when he sees how innocent she is he realizes that such methods would not be sportsmanlike and so he desists. Their little affair is merely a beautiful clean romance, something which the King has never found before in his beauty-starved life. However, the romance is discovered and the wrong interpretation placed upon it. Drama and thrills begin to pile up in the situations that now develop, with however, the note of romantic comedy ever dominant. Eventually the King saves the girl's reputation and unites her with her young fiancee at the cost of signing away his freedom in a treaty.

For the great lover, the philanderer, the Casanova and Don Juan, it means that all romance is dead, but the love and respect he feels for the one beautiful episode of his life enable him to sign with a kingly gesture.

At the finish of the picture the King is seen standing on a balcony of the palace looking at the moon and dreaming not of his triumphs as a lover but of the little clean romance. Dissolving from that we see the young girl also looking at the moon and thinking of her romance with the King. As the King turns away to enter the palace the girl also turns away to enter her home. The King turns to his flag and the girl turns to a cradle, her husband and her home.

EVERY wandering rider of the old West has a strange story to tell of that vast table land, The Wild Horse Mesa, that majestic and unscalable wall where magnificent wild horses make their habitat. And this is a story of the rugged West, of wild horse hunting and capturing, of horse thieves, Indians, perilous trails, drama and romance.

It deals with the efforts to capture a magnificent wild stallion "Panguitch". Panguitch has been driven from place to place throughout the West by horse hunters and finally takes refuge on Wild Horse Mesa.

Chane Weymer, a great lover of horses who lives by capturing wild horses and taming them has set his heart on capturing Panguitch. After many adventures, he joins an outfit headed by a man named Melborne, and including Melborne's daughter, Sue. A love affair develops between these two, which is complicated by the fact that Chane's younger brother, Chess, whom he idolizes, is also in love with the girl. Then, too, there is Manerube, a horse thief, who has attached himself to the outfit and who also is attracted by Sue.

The climax of the story is a tremendous stampede of wild horses in which Panguitch is captured by Chane. Sue, a lover of wild animals, offers to marry Chane if he will give Panguitch its freedom. Chane has been stricken by remorse at the sight of the splendid animal a captive and he consents.

Panguitch is seen leading his band of wild horses up the cliff in the setting sun.

This exceptional Zane Grey special will be played by a wonderful cast in which is included Esther Ralston, one of the newer artists of the screen who is destined for much fame. Exhibitors may assure themselves of her beauty and ability by watching her work in "Beggar on Horseback", "California or Bust" "The Little French Girl" and "The Goose Hangs High". Audiences are delighted with her. More audiences will come soon to recognize her talent and charm.

These new screen faces and personalities are worthy of every exhibitor's hearty and co-operative exploitation if the screen is to advance. The ability, the charm, the appeal is there and is worth capitalizing to the fullest extent. "Wild Horse Mesa", a box office draw by itself, will mark another step forward in the succeessful career of Esther Ralston, as one member of a very distinguished cast.

Douglas MacLean comedy

PARAMOUNT takes pleasure in announcing to exhibitors of the world that, following the signing of a long-term contract, Douglas MacLean will produce the first of his comedies for Paramount release, as one of the Golden Forty. The combination of a star like Douglas MacLean and Paramount is a happy one for exhibitors and public in that it insures the finest productions of the best stories to be played by one of the most popular stars on the screen. The title of his first Golden Forty Paramount picture will be announced soon.

Douglas MacLean

DOUGLAS MACLEAN is today one of the most popular light comedians on the screen. He is handsome, peppy, classy, and has a sense of comedy second to none. During the past year he has delivered one laughing knockout after another at the box office. He has ridden on the crest of this success wave into a nation-wide popularity with the public that makes him extremely valuable to exhibitors.

The public knows and likes the hero of "The Hottentot," "Going Up," "The Yankee Consul," "Never Say Die," and "Introduce Me." Their interest in his forthcoming pictures has been increased by the news that MacLean is now to release through Paramount, drawing upon the great story and production resources of this organization in making his future comedies.

Mr. MacLean said, in signing with Paramount: "I am glad to be back with the organization that released my first starring picture, 'Twenty Three and a Half Hours' Leave.' I shall continue making my own pictures, with the same producing organization as before. But with the resources of Paramount backing me, I am confident I shall be able to give the public better pictures than ever before."

Mr. MacLean and Paramount are now lining up a number of popular stories for MacLean comedies, the first titles of which will be announced within a few weeks. All possible advertising and exploitation campaign will be put behind Douglas Maclean to make his productions even better bets for exhibitors than they have ever been heretofore.

The combination of Douglas MacLean and Paramount is one that is very hard to equal in the comedy field! The acquisition of MacLean is one more proof of the fact that Paramount, as always, alone offers you the productions of the real leading stars, directors, and authors in the screen world.

STORY by MICHAEL ARLEN

Author of "THE GREEN HAT"

"Will she come from the East
Where the South Sea peaches grow?
Will she come from the North,
From the land of ice and snow?
Will she come from the heart of the West?
There's where true love is the best.
Will she come a-trottin'
From the land of cotton,
From away down South?"

THESE are the words of the song hit of the Music Box Revue. They might almost have been inspired by "The Crossroads of the World". The song is one of the scores of tie-up possibilities in this picture.

There's no use exploiting a picture that doesn't live up to expectations after you get your audience in. But you can absolutely go the limit in creating advance interest in this picture, because it will be made on a spectacular scale that assures it of being one of the outstanding hits of the year!

Play with the title. Get permission to erect a sign at the main crossing in your town. The sign reads: Main Crossroads of (Name of Town). The Crossroads of the World is at (Name of Theatre). An arrow could point to your house. Placard side streets with signs reading The Crossroads of the World with arrows pointing to your theatre.

Have a contest to determine which crossroads the people of your town consider The Crossroads of the World. Run a series of little articles in your local paper on Crossroads of the World, taking up a different famous crossroads every night. Tie up with paving concern with this slogan: Pave with (Name of Product) and turn Cross Roads into Pleasant Roads. Placard trolleys, busses, etc. with signs: Take this Car to The Crossroads of the World. Tie up with civic improvement societies, etc. in a campaign to enlarge your town and make it The Crossroads of the World.

The 24-sheet on this production, shown on another page of this book, will give you the idea of what the title means. This stand will make an excellent cut-out. It is only one of the great line-up of sales aids we are preparing for you on "The Crossroads of the World".

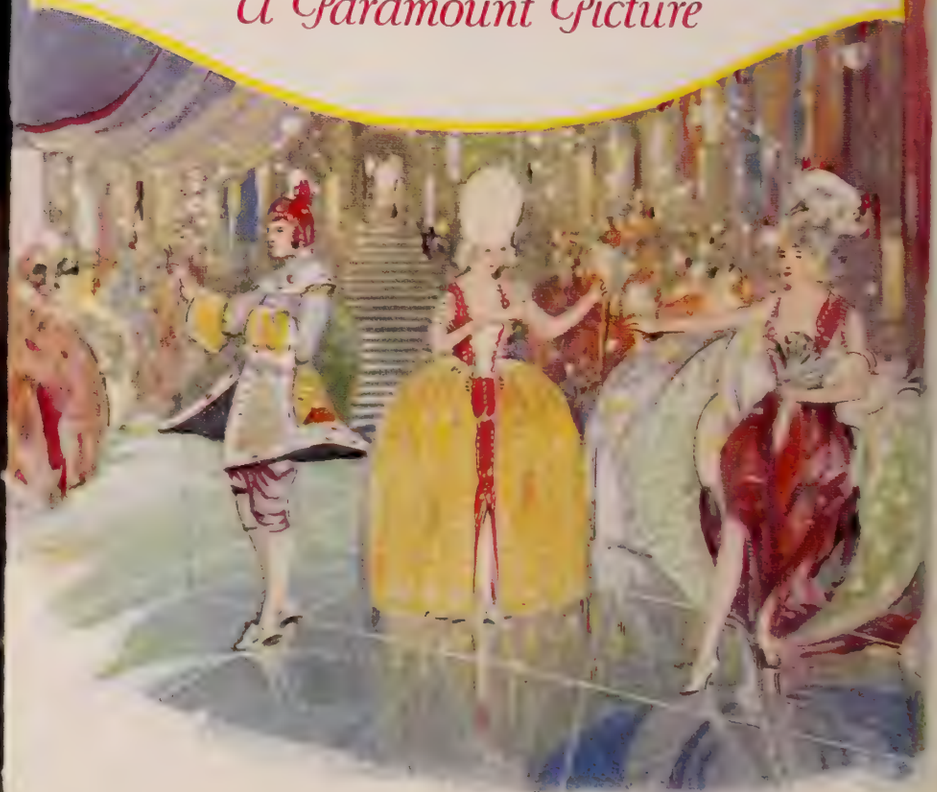
A HERBERT BRENON PRODUCTION



THE success of "Peter Pan", the tremendous appeal of Betty Bronson, the prestige obtained by theaters who devote their bookings to the sort of things that are of inestimable value to the motion pictures in the minds of the public that supports them, has convinced Paramount that another James M. Barrie story, made by the same great director and featuring the same star, to be released at Christmas time will be welcome news to thousands of exhibitors.

"A Kiss for Cinderella", like "Peter Pan" was played in America by Maude Adams. It is not a fairy story. It has a distinct adult appeal, while at the same time it will draw as big matinees as "Peter Pan". It is the story of a little slavey — half starved, lonesome — yet she could call herself Cinderella! Her tiny feet and her belief that one day a flunky will hand her an invitation to the ball where the Prince will pick her out to be his Princess are the only bits of happiness in her life. How these things come about, how the Cinderella story of her dreams becomes the real romance of her life make up a story that only Barrie could have written — altogether charming, filled with tears and laughs and heart-tugs, the kind of show everyone enjoys and recommends.

Without a question of doubt "A Kiss for Cinderella" is to be a big event in the calendar of successful exhibitors this season.

A comedy of the American home from the stage success by Frank Craven

Screen play by CLARA BERANGER

The outstanding success of any director is the goal for which he shoots. William de Mille's successes have been based on a type of stories that require the utmost in careful casting and the most expert and careful preparation of dramatic values. Perhaps the outstanding exhibitor success of the William de Mille productions has been "Grumpy".

It will therefore be good news to exhibitors and public that he has been able to secure a property that bids fair to excell in comedy values, in dramatic action and in real motion picture thrills any of his previous efforts.

"New Brooms", the American comedy by Frank Craven, author of "The First Year", was an outstanding success in New York. It has in it all the elements of human appeal that make it an important and outstanding event of the screen year. Entertaining, amusing, appealing it is ideal screen material and, with this director's "Polly of the Ballet" will offer a variety of subject much needed on the screen today.

New brooms sweep clean. "New Brooms" is going to sweep the country as one of the finest human action-comedies of the coming season. No exhibitor can afford to overlook this one.

A comedy of the American home from the stage success by Frank Craven. Screenplay by Clara Beranger.

A GROUCHY, careworn father runs a prosperous business but is a trial to his son and daughter because his uncertain temper almost entirely conceals his kind heart. Only his middle-aged factory manager, Kneeland, and Williams, the family butler, also middle-aged, seem really to understand and appreciate Thomas Bates, Sr.

Thomas Bates, Jr., is young, carefree, optimistic, a firm and voluble believer in the glad hand, the kind word, the ever-open pocket book. One day when Bates, Sr., has a particularly bitter explosion of temper over his income tax check, Tom makes an ill-timed plea for sweetness and light, as essential factors in business success. Exasperated beyond endurance, Bates Sr., offers to turn over his business to his son for a year—they will see how his asinine theories will work out in practice. Tom cheerfully accepts the offer, and the play concerns his unsuccessful efforts to make good.

Soon Tom's temper is much worse than that of his father. And that gentleman, with business cares off his shoulders steadily grows sunnier and sunnier, especially under the influence of Geraldine March, the pretty girl who has been installed in the Bates home as housekeeper—one of Tom's first kind acts. Tom and his mercenary little fiance quarrel, and Tom gets horribly jealous of the friendship between his father and Geraldine.

Strikes threaten, workmen complain about improvements made for their welfare, business drops and whining debtors to whom Tom Jr. has been generous presume on his kindness and still defer payment. Tom gets a bad cold, quarrels violently with his father and Geraldine, and the pair gaily go away for the remainder of the trial year. Gerry goes to a business school and Bates Sr. to the South.

When Bates Sr. returns, bringing Gerry with him, she and Tom soon explain away their differences. Tom admits his failure and when his father offers to teach him the ways of business just as years ago he taught him to walk, Tom gratefully admits that he has something to learn.

The cast of characters include:

THOMAS BATES	A middle-aged manufacturer of brooms. He is fair, square and honest, but he is often irritable, grouchy and sarcastic, so although he gives his children everything he does not win their love because they do not see that his "bark is worse than his bite."
MR. KNEELAND	The middle-aged manager of the factory who understands and likes Bates. A faithful employee.
MARGARET	The hot-tempered housekeeper who leaves the Bates home.
WILLIAMS	The tactful middle-aged butler in the Bates home. He has managed for many years to get along with Bates and he likes him.
GEORGE MORROW	A lively and persistent promoter of oil stock, but the stock is good.
THOMAS BATES, JR., (Tom)	An atractive, likeable, careless, sunny-natured young man just out of college. He has very idealistic theories about running a business and he feels very sure they are more valuable than the forty years experience of his father.
FLORENCE WHEELER	The fiancee of Tom. She is a pretty girl but is inclined to flirt and she likes money and a gay life. She is not deeply in love with Tom and he finally sees her as she is.
GERALDINE MARSH (Gerry)	A very fine, sensible and attractive looking young girl whose father was a school friend of Bates. She and Tom learn to love each other, but it is not a peaceful courtship.
SIMPSON	A middle-aged builder and contractor who asks favors but forgets to repay them.
NELSON	A middle-aged workman who speaks for the men in the factory.

JAMES CRUZE'S special production of

"THE PONY EXPRESS"

by Henry James Forman and Walter Woods

ON the preceding page is some slight pictorial representation and tribute to the mighty productions made by one of the great directors of filmdom, James Cruze. Since the days of "The Covered Wagon" this remarkable directorial genius has come along the bright pathway of fame until today he is probably unequalled in all the directorial ranks of the screen in his matchless ability to catch the heart of life, the humor of life, the thrills of life and combine them into sweeping and majestic screen successes.

The public is just now coming to look on James Cruze as the great director he really is. No such list of successes as he has engineered could possibly be the result of accident. His is an art that appeals to the masses and the classes, to the critics and the public for he has been able to catch life itself and transfer it in thrilling adventure to the screen, and today he is at the very height of his career.

The public has long wished another James Cruze production on the same scale as "The Covered Wagon"—something that had in it the same inspiration, the same exalted appeal to the fundamental emotions that made his great epic so famous.

In "The Pony Express" Paramount has found just such a vehicle for this director. It is the breath of the great outdoors in those heroic times when the making of a great nation was under way. It has the same grip on the emotions as "The Covered Wagon", although it is an entirely new and different tale and has a more romantic and appealing love-plot. It allows for the use of even greater spectacular effects, of even greater thrills and of even greater comedy of which Cruze is the past master.

Walter Woods who is an important part of the Cruze directorial unit and is responsible for many of his greatest successes is working on the adaptation of this startling story.

Here is one of the great treasures of Paramount's Golden Forty, a picture that is as sure of tremendous popular box-office appeal as any picture ever made.

story

"WHISPERS"

written especially for
Mr. Meighan
by the author.

THIS story written by one of America's greatest living authors for Thomas Meighan, is the ideal role for the star. He is superb in this type of part. Uncounted millions are going to hail this as Meighan's greatest picture.

IN this special Thomas Meighan production, the star will be supported by a superfine cast and surrounded with an elaborate production worthy of his high standing as a star, and of Booth Tarkington's position as a writer.

THOMAS MEIGHAN in "WHISPERS"

by Booth Tarkington

REMEMBER Thomas Meighan in "The City of Silent Men? That was one of Meighan's greatest, and, though the picture is several years old, every print is still busy getting the crowds and the coin.

Like "The City of Silent Men", "Whispers" is a prison story. It was written especially for Meighan by Booth Tarkington, America's foremost author of popular fiction. Tom has the role of the happy-go-lucky son of a rich small-town banker. His family is prominent and looked up to. The bank smashes, and Meighan's kin become criminally liable to the state. Rather than to see his respected father and brother go to jail, Tom, who has always been considered no-account anyway, assumes responsibility and is sent to Sing Sing.

Behind the bars, Meighan gets a new perspective on life. Sing Sing is an iron city of whispers. The convicts whisper out of the corners of their mouths to each other when the guards aren't looking. Alone in his cell, his mind is filled with whispers of what he might have been. He realizes he has been squandering his youth upon the froth of life. The worth-while things, including the good girl whom he now realizes he loves and who loves him, have been passed by in his reckless course. He determines to become a man. His whole life is set toward the day of his release.

Then comes the news that crooks are bleeding money out of the girl on the pretence of effecting Meighan's release. In a fit of rage and to save the girl, he escapes from prison. He does save her, but he is captured and his release is set back several years. When, finally, he is freed, his family, not knowing the sacrifice he made for them, are horrified lest his criminal past disgrace them. They urge him to leave town, virtually turning him out. He thinks even the girl has deserted him.

He realizes the truth of the words of a brother-convict that it isn't prison itself that's the hell for a criminal, it's the stigma of jail, the sinister whispers that follow him. Embittered, he joins a gang of crooks. But the girl, who has always been true to him, now seeks him, finds him, and turns his face again toward the light.

A great story, a great title, with scores of exploitation possibilities, and a great star, this one is sure box-office money.

"THE AMERICAN VENUS"

as picked by America's greatest artists dedicated to the real American girl. The greatest exploitation picture of the year

BY LILLIAN LAUFERTY

"The American Venus" is more than a picture: it is a new and novel box office idea.

Here is the idea, in brief: A score of the country's most prominent artists (and artists of the caliber of Christy and Gibson will actually play these roles) are searching for the girl who most nearly meets the measurements of the famous Venus de Milo. They advertise a nation-wide contest. Two beautiful girls - one from each of two rival towns—are among the entries. Both are in love with the same man. At the grand beauty tournament, where the Venuses from all over America come to be judged, the drama works to a sensational climax. A super-beauty-contes picture of tremendous scope!

A Paramount Picture

"THE AMERICAN VENUS" will be a great audience picture with a gold mine of nation-wide exploitation behind it!

PARAMOUNT has already worked out and will soon set in motion a complete exploitation campaign on "The American Venus" that will prepare the public in advance for the picture and absolutely guarantee packed houses. It follows:

The keynote of the campaign on The American Venus is to find in each one of the key towns of the country a girl who, in the opinion of competent judges, comes nearest to the measurements of the Venus of Milo.

The Famous Players - Lasky Corporation's salesmen will give to the first run account in 200 key towns throughout the country a cup which they can award to the local girl who wins the contest.

The theatre, cooperating with our Exploitation men, should, if possible, tie up with the local newspaper. For one month before the opening of the picture they should run an American Venus contest in the paper. Young women of the town should submit their photographs and measurements to the newspaper.

Special one sheets giving the correct measurements of Venus will be issued to the exhibitor. Space will be left on this one sheet for the name of the theatre and the cooperating newspaper.

Special trailers giving the correct measurements and advertising the coming picture will be issued to these 200 key accounts. Each of these trailers ties up the newspaper with the theatre

The month's contest can culminate on the day before the opening of the picture at the theatre, when the judges select from all the candidates 20 who they thought came nearest to meeting the requirements. Then during the run of the picture — at each performance — these 20 young women could appear as a prologue to the film. The purpose of this would be to have the audience vote on who of the 20 gets the American Venus cup in that city.

The young woman getting the most votes wins the cup.

The purpose of having the audience vote is obvious. Each of the 20 girls in the final judging would be sure to have as many of her friends as possible attend all of the performances and cast votes for her.

It may be possible to have it announced that the winner's photograph and measurements would be forwarded to New York where the winners from all over the country would be judged — by photographs and measurements — by a board of distinguished beauty experts, with a possible chance of a career on the screen or stage for the national winner.

The keynote of the campaign so far as publicity goes is this:

The whole world agrees that the American woman is the most beautiful among all the women of the world. Up to this time the Venus of Milo has been accepted as the perfection of feminine beauty. However, conceptions of beauty have changed, and a new type has been evolved. These contests through the country will find the girl who in face and figure typifies the American girl of today.

THERE isn't a single horse in it.
There isn't a beggar in it.
It has nothing to do with horseback riding.
It isn't anything like "The Charge of the Light Brigade".
It isn't a travelogue. But it IS—

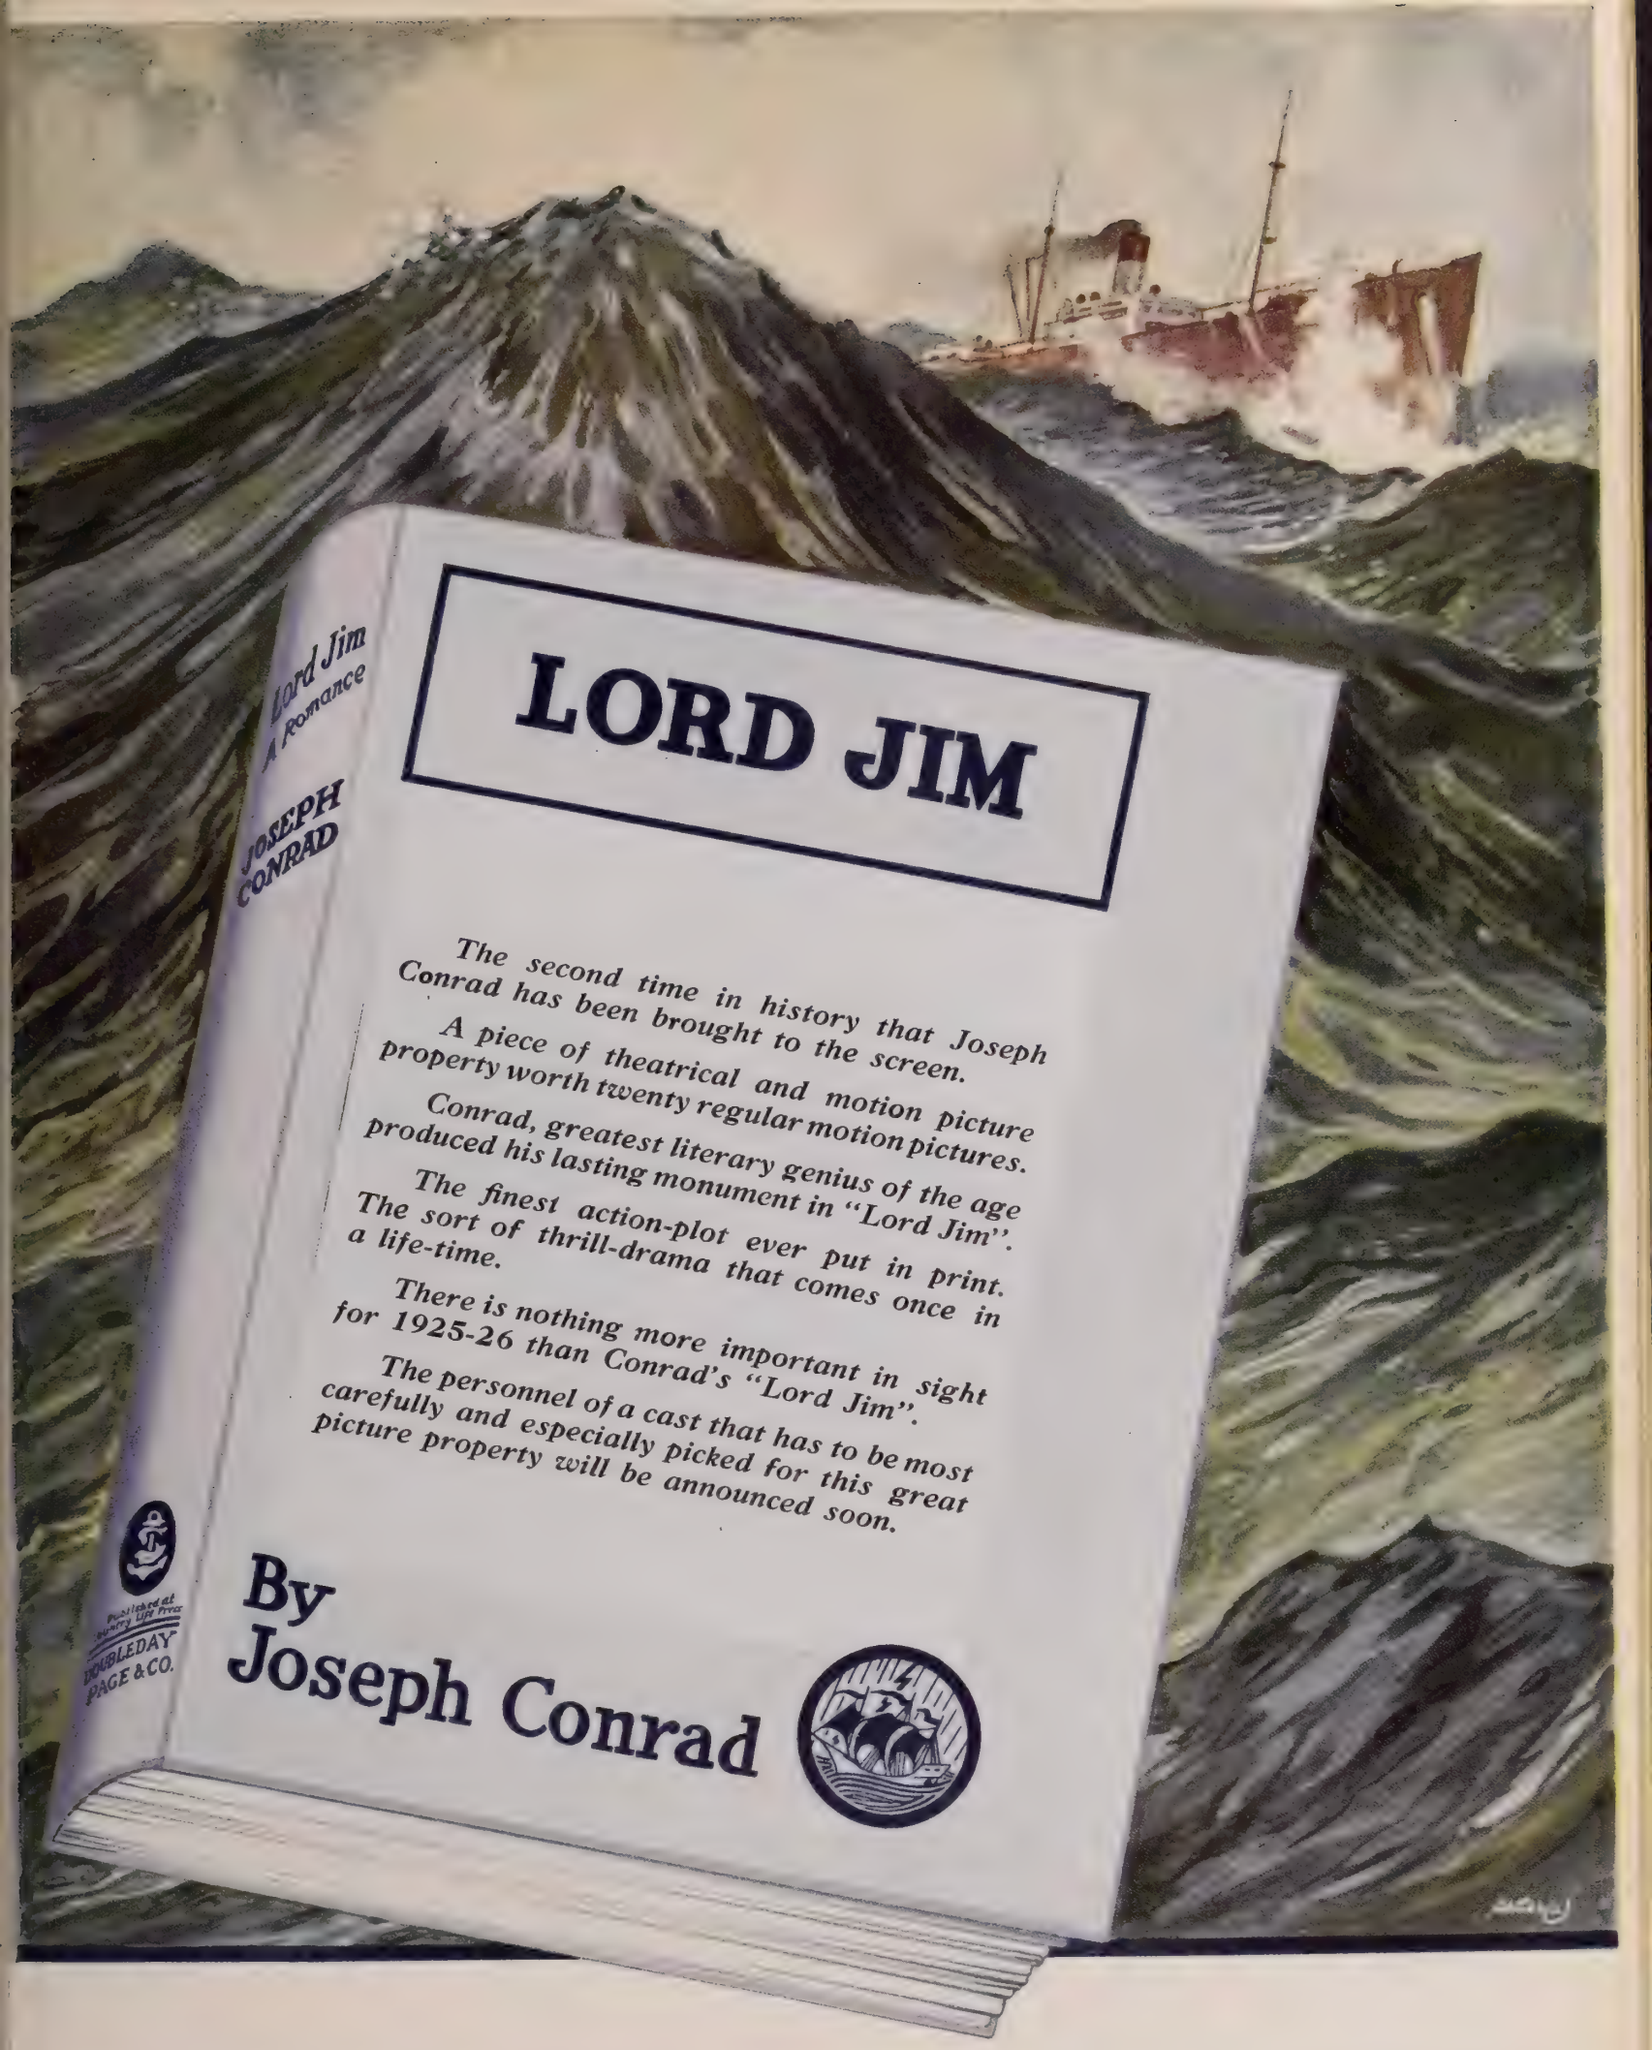
The gayest and funniest story ever put on stage or screen—the story of a young composer whose heart is dedicated to a symphony but who has to write tinpan jazz songs to keep from starving; of two girls, one rich, one poor, both of whom love him; of a dream he dreams which is the most marvelously fantastic thing of all.

A delightfully and riotously humorous treatment of a modern love story and modern affairs magnified into astonishing and hilarious propositions, working in a triangle without any of the baser emotions and nothing but pure, clean fun.

All those who have been crying for something new, something big, something out of the ordinary, will cheer for "Beggar on Horseback".



Blessed with a title that embodies a characterization that we have all known since childhood, this picture opens our eyes to the possibilities of a new kind of comedy on the screen—the kind in which Jimmie Cruze has so far excelled.

Exhibitors and the public will remember the comedy elements of all Cruze pictures as being the most talked of comedy scenes ever put on the screen. "Beggar on Horseback" carries on where all other comedies leave off and builds to humorous heights that are almost impossible of imagination.

Every exhibitor knows the standing of Jimmie Cruze with his public today and here is an offering that will be talked about long after many other real big pictures have been forgotten.

Paramount is proud indeed to offer "Beggar on Horseback" to the exhibitors and the public the world over.

"LORD JIM"

JOSEPH CONRAD

THE great author, Conrad, a great character story, plus action, heart interest, melodrama, thrills, love interest, everything that appeals to all of us.

If you have the impression that "Lord Jim" is highbrow, read the book. Jim's purpose in live was to live down the stigma of coward. Many a man realizes down in his own heart that he is no hero, but to have the world know it and be branded by the world is as bad as leprosy. Deserting the ship "Patna", he, second mate, had failed in the traditional ruling of the sea—"passengers first"—and had thought first of himself to the ultimate destruction of those he was supposed to protect.

Trying to flee from the world, he eventually found he was fleeing from his own conscience—that the words of "coward" that kept ringing in his ears were the words of an accusing conscience, not of the outside world. On the beautiful, lonely and adventurous island of Patusan, he walks into certain romance, certain danger and almost certain death. How, in thrill after thrill, he redeems himself and eventually becomes the ruler of the island, "Lord" Jim; how he married Jewel; how he sacrifices himself for his great love; how his romance, his heroism, his victory build up to one of the most gorgeous moments of fiction.

CURWOOD'S NEWEST NOVEL

The box-office value of the name of James Oliver Curwood is well known to all showmen. "The Ancient Highway" is the latest and greatest of Curwood stories. At this writing it is running as a serial in Cosmopolitan and will later be issued as a book. As exhibitors know, the sale of a Curwood book is tremendous. Irvin Willat who made "North of 36" is going to produce a money-making special out of this one. "The Ancient Highway" gets its name from the fact that much of the stirring adventure and romance takes place on a famous road through the quaint regions of Quebec known as "the ancient highway." It is a romance of high hearts and open roads—an out-door picture of the most virile and appealing type, a story of conflict and love in the picturesque lumber-logging companies along the St. Lawrence River. Some of the high spots include: the hero traveling all the way round the world to Canada to beat a man up, resulting in a terrific screen fight; the hero racing down a raging torrent in a frail canoe ahead of a million on-rushing logs; the hero setting a charge of dynamite to free a log jam and risking his life to save his friend in the face of the exploding charge. In love story, action, thrills, human interest and ready made box-office drawing power, Curwood's "Ancient Highway" will not be excelled as a box-office draw this season.

ALLAN DWAN PRODUCTION

"CONQUERED"

ANOTHER corking box office story written especially for Gloria Swanson, "Conquered" abounds in the broad comedy, the humanness, and the intimate heart appeal that made the same author's "Manhandled" so popular.

Imagine Gloria in boy's clothes, invading a secret meeting of New York gangsters and forcing them to come through with her share of the swag. Imagine her as nurse, a trim vision in white, sweeping the young man patient with those languid eyes as her fingers count his racing heart beats. Imagine her invading society in gorgeous gowns to convince a grouchy millionaire that she is good enough to marry his son.

In short, imagine Gloria Swanson in "Conquered", and it doesn't take any further imagination to know it's a winner!

Gloria in "Conquered" is Tiny McCann, orphan girl of New York slums, whose chief failing is for helping people, crude and laughable as her remedies often are. Jimmy, gangster and bootlegger, thinks Tiny is his girl. Tiny works in a laundry for a time but is accused of theft by another girl and, though innocent, has to get out. She doesn't particularly care, for her ambition is to become a trained nurse. Her chance comes when Buddy, a little crippled boy is run down by an auto. Tiny is with him when the ambulance comes with the doctor. The latter is attracted by Tiny and lands her an appointment as a probationer in his hospital.

Meantime, Jimmy Logan has held up a truck driven by Billy Stone, really the son of a millionaire seeking to prove to his father that he can make his own living. Billy comes to the slums in search of his assailants and runs into Jimmy abusing Tiny. He promptly beats the gangster up and wins the heart of Tiny. When he finds she is studying to be a trained nurse, Billy gets a job as ambulance driver at the same hospital.

After a series of highly laughable happenings, Tiny gets to be a trained nurse and is sent to the home of Wilbur Stone, Billy's eccentric father, to nurse him. She quickly overcomes the old boy's grouchiness and becomes a favorite with him. She tries to effect a reconciliation between Billy and his father—but the latter is obdurate and forbids his son the house.

Jimmy Logan and his pals attempt a robbery of the Stone house. Tiny encounters them in the dark, and Jimmy shoots and runs. Tiny is hit, fatally, it is feared at first. She calls for Billy, and Wilbur Stone gives in and admits him. When Tiny recovers, the millionaire no longer opposes their romance. To make matters even brighter, little Buddy, Tiny's favorite, regains the use of his legs and is no longer a cripple.

Innumerable laughs and entertaining bits of business have been written into "Conquered", aside from the main plot. It offers Gloria the fullest scope for her versatile talents that she has yet had.

"Womanhandled"

WHAT better combination could you ask than Richard Dix in "Womanhandled" (the answer to "Manhandled")?

We don't have to tell you what a smashing hit "Manhandled" made at the box office. Here is an opportunity to cash in on its success by playing its sequel, a picture that will instantly recall with its title how good the Swanson film was and make the public eager to see this answer to it by the same author.

And we don't need to tell you what a prominent place in the public's affections this boy Dix has come to occupy in the past six months or so. Think of the string of successes he has had – "Manhattan, "Too Many Kisses", "Men and Women", "The Shock Punch" — every one a rousing winner at getting the money.

Dix is the type of virile he-man the public wants to see, and well the public knows it! And "Womanhandled" is the type of story they want to see him in. It depicts Dix as a big, husky young chap who is always getting into trouble — by trying to help pretty girls out of trouble. He is a wonderful sturdy oak for the clinging vines to stick to when the wind starts to blow. And it isn't until he cuts these cuddling cutties loose that he grows into happiness and a real love.

Rapid-fire comedy, warm romance, and plenty of rousing action pack "Womanhandled". The title will get them in, and the picture will sure make them glad they came. It's the type of clean, keen, wholesome material that will coin the whole family's trade.

RICHARD DIX in "Womanhandled"

By Arthur Stringer

Author of "Manhandled"

THIS Saturday Evening Post serial, the answer to "Manhandled", offers Richard Dix the best starring vehicle he has had to date.

Dix has the role of a rich man's son who has been practically kicked out by his father until he shows that he can earn his own living. The youth has always been a favorite with the ladies and has a weakness for not being able to refuse a pretty girl anything when she rolls her pretty eyes his way. This weakness stays with him in the business world. He gets a job in a department store, but he gets in bad immediately with his bosses for trying to help out a little peach who is in trouble, and is fired. He drifts from job to job, losing each one through doing something for a woman.

Finally, in disgust, he goes out West to a ranch, where there aren't any women, and becomes a cowboy. A motion picture company visits the ranch to shoot scenes and wants to hire cowboys. Dix, the tenderfoot, looks on in disgust as the real cowboys take off their chaps and sombreros and put on city clothes. Dix, the only real-looking cowboy present, is offered a leading role by the director. When the leading woman, who is also the heroine of the picture, begs him to take it, he can no longer resist and acts his way to happiness.

The same frisky, hilarious humor that made "Manhandled" so enjoyable, is present in even more generous quantities in "Womanhandled". It will be just one hearty laugh after the other, mingled with tender romance. The contrasting settings of New York and a Western ranch offer variety and color. An all-star supporting cast will be assembled to support Dix.

Special exploitation angles: Tie-up department stores to special sales of "Womanhandled Goods". Cards reading: "Texas is Womanhandled. How about you?" If you have not run "Manhandled", book it in for the dates preceding "Womanhandled" and advertise the latter as the answer to the former.

The most famous romance of the Bible ever penned!

IF it were right to transfer The Ten Commandments to the screen if "Ben Hur" is entitled to the place in screen history that all give it, then "The Wanderer" will take its place as one of the universal screen documents marking new milestones in this industry. The story of the wandering son — the black sheep of the family, is the oldest story of fiction. It was the first story when the world was born and today it occupies the front page of our newspapers for breakfast. How many thousands are there in the world who have been wanderers— left their homes — breaking the heart of a dear mother and father only to return before it was too late and bring back happiness to offset the anguish they had caused.

"The Wanderer", one of the really great stage plays of modern times was purchased by Paramount several years ago after its New York success. It was never screened until now, because like "Peter Pan", it was felt the business was not ready. We know better today.

Its story is that of the "man who came back", placed against a background of the early ages.

Here is box office, great cast, background, heart appeal, all rolled in one.

And the director who made "Bagdad" — Raoul Walsh

RUDOLPH VALENTINO

IN

"COBRA"

HERE'S the kind the fans want from Valentino. A great stage success in which the star plays a modern hero of many loves. The settings and clothes are strictly 1925, except for a single flashback lasting a couple of minutes, during which Valentino gives the public a chance to see the world's most famous beard. Throughout the rest of the picture he is clean-shaven, a high-powered lover of today.

"Cobra" is Martin Brown's popular Broadway stage play, which ran throughout 1924 at the Hudson and Longacre Theatres, and could have run at least six months longer were it not for previous out-of-town contracts. Here are the comments of some of the critics on the stage production:

Herald Tribune: "Ranks in the top flight of American dramas".

Evening World: "The most sensational play of the year".

Daily News: "One of the most adult and virile of the season's dramas".

Martin Brown, author of "Cobra", is the well known writer of "Great Music", "The Exciters", "The Lady", and other successes. The picture was produced by Joseph Henabery, who made "A Sainted Devil". Anthony Coldewey, adaptor of "Ruggles of Red Gap" and many other Cruze hits, wrote the scenario.

Here is the cast:

Count Rodrigo Torriani	Rudolph Valentino
Elise Van Zile	Nita Naldi
Jack Dorning	Casson Ferguson
Mary Drake	Gertrude Olmsted
Victor Minardi	Hector V. Sarno
Rosa Minardi	Claire De Lorez
Sophie Binner	Eileen Percy

Distinction Plus -

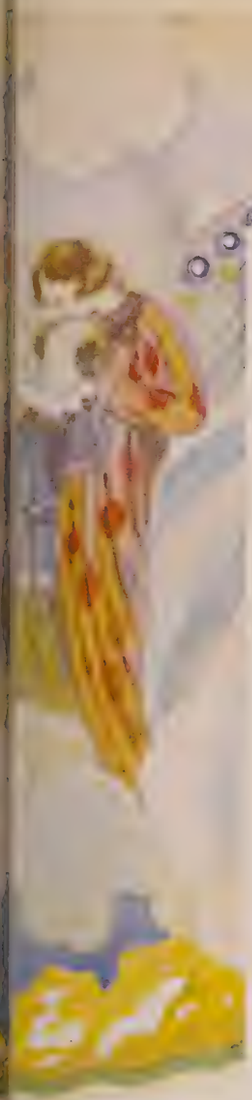
"COBRA" has been produced with the same artistic care that a master paints a great painting.

No effort has been spared to make it dramatically beautiful and beautifully dramatic.

In producing the picture Valentino poured into it the passionate energy and devotion which distinguish his personality.

Joseph Henabery's direction brings out the finest shadings of Valentino's acting talent.

"Cobra" presents at every moment enticing scenes. The settings were designed by William Cameron Menzies, designer of the sets for "The Thief of Bagdad".



The gowns were conceived by a new figure in motion pictures, that brilliant young artist, Gilbert Adrian, who formerly designed the costumes for the New York Music Box Revue. The women will be amazed by the daring beauty and charm of these dresses.

The fine photography of this fine production was in the hands of J. D. Jennings and Harry Fishbeck, both recognized leaders in their field.

In all, a photoplay of distinction.

WHAT is a "cobra"? A "cobra" is a female sheik. The title means the lure of a fascinating, sensuous woman—the hypnotic charm which the cobra wields over its victims.

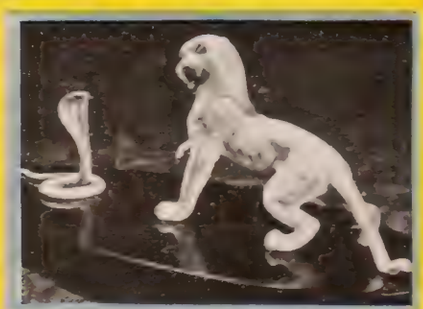
"Women like that fascinate me—as a cobra fascinates a panther", the hero says.

"Cobra" is a modern story of strong love, great drama and touching sacrifice.

Most of the action takes place in New York, although the story starts in Italy. Valentino plays a dashing Italian Count, a modern Don Juan.

The star is hurled into a powerfully dramatic situation when the wife of his best friend—the cobra woman - falls in love with him. She uses all her wiles to entice him. He goes to a hotel where she goes. His conscience lashes him and he leaves, but the wife remains. That night the hotel burns. The woman is burned to death — the wife of the man whom he loves as a brother. That's drama ! . . . . . .

Valentino later finds in his heart a pure and wholesome love for his secretary, but also learns that she has filled the empty life of his widowed friend.



The dramatic struggle and sacrifice that ensues makes a climax unequalled on the screen.

A story that will write itself indelibly on the mind and heart. A story of love, passion and sacrifice. That's "Cobra".

PETER B. KYNE'S GREATEST STORY

"THE ENCHANTED HILL"

An IRVIN WILLAT Production
Director of "North of 36"

with JACK HOLT, FLORENCE VIDOR, RAYMOND HATTON

ON a certain spring day two momentous things happened to Lee Purdy, ex-avitor, dreamer and owner of a big ranch in New Mexico called The Enchanted Hill. Bud Shannon, a total stranger, took a long shot at him with a rifle and a bit later at a desert railroad stop Lee met the loveliest girl he had ever laid eyes on.

With the aid of a quick brain and an iron nerve, he managed to escape Bud's bullet, but his heart had no such easy escape from Gail Ormsby.

So Peter Kyne begins this new story with a thrilling mystery and a girl, and from these two elements springs one of the most gorgeous novels the author of "Never the Twain Shall Meet," "The Pride of Palomar" and "Kindred of the Dust," has written. The name of Peter B. Kyne is one of the biggest drawing names in the business.

"The Enchanted Hill" is Kyne's latest novel and just stopped running a few months ago in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Millions of people know and like the story and are waiting for it on the screen.

It is a rugged, thrilling, action-story of the West and will be produced on the screen by Irvin Willat, who made the sensationally successful "North of 36."

The story gets its title from the fact that Purdy's ranch house has been built on a very high hill commanding the country for miles around. So magnificent is the view that he calls it "The Enchanted Hill."

"The Enchanted Hill" is a fast moving, colorful story of action every minute. There are wild rides, airplane fights, gun fights. There is also plenty of comedy relief and romance.

In other words, here is a big special, a sold-in-advance-to-the-public picture in every sense of the word.

This picture, like "That Royle Girl" and "The Ancient Highway" by special arrangement, will receive a big exploitation and publicity campaign in all the Hearst newspapers in the United States.

A Paramount Picture

"The Best People"

WHO are the best people? Chauffeurs and chorus girls or the children of the rich? Which class has the better brains and morals?

"The Best People" tells you.

Box office is written all over this story, which will be picturized by Sidney Olcott from the stage comedy that was so highly successful recently at the Hudson Theatre, New York, and which ran for over a year in Chicago prior to its Broadway engagement.

Laughs, flashy scenes of New York night life, society boudoirs, back-stage theatrical episodes, and racing limousines fill this brilliant entertainment. It is packed with youth, color, swift pace, pretty girls and gowns, and wonderful comedy situations.

The picture portrays a rich New York family (some of "the best people") horrified because the good-for-nothing son wants to marry a chorus girl and the flapper daughter is crazy over the family chauffeur. The father starts an angry investigation. He arranges a meeting with the chorus girl in a notorious New York night club with the idea of buying her off. He discovers, to his surprise, that she is a sensible, hard-working girl and about the only good influence in his son's life.

He investigates the chauffeur and finds out the fellow is honest, comes of a good family, sincerely loves the daughter and has been the means of saving her reputation.

After many rapid-fire complications, the millionaire father and mother are brought into the position where they have almost to beg the chorus girl and chauffeur to marry their children.

Exploitation ideas: Teasers like "Who Are The Best People", "Are You One of The Best People?", etc. Start a discussion whether marriages of mixed classes pan out happily. Tie up with merchants with placards reading "We Serve The Best People". Get out stickers reading "Reserved for The Best People" and stick them around where they won't get you into trouble.

"The Best People" is a comedy-drama with a cheerful, flashy back-ground and carrying a real idea and a good lesson besides.

PARAMOUNT is fortunate in securing for Betty Bronson a story especially written for her by Eleanor Gates, author of the great success, "The Poor Little Rich Girl". "The Golden Princess" is the story of a poor American girl who becomes the counterfeit daughter of a real queen. Her life of riches, her love romance and what happens to her when the masquerade is over makes a poignant story of the most intense romantic charm. Clarence Badger who made "New Lives for Old", is to direct.

BETTY BRONSON, already the idol of thousands, the girl who sprang to a deserved fame almost overnight is living up to the high expectations that were lavished on her. Hers is a personality of remarkable charm, a screen personality such as the motion pictures can claim only once or twice in decade. In "The Golden Princess" she has a part that admirably suits her charm and talents and is sure to add the tremendous fame that is already hers.

Betty Bronson as "The Golden Princess"

by Eleanor Gates to be directed by Clarence Badger

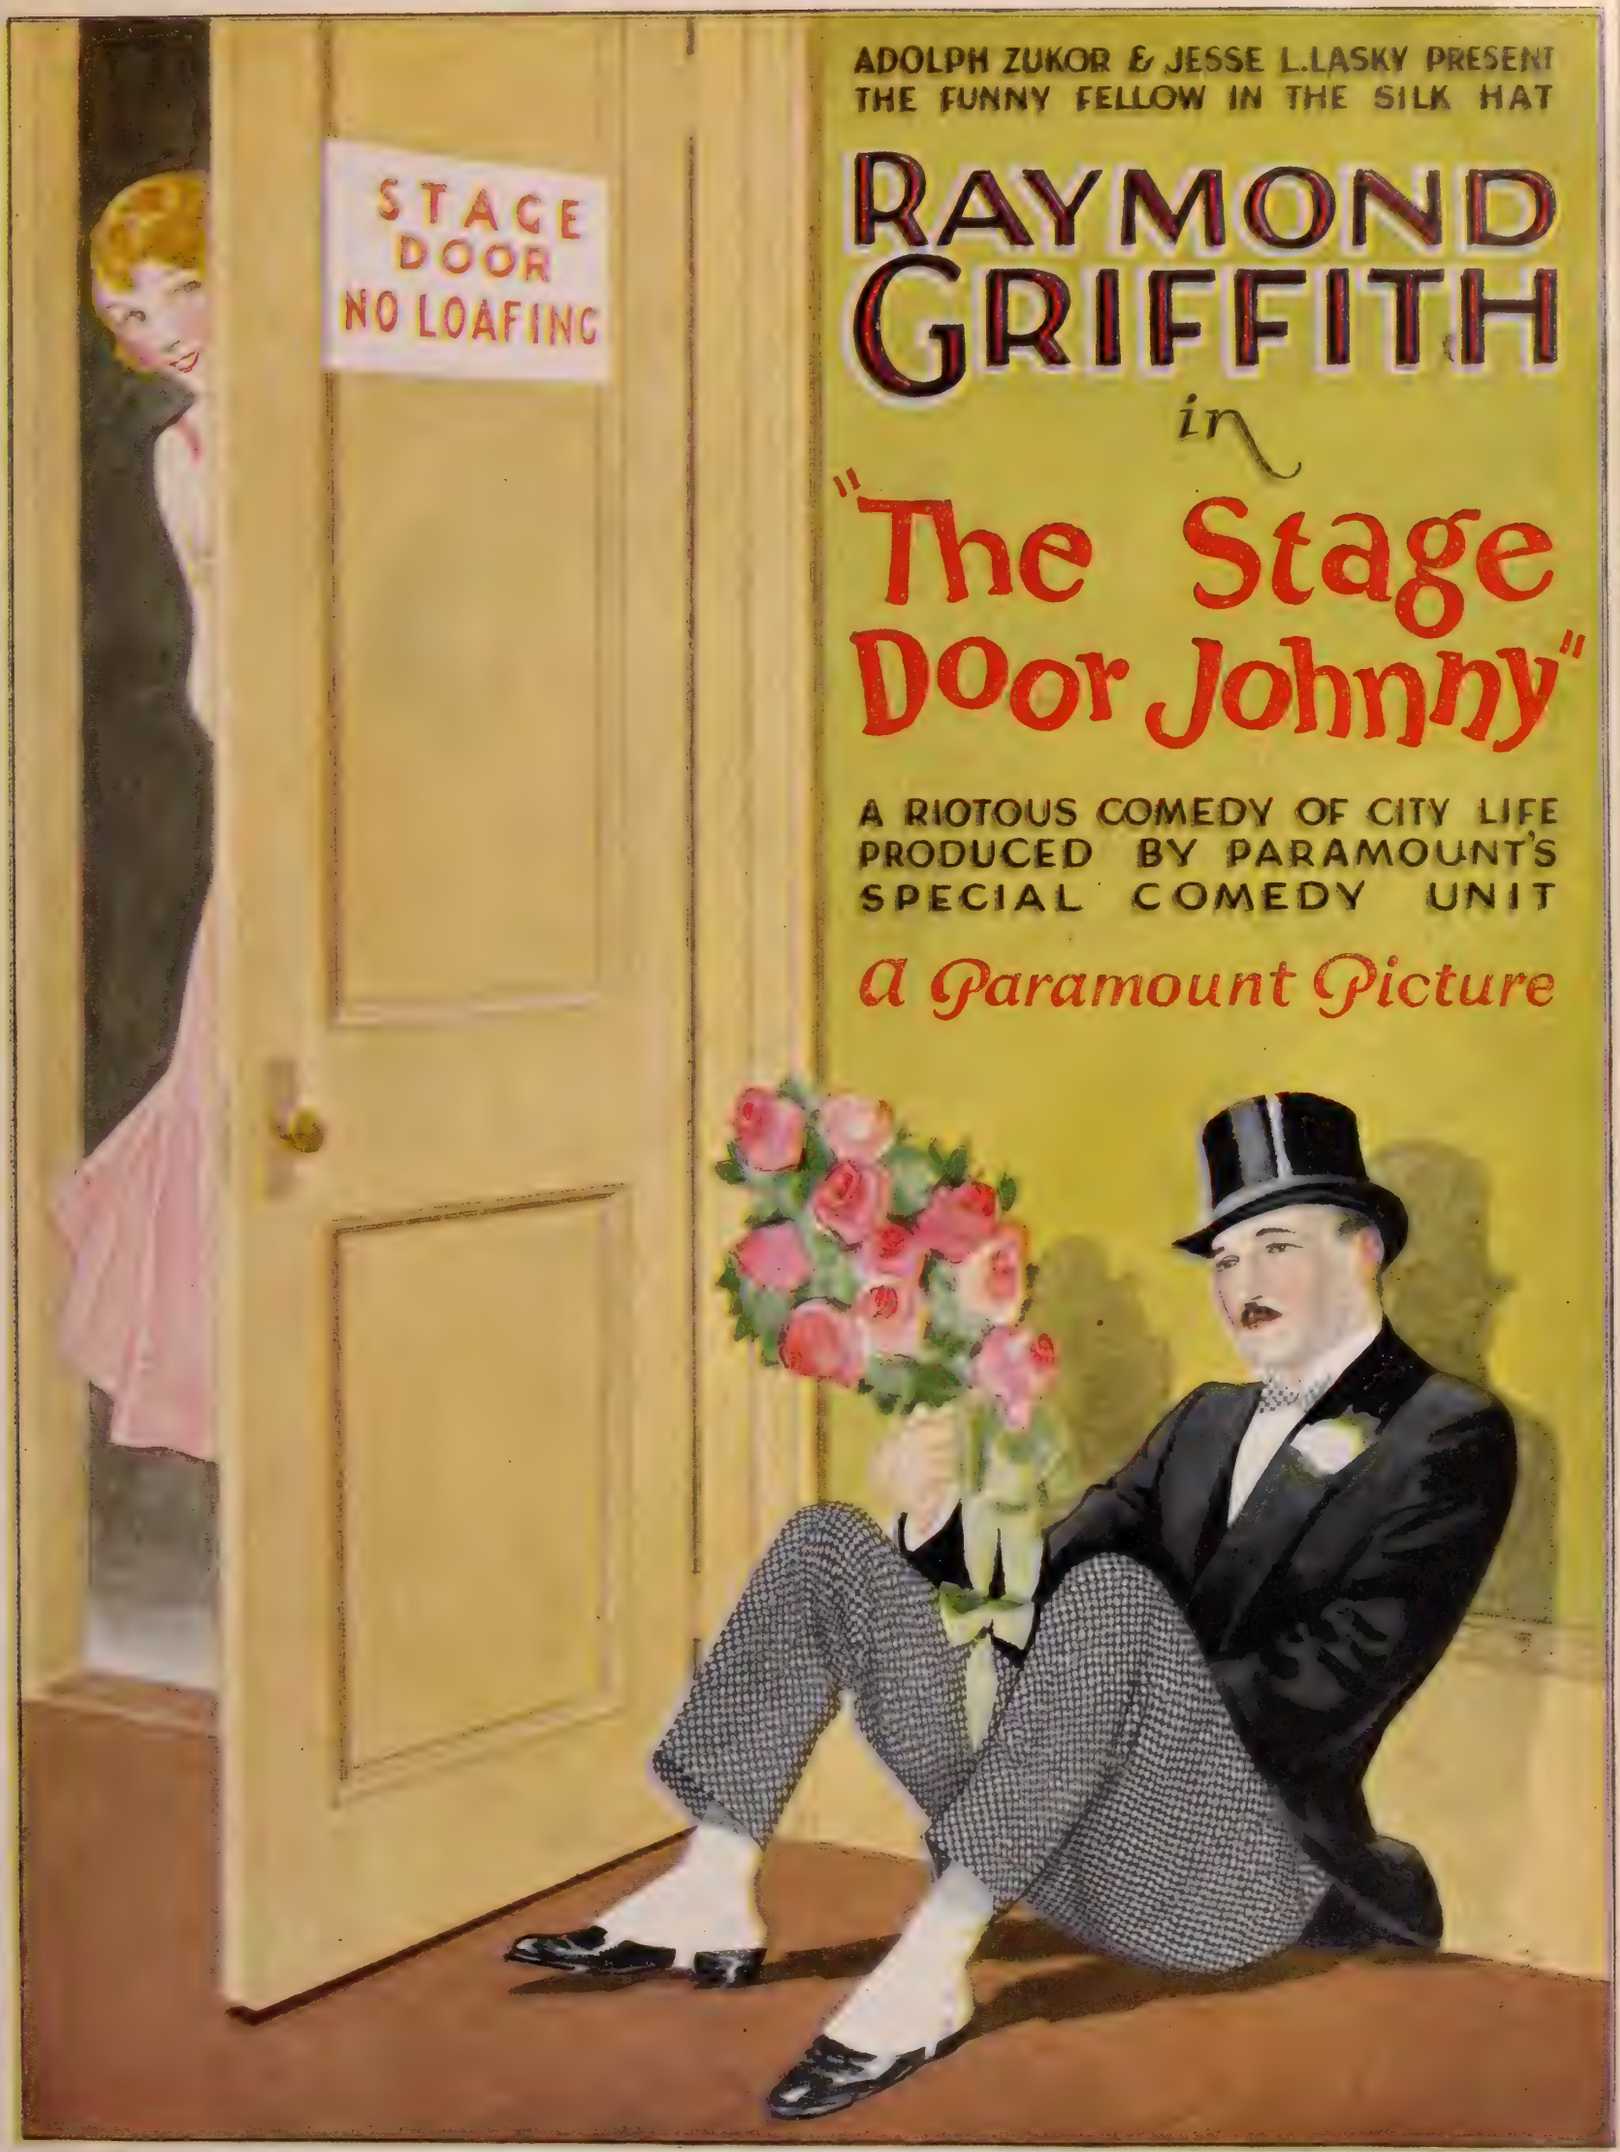
THE heroine lives with her aunt who is seamstress to a number of rich families. Betty wishes vainly to eat, live and dress like the Vintons and Knights, to whom she delivers clothes. She goes so far as as to buy a book on deportment so that she may learn painlessly how to ride horseback, and deport herself like a rich girl. She imagines that rich people are born with this knowledge.



Then overnight Betty is transported to a household the likes of which have not entered even her dreams. Because of her remarkable resemblance to the dead Alicia, daughter of the grand duke of Hesse-Anspach, she is to be sent to that country and act as the daughter of the duchess who has lost her mind because of the tragedy. For eighteen months Betty pretends that she is really the daughter of the duchess, forgetting at times that she is a fake and believing that all this life belongs to her rightfully.

Then the duchess dies and again there is a transformation. Betty is paid off, given a present and some clothes and sent home. No ceremonies longer attach to her appearance. She is now just a servant. Her aunt, she finds, has not progressed as she has and she finds the adjustment to the old life difficult.

The Knights decide to adopt her. She is now well trained and educated, a credit to any family; but Betty knows her duty to her aunt and appreciating her sacrifices, refuses to go with the Knights. The Vintons invite her to visit them and she rides with Stephen. Her dream comes true! One sees the happy ending in view.

The latter part of the story is highly dramatic, developing the character of the girl after she has come back to the simple life, showing that she still has fine and heroic qualities in her. The hero who is not touched upon in this sketchy synopsis, is a wealthy young man who has been thrown out by his own family because he wanted to marry a poor girl, the heroine, and he goes through considerable difficulty and self-sacrifice for her sake before they are united.

He is the silk hat comedian of the screen. He has a remarkable flair for the sort of thing that audiences respond to and he has, above all, class and distinction. He is bound to be compared to the two or three other great comedians of the screen but as a matter of fact, he is individual, unique, a distinct personality, welcomed by exhibitors and public and destined for a remarkably bright comedy future. To be made by the man who made "THE THUNDERING HERD"—William Howard.

A Picture Of Indefinable Heart-Appeal, Of Glorious Action And Of Eternal Romance.

THOSE who have watched the record of Paramount in the production of epics of the Great West, will no longer question the ability of this organization to produce the greatest productions of this class that have appeared upon the screen.

"The Covered Wagon", "North of 36", "The Thundering Herd" stand in a class by themselves and now comes "The Vanishing American"—the fourth member of this great quartet of epic Western productions.

"The Vanishing American" treats of a subject near to the hearts of all of us—the passing of the Red Man. There is no part of American history that is more romantic, more interesting, more epochal in quality than the story of the first Americans, the Indians.

Backed by an intriguing title, "The Vanishing American" will treat of the subject of the Red Man in his last stand against civilization in the same manner that the crossing of the Western planes was handled by Cruze in "The Covered Wagon". It is one of the most important productions that Paramount has ever attempted and will be made in the same sweeping manner as its former great companion productions—"The Covered Wagon", "North of 36", and "The Thundering Herd" have in turn been treated as subjects.

Zane Grey and his production staff have been working for months on the details of this big picture. Like all Zane Grey stories it will be taken on the actual locations of the story.

Exhibitors and public have come to appreciate the fact that there is a vast difference between a "western" picture and a Paramount western. "The Vanishing American" is a Paramount western to be produced on a magnificent scale. Many of the most colorful sequences will be made in actual colors. A tremendous cast is being assembled headed by a real star — Richard Dix.

"The Vanishing American" ran as a serial story in the Ladies Home Journal where it is conservatively estimated it was read by eight million persons. Since its publication as a Zane Grey book it has increased its enormous popularity. It is one of the most valuable motion picture properties of the last ten years and it will be given a production in keeping with its tremendous importance.

A WARNING FOR THE GIRL WHO DARES; AN IDYLL FOR THE GIRL WHO CARES.

When Joyce Gathaway is a little child her mother runs off with a lover. Her father dies and Joyce lives with her millionaire grandfather. She has no guidance except that of her faithful nurse, Nannie. She is inherently fine, but the laxness of modern luxury nearly spoils her. She drifts into a flirtation with a married man and is in danger of being named as co-respondent, though she is entirely innocent. Joyce runs off to Europe to join her mother. Abroad she finds that her mother is living the career of an unscrupulous worlding. Her grandfather cables that he is going to disinherit her, and everything looks very black for Joyce. Then Joyce's real fine qualities assert themselves and she returns to New York ready to tell the truth and to trust to the truth to save her. She meets a man, who believes in her and loves her, and truth wins out; but the struggle promises something exceptional along the lines of modern society drama. This modern "gown story" with an American background gives good contrast to "Madame Sans Gene" in atmosphere and costume. It is another truly great Swanson picture.

Thomas Meighan in a great Irish Story! There's no doubt about the box-office appeal of that combination!

Tom has the role of a young man born of Irish parents and bred in the New York slums. He has worked his way through school to a position of importance. He is smart, ambitious, crooked when necessary. His big chance comes. If he can railroad a certain man into retirement, the result will make Tom wealthy and powerful. The job requires Tom to go to Ireland to get something "on" the man. There he finds what he's looking for. And a pretty Irish girl. And something that gets into his blood in spite of himself, the charm and call of the old sod. The people trust him, respect him, love him. He fights a terrific battle with himself. When he returns to New York, he fights another that rips the sordidness of his old life from stem to stern!

A laugh, a tear, a gasp, a chuckle and a round of applause for the story and star. That's "The Shamrock".

THOMAS MEIGHAN has never before been in an Irish story. It's an event worth playing up and cashing in on. And it isn't only the Irish (the large numbers of them in every community) that'll flock to see "The Shamrock". So will everyone else, for there's a romance and appeal to a hero who's the son of a mother Machree where he River Shannon flows, that is bound to attract like an Irish ballad sung by John McCormack.

But "The Shamrock" is no quiet Irish idyll. Tom plays a fighting Irishman. Both in New York and Ireland sequences of the story, there is excitement every minute.

There's going to be a big chance for special exploitation here—souvenir shamrocks, Irish organization tie-ups, the revival of the yacht races—everything from the wearing of the green to a little bit of heaven.

Truly a money-making Meighan, if ever there was one!

PARAMOUNT'S ADVERTISING
in 1925
IS DISTRIBUTED ALMOST AS WIDELY AS POSTAGE STAMPS!

This year Paramount's national advertising smashes all precedents for motion picture advertising.

On any given day in 1925, Paramount advertisements will be in the homes of enough people to fill all the theatres in America so full that if anyone yawned someone would be pushed out of the door.

If all the postmen in America could be employed to make a canvass, they would find that the Paramount advertising message reaches much more than one in every three homes.

That's in the city market.

In the farming market they would find the message reaching five out of six farm houses! and that's been neglected before!

Five-sixths of about thirty-one million people who live on farms!

How's that for a new market?

Go get a share of it.

It's ripe.

Riper every day we fertilize it with Paramount advertising.

Many of these people get the message two and three times a month, different and interesting every time.

On the next page are reproductions of Paramount's two great advertising batteries, the general magazines and the farm magazines.

Farm papers with a circulation of 5,250,456 homes!

National magazines with a circulation of 9,256,756 homes!

No matter where your theatre is located there are plenty of people in the neighborhood who take one or more of these magazines.

So ride forward to success on Paramount's campaign in 1925, and tell the people you have the Paramount Pictures they read about.

The country is talking of nothing but Gloria Swanson.

"CONQUERED"

The country is talking of nothing but Gloria Swanson.

"NIGHT LIFE OF NEW YORK"

Allan Dwan's great metropolitan masterpiece. A sure-fire director who gets luxury, great story, and box-office in everything he does. Notice the cast.

"THE TROUBLE WITH WIVES"

A fair, human and dramatic exposition of the greatest question of the day in America. To be backed by special exploitation campaign.

CONSIDER THESE FACTS

"THE WILD WILD GIRL"

A farce comedy along similar lines to "Miss Bluebeard," an adaptation of a story which ran in the Liberty Magazine, to be directed by Eddie Sutherland, with Bebe Daniels and Rod La Rocque.

"STAGE DOOR JOHNNY"

Raymond Griffith and his own comedy unit.

"WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD"

Raymond Griffith's second picture. One of the greatest farces of all times.

"THE KING ON MAIN STREET"

Monta Bell production. Based on enormously successful stage play "The King," of some seasons ago. Ideal for Menjou.

"THE GOLDEN PRINCESS"

Written especially for Betty Bronson by Eleanor Gates, the author of "The Poor Little Rich Girl" — to be directed by Clarence Badger.

"WHISPERS"

Written by Booth Tarkington especially for Thomas Meighan. Heroic story of a man unjustly sent to jail; very much on the type of "The City of Silent Men."

"THE SHAMROCK"

A great Irish story for Thomas Meighan, sure to meet with popular favor.

"CROSSROADS OF THE WORLD"

Written especially for Miss Negri by the most popular novelist of the day, Michael Arlen, the author of "The Green Hat."

"FLOWER OF THE NIGHT"

Miss Negri's second picture is now being written especially for her by Joseph Hergesheimer.

"QUARANTINE"

Bebe Daniels in an ideal part. From New York's current theatrical hit.

"CALIFORNIA OR BUST"

By Byron Morgan, the author of the popular automobile stories, written especially for Richard Dix.

"WOMANHANDLED"

This Dix special is a companion piece to "Manhandled," by Arthur Stringer and will be published in the Saturday Evening Post.

"WILD HORSE MESA"

This is the second Zane Grey special in the group. Ran as a serial in The Country Gentleman. One of this author's greatest books. Features Jack Holt, Esther Ralston and others.

"NOT SO LONG AGO"

A popular stage play of several seasons ago very much like "Little Old New York," which was also successfully directed by Olcott. Features Betty Bronson and Ricardo Cortez.

"IN THE NAME OF LOVE"

A big romantic comedy melodrama based on the immortal play "The Lady of Lyons," modernized. Features Ricardo Cortez, Greta Nissen, Wallace Beery, Raymond Hatton.

"THE BEST PEOPLE"

An important play by Avery Hopwood and David Gray. A year in Chicago, a season in New York, will be produced with an all star cast.

"THE STREET OF FORGOTTEN MEN"

A story of the heart of a big city. Another "Miracle Man" — by George Kibbe Turner, to be directed by Herbert Brenon, with an all star cast.

"NEW BROOMS"

One of the most wholesome plays that was produced in New York this season — by Frank Craven, the author of "The First Year." It will be directed by William De Mille, with a cast including Neil Hamilton, Esther Ralston and Theodore Roberts.

"POLLY OF THE BALLET"

An exploitation special by Clara Beranger. Same atmosphere as in "The Gilded Lily." Will be exploited throughout the country in conjunction with Excella Magazine. Greta Nissen, Ricardo Cortez, and the six ballet beauties.

"THE AMERICAN VENUS"

Another great exploitation feature, to be directed by Allan Dwan, with wonderful tie-up possibilities. Read the plan.

—and for the future!

THE product announced on the foregoing pages represents the most painstaking search for the mightiest box-office material in the history of Paramount. Compared story by story, cast by cast, star by star, director by director with all other available material in the market today, it is product that should by its very merit be of the most efficient and most sufficient value for every exhibitor in the land. It represents six months' releases in the new season, of the utmost importance to the motion picture public. It is six months' entertainment for the world.

But Paramount continues to plan for the future. There is no resting on the laurels of past or present success. Another six months is to follow the first, and Paramount service to exhibitors and public must be thought out and planned out months in advance.

This word, then, is merely to reassure exhibitors that there will be forthcoming for the last half of the 1925-1926 season material from Paramount that will be well worth every exhibitor's attention and time.

On the following pages, some expression is given, to what is in store for the future. It is worth the serious thought of every exhibitor who is building for permanence, for prestige, for prosperity, building not only for the fall and winter of 1925-26 but for the spring and summer of 1926 and, along with Paramount, for all time.

HAROLD

THE decision of Harold Lloyd to release his productions through Paramount means more than a commercial alliance.

It means a meeting of ideals.

Harold Lloyd stands today as the leading individual exponent of clean, wholesome screen comedy. Not a picture of his career that cannot be seen by young and old, father, mother, sister, brother, without a blush.

If all the laughter that Harold Lloyd has started could have been gathered up and touched off in Europe in 1914, it would probably have prevented the World War.

LLOYD

HAROLD LLOYD

THE ideals that Paramount has applied to the motion picture art in all its numerous productions for the entertainment of the world, Harold Lloyd has persistently cultivated in his field.

Harold Lloyd's productions are made by the Harold Lloyd Corporation. The public can rest assured that every production that his corporation makes will be as clean as the first snowfall.

Today Harold Lloyd is king of laughter, and Paramount is proud to pay this tribute to him and to have the privilege in a short time of releasing his productions to audiences of the World.

TO DELIGHT THE WORLD

Robert Flaherty's

'MOANA OF THE SOUTH SEAS'

A REMARKABLE AND WONDERFUL PRODUCTION.- EXTHRALLING, NOVEL, GRIPPING, INCOMPARABLY BEAUTIFUL IT TOOK TWO YEARS TO MAKE IT BUT NOW IT WILL NEVER DIE

a Paramount Picture

Robert Flaherty produced "Nanook of the North." Flaherty now offers a far greater achievement, the epic of the land where everybody wants to go, the most talked-of garden spot of the world — the South Seas.

"MOANA OF THE SOUTH SEAS"

Flaherty lived for twenty months the life of the natives of the romantic South Sea Isles and made this picture as he lived. It is emphatically not a travelogue. It is a dramatic love story, with a handsome hero, a lovely heroine. Read what Laurence Stallings, co-author of "What Price Glory?" and critic of the New York World, who has seen "Moana of the South Seas," says:

"Moana had no titles and was to be cut 2000 feet more when I saw it. Yet, as it was, it must be the best motion picture ever made.

"The design of it is as fine as the pattern of a great painting or a great poem. One sees, first off, a family of Samoans. The father, the mother, the young man, the young girl, the boy. The background is Samoa, with its feathery, billowy clouds and its tall palms, its pleasant valleys and mirrored lagoons. The photography is without parallel.

"One views these people risking their lives in surf or in valley with the matter-of-fact way in which a primitive living is gained. Flaherty has photographed the natives almost nude, almost god-like in their physical graces. The picture grows before one's eyes with a care that no director ever coached a cast to observe. And it has a climax that is incredibly great.

"I do not think any picture can be finer than 'Moana of the South Seas.'"

And everyone who has seen it, says the same.

Second Big Group To Follow "Greater Forty"

AGAIN Paramount has accomplished a remarkable feat of production. Paramount was the first company in the motion picture industry to have its production facilities developed to a plane that would permit announcing forty coming productions at one time, complete with stories, casts, and directors. That was three years ago.

But with the announcement here of the Greater Forty to be released from August 1 to February 1, Paramount has gone a step further. Here are forty pictures in which leading authors and playwrights are represented in the plays and novels which were in big demand during the present year, and have a waiting audience as screen productions. The stars, directors and players constitute the most impressive array of artists that Paramount has ever been able to announce as belonging to a single group of productions.

Yet these forty productions represent only part of the actual accomplishment of the Paramount producing organization, as plans are perfected for other equally important productions to follow in the six months following the release of the Greater Forty.

This is the first time in the history of the industry that any company has been in a position where its production plans were arranged for the year ahead. Owing to Paramount's long term contracts with great stars, directors and players, the gigantic task of aligning a production program a year ahead becomes somewhat simplified with such valuable material at hand.

In those pictures to follow the Greater Forty for release during the Spring and Summer seasons of 1926, are two productions with Gloria Swanson. One will be produced in Hollywood, the other in New York. The first production is regarded as one of the most popular fiction stories published in the present year. The second production is an adaptation of one of the three biggest current hits on Broadway.

D. W. Griffith's special production of the famous novel by Marie Corelli, "Sorrows of Satan" will be ready next Spring, as well as the Allan Dwan production, "New York," an epic of the metropolis. The story is inspired by the fact that in 1926 New York City will celebrate the 300th anniversary of its founding.

"The Blind Goddess" will be produced by Herbert Brenon. The story is now being published in The Designer.

Harold Lloyd's first release for Paramount is in this line-up. In production investment, it will be the biggest thing Lloyd has ever done.

On this program two Zane Grey productions are listed.

Pola Negri will make two pictures, both written especially for her by well known authors.

Thomas Meighan will have two productions also written to order for the star, following the successful results of "Back Home and Broke" and "Old Home Week" both written by George Ade.

Douglas MacLean who has expressed his happy satisfaction with his new Paramount contract is also on the line-up for Spring 1926. His first production for Paramount will be released in the Fall Group.

By the time these foregoing productions are released, Paramount expects that Richard Dix will be one of the big stars in the business. He is slated for two big productions in the six months following February.

And two from Raymond Griffith who is firmly established in the front rank of screen personalities.

Productions from James Cruze, Sidney Olcott, William de Mille and William K. Howard are all part of the complete year's production schedule which Paramount has arranged in two groups, and for the purpose of concentration, is featuring the earlier productions.

"Ten Commandments" For General Release

"The Ten Commandments"

IN almost every country in the world, Cecil B. De Mille's Paramount production "The Ten Commandments" has been hailed as a screen triumph. It is the greatest thing De Mille has done in his entire career. This great picture has played 62 weeks in New York, 31 weeks in Philadelphia, 16 weeks in Melbourne, 16 weeks in London, 14 weeks in Paris, 10 weeks in Auckland, 8 weeks in San Francisco, 8 weeks in Cleveland, 5 weeks in Detroit, 5 weeks in Cincinnati, 5 weeks in Washington, 4 weeks in Brooklyn, 4 weeks in Kansas City, and 4 weeks in Berlin.

The history of these road show engagements is given because it was found after road showing "The Covered Wagon" that the picture proved a record-breaker during its general release, and the sensational business is partly attributed to the fact that it had been so thoroughly exploited as a road attraction. Many showmen hold the opinion that road showing a picture at a high price means paving the way for record breaking business when the picture is released for exhibition at regular motion picture prices. It is doubtful if there is a community in the country that has not been reached with some form of propaganda or other about "The Ten Commandments," either in posting, newspaper advertising, or syndicate publicity. No production ever released by Paramount was so completely sold to the public in advance, because no previous picture received the newspaper attention both in news and editorial comment that was awarded to "The Ten Commandments."

It is probably known everywhere, by this time, that the story of "The Ten Commandments" written by Jeanie Macpherson, begins with the Bible story of The Exodus, the pursuit of the Israelites by the Egyptians, the opening and closing of the Red Sea; the annihilation of the Egyptian charioteers; the wandering of the tribes led by Moses and Aaron; the giving of "The Ten Commandments" on Mount Sinai, and the indignation of Moses on finding that the tribe had melted their gold and jewelry to make a golden idol and were reveling when he returned from the mountain. From this point on by a logical transition the story becomes modern and gives the modern application of The Ten Commandments to a story about everyday life. Theodore Roberts as Moses is generally considered one of the greatest characters ever given the screen. In the modern version the principal roles are played by Richard Dix, Rod La Rocque, and Leatrice Joy, with Edythe Chapman as the mother of the two boys, one who becomes rich, and crooked, and strangely enough wins the girl away from his older brother who is devoted to his mother and has an honest man's ideals of how much a man may sacrifice for ambition and still be a man.

"The Ten Commandments" is unquestionably a milestone in the production history of the industry.

"The Beggar on Horseback"

THE record of James Cruze, the producer of "The Covered Wagon," reads like the home-run record of Babe Ruth, except that James Cruze has never stepped up to the plate and fanned out.

Paramount officials claim that those who have been crying for something new, something that gets away from the regular motion picture formula, something with a little emotion, and a flock of laughs have nothing more to cry about. James Cruze has made "The Beggar on Horseback," and it is reported he has made another great box-office picture—one in which there is imagination and originality in every reel.

"The Beggar on Horseback" was written by George S. Kaufman, and Marc Connelly, the playwriting team that made "Merton of the Movies," "To the Ladies" and other big stage and screen successes. As a play "The Beggar on Horseback" broke records for box-office receipts in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and in many other cities while on tour.

"The Beggar on Horseback" hasn't a single horse, or a beggar in it. But it has the type of comedy in which James Cruze has thus far excelled and points the way to a new field of screen entertainment.

This is the story of a young composer whose heart is dedicated to writing the Great American Symphony but who writes jazz tunes to keep from starving. Two girls are in love with him. One is very poor, the other very rich. One day, worn out from overwork, he is ordered to go to bed and rest by a doctor. There he has a dream: the dream of a composer who is in love with a poor girl, but who has been advised to marry the rich girl in order to be free to do the great things he can't attempt because of the day to day scramble for a few dollars to buy food. That dream carries on from a point where all other comedies leave off and builds to humorous heights that are approached only by a genius.

Edward Everett Horton, is the composer. Beautiful Esther Ralston, the Mrs. Darling of "Peter Pan," and co-featured with Mary Brian in "The Little French Girl," is the poor sweetheart. Gertrude Short, the rich girl, and addict of tin-pan jazz music; Theodore Kosloff, Ethel Wales and Erwin Connelly are the other featured players in the cast.

The screen play was written by Walter Woods, production editor for James Cruze, and was photographed by Karl Brown.

Thomas Meighan, Paramount star.

"Flower of The Night"

BECAUSE of the popular appeal which this star has for the major portion of the picture-going public, Pola Negri in "Flower of the Night" is quite likely to be exploited as one of the most important of the season's photoplays in all towns where it is shown.

The work that has gone on to provide this story for Miss Negri is cited as being typical of the great pains that the Famous Players production department will go to to secure the proper material for Paramount stars.

The story is by Joseph Hergersheimer whose romantic tales are known the country over. Most of his stories have appeared in Saturday Evening Post, which has done so much to establish him as one of the leading American authors.

"Flower of the Night" was written in Mexico, and the writer not only completed one of the best stories that has ever been written for Pola Negri, but negotiated with the Mexican government for their co-operation in the production of the picture.

Some of the finest architecture in the Western Hemisphere is in the Mexican Republic, and the fact that "The Flower of the Night" will draw an accurate picture of Mexico and its people has won the enthusiasm of the officials, from the president down, who have promised that when actual production begins all departments of the government are ready to co-operate if called upon.

Paramount promises that Miss Negri will have the most colorful role that she has ever enjoyed in Paramount pictures; one that is entirely different than anything she has ever played.

"Whispers"

"THE CITY OF SILENT MEN" is considered one of the greatest pictures Thomas Meighan ever made for Paramount. It is several years old, yet even today it is said there is a demand for prints. This accounts for the general demand from exhibitors for another picture like it.

The problem that faced Paramount was not to find a story that would make another

Highlights and character poses in the James Cruze production "A Beggar on Horseback"; a Paramount release.

"Street of Forgotten Men" is Novel Story

"The City of Silent Men" but one that would make an even better picture. Exhibitors who are up on production matters know that out of a hundred available stories of a certain type, perhaps one or two are good screen material. And since Paramount could find nothing that was superior to "The City of Silent Men" that had already been published, Booth Tarkington was asked to write a story especially for Thomas Meighan which would be made as a successor to the old picture.

In "Whispers," Paramount is confident that they have the material for a Thomas Meighan production that will completely eclipse "The City of Silent Men." The star, the title, the story, and the authorship are box-office angles with individual value. Collectively they support the confidence that "Whispers" will be one of the strongest attractions in the Greater Forty.

"Old Home Week" written by George Ade especially for the star, and soon to be released is expected to pave the way for this production.

"Whispers" is a prison story. Tom has the role of the happy-go-lucky son of a small town banker. His family is looked up to and respected in their community. As those things sometime happen in a small town the bank goes to the wall. Meighan's kin become criminally responsible to the state. Rather than see his respected father and brother go to jail, Tom, who has always been considered no-account anyway, assumes the entire responsibility and is sent to Sing Sing.

In prison Tom gets a new angle on life. Sing Sing prison is an iron city of whispers.

Pola Negri, Paramount star.

The convicts whisper out of the corners of their mouths when the guards aren't looking. Alone in his cell he reflects on what his life might have been. In his reckless career, he realizes he has passed by some of the really worth while things of life; the girl he loves, and who he knows loves him. His whole life is set toward the day of his release.

Word comes to him that crooks are bleeding money out of the girl who loves him on the pretense of freeing Tom from prison. In a fit of rage he escapes to save her. He does save her, but is recaptured and sent back to prison. Because of his break from prison his release is set back several years, and when he finally comes out of prison, his family, not knowing the sacrifice he has made for them, are horrified lest his criminal past disgrace them. There is a situation with heart throbs.

"The Stage Door Johnny"

THOSE who have been privileged to meet Raymond Griffith know him as one of the hardest working young men in Hollywood. Raymond Griffith knows the motion picture business from all angles as few actors do. And this combined with his broad worldly experience as a former newspaper man is reflected in what he has perfected in the way of a comedy character on the screen. Certain directors in Hollywood claim that Griffith does not need a story to make a picture. He has a touch of genius in knowing "what to do next" and build up a story as he goes along. But given a story with possibilities so that he is free to devote himself to the perfection of the remarkable character in the silk hat which he has established, Griffith should accomplish wonders. He already has, for that matter. And so exhibitors holding open time for "The Stage Door Johnny" in which he will star can look forward to a promising attraction.

Here's the story briefly.

Griffith is employed as a waiter in The Little Cafe. And a mighty poor waiter, at that. He falls in love with his employer's daughter, Yvonne who returns the unspoken devotion. The boss, by an underground route gets word that his waiter, Griffith, is about to fall heir to a huge fortune, and finds a scheme to come in for a slice.

He tells Griffith that he is so satisfied with his services that he wishes to retain him for a number of years. Twenty years in fact. But, if either breaks the contract, the other must surrender an enormous forfeit. Griffith falls right in line with the idea, because it insures him being near Yvonne for twenty years, anyway. The idea of the forfeit strikes him as a big joke because he hasn't any money. But when the bequest is made and he finds that he is not only wealthy but has a very exalted place in society by reason of his family name, of which he was heretofore ignorant, he begins to understand the forfeit clause that his foxy boss put in the contract. Griffith goes to see a lawyer who advises him to become such a terrible waiter that he will not only get fired but his boss will have to surrender a forfeit, too. He tries it, and he tries several other devices, and the way he gets Yvonne, despite two other women, who have suddenly become fond of him, and settles with Yvonne's grasping papa, are not just humorous incidents but more milestones in the career of Ray Griffith.

Rudolph Valentino, Paramount star.

"Cobra"

"COBRA," Rudolph Valentino's Paramount vehicle as a stage play went through the season of 1924 in New York showing to capacity business. Although "Cobra" is a modern story, the production has the lavish mounting that counted for so much in both "Monsieur Beaucaire" and "The Sainted Devil." It was produced by Joseph Henabery, who made the latter production.

The story of "Cobra" is laid in New York, although in the beginning the scenes are in Italy where Valentino is introduced as an Italian Count. He is caught in an intensely dramatic situation when the wife of his best friend falls in love with him. She is the Cobra Woman about whom he once said, "That woman fascinates me—as a cobra fascinates a panther." And she uses all her wiles to attract him. They arrange a rendevouz at a hotel. She goes there first and he follows, but his conscience lashes him and he leaves. His friend's wife remains. That night the hotel burns, and the woman is burned to death. Her husband grieves as days pass and he hears nothing from his wife. He cannot understand her leaving and of course does not link her disappearance to the fire in an obscure second rate hotel. Valentino here occupies one of the greatest dramatic situations that has ever been devised. He knows what has happened to his friend's wife, and is tortured by the fact that he cannot ease the grief of his friend without making his friend hate him. In the meantime he has developed a deep wholesome effection for his own secretary. How by a great sacrifice, he surmounts this situation, and hides his anguish in solitude is one of the finest dramatic situations Valentino has done for the screen.

Valentino has for the Cobra Woman, Nita Naldi, and the balance of the cast includes players of prominent standing such as Casson Ferguson, Gertrude Olmstead, Hector V. Sarno, Claire De Lorez, Eileen Percy, and Rose Rosenova.

Martin Brown, author of "Cobra," wrote "The Exciters," "The Lady" and other successes. The scenario was written by Anthony Coldewey who has written scenarios for several of the big James Cruze hits.

"The Street of Forgotten Men"

"THE STREET OF FORGOTTEN MEN" on which production is now well advanced at the Paramount Long Island studio, surpasses "The Miracle Man" in drama and heart appeal. This wonderful story of the love of a professional beggar in New York for his young ward was made under the direction of Herbert Brenon.

Brenon's production of "Peter Pan," followed by "The Little French Girl," soon to be released, gives this producer the best incentive in the world to make "The Street of Forgotten Men" as memorable a piece of work as the Barrie picture and its successor.

Of second importance to the fact that millions of people have read the story in

These scenes are indicative of the trend of the action in the Rudolph Valentino starring vehicle "Cobra," a Paramount "Greater Forty" release.

"Ancient Highway" Curwood Story, on List

Liberty Magazine is the added fact that nearly every producing company in the business bid high to secure the screen rights for the story from George Kibbe Turner, the author.

Percy Marmont is given opportunity for a splendid characterization. And Mary Brian, the little "Wendy" of "Peter Pan," and the title role player of "The Little French Girl" is developing into a remarkable young actress under the directorship of Herbert Brenon. Neil Hamilton and Raymond Hatton are cast for typical roles.

"The Street of Forgotten Men" is a dirty Bowery Alley where the professional beggars of New York make their unholy headquarters. It is from here in the morning that they hobble and limp to the fine hunting grounds on Fifth Avenue and upper Broadway. Among this crew of fakirs is Easy Money Charlie, Percy Marmont, who conceals the fact that he is young, strong and handsome with a fake plaster arm, and ragged dirty clothes. Charlie is getting rich on the easy graft, when one day a female derelict sends for him. She is dying and begs Charlie to look after her daughter, a little girl of eight; inmate of an orphan asylum. Charlie sends for her and installs her in an apartment far from The Street of Forgotten Men. There the child is brought up in the belief that Charlie is a well-to-do business man. As soon as she is old enough, Charlie sends his ward, Mary Brian, to a fashionable school for girls. He loves her now, but doesn't tell her so. He wants her to marry a certain millionaire in the hope that her position in life will always be assured. He is forced to work his begging graft to the limit in order to provide for her at school, but feels that once she is happily married his responsibility will be over. One of the denizens of The Street of Forgotten Men, White-Eye, a burly brute who is going blind and losing his graft because of years of twisting his eyes, knows the true story of Charlie's sacrifice and threatens to blackmail the girl, and ruin her. How Marmont forestalls him makes an interesting story.

"The Ancient Highway"

THERE are two names connected with the production of "The Ancient Highway" that stand high in screen life. The first is James Oliver Curwood, the author. And the other is Irvin Willat who produced for Paramount those two great Westerns "North of 36" and "The Wanderer of the Wasteland"; and also that epic of modern aviation, "The Air Mail."

People are now following the story of "The Ancient Highway" as it is being published in a Hearst magazine. More will read it as a novel when it is published in book form. It is Curwood's newest novel.

Reviewing some of the highspots in this tale of the Canadian logging camps reveals that it is as fast a moving story as Curwood has ever written. It begins with the hero travelling all the way from China to Canada to beat up the man who ruined his father, resulting in a terrific battle; the hero paddling down a raging river in a frail canoe ahead of millions of onrushing logs; the hero setting a charge of dynamite to free a log jam; and risking his life to rescue his assistant in the face of the charge of exploding dynamite.

The story gets its title from the fact that much of the stirring adventure and romance takes place on a famous old road which runs through the quaint regions of Quebec and is known as "the ancient highway."

This is the highway Clifton Brant uses to elude the police after his highly successful encounter and assault on the man who was responsible for the ruin and death of his father. Unknown to Brant a girl witnesses the fight, and warns him that the police are looking for him. Down the road he runs into another fight. This time, three men are attacking one. Brant jumps in to even matters out, helps route the three assailants, and is taken to the home of the youth whose fight he has helped to win. There Brant meets the girl Antoinette who telephoned him, following the fight with Hurd, warning him to leave town. Accompanying the two men is a half humorous, half-mad monk named Alphonse, who has been trying for years to stifle his own love of Antoinette.

Bebe Daniels and Rod La Rocque in "The Wild, Wild Girl" a Paramount "Greater Forty" release.

"Vanishing American" is Epic of the Indian

Clifton tells Antoinette passionately of his love, and his ardor frightens her and she repulses him, though she is really in love with him.

Matters reach their climax in the spring drive of logs. If the Laurentian people can get their logs to the St. Lawrence, they are saved. Hurd has a hill dynamited so that it slides into the swift stream carrying the Laurentian logs and causes a block. Though all hands work hard to free the jam, it seems impossible, until Clifton determines to dynamite it at a crucial point.

Plans for production are going forward and selections for the cast point to "The Ancient Highway" being one of the big specials in this new group of Greater Forty.

"In the Name of Love"

"IN THE NAME OF LOVE" which has been completed at the Paramount Hollywood studio by Howard Higgin is a romatic comedy melodrama. Riccardo Cortez, Greta Nissen, one of the recent screen "finds," Wallace Beery, and Raymond Hatton make up the principal members of an unusually strong cast.

"In the Name of Love" was written for the screen by Sada Cowan. The theme was suggested by the great love-classic "The Lady of Lyons" by Bulwer Lytton, modernized completely, and given a highly elaborate production under the direction of Howard Higgin who filmed this picture under the direct supervision of Jesse L. Lasky.

Ricardo Cortez has the role of a dashing, brilliant, and charming hero. He portrays a young Frenchman who leaves his sweetheart, Greta Nissen, in France with the promise that he will return to her. He has her promise that she will wait for him. Ten years later he returns from America with his fortune still to be made. His sweetheart, in the meantime, has become very rich, and snobbish, or Ritzy and highhat. Anyway, out of all the eligible Frenchmen who make love to her there is not one who captures her interest. Her heart is set on meeting Prince Como, who is visiting France. She will have nothing to do with Ricardo.

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton who have also been jilted, ritzed, and highhatted, by the coquettish Greta, suggest to Ricardo that he masquerade as the Prince of Como, marry Greta and them humiliate her. Ricardo goes through with the plan, and he and Greta wed. When she finds out about the gentle little joke that has been played on her, she is furious. Her impetuous brother hears about the hoax and sets out to kill Ricardo, but Greta realizing that she loves the masquerader in spite of everything, saves his life.

"The King on Main Street"

ADOLPHE MENJOU who has been scoring so consistently in Paramount pictures for the past year has the title role in "The King on Main Street." It is the story of a modern king, an ideal part for Menjou.

Monta Bell, who was associated with Charles Chaplin in the production of "A Woman of Paris," and has made a brilliant record within the last two years as a producer and director will be responsible for "The King on Main Street."

This is the story of a king who comes to America to find a new field for romance. He is tired of Europe. Awaiting him in America is a famous siren who is determined to tame the famous lover of Europe. They meet and the affair ends up as a victory for the king.

Following this he is invited to spend the week-end at a small town as the guest of a young member of the legislature. Here he meets a beautiful, innocent young girl. At first he tries the usual professional lover methods but when he sees how innocent she is he realizes that such methods would not be sportsmanlike and so he desists. Their little affair is merely a beautiful, clean romance, something which the King has never found before in his beauty-starved life. However, the romance is discovered and the wrong interpretation placed upon it. In order to save the young girl embarrassment, the king is forced to sign a treaty with a group of men in which his country gets the worst of a business deal.

With the treaty signed, the King and the girl bid each other tender farewells and he passes out of her life, leaving her to marry a young member of the Legislature who is really a very decent chap.

Back in his own country, the King's Advisory Council insists that he sign a bill providing that in the future the king of Moldavia shall never leave the confines of that country. For him it means romance is dead but it also means the voice of his country. He finally accedes to the decree which he signs with a very kingly gesture.

At the finish of the picture the king is seen standing on a balcony of the palace looking at the moon and dreaming not of his triumphs as a lover but of the little clean romance. Dissolving from that we see the young girl also looking at the moon and thinking of her romance with the king. As the king turns away to enter the palace the girl also turns away to enter her home. The king turns to his flag and the girl turns to a cradle in which is a new baby.

opportunity to repeat the success of "The Thundering Herd."

The role that will be played by Dix is that of Nophaie, Carisle Indian School graduate, and in love with Marian Warner. Nophaie, child of circumstances, when a boy, is left herding sheep while the tribe goes out on a forging party. A passing wagon train picks up the boy, adopts him, and later sends him to a famous Indian School, Carlisle. It is at a college party that he meets and falls in love with Marian Warner. But Nophaie's mind is made up to leave his love behind and return to educate his tribes-people. Marian isn't the kind of a girl who could be left behind and she follows Nophaie back to the desert where he is working among his people. Here she meets Morgan, a roustabout, played by Wallace Beery, posing as a missionary, and discovers that he is paying too amorous attentio to Gerkin Yershi, an Indian girl. Marian, knowing that Gerkin loves Nophaie, suggests to him that he marry and protect her. The Indian replies that he will marry no one he does not love. Nophaie, realizing that the situation is serious kidnaps Gerkin and hides her with some friends in a distant canyon to protect her from Morgan.

When the war begins, Nophaie forms a company of his people, and it is after a distinguished service in France, that Nophaie returns at the head of his men to find his old enemy Morgan oppressing his people. Nophaie finding justice for his people, with Marian at his side through the fight, brings the story to a climax.

Liberty Magazine Contest Special

ONE of Paramount's big specials will be based on a story for which a magazine pays fifty thousand dollars, and which James Cruze will produce.

Nobody knows what the story is going to be like, because the contest now being conducted by Liberty Magazine will not close until June 1st, but thousands upon thousands of ideas are beginning to be received by the publishers, coming from all parts of the country. This is probably the first contest ever held with a fifty thousand dollar stake for the winner.

The contest is open to professional as well as non-professional writers. The only people excluded are the employees of Liberty Magazine and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. But, everyone competes on the same basis, for the award is not for a story—but for the idea for a story.

Paramount is not placing the burden of the success of this contest entirely upon the shoulders of the publishers. A special slide for the smaller theatres, and a ninety foot trailer for the larger houses will be available, as well as a broadside for lobby display, which will carry on its reverse side a score of suggestions for localizing the stunt.

"Pony Express" to be Filmed on Big Scale

"The Pony Express"

THE wildest imagination of the most prolific writer of dime novels only approximates the hazards, the dangers, and the great courage of the hardy youths who rode the mail from the Mississippi to the Pacific in thirteen days through the desert, over the mountains; through hostile Indian country, wind storm and rain storm. The path that these boys blazed is now the roadbed for the Santa Fe and only a cross-country traveller can appreciate the brawn, and the steel courage of those men who linked both shores of the continent.

A romance has been written with this great epoch in American history as a background, and James Cruze will produce this story on a scale to rank with "The Covered Wagon." The story was written by Henry James Forman and Walter Woods.

The riders of the pony express were the first real go-getters in this country. There wasn't one of them who knew the meaning of the word "can't" or "impossible." They simply tried their hardest, and it stands to their everlasting glory that no pouch of mail ever left St. Joseph for California that wasn't delivered despite every handicap in the world to defeat the men who were trying to deliver it.

"The American Venus"

THERE is an exploitation idea behind the production of "The American Venus" with beautiful Greta Nissen, Bebe Daniels, Paramount star.

Jesse L. Lasky's most recent "find." The idea is national in scope, and it is so arranged that as the picture goes into production the exploitation forces in all forms are set in motion.

The idea in this campaign will be to find one girl from every key town in the country who in the opinion of competent judges comes nearest the proportions of the American Venus.

The contest will be conducted in over two hundred key cities, and in every city where a local contest is held Paramount will award the winning girl with a beautiful silver cup. This phase of the campaign will be built up with trailers, slides, out door advertising and copy for newspaper and program advertising, and the decisions from the judges will be made during the engagement of the picture.

The contest will be conducted on a national plan so that its local operation becomes more important than if it were merely an isolated beauty contest. As the big incentive for co-operation for all sides is the fact that from the two hundred silver cup winners, twenty girls will be selected for roles in the production in support of Greta Nissen.

Paramount officials feel that this picture will mean to the screen what the Ziegfeld array of beauties means to the stage.

The story written by Lillian Lauferty, tells of the search of a group of famous American artists for the American Venus. Several artists who will appear in the picture will be nationally known painters, and illustrators. They advertise a nation-wide contest and it is during the selection of the girls that the romance begins between Greta Nissen and one of the artists.

"The Coast of Folly"

"THE COAST OF FOLLY," Coningsby Dawson's novel will be Gloria Swanson's second picture in the Greater Forty. It appeared serially in "Good Housekeeping." Later it was made into a book.

Allan Dwan, director of three Gloria Swanson's, "Manhandled," "Her Love Story" and "Wages of Virtue," will direct this picture.

As Coningsby Dawson built the plot, when Joyce Cathaway is a little child her mother runs off with a lover. Her father dies and Joyce lives with her millionaire grandfather. She has no guidance except that of her faithful nurse, Nannie. She is inherently fine, but the laxness of modern luxury nearly spoils her. Posie Fay, wife of a man Joyce has been innocently flirting with, a selfish worldly woman who is anxious to get a divorce, and willing to ruin Joyce to get it, names Joyce as co-respondent. Joyce runs off to Europe to join her mother. Abroad she finds that her mother is going to disinherit her.

Then Joyce's fine qualities assert themselves and she returns to New York ready to tell the truth and to trust to the truth to save her. She meets Untrich, Posie Fay's lawyer, who believes in her and loves her, and truth wins out. The title is explained in the theme of the story: "Honesty of purpose saves a girl from shipwreck on the Coast of Folly."

"The Best People"

"THE BEST PEOPLE" is to be a Sidney Olcott production. It was Olcott who produced "The Humming Bird" and "Little Old New York." With this story of novel marriage mix-ups, New York night life, pretty girls, fast moving comedy situations, and thrills, Olcott is equipped with the material that he knows best how to build into a screen hit.

The theme of the picture is that chauffeurs and chorus girls often have better brains and morals than do millionaires' families (the so-called best people) and that modern young people, no matter of what class will tear down social barriers and brave scandal to satisfy their desires. It portrays a rich New York family horrified because the son wants to marry a chorus girl and the daughter is in love with the chauffeur. But finally through a series of amusing incidents the aristocratic family is put in the position of having to beg the chauffeur and chorus girl to marry into their family.

Ma Lenox is a social climber. Pa is a blustering self-made man. The flapper daughter, Marion, throws over the sappy Lord Rockmere, picked out by her mother as husband material, and wants to marry the family chauffeur, a handsome, sensible chap named Henry. Henry comes of a good family but is temporarily forced to take the chauffeur job. Bertie, the Lenox son and heir, wants to marry a chorus girl, Alice O'Neill, but so far she has refused him.

When Pa Lenox is told of the marriage ambitions of his children, he is egged on by his scandalized wife and brother-in-law, George, to raise the dickens about it. George insists Alice, the chorus girl, must be bought off, and arranges a meeting at a notorious New York night club involving Alice, the other chorus girl, Pa Lenox, and himself. It happens that Marion Lenox and Henry, the chauffeur she is trying to get to marry her, are dining in a private room at the same resort. What more exciting situation could be imagined?

"The Golden Princess"

BETTY BRONSON, star of "Peter Pan" will be seen in a story by the same author who wrote "The Poor Little Rich Girl," produced by Clarence Badger.

"The Golden Princess" is a story of the "Cinderella type," an ideal choice for Betty Bronson. She is the niece of a seamstress who works for very rich families. Betty harbors the ambition to live and to act like the wealthy Knights, and the Vintons, to whom she delivers clothes. In fact she saves her few pennies to buy a book on deportment so that she can learn to ride horseback and do all the things that rich girls do. Betty imagines that rich people are born with this knowledge.

Almost overnight, all her ambitions are realized, and she finds herself in a mansion far more gorgeous than anything she has ever dreamed about, all because of her resemblance to the dead Alicia, daughter of the Grand Duke of Hess-Anspach. The Grand Duchess has lost her mind because of the tragedy. Betty is sent to Hess-Anspach where for over a year she pretends that she is really the daughter of the duchess, often forgetting that she is only acting a part and not a real member of the royal household. But things change when the Grand Duchess dies. There is no more need for pretense, so Betty is sent home with a few fine clothes as gifts.

She finds it difficult to get adjusted to the old life. Her aunt hasn't changed, but Betty has.

The wealthy Knights, realizing the change in Betty and knowing that she would be a credit to any family, offer to adopt her, but Betty knowing the sacrifices her aunt has made, gently refuses. Then the Vin-

"Womanhandled"

FOLLOWING the success of "Manhandled" it was suggested that Paramount should make a sequel to it under the title "Womanhandled," giving the title role to some young male star. With that idea in mind, Arthur Stringer wrote "Womanhandled." The story was published in Saturday Evening Post and is now one of the big pictures in the Greater Forty as a starring vehicle for Richard Dix.

Dix is cast in the role of a rich man's son whose father throws him out of the house until he can return and prove that he has been earning his own living. He has a weakness for ladies. Doesn't know how to say "No" when they roll their eyes and ask for something. He loses job after job because he is too obliging.

Desperate, he rides the beams for the great open spaces and lands on a ranch where there aren't any women. But not for long. A movie company on location decides to make some scenes on the ranch, and finding Dix the most typical looking cowboy present, offer him a good role in the picture. Dix doesn't want to play in the picture until the beautiful young lady persuades him, and then he doesn't want to do anything else but act. And so in acting he finds happiness and a permanent job.

"Conquered"

THE professed purpose embodied in "Conquered" is to permit Gloria Swanson to do the things she knows so well, and which counted for the success of "Manhandled," "The Humming Bird," and now "Madame Sans-Gene."

Allan Dwan will produce this story, which was written to order for Gloria Swanson by Arthur Stringer.

The picture introduces Gloria in boy's clothes breaking into a meeting of New York gangsters and making them come through with her share of the loot; again as a nurse in stiff white linen gently administering to the patients never able to take a correct pulse because the touch of her pretty fingers sends many a heart galloping. And then Gloria, invading society in gorgeous gowns, in order to convince a mean old millionaire that she is good enough to marry his son.

Gloria's role in this picture is that of Tiny McDann, orphan girl of the New York slums whose chief weakness is helping people, crude and funny as her methods often are. Jimmy, gangster and something of a bootlegger thinks that Tiny is his sweetheart. Tiny is fired from the laundry where she works unjustly accused of a theft. She doesn't mind being fired because her heart is set on becoming a trained nurse.

While she is at the hospital, Jimmy holds up a truck driven by Billy Stone, who is trying to prove to his millionaire father that he can earn a living. One night, Billy is in the slums to find the members of the crowd that held up his truck, discovers Jimmy abusing Tiny, beats him up, and learns that Tiny is studying to be a trained nurse. So instead of driving a truck, he gets a job driving an ambulance—at the same hospital.

"The Enchanted Hill"

PARAMOUNT officials regard "The Enchanted Hill" as one of the three most valuable pieces of screen property that company has purchased this year. Every producing company in the business is said to have bargained for the story. Peter B. Kyne wrote it.

The story was published originally in Cosmopolitan magazine as a serial. Now it is on the stands as a novel.

Irvin Willat has been selected to direct its production in pictures. The cast will feature Jack Holt, Florence Vidor, and Raymond Hatton.

The story opens on the eventful day in June when Lee Purdy, former war flyer, a dreamer and owner of a big Mexican ranch called "The Enchanted Hill" experienced two very important sensations. Both were intended to have an important bearing on his life; only one of them did. The first and unsuccessful one was when Bud Shannon took a shot at him from long range with a rifle, the second one was later on at the railroad station where Lee saw the prettiest girl he had ever laid eyes on.

"Polly of the Ballet"

ALMOST extensive publicity campaign will be used to launch the production by William De Mille in which Greta Nissen and Ricardo Cortez are featured. In type the story is like "The Gilded Lily." It was written by the same author, Clara Beranger.

The publicity will come through the medium of Excella Magazine, a new big circulation periodical with national scope which on June 1st will begin a nation-wide beauty contest. The winners will be given important parts in "Polly of the Ballet." In addition to the first prizes for the winners consisting of a contract to play in the picture, there will be thirty-five other prizes from one thousand dollars in cash down to several ten dollar prizes.

The contest will run for two and one-half months, beginning June 1st and will close on August 15th.

The two winners of the contest will be given not only a contract to appear in the picture, but all living expenses while in Hollywood. This is one of the biggest offers ever made for girls with screen aspirations, and the response is expected to be enormous owing to the liberal prizes.

"When Knights Were Bold"

"CHANGING HUSBANDS," "Little Miss Bluebeard," "Forty Winks" and "The Night Club" have placed Raymond Griffith with the leaders of comedy on the silver sheet, and now Paramount has organized a special unit to make productions starring him.

The first picture that he will be in in the Greater Forty is "When Knights Were Bold," the famous play by Charles Marlowe in which some of the greatest comedians of the stage have won their spurs. The story is supplied with humor of all the known varieties.

This is the plot.

Sir Guy De Vere is a jolly young Englishman who very rarely has a serious moment. He comes of an excellent family, but it doesn't bother him, nor does the historic castle he has inherited from his famous ancestors. He is in love with a beautiful girl named Rowena, but she will not marry him because he is not of a grand, romantic nature. To the castle of De Vere as house guests come Rowena, chaperoned by her aunt; Isaac Isaacson, a London financier, and his daughter, and Isaacson's friend, Sir Brian Ballymote. The latter is supposed to be an Irish noble but is really an imposter, though a big, handsome fellow. Isaacson is anxious to marry his daughter off to Sir Guy, but realizes that Rowena will have to be gotten out of the way before this can be done. He has brought Sir Brian along to make love to Rowena.

For a time this plot seems to be succeeding very well. There is a hunt and Sir Guy cuts a very poor figure, while Sir Brian proves a great hunter. Rowena quite falls for him. Sir Guy contracts a cold and leaves the hunt, returning to the castle to soak his feet in mustard water. He also drinks a lot of whiskey and, getting quite tipsy, falls asleep. He has a dream that he is back in the days of 1200, at King Arthur's Court. Counterparts of Rowena, Sir Brian, Isaacson, and the rest appear there. Sir Guy is forced into a position where he has to fight the 1200 Sir Brian and licks him. When Sir Guy abruptly awakens from this dream he is a different man.

"The Trouble with Wives"

"THE TROUBLE WITH WIVES," which will feature Adolphe Menjou as the husband, and Florence Vidor, as the wife, is a research into the problems of present day married life.

Sada Cowan who wrote "Bluebeard's 8th Wife" for the screen, has a husband, and is therefore privileged to write as an authority. Sada Cowan has written "The Trouble With Wives" in an easy flowing mirthful style which shows a clever analysis of the little human episodes which mean so much in the marriage arrangement.

The incidents follow closely upon one another and they all hit home even though the author has generalized upon the subject to avoid any suggestion of preaching a sermon.

One of the biggest national exploitation campaigns ever devised by Paramount will be used to create a waiting audience for the picture, long in advance of its release dates.

"Night Life in New York"

ONE of the strongest productions in the Greater Forty is "Night Life in New York," which was produced by Allan Dwan and has a cast featuring Rod La Rocque, Ernest Torrence, Dorothy Gish, Helen Lee Worthing, and George Hackathorne.

Allan Dwan, who knows his New York has always wanted to produce a story that told about the night life in the great city as he saw it from personal observation. This original story by Edgar Selwyn satisfied Dwan as being a faithful picture of the lives of a certain class of New Yorkers as they live it between six o'clock in the evening and dawn. It was adapted to the screen by Paul Schofield.

Although at this writing, "Night Life in New York" is completed, but not finally edited, Paramount officials who have seen some of the scenes in their present form are highly enthusiastic about the future of this production.

"The Wanderer" to be Elaborate Spectacle

In the story we find Ernest Torrence as John Bentley, who in his youth was jilted by a New York girl named Sally, and went west to make his fortune. Although he has married somebody else, and is very wealthy he never gets over his grudge against New York. His son, Rod La Rocque is crazy to have a fling at Broadway. He is useless in business, and after an affair with an actress who plays one night stands, the old man decides to not only send his son, Rod to New York, but to give him enough money to get into trouble in the hope that he will quickly sicken of the town. Torrence writes to his former boyhood sweetheart, Sally, asking her to have her husband place Rod in his business, but not to aid him if he gets in a scrape.

Ronald hits Broadway wide open for adventure. He falls hard for Meg, Dorothy Gish, telephone girl at the Biltmore, while making a date with the actress he met back home. He meets the actress who introduces him to an "open all night" resort. At a neighboring table is Meg with a friend, Jerry, and her brother, Jim. Then we are shown Rod La Rocque, piloting a taxicab he bought because it was almost as cheap as paying the fare after a long wild ride, the robbery, the smashup on the Queensboro Bridge, and finally the police inquisition to find the missing jewels of which Rod is suspected of stealing.

"Shamrock"

ONE of the most promising vehicles for Thomas Meighan is "Shamrock." Meighan has never had a story like this; a story of the Emerald Isle about which so many romances have been written. However, "The Shamrock" is not a legend of the old sod, it's a modern story about a fighting Irishman; a crafty young New York politician who goes to Ireland hoping to get facts which will help him fight and remove a political rival. He takes joy in laughing at the quaint old rural Irish customs, but soon finds himself troubled by an inward voice that keeps telling him, "This is the land of your Fathers." How Meighan, as the politician reared in New York and nourished on cold blooded ward politics is regenerated, finds love, and fails to complete his mission in the old country because the errand is one of revenge, forms the basis of the play.

Tom appears as the American-born son of Irish parents. He works his way through law school, and this becomes a big advantage when he goes into city politics and aligns himself with the political ring that runs the city. He is ambitious, clever, and when it is necessary knows how in the manner of some politicians to be crooked and still be within the law. Tom's party has everything in the city sewed up, but reaches a snag in a certain old judge who is unafraid of threats, uncorruptible, and pledged to fight the political ring. The leaders of Tom's party hold a council of war and make a bargain with Tom to have the judge removed. There is a certain age at which a judge is required to resign from the bench. The leaders of the party suspect that their particular enemy has exceeded the age limit.

If this can be proven, his resignation can be forced. If Tom can get this and other facts in Ireland where the judge was born, the political bosses promise to make him rich and powerful. The poetry and sentiment of the country get into Tom's blood, and it becomes complete when he not only refuses to get evidence against the fine old judge and enemy of the political group, but returns to New York and fights the bosses in a smashing political war.

"California—or Bust"

BYRON MORGAN, author of "The Air Mail," and several of the biggest successes in the career of Wallace Reid, wrote "California—or Bust" especially for Richard Dix.

Dix is making "California—or Bust" under the direction of Frank Tuttle as his initial picture in the Greater Forty. Esther Ralston is leading lady for Dix in this picture.

In this story, Dix is playing the role of Randy Farman, clerk in a New York department store, who longs for a motor car of his own. At a fashionable charity bazaar he wins a specially built Manrona roadster.

But on the first night of Randy's long dreamed of cross country trip, he learns that camping in the great open spaces is painfully different than arranging advertising display camps in the department store, and he welcomes the assistance of Doris McDee, who with her mother is travelling in a battered old Ford car.

How he wins an important road-race, despite the fact that it is framed against him, and wins the girl, too, are told in a manner calculated to add a thrill to this fast moving romance of the open road.

"Stage Struck"

GLORIA SWANSON'S contributions to the Greater Forty will include "Stage Struck."

Just now Gloria is taking the country by storm with "Madame Sans-Gene."

"Stage Struck" permits Gloria to do her whole repertoire of imitations.

Allan Dwan will produce "Stage Struck," which is the story of a small town girl who dreams of nothing else but her name in electric lights over a Broadway theatre; twenty-four sheets of herself all over New York; hailed as the great American stage favorite, with the millionaires of New York at her feet fighting for the slight favor of even a condescending smile.

True to her small town ideas about success on the stage, she comes to New York resolved that she must make great concessions to win stardom, and that her moral code will need revising. She is prepared for all that. She has read all about the wicked managers. But to her great surprise she finds that it isn't so simple after all.

Of course, she finally wins her way, but she reaches her goal on merit. And with the fulfillment of her ambition comes a great love.

"A Son of His Father"

THE works of Harold Bell Wright rank with the biggest sellers in the world. In the past eight years his books have sold over 10,000,000 copies reaching 56,000,000 readers, or half the population of the United States. So a tremendous ready-made audience is being claimed for "A Son of His Father" which Victor Fleming is now making for Paramount.

"A Son of His Father" is a modern story of Arizona where the pioneer ideas are still conflicting with the aggressive younger thought which is anxious to bring in some of the newer and less exacting ideals of living which filter in from the East. It is a story of the changing of the West accented by the development and progress in the lapse of the few years between the ages of a son and his father.

The story begins with pretty Nora O'Shea, who leaves Ireland after the death of her mother to come to Arizona and join her brother a cowboy on young Jack Morton's ranch. Morton, a college man, handsome, but wild, has just lost his ranch to a man in the employ of Zobetzer, wealthy enemy of the Morton's and an unscrupulous man suspected of being a cattle-rustler.

While Nora is on the way to Arizona, her brother Larry has joined a gang of cattle thieves. When Nora arrives there is no one at the station to meet her, so Morton takes her in charge. Later Zobetzer who has taken a keen interest in Nora attempts to kidnap her, but relents when he finds that she befriended his little grandson on the train coming out.

The rescue of Nora by Morton when she has been captured by smugglers; their growing love, the dramatic death of Larry; and Morton's attempt to recover his ranch are elements of Western drama that will thrill the Wright fans.

"A Son of His Father" will be Victor Fleming's first production in the Greater Forty, and the pacemaker for all his other productions to follow.

"That Royle Girl"

"THAT ROYLE GIRL" which appeared serially in Cosmopolitan Magazine recently, will be filmed as D. W. Griffith's first production for Paramount with Dorothy Gish, Jack Holt and Rod La Rocque in the principal roles.

Written by Edwin Balmer, well known Saturday Evening Post author, and novelist, this is a modern story of Chicago—the Chicago of today. It is a truthful story of people whose lives are happily or unhappily routined to a procession of automat restaurants to eat, cabarets to dine, and expensive duplex apartments only for sleep. In this environment the author spins out a story of love, jazz and a murder mystery.

"That Royle Girl" is Joan Daisy Royle, daughter of a bleached blonde mother, and a handsome, apparently well cultured but swindler father. Up until the time she is twenty, Joan's life has been a series of jumps. From one hotel to another—always a little ahead of the bill collectors and the police.

At twenty, Joan is strikingly beautiful, and very attractive to men. She meets Fred Ketler, a typical wise city sheik. Fred is leader of the jazz band at Chicago's leading cabaret, "The Echo," and is separated from his wife, who lives in another part of the city. Ketler lives in the apartment under the Royle's. He is anxious to become a composer, which attracts Joan at once. She sees a potential Mozart in him, and resolves to help him. Ketler becomes infatuated with her, and together they "do" Chicago nightlife.

One night Ketler's wife is found murdered. Suspicion points to both Ketler and Joan. The district attorney is convinced in his own mind that Ketler has removed his wife in order to marry Joan. Ketler engages a crafty criminal lawyer who scans the entire case, and decides that Joan is the biggest asset in court because of the effect of her beauty and charm on the jury. Ketler's unscrupulous lawyer suggests to Joan that she cultivate Clarke, the district attorney, which she does. Something of the honesty and belief in the sanctity of the home and other things life has denied her, appeals to the girl's better nature. But she definitely tells Clarke she is going to beat him in court and save Ketler. The outcome makes a very interesting story.

"The Wanderer"

"THE WANDERER" is included as a special production by Raoul Walsh in the line-up of the Greater Forty.

This valuable property was reserved for several years until last month when Raoul Walsh who made "The Thief of Bagdad" was signed by Jesse L. Lasky to produce the play on the lavish scale that it demands.

"The Wanderer" which is now being produced by Paramount, was originally presented as a stage play at the Century theatre, New York by Morris Guest. It was written by Maurice Samuels.

William Collier, Jr., has the title role. Paramount states that he was selected from a field of one hundred candidates for the part. Ernest Torrence is playing "Tola" and Greta Nissen has the role of "Tisha," the courtesan who is responsible for the Prodigal Son leaving home. Wallace Beery, Tyrone Power and Kathlyn Williams have the other important featured roles.

D. W. Griffith, Paramount producer.

The story tells of Jether the gay, irresponsible son of Jesse, an aged man who lived near Hebron, in the days when David ruled over Judea. Jether thought his elder brother, Gaal, stupid, because he worked so hard, but he worshipped his mother Huldah. There was also Naomi, a beautiful girl of seventeen, whom Jether might have cared for had it not been that she was his cousin.

Then Tola, a merchant came and told of gay times in Jerusalem. Jether was then interested. He dreamed of beautiful women, wine and song; and finally he determined to get his portion of money from his father and seek adventure and the gay life in Jerusalem. Jesse was horror-stricken and refused to consent, but finally permitted Jether to leave. And then Naomi tearfully parted with the boy and gave him a scarf, which he promised to keep forever.

Tisha, the beautiful daughter of Nadina, a Babylonian woman, was the first pretty face that Jether saw. He fell desperately in love with the girl and squandered his money right and left for her pleasure. Misgivings came to Jether when he saw she was free with other men, but he consoled himself in wine and more feasts.

Jether's gold was gradually vanishing, but he loved Tisha blindly, and to prove his love he renounced his God and worshipped the gods of Babylon. The girl continued to flirt shamelessly and gave most of her attention to Pharsis, a rich sea captain. While the revel was at its height, Naomi appeared, eager for news of Jether, saw her scarf tossed about as Tisha caressed the boy, and left before she was recognized.

Then follows the wandering of Jether, before his final decision to return home, and the welcoming of the Prodigal Son back to the family.

"Lord Jim"

"LORD JIM," written by Joseph Conrad, will be Victor Fleming's second production in the Greater Forty. As a novel, "Lord Jim" has reached a tremendous circulation.

The exacting demands of the story in regard to the cast, will require the most careful discrimination on the part of the Paramount production officials, who promise that the cast will show a great array of names.

"Lord Jim" is the story of a man whose life is devoted to the purpose of proving to himself he is not a coward. This is brought on him by the fact that as mate of the steamer Patna, for some inexplicable reason, he deserted the ship and her passengers in the moment of a crisis. He becomes a wanderer trying to live down the accusation of his conscience—that of cowardice.

Jim arrives on a south sea island where he has been assigned to take over the trading post from the drunken, dissolute manager.

Doug. MacLean Production in "Greater 40"

Jim wasn't going to stay very long until he met Jewel, the manager's daughter. She is a beauty. Jim stays, and they fall in love Jim had selected this little island of Patusan because it was known to have dangerous interior tribes always at war, and was supposed to be certain death for a white man.

One of the tribes on the island is headed by an old rascally "rajah," the other an upright native chief named Doramin. Doramin receives Jim like a son, and Doramin's actual son, Dain Waris, becomes Jim's friend. When trouble begins to brew between the tribes, Jim leads the warriors of Doramin on the almost impregnable stronghold of the "rajah's" henchmen. By superhuman daring and courage he takes the stronghold, thereby making a sweeping victory, becomes ruler of the island, and is titled "Tuan Jim" or "Lord Jim." Then he marries Jewel.

"The Wild, Wild Girl"

BEBE DANIELS will be starred in a picture with the provocative title "Wild, Wild Girl" with Rod La Rocque supporting. Eddie Sutherland, has the production well under way at the Paramount Long Island studio.

Bebe Daniels, and Rod La Rocque both have parts which couldn't be more natural for them if they were made to order. Bebe has the role of Rowena Vanderhaydin, whose family is very ultra-ultra. Bebe gives her parents more concern, in a week, than both of her other sisters do in a year.

One day she tosses a few little things in a bag and bows out of the family mansion with the snappy remark that she is going "Where women are women, and don't have to be ladies unless they want to." Rowena craves action—and she gets it. In a department store. The clerks aren't so hard to handle, but the floor walker is a slick, smooth working philanderer. One night, Arthur, the floorwalker, becomes over persistent, and Rowena threatens to use her fists.

Bunny Moore, the role Rod La Rocque is playing, is a "wild, wild boy." He has been ushered out of the fine old homestead, his allowance has been stopped, and is now piloting a taxicab for a living. Bunny happens to be cruising by the store when the crowd collects, and stops his cab. He overhear's Rowena's remark and sees Arthur lounge toward the girl. Bunny measures the distance starts a swing, and Arthur folds up for a nap on the sidewalk. With the meeting of Rowena and Bunny, a fast moving joy-romance begins

"Not So Long Ago"

BETTY BRONSON will star in "Not So Long Ago" and Sidney Olcott will make the production for Paramount.

It is a romance of the picturesque days of New York in the late '70's, a familiar background for Sidney Olcott who made "Little Old New York" two seasons ago.

While "Not So Long Ago" is a later period, nevertheless his understanding of quaint customs and his ability to make capital of a costume romance makes him the ideal director for the work.

Elsie Dover, Miss Bronson's role, is the daughter of a poor New York inventor. Elsie's romantic turn of mind and her desire to impress her girl friends, leads her to tell them that Bill Ballard, son of the wealthy Ballards who employ her as a seamstress, is in love with her. Billy actually doesn't know of her existence.

Sam, a loud type of travelling salesman, who has been conducting an unsuccessful courtship of Elsie, spitefully informs her father about Elsie's romance with Billy Ballard, and suggests that the young millionaire probably hasn't the right intentions. Alarmed, old man Dover visits the Ballards to register his protest. Billy's mother is a very snobbish lady who is trying very hard to marry off her daughter, Ursula to rich Hancock, and is also very worried about her son Billy's interest in a vamp by the name of Rosemond.

Billy Ballard is mystified at first to know what old man Dover is driving at when he accuses him of flirting with a girl he never noticed. Then Billy really takes a look at Elsie and falls in love at first sight. He tells Dover that his affection for Elsie is purely platonic, and the old man leaves convinced that Sam is a trouble maker.

Unknown to his mother Billy calls on Elsie at her home, Billy becomes interested in old Dover's inventions, taking away with him a complicated fishing rod the inventor has made. In the meantime, Sam has found the opportunity of informing Billy's mother about her son's courtship of Elsie Dover—and she is horrified, for fear that it may hurt the match she is making between Ursula and young Hancock. Mrs. Ballard goes to Elsie and convinces her that it is best to give Billy up. Elsie isn't convinced that it is the best course, but is very hurt. And so she pretends that she loves someone else and sends Billy away.

The romance doesn't end there, however. There's a neat twist to it, that brings Elsie back to Billy Ballard.

"The Crossroads of the World"

THERE has been a big demand for the past year for Pola Negri in a picture with an American setting. Michael Arlen, author of "The Green Hat" has been engaged to write the story for production by Raoul Walsh.

The title is derived from the novel, and a typical Arlen idea of having four people from the four furtherest quarters of the world come face to face on the corner of Broadway and Forty-second street. They have never seen each other before. There is the hero, the heroine, the villain, and the other woman. Each has a different, outstanding personality. A twist of fate, a chance circumstance, and these four people begin to influence each other's lives.

The Paramount division of exploitation are concentrating on a campaign for this production that takes in four national tie-ups, and a score of original stunts to be employed locally. There is an international touch to the picture in having the four main characters from four different parts of the globe.

"New Brooms"

WILLIAM DE MILLE'S production of "New Brooms" will be based on the successful stage play of that title.

"New Brooms" was written by Frank Craven, author of "The First Year." The screen play is being prepared by Clara Beranger.

The story concerns a grouchy father, owner of a prosperous broom factory who almost completely conceals a kind heart by his uncertain temper. But he can't fool his middle aged factory manager, Kneeland, or Williams, the family butler, also middle aged. They know and understand Thomas Bates, Sr.

But Tom Bates, Jr. is another type entirely. He is young, carefree, open handed, and an easy spender. Tom Bates, Jr. has some theories about business management which send his father up in the air, but when the old man comes back to earth, he offers to permit his son to run the business for a year, and gives him a chance to work out some of his "fool theories."

The story picks up momentum with Tom's unsuccessful efforts to make good. He soon has a temper worse than his father's. While old man Bates with the responsibility of the factory removed from his shoulders begins to thaw a little, learns how to beam, and finally gets very sunny. Young Bates isn't made any happier when he finds that his father has taken a keen interest in the young and pretty little housekeeper, Geraldine. And the story carries on a fast clip to the strike in the factory, the mismanagement of affairs by Young Bates, and the method with which Bates, Sr., meets the situation and settles everything for his theorist son.

"A Kiss for Cinderella"

THE author of "Peter Pan," the star of "Peter Pan," and the producer of "Peter Pan" will combine again to make one of the Greater Forty.

Betty Bronson in "A Kiss for Cinderella," written by Sir James M. Barrie and directed by Herbert Brenon will be offered by Paramount this year.

"A Kiss for Cinderella" like "Peter Pan" was a Maude Adams play. It tells the story of a half-starved, lonesome, plain girl. Her belief that, one day, a flunky will hand her an invitation to the ball where the Prince will pick her out to be his Princess, are the only bits of happiness in the life of the little slavey who cleaned the studio of Mr. Bodie, the artist, in the daytime, and ran a "Penny-shop" after hours, and dreamed about the ball between.

But the policeman on the beat was suspicious of "Cinderella." Why did she take away all the detachable boards from Mr. Bodie's studio, when the skylight should be boarded up at night so that the illumination will not attract Zeppelins? That's what the policeman wanted to know, and that's why he followed Cinderella to the place she called home.

He found her there, in her shop—where the neighborhood came when it wanted its shoes shined, its face shaved, its illnesses diagnosed, its clothes washed—all for a penny. Cinderella had put the detached boards to use as cribs for her adopted children—three little orphan girls, a French, a Belgian, and an alien child. That, and the fact she was feverish and ill, convinced the young policeman of her innocence. To humor her, he stayed awhile, and Cinderella talked about the ball. She was sure that tonight was the night—the flunky might be there any minute with her invitation. Despite the bitter cold, she decided to watch for him herself, on the steps outside; and there the policeman had to leave her, and his muffler, to go back to his beat.

And there Cinderella dreamed about the fairy godmother come to take her to the ball. What a scene meets her eyes! Everything is made of gold. The King and Queen sit in golden rockers, while Cinderella's three adopted children, in their nighties, occupy gold boxes. The Prince looks strangely like Cinderella's policeman; but oh, how bored he is. He is a pessimist about females and can find none lovely enough to please him. He goes gently to sleep while beauties parade before him. The first test for them is the test of goodness, measured by the thermometer Cinderella uses in her shop; and several beauties are speedily eliminated from the race.

Finally comes the acid test. The Prince is to look at their feet! Only two are left as a result; and even these are labelled by the Prince second and third choice. He vows he feels no palps at all. Then a tumult is heard outside—"Make way for Lady Cinderella"! All the tests she passes to perfection, but the Prince will have none of her. He has not yet seen her small and lovely feet! When he does, he falls at them. He recovers, proposes and marries Cinderella then and there. The clock strikes twelve in the midst of music and as all are taking good licks of the ice cream cones wheeled in on a gold cart, Cinderella's children surround her as her riches turn to rags and spread out their nightgowns to hide her as they rush from the ball.

"Cinderella," the slavey, woke up from her dream. She woke in the home of Mr. Bodie's sister, who had nursed her through her serious illness, after the policeman had found her, half-frozen, on her doorstep. He wasn't nearly as bored as the Prince when he came to see Cinderella. He lost no time in proposing, and Cinderella in refusing—but she made him promise to ask her again, and he did, and she accepted the second time. Then David—that's the policeman—produced "a policeman's idea of a wedding ring." Two beautiful little slippers, which just fit Cinderella's two beautiful little feet. "They're like two kisses!" said Cinderella happily.

"Lovers in Quarentine"

A POPULAR Broadway success "Quarentine" will be adapted to the screen by Paramount under the title of "Lovers In Qaurentine." Bebe Daniels will be starred in this clever comedy, presenting a situation in which we find the wrong bride, but the right bridgroom involved in a series of episodes blending humor and drama.

This is the play as it is being given at the Henry Miller theatre, New York: Miss Daniels' role is that of Dinah Partwell, Helen Hays part in the show. Dinah is a pretty, petit, lovable but daring girl who acts first and thinks afterward. She thinks that desperate situations require desperate remedies, and not the type of girl to give up the man she loves without a good fight for him. The whole plot pivots on the development of this character.

Dinah falls in love with Tony Blunt, who has had many light love affairs but has never really been in love. Tony imagines himself in love with Dinah's married cousin, and plans to elope with her on a steamer. Dinah intercepts a telegram of instructions from Tony to her cousin, and goes on board the ship, stays in the cabin for three days before Tony discovers that he has the wrong girl. Matters begin to call for fast thinking when the ship is stopped by Health officers, and the passengers are ordered to get off on a little island where they are quarantined. Dinah and Tony, referred to by everyone on ship as "the honeymoon couple" are assigned to a cute little bungalow.

A Douglas MacLean Comedy Production

IN the past year Douglas MacLean has ridden on a wave of popularity that places him among the foremost of the comedians on the screen. He has followed one hit with another; contributing a chain of pictures that have made him a valuable box office attraction.

MacLean has built his reputation on "The Hottentot," "Going Up," "The

"Cross Roads of World" To Be Special

Yankee Consul," "Never Say Die" and "Introduce Me." And now public attention, and the interest of exhibitors are focused on the first picture that MacLean will make for release through Paramount. The fact that MacLean has the entire resources of Paramount in back of him, promises well for his continued ascent up the scale of stardom.

"I am glad to be back with the organization that released my first starring picture, 'Twenty-Three and Half Hour's Leave'," said MacLean, signing the Paramount contract. "I shall continue to make my own pictures with the same producing organization as before. But with the resources of Paramount backing me, I am confident that I shall be able to give the public better pictures than ever before."

Right now MacLean and the Paramount production official are busy selecting the best of several popular stories. The titles of these stories will be announced very soon. The Paramount exploitation, advertising and publicity departments are making plans to put big national campaigns in back of these pictures.

"Rugged Waters"

IRVIN WILLAT following his productions of "The Wanderer of the Wasteland," "North of 36" and "The Air Mail" with "Rugged Waters" in which Lois Wilson, Warner Baxter, and Wallace Beery have the featured roles.

"Rugged Waters" by Joseph C. Lincoln was originally a serial story in Country Gentleman, and then for months, one of the best selling novels of 1925.

The following is an outline of the plot:

When a vacancy occurs in the captaincy of the Setucket Life-Saving Station, pride of the northeast coast, Calvin Homer, a fine, upstanding young man and the best man in the crew, believes he will get the job. So does Myra Fuller, the school teacher and village vamp. She goes after Calvin and before he quite knows how it happened he is engaged to her. But, meantime, an accident has occurred at a neighboring station in which the whole-life-saving crew is drowned while attempting a rescue, except one man, Benoni Bartlett. He is hailed as a hero, and on the wave of newspaper bunkum and ill-considered public agitation he is made head of the Setucket station. Calvin, bitterly disappointed, has an impulse to resign but decides to stick it out a while.

It quickly develops that Bartlett, a religious fanatic and slightly unbalanced from his terrible experience, is also somewhat of a coward. Calvin, who rather likes the man, helps him out and covers up his weaknesses. He meets Bartlett's daughter, Norma, and falls in love with her. In a fog he rescues her from drowning. With her limp body in his arms, kisses her passionately. She responds and leaves him, believing they are engaged. Calvin writes a letter to Myra Fuller, telling her he loves another woman, but hasn't the nerve to send it.

In a storm a ship goes on the rocks, and Bartlett, stricken dumb with cowardice, refuses to allow the life boats to go out. Calvin, in a rage, usurps command and supervises the thrilling rescue of the crew of the wrecked vessel. Bartlett is taken sick and Norma, coming to care for him, encounters a garrulous villager who tells her that Calvin Homer mutinied against her father and that, moreover, Calvin has jilted Myra Fuller. Norma is turned against Calvin.

As a result of this, Calvin, now in temporary command of the station, in the midst of a winter of almost continuous shipwrecks, plunges into his work so hard, to forget Norma, that he is soon on the verge of a breakdown. There is another big wreck, and Benoni Bartlett, delirious and raving, rushes out of the house, into a lifeboat, and starts rowing out to the wreck amid the crashing breakers. Calvin, also ill, rushes after him. But it works out to a happy conclusion.

"Wild Horse Mesa"

"WILD HORSE MESA" is the first of the Zane Grey productions in the Greater Forty. That this story was written by Zane Grey, appeared serially in Country Gentleman in twelve installments, and will be produced in an elaborate manner are sufficient to qualify this as one of the big leaders in the Greater Forty.

"Wild Horse Mesa" will have Jack Holt, Esther Ralston, Noah Beery, and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in the principal roles. Esther Ralston, one of the new screen players who made her Paramount debut as Mrs. Darling in "Peter Pan," has the feminine lead in "Beggar on Horseback," and will soon be seen in support of Richard Dix in "California—or Bust" has already shown the charm and ability that make for wide popularity.

The story is based on the tales of the old riders of the West who used to tell about the Wild Horse Mesa, a high tableland where magnificent horses made their habitat.

Chayne Wayner, a lover of horses is determined to capture Panguitch a wild horse which has been driven by hunters to take refuge on the mesa. Chayne joins Melbourne's horse hunting party, and meets and falls in love with Sue, Melbourne's daughter. His young brother, Chess, idolized by Chayne, also falls in love with Sue. And Manerube, a horse thief who has attached himself to the hunting party is attracted by the girl.

The climax comes in the stampede of thousands of wild horses led by the beautiful Panguich, and the efforts of Chayne and Sue to capture him.

Paramount Advertising

THIS year, Paramount is conducting the largest advertising campaign in the motion picture industry. Through the media of The Saturday Evening Post, Pictorial Review, Ladies' Home Journal, Liberty Magazine, all the fan magazines and twenty-four leading farm papers 60,000,000 people in America read about Paramount pictures every week.

The Hanff-Metzger national advertising agency which handles the Paramount account is responsible for the statement that this is not only the largest national advertising campaign ever launched in the motion picture business, but that it ranks high in scope with all national advertising now being conducted in the United States.

It is pointed out that Paramount has been conducting a national advertising campaign in all forms of propaganda for the past nine years and has spent more money in this field than all other motion picture companies combined. The fact is acknowledged by exhibitors all over the country that business arrangements with banks have been facilitated by the exhibitor having a Paramount contract. This is considered by Paramount to be only one of the minor benefits of the nine years' effort to establish exhibitor and public confidence in Paramount pictures.

Paramount's recent addition of twenty-four farm papers covering every state in the country is only in line with the policy, "Paramount's responsibility does not end with the renting of pictures. An exhibitor's success with Paramount pictures is as much the concern of Paramount as it is the exhibitor."

William de Mille, Paramount producer.

Therefore Paramount's advertising in the fan magazines is conducted on a picture by picture policy, close enough to release date to benefit not only the first runs, but the subsequent runs, too. This policy will be carried out in the farm papers, following the approved method of first acquainting the farm paper readers with Paramount screen personalities. Every week 60,000,000 people will read of the new Paramount picture on its way to release, which is the final link in the chain of buying famous stories and plays with waiting audiences. Paramount national advertising, together with Paramount news service is the media which tells a vast waiting audience that their favorite book, their favorite play, has been made as a Paramount picture.

Reaches Heights of Screen Fame

Gloria Swanson is one star of whom it may be said that her artistic growth has matched her increasing popularity as a screen personality. With a large following established by her impersonations of the attractive, widely appealing types she played in the sumptuous domestic dramas produced by Cecil B. De Mille, Miss Swanson's place in stardom was assured and she might have rested on that. But Gloria was not content to stand still, she did the unusual thing and made the daring adventure of broadening her artistic endeavors. The result was an even greater popularity, a reward, by the way, not for her courage and daring, but for the sheer merit of her accomplishments in roles of the most exacting sort.

It was a far cry from the characters she had previously done to that of "ZaZa," which perhaps marked the critical point in her artistic career. This Miss Swanson followed with such triumphs as "The Humming Bird," "Manhandled" and now "Madame Sans-Gene." The record of this brilliant display of versatility and daring is incomplete without consideration of "A Society Scandal," "Her Love Story," and "Wages of Virtue," which she did at intervals between the former works.

As a personality she has captured America and on her recent visit to France, where she married the Marquis Henri de la Falaise de la Coudray, she won applause and countless new worshippers.

SIDNEY OLCOTT

One of the Leading Directors

Sidney Olcott is a pioneer director who has advanced with the industry. He has long been regarded a real leader in his chosen profession and his pictures have shown improvement with each succeeding year. Olcott, after having been an actor in 1906, was Kalem's first salaried director and he made for them "From the Manger to the Cross," which is still regarded as an exceptional piece of work.

Olcott has directed some of the most popular productions of recent years. He came to the front with "Timothy's Quest" and later was assigned the direction of "Little Old New York," which resulted in a real triumph for him. "The Green Goddess," which created a sensation both as a stage play and a picture was directed in its picture version by Olcott. He followed that with "Monsieur Beaucaire," one of the most popular of last year's pictures, and "The Humming Bird," in which Gloria Swanson scored so heavily.

Two of the big productions of Paramount's Greater Forty have already been assigned to Olcott for the coming season and both are adaptations from successful stage plays. "Not So Long Ago" is one of these. It is a romantic comedy from the play by Arthur Richman, which scored a success in New York. Betty Bronson is to have the starring role. The other Olcott production will be "The Best People," which had a successful run in New York and on the road last season.

RICHARD DIX

Accomplished Screen Star

As a portrayer of roles depicting the typical American youth Richard Dix has few equals and no superiors. He has all the fire, dash and personality that goes with this type and as a consequence he is an extremely busy young leading man. Dix usually hasn't even time for a brief rest between pictures. He jumps right from one role to another and each succeeding one seems to bring him added popularity.

These roles are not the easiest to portray on the screen. In fact they call for a vast knowledge of dramatic expression, but there is never a one that daunts this affable young man. One of the most exacting parts Dix has had to enact was that of the young minister in "The Christian" and he did it with such telling effect that he won a veritable host of new admirers. Another performance that stamped him as a finished actor was that in "Dangerous Curve Ahead." He also scored heavily in "Souls for Sale," with the result that Cecil B. De Mille chose him for a prominent role in "The Ten Commandments."

Among other effective performances contributed by Dix were those in "The Stranger," "Icebound," "Unguarded Women," "Sinners in Heaven" and "Manhattan." Paramount promises to keep Dix just as busy this year as he has been in the past and his pictures will be just as eagerly awaited by the fans.

FLORENCE VIDOR

Player of Rare Distinction

With qualities of patrician charm, reserve and a deft sense of humor, Florence Vidor is a unique personality on the screen through her very wholesomeness and normal, poised nature. There is nothing of the exotic or bizarre in her make-up—and she represents on the screen the spirit of old-fashioned romance, with always a suggestion of the days of hoop-skirts and nosegays, however modern her role.

These charming qualities have given her a wide and devoted following among film fans, and she has appeared in a rapid succession of appealing roles. The many pictures in which she has won warm praise include "Main Street," in which she visualized the author's conception of the character to perfection, "Alice Adams," "Barbara Frietchie," where she appeared in the crinolines which so well become her, "The Marriage Circle," in which the lighter side of her personality appeared, "Christine of the Hungry Heart," which showed the depth of her emotional acting, "Welcome Stranger," in which she played another highly sympathetic role, and "Husbands and Lovers", where her naturalness and poise were shown to excellent advantage.

Now she has been placed under a Paramount contract, and will be seen under the most advantageous conditions possible. She has just finished "the picture with the perfect cast," "Are Parents People?" Her next role with Famous Players will be a featured part in "The Trouble With Wives," one of the Greater Forty.

D. W. GRIFFITH

To Produce for Greater Forty

To attempt to characterize David Wark Griffith within such limited compass as this, or even to summarize his contributions to the motion picture art, is well nigh impossible. The impress of his personality is upon so many of our present day stars and directors, that his influence may be said to permeate the entire fabric of the industry. Most of the outstanding developments in motion picture technique in this country have been put into effect by Griffith, who is one of the few truly pioneer spirits in the field.

He is perhaps identified most strongly with "The Birth of a Nation," yet it is unfair to base his record on that alone, magnificent as it was. Most men would have been content with one such achievement, but since that time he has given forth such productions as the colossal "Intolerance," "Hearts of the World," one of the finest of the war spectacles, "Broken Blossoms," still considered by many the most artistic film yet produced, "Way Down East," in which artistry was combined with strong box-office value, "Orphans of the Storm," a great tale of the French revolution, 'America," a sweeping picturization of America's struggle for liberty, "Isn't Life Wonderful?", a daring experiment in the presentation of simple screen realism, and many others of varying types.

Now, once more in association with Paramount, he will produce for the Greater Forty, "That Royle Girl", a vivid story of modern Chicago life and a dramatic clash of personalities. After that will come, "The Sorrows of Satan."

LOUISE FAZENDA

Destined for Biggest Year

Louise Fazenda seems destined for her biggest year in filmdom during the coming year. Her first two pictures of 1925 were on the Paramount program. They are "The Night Club," which shows the comedy Queen in a new guise, a Spanish dancer, and "Grounds for Divorce," a Paul Bern production.

These two pictures will be significant in the comedienne's career, for both characterizations as to presentation and costuming represent a radical departure on her part. Both illustrate the consummate art of the girl who so long was featured as a slapstick comedienne in Mack Sennett comedies. Both show her a facile exponent of subtle comedy drama and proclaim to the world of theatre goers her ability to wear clothes with the best of them.

Louise Fazenda made her first big "hit" in comedy drama in "The Gold Diggers" for Warner Brothers and followed this with another popular role in "The Galloping Fish," a Thomas H .Ince production that has proved a riot everywhere. Since both of these pictures were immense boosters for the comedienne, it was to be expected that her name would keep the electric lights busy which it did. Last year the comedienne appeared in ten different productions, all of which have been big successes with powerful box office appeal. She has been on all the leading programs and had there been more hours in the day and more months in the year could have vastly increased her output for she is exceedingly popular at all the studios.

LOIS WILSON

Consistent and Charming Player

Among that small group of screen players who may be counted on to deliver an interesting performance in any story and any picture, a leading figure is Lois Wilson, the "Covered Wagon girl", who has endeared herself to countless fans through her consistently intelligent and interesting performances, whatever the role in which she is cast.

Lois Wilson is one of the few girls reaching the screen through a beauty contest who have since made good, since she is one of the few who brought something more than beauty alone to her chosen work.

Her characterizations in such pictures of a few seasons ago as "What Every Woman Knows" and "Miss Lulu Bett" will never be forgotten, though she has appeared in a rapid succession of roles since. The list includes "Only 38," a charming performance, "To the Last Man," "Ruggles of Red Gap," "The Call of the Canyon," "Pied Piper Malone," "Icebound," "Monsieur Beaucaire" and those two Western epics, "The Covered Wagon" and "North of 36."

More recently she has again been seen in an elaborate Western picture, "The Thundering Herd," where her wholesome charm was again seen to advantage. "Welcome Home" is her current production. For the Greater Forty, she will be seen in "Rugged Waters" and "The Vanishing American," the former a Joseph C. Lincoln sea coast story, and the latter a Zane Grey romance of the Indian.

SAM TAYLOR

Directing Harold Lloyd

Five years ago Sam Taylor joined the Harold Lloyd organization as "gag man." Today, at the age of twenty eight, he has been selected as Lloyd's director for the first Lloyd-Paramount production, which promises to be the "biggest and funniest" Harold Lloyd picture ever made. At present Taylor is supervising the staff of "gag men" in the preparation of the story which he will shortly direct.

Taylor is known as one of the keenest judges of comedy values and story construction in production circles. In his five years of continuous association with Lloyd as gag man, author, co-director, and now as sole director, he has developed into a specialist on feature comedies and is considered the authority on this type of production. He is the author and co-director of "Grandma's Boy," "Safety Last," "Girl Shy," "Hot Water," "The Rah-Rah Boy," recently completed, and other Lloyd successes.

Taylor entered pictures as a scenario writer for the old Kalem company and during the war edited and titled many of the pictures issued by the United States Army. He later joined the scenario staff of Vitagraph and then journeyed to the West Coast. He has been with Lloyd during the comedian's phenomenal rise to popularity, and recently signed a new contract to direct the first Harold Lloyd production for Paramount.

BILLIE DOVE

Beautiful and Talented Player

Billie Dove is a fitting example of the Florenz Ziegfeld success with the glorification of the American girl, for she is a graduate of that institution and one of many that Ziegfeld may well be proud of. From the day of her advent to the screen she was destined to become one of its most popular players and that destiny has been fulfilled. In addition to her rare beauty she has unbounded charm and talent.

It is only a matter of some four or five years ago that Miss Dove had her first screen role, but in that comparatively short time she has demonstrated a genuine ability for emotional expression. Her rise to stardom came after she had supported Constance Talmadge in "Polly of the Follies" and she then appeared successfully in the Robertson-Cole features, "At the Stage Door" and "Beyond the Rainbow."

Following these roles directors came to an appreciation that Miss Dove was well qualified for almost any type of heroine and her services became very much in demand. She lived up to all the good prophesies made for her in Metro's drama of the deep, "All the Brothers were Valiant." Then followed vital roles in "A Thrill Chaser," "On Time," "Yankee Madness," "Wanderer of the Wasteland," and "The Air Mail".

Since her first picture Miss Dove has played a wide range of roles and in all of them she has displayed real dramatic ability and charm. She will be seen frequently in Paramount pictures during the coming season.

POLA NEGRI

Actress of Vivid Roles

Pola Negri, the Polish star, has just returned from a visit to her home country and her mother. Miss Negri made an extensive shopping tour of Paris and came back more resplendent than ever for the pictures she is to make in the Greater Forty for Paramount.

A popular favorite before she came to this country, Miss Negri had her first American made picture released by Paramount just about two years ago. It was a marked success and since that time her successive releases have endeared her many-fold to her American audiences.

"Bella Donna" was Miss Negri's first picture made in America, and it brought her a contract which has bound her to Paramount ever since then. She has not made a picture for another company in America. She followed "Bella Donna" with "The Cheat," and then with "The Spanish Dancer" and "Shadows of Paris," each a triumph.

Two of the most important stories of the Greater Forty have already been selected for Miss Negri. One of these, "Crossroads of the World" was written by Michael Arlen, whose "Green Hat" is just now all the rage. The combination of star and author assures the success of this production. The other story for the Polish star is "Flower of the Night," written especially for her by that popular author, Joseph Hergesheimer.

VICTOR FLEMING

Skilled in Screen Technique

Before he took up the megaphone with the old Triangle company, Victor Fleming had a somewhat varied career, which however, laid a foundation that eventually made him one of the foremost directors in the industry. It's a far call from an expert auto racer to a motion picture director, but that is what Fleming accomplished. He was among the best of the auto drivers in California, from where he hails, and he was among the best of the cameramen, when he elected to start in that branch of the industry in Los Angeles.

Fleming started directing when he worked as assistant to Allan Dwan, but initiative and talent soon brought results and it was not a great while before he was directing pictures for Douglas Fairbanks and the Talmadges. His ability attracted the attention of John Emerson, who chose him to direct "Red Hot Romance."

Soon thereafter Fleming was operating under the Paramount banner and produced such pictures as "The Lane That Has No Turning," "Anna Ascends," "Dark Secrets," "The Law of the Lawless," "To the Last Man" and "The Call of the Canyon."

Fleming has had so much experience behind the camera and in the production field that no script is too difficult for him. He knows life, dramatic values and photographic technique and the combination is bound to make for directorial success.

HERBERT BRENON

Director of Many Successes

Herbert Brenon for a good many years now has been regarded among the leading directors in the picture industry, but each year seems to find an improvement in his work. He contributed largely to the success of the present season's pictures of Paramount and judging by the assignments given him in the Greater Forty list he seems destined to surpass his past efforts.

Brenon directed one of the greatest successes of the present season when he made a star over night of Betty Bronson in James M. Barrie's "Peter Pan." This trio is lined up again for one of the big pictures of the coming season. Barrie wrote "A Kiss For Cinderella," Betty Bronson will star in it and Brenon will direct it. Another of the important works he will do this year is "The Street of Forgotten Men," from the Liberty magazine story by George Kibbe Turner and described as "The Miracle Man of 1926."

Brenon has directed too many successful productions to start to recall them. At the last count the stories directed by him ran close to 300 and he is still going strong. A few of those which have met with the greatest success are "Neptune's Daughter," "Daughter of the Gods," "The Passion Flower," "The Wonderful Thing," "The Spanish Dancer," "The Breaking Point," "The Rustle of Silk," "The Woman with 4 Faces" and "The Alaskan."

IRVIN WILLAT

THIS director has been identified with successful pictures for several years. He has made many of the screen's outstanding productions. "Behind the Door," a master-piece of stark realism, is still fresh in the memories of movie-goers, though it is six years old.

Mr. Willat started at an early age to make motion pictures his life work. He is one of the few who can look back on fourteen years of active work in the many branches of the industry.

He has the distinction of having made the first outstanding natural color picture—"Wanderer of the Wasteland." He followed this with the universally popular "North of 36." His "The Air Mail" stirred the public. This summer and fall he will continue to make superior pictures.

IRVIN W. WILLAT

Maker of Screen Successes

Irvin Willat has contributed to the screen some productions that will long be remembered, and judging by the stories lined up for him for the Paramount 1925-26 season, he seems destined to surpass any of his previous efforts.

When it comes to the outdoor drama and tales of the sea Willat has no superiors as a director, and those are the stories with which he is to be identified during the coming season. Among them will be "Rugged Waters," a Joseph C. Lincoln novel of the life saving service; "The Enchanted Hill," Peter B. Kyne's latest literary contribution, and said to be one of his very best; and "The Ancient Highway," a James Oliver Curwood serial and novel which is described as a romance of the Canadian north woods.

Though still young in years Willat is one of the real pioneers of the picture industry. He was with the original Imp company as an actor and later with Keystone, Reliance, All-Star, World and Triangle. He produced "The Grim Game" for Lasky and then became associated with Thomas H. Ince, where he turned out some remarkable productions. Among the best pictures to his credit are, "Behind the Door," "Below the Surface," "Yellow Men and Gold," "On the High Seas," "All the Brothers Were Valiant," "The Heritage of the Desert," "Wanderer of the Wasteland," "The Story Without a Name," "North of 36" and "The Air Mail."

WARNER BAXTER

Seasoned Interpreter of Leading Roles

Warner Baxter came to the pictures with an extensive and well-rounded experience in acting—an acquisition which has operated in his favor and which has enabled him to win an eminent place as a leading man opposite some of the screen's most gifted stars. Mr. Baxter had 14 years of training on the speaking stage before entering the picture studios about 4 years ago. He had played in stock, vaudeville and then capped his career in prominent parts in several Broadway productions.

Mr. Baxter has appeared prominently in screen plays of the larger producing companies, including Vitagraph, Robertson-Cole, Fox, First National, Metro, and Paramount. His impersonations have been rendered in casts headed by leading feminine stars and composed of players of wide reputation, yet with each performance this actor has advanced his position to a place in the front ranks of popular screen leading men.

Among the more recent productions in which he scored conspicuously in the leading male role are "Christine of the Hungry Heart," "The Garden of Weeds," "The Golden Bed," and "The Air Mail." Baxter was born in Columbus, Ohio. He began his career in business as an insurance man, but the call of the stage was strong, and Baxter quit considerations of mortality tables and premium rates for the lines of small parts in a series of stock productions.

LUCIEN HUBBARD

Veteran Western Production Editor

Officials of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation regard Lucien Hubbard as one of the most valuable men in their entire organization. In addition to being production editor at the West Coast studios he is an executive of marked ability and an apparently indefatigable worker.

Many a director owes a part of his success to Hubbard and many a star has improved under his ideas. He has a happy faculty of communicating his ideas to directors and stars working with him and of making them see the value of his suggestions. His is a responsible position, a combination of art and executive ability and he has both in just the right proportions.

Hubbard first demonstrated his ability several years ago when as scenario editor at Universal City he supervised the activities of all the companies at work there. He went from Universal to Famous Players and has continued the same kind of work though concentrating largely on some of the western production units. Such popular releases bear his name as "Heritage of the Desert," "West of the Water Tower," "The Call of the Canyon," "To the Last Man," "Wanderer of the Wasteland," "The Code of the Sea," "The Guilty One" and "The Vanishing American." These will be added to considerably before the last of the Greater Forty is flashed upon the screen for the picture-going public.

ADELAIDE HEILBRON

Scenarist Skilled in Screen Technique

Within a comparatively short time Adelaide Heilbron has forged to the front as one of the most prominent scenarists writing for the screen today. Miss Heilbron's skill in the handling of adaptations is the result of her intimacy with the details of production and studio workmanship. For several years she has closely applied herself to a study of the photoplay, gaining her first hand knowledge while acting in the capacity as a continuity clerk and serving in the scenario departments of large producing organizations.

Among the conspicious screen successes with which her name has been associated as the adapter and continuity writer are "So Big," the First National screen version of Edna Ferber's novel, "Lillies of the Field," "Eve's Secret," and for Paramount she wrote the scenarios for "New Lives for Old," in which Betty Compson was starred, and "The Dressmaker From Paris."

Miss Heilbron is a prominent and popular figure in the film colony of Hollywood, where she has lived for several years while preparing herself for the career on which she has now launched with notable success. She is held in high esteem by directors for her ability to turn out scripts that are workable and which embody the full dramatic content of the original story or play expressed in terms of action best suited to the demands of the photoplay.

LAURENCE GRAY

Rising Young Actor

Born and educated in San Francisco, Laurence Gray has had a somewhat varied career in the motion picture industry. After quitting the public schools in his home city he migrated to Hollywood where he hoped at that time to become an executive rather than an actor.

Within a short time of his Hollywood arrival Gray obtained work as a production superintendent at the Paramount studio. While working in this capacity numerous persons connected with the studio persuaded him of his possibilities as an actor and induced him to go into the acting end of pictures. Among these was Bebe Daniels, but for two years Gray did not share the popular opinion.

The East looked like the right field to Gray and he came on to New York, where in the absence of other work he appeared as an extra in "His Children's Children." Returning later to Hollywood he did bits in other pictures. His work attracted attention and he was given an important role in "The Dressmaker from Paris." Paramount officials were so favorably impressed with his work in that picture they placed him under a long term contract and selected him to play opposite Betty Bronson in "Are Parents People?" He will be seen in other Paramount productions during the 1925-26 season.

PAUL BERN

Scores as Picture Director

Few directors could claim better qualifications for that rank than Paul Bern when he was elevated to a directorial berth by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation last year. Since the first picture he made for that organization his efforts have met with marked success. They assigned him the task of making "Open All Night," which was written by Willis Goldbeck, and it met with almost unanimous approval of critics and the picture-going public. In fact it created more favorable comment than any picture of its kind.

Among the Bern qualifications as director were a brief experience on the speaking stage as an actor and stage director. He became in turn a publicity writer, laboratory manager, cutter, scenario writer and editor. This training gave him a keen insight into many branches of picture production before he became assistant to Hugo Ballin, with whom he was associated in many high class productions. Ultimately he became editor-in-chief for Goldwyn at the Culver City studios. In his editorial capacity he prepared the scripts for such pictures as "The Marriage Circle," "The Wanters," "Men" and "Compromised."

Among the directorial successes with which Bern followed "Open All Night" for Paramount were "Worldly Goods" and "The Dressmaker from Paris."

Bern was born in Hamburg, Germany, but came to America as a youngster and was educated in the schools of New York City.

WILLIAM K. HOWARD

Maker of Super-Westerns

During the past year or two there has grown up a new and greater type of Western picture — not the cheaply made and purely melodramatic "shoot 'em up" film of other days, but graphic, stirring portrayals of the West that is fast disappearing. Where the Western of other days dealt only with bald, physical action, these new Westerns have embodied in them the spirit of the pioneers and empire-builders.

A leading figure in this metamorphosis of the Western photoplay has been William K. Howard, Paramount's youngest director, who is being referred to, these days, as "the Frederic Remington of the screen," and certainly much of his work has recalled the canvases of that master depictor of the old West.

Howard's rise has been nothing short of phenomenal. After directing several features for independent producers, he was signed up by Famous Players. Here he was assigned the task of transferring to the screen the Zane Grey stories owned by Paramount.

His efforts were crowned with outstanding success, for he has turned out a remarkable series of entertaining and brilliantly made Western pictures, such as "The Border Legion," which was crammed with sheer action and excitement; "The Thundering Herd," a truly epic work, painted on a vast canvas. He now has in preparation Zane Grey's "The Vanishing American," an Indian epic, for the Greater Forty.

PERCY MARMONT

Fine and Sincere Actor

Percy Marmont might well be characterized as an actor so fine and consistent that neither hopeless miscasting, weak story, nor incompetent direction can mar the excellence of his work. Through pictures good, bad and indifferent he has made his way, always an interesting and charming figure.

Marmont brings to his work a firm foundation of stage training in England, and later in America, having appeared with some of the best companies here and abroad. This has given him a firmness of touch and a finished technique frequently striven for, but seldom attained.

His picture appearances have been many but it may perhaps be said that it was his graphic portrayal of Mark Sabre in "If Winter Comes" which brought him prominently in the foreground as an actor par excellence. He was also splendidly cast in another story by the same author, "The Clean Heart," and here again his talents were given full play. One other characterization should be mentioned in a group with these two, that which he gave in "The Legend of Hollywood". These three are by no means his only outstanding roles, but they rank as particularly happy combinations of story and player.

Marmont is at present at the Paramount Long Island studios, working in "The Street of Forgotten Men" for Famous Players. Others of his many recent appearances include "Fine Clothes," "Daddy's Gone a-Hunting," "Idle Tongues," "Broken Laws,' and "The Enemy Sex."

EDWARD SUTHERLAND

Prominent Young Director

Five generations of the Edward Sutherland family have held a prominent place on the stage and screen, with Eddie holding up the family reputation in the directorial field. His mother is Julie Ring, long a stage luminary and at present playing in vaudeville. He is a nephew of Blanche and Frances Ring and his grandfather was one of the members of the Boston Opera Company.

It is not to be wondered at that Eddie Sutherland knows stage and screen technique and that he is among the leading directors, though one of the youngest. He had quite a stage career himself before going into pictures as an actor. His first venture in this connection was with Helen Holmes in a serial entitled "The Girl in the Game." Next he was with Mack Sennett in Keystone comedies, and then followed appearences in pictures for Famous, Select, Selznick, Realart, Hodkinson and Fox. He played leads with May McAvoy, Bebe Daniels and Eileen Percy.

The first directorial effort of Sutherland was "Coming Through" and it proved a picture of exceptional merit, with Thomas Meighan in the starring role.

By a peculiar circumstance Sutherland, who played leads with Bebe Daniels now becomes her director in her starring vehicle with Rod LaRocque in the Greater Forty, "The Wild Wild Girl." Famous will also have other assignments for him during the coming season.

WALTER WOODS

Skilled Scenarist and Editor

From manager and director of stock companies, Walter Woods graduated to playwright, scenarist and editor. That he is among the leaders in his profession is attested by the fact that he has been identified with the Famous Players-Lasky organization and the James Cruze productions. He will prepare the stories and edit many of the leaders of the Greater Forty Paramount pictures for the coming season.

When the Cruze unit first began to draw its share of the limelight Woods rendered valuable service in an editorial capacity to "The Old Homestead." He was also responsible for the editing of "The Covered Wagon" and the editing had a considerable share in the remarkable success of the picture.

Woods welded a vast amount of varied material into a clear and concise story when he edited "Hollywood." He was equally successful with "Ruggles of Red Gap." Among the Cruze productions for which Woods furnished the continuity were "One Glorious Day," "Is Matrimony a Failure," "The Dictator," "To the Ladies" and "The Fighting Coward." He also did the scenario for "Merton of the Movies," "The City That Never Sleeps" and "The Goose Hangs High."

Among the stories entrusted to him on the Greater Forty list are "Beggar on Horseback," a remarkably successful stage play of the past season, and "The Pony Express," which he is preparing with Henry James Forman.

FRANK TUTTLE

Rapidly Rising Director

One of the most encouraging signs of the past year has been the opportunity given to new talent, not only in acting but in directing as well. Prominent among the figures thus brought to the front is Frank Tuttle, whose current directorial effort is the Richard Dix vehicle, "California or Bust".

Tuttle's interest in things theatrical dates back to his college days, when, in 1915, he was president of the Yale Dramatic Association. This interest remained after he left college, and in 1922, when a group of former Yale men formed the Film Guild, Tuttle went with them as director. High ideals and the pioneer spirit featured the work of this group, and here Tuttle made such pictures as "The Cradle Buster," "Second Fiddle," "Puritan Passions," and "Grit."

When distribution difficulties brought the activities of the group to an end, Tuttle decided to remain in motion pictures, and his next step was a connection with Famous Players as a scenario writer. Here he did splendid scripts for two Gloria Swanson vehicles, "Manhandled" and "Her Love Story", and that for "Manhattan".

In recognition of this work he was then made a director with Famous Players, and in quick succession he turned out such sparkling features as "Dangerous Money," "Miss Bluebeard," "The Manicure Girl" and "A Kiss in the Dark". Now, following "California—or Bust" he will direct "Crossroads of the World".

DOUGLAS MacLEAN

Winning New Laurels

Athletic ability is one of the best assets a screen actor can have who is called upon to play the type roles that have made Douglas MacLean among the most popular of stars. A graduate of Northwestern University, MacLean was a leading athlete there and he has probably never regretted it since he started his stage career following his graduation.

MacLean first came into screen prominence when he appeared in a series of comedies with Doris May for Ince-First National. His "23½ Hours Leave" was a veritable riot and established him as a screen comedian of the first magnitude. He followed this with "What's Your Husband Doing," "Mary's Ankle" and others that scored heavily.

Since the series with Doris May, MacLean has appeared in many pictures and it is of record that all of them have been successes. Hence the tieup which brings him under the banner of Famous Players, who will release his forthcoming pictures.

Among the most popular of the MacLean pictures following "23½ Hours Leave" were: "Sunshine Trail," "Bellboy 13," "A Man of Action," "Going Up," "The Yankee Consul," "Never Say Die" and "Introduce Me."

MacLean will continue to make his own productions, and with Paramount is now lining up a number of stories which will be announced in the near future. The combination is an ideal one

CLARENCE BADGER

To Direct Betty Bronson

Clarence Badger got the foundation for his directorial work as an artist and reporter on Pacific Coast newspapers. Art and the ability to write are a good combination in the making of pictures. Badger was a good artist and a good reporter. Therefore he is a good director and one who is credited with many successes.

He started his screen career as a free lance writer and later was on the scenario staff of Lubin, Universal and Keystone. With the latter company he became a director in 1915. Then he was with Paramount and Goldwyn and made "Doubling for Romeo" and "A Poor Relation." For Universal he produced "Don't Get Personal" and "Dangerous Little Demon," and for Equity, "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight." Then Metro assigned him to such productions as "Quincy Adams Sawyer," "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" and "One Night in Rome."

Probably the first production Badger will make for Paramount for the coming season will be "The Golden Princess," in which Betty Bronson will have the starring role. The story is by Eleanor Gates and is of the Cinderella type. Miss Bronson sprang from an unknown to a star over night and her coming pictures will be awaited with no little interest. When Paramount selected Badger to direct Miss Bronson they showed their unbounded confidence in his ability to make a picture that would at least stand up to the standard set by "Peter Pan."

EDWARD GRIBBON

Comedian and Screen Bad Man

Possessing a rare sense of comedy values, Edward Gribbon in his first work for the screen as a member of the Mack Sennett company displayed an ability which carried him to prominence as a gifted straight comedian. He might have made even greater progress in that direction had he not determined to essay the more ample acting parts of screen bad-man, roles for which his towering physique gave him splendid equipment. But the choice worked in his favor and now Gribbon is revealing a flaire for dramatic expression, which he skillfully combines with a somewhat humorous touch, the effect of which places him in a select group of actors—there are only a few of the stamp—available for these characterizations.

It was under the direction of William K. Howard, one of Paramount's most promising young directors, that Gribbon developed his present talent for humanizing the bad man roles by flavoring the portrayal with personality and an occasional flash of searching humor. He appeared in "The Code of the West," "The Border Legion," "The Three Musketeers," and "East of Broadway" under Howard's direction. In addition to these parts he did a leading role in "Forty Winks" and will be seen in the screen version of Eugene Walter's play "Just a Woman," "The Limited Mail," and is now playing in "Seven Days," which is being produced by Christie.

FORREST HALSEY

Leading Scenarist and Adaptor

With the growing realization of the vital importance of the scenario in the making of a successful motion picture, a few of the veteran scenarists of proved ability are becoming increasingly outstanding figures in the studio world.

One of these few—and a man who has won his spurs through consistently high grade work—is Forrest Halsey, recognized as one of the leading adaptors of the day. Halsey is a veteran worker, and his knowledge of screen craft is deep and true. Knowing every angle of production thoroughly, his scripts are, in themselves, the foundations of splendid photoplays, as shown by the high excellence of the pictures for which he has prepared continuity.

An unusual feature of his record is the fact that in practically every critic's list of the Best Pictures of 1923 was included Halsey's "The Green Goddess," and in practically every list for 1924 were, not one, but two Halsey adaptions, "Monsieur Beaucaire" and "The Humming Bird". Another of his pictures which will be long remembered is "Disraeli", not to overlook another with the same star, "The Ruling Passion".

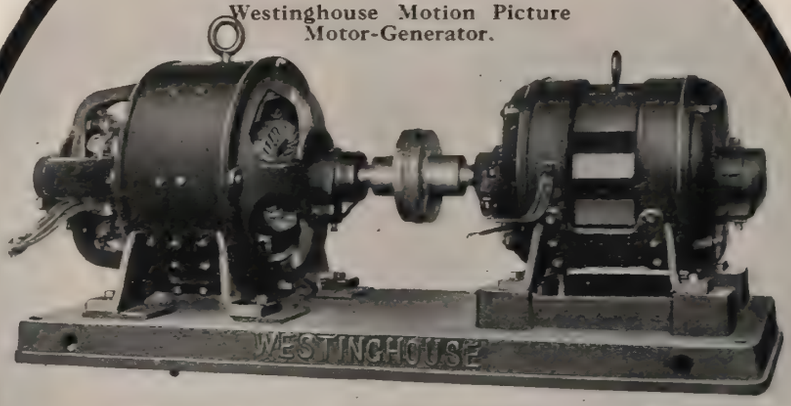
He also did for Miss Swanson "A Society Scandal", and as a result was selected to accompany her to France for the making of "Madame Sans Gene". Here he received the Order of the Palm from the French Academy. He also adapted "Sally of the Sawdust", the current D. W. Griffith production.

GEORGE IRVING

Skillful Director and Actor

The stage lost a good actor but the picture industry gained a good director and actor when George Irving deserted the boards to take up the megaphone with All-Star Pictures Corporation back in 1913. He entered the picture industry as an actor in "Paid in Full" and soon after started directing.

Last year Mr. Irving accepted an offer from Lasky to act in Irwin Willat's "Wanderer of the Wasteland" and since then has appeared in several Lasky productions including "Man Who Fights Alone," "North of 36," "The Air Mail," "The Goose Hangs High,"



William A. Johnston, editor of the Motion Picture News, says of Mr. Irving's performance in the "Goose Hangs High": "Saw our old friend George Irving the other evening in 'The Goose Hangs High,' and he gives one of the finest pieces of acting I have ever seen on the screen. George Irving is one of the best directors. But I imagine he figured things out in this sensible fashion; there are a lot of high class directors these days but painfully few Lewis Stones. So—all credit to him—he made the change. And unless I guess very badly this versatile and highly accomplished actor will figure very prominently from now on."

Irving has just been cast for "Wild Horse Mesa," another Famous Players picture, in which he figures to score more heavily than in "Goose Hangs High."

HOWARD HIGGIN AND SADA COWAN

Brilliant Director—Scenarist Team

It is a conspicuous fact that much of the finest work in the field of motion picture production has been accomplished through the collaboration on many pictures of a group of two or more persons. Certain combinations of star and director, or scenarist and cameraman, or star and leading man, have proved particularly happy—and when that combination has been kept together for several pictures, splendid work has resulted.

Such a combination is that of Howard Higgin, the director, and Sada Cowan, the author and scenarist, who are now with Famous Players-Lasky, producing for the Greater Forty. The latter has written many screen originals and adaptations, while Higgin has had a varied experience, both as director and scenarist. Together, they have turned out consistently high grade results, and it is understood that their first production together for Paramount maintains this high standard.

They recently did in collaboration the script for "Smouldering Fires," an excellent piece of writing. Miss Cowan wrote the continuity for "East of Suez," and adapted to the screen another Paramount success, "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife". Her script for "Lucretia Lombard" and her titles for "Brass" also brought her no little notice.

Their first production for Paramount is "In the Name of Love," to be followed by "The Trouble With Wives", also for the Greater Forty.

JAMES SHELLEY HAMILTON

Originator and Adaptor of Screen Plays

In common with many of the leading motion picture scenarists, James Shelley Hamilton won his spurs as a writer of fiction before turning his energies to the screen. Hamilton wrote fiction for the leading magazines, his stories being mostly of that actionable flavor which marked him as one especially well equipped by imagination and literary capacity to serve the motion picture.

He was an editor of magazines as well as a contributor to their columns and in that capacity served with some of the most widely circulated fiction periodicals. When Hamilton determined to make a study of screen technique he entered that very specialized and efficient picture workshop, the George B. Seitz studio in New York, where Seitz was producing serials for Pathe. Hamilton wrote several scripts for the Serials, a form of continuity of the most exacting sort, making scenarios from his own original stories as well as adaptations.

This training and experience he has turned to splendid account in his later works for the screen. Hamilton is now a member of the Famous Players-Lasky scenario staff. Among the particularly successful adaptations he has made for Famous are "North of 36" and "The Air Mail." He has written the scenarios for "Rugged Water," "The Ancient Highway," "The Enchanted Hill," all of which are listed among the Greater Forty which Paramount has announcd for the coming season.

Madam Sans Gene—
Generally declared to be a triumph for Gloria Swanson personally, but not conceded a good film otherwise. Opened to remarkable business but this dwindled below normal before second week was over (Middle West.).

Pictorially gorgeous; dramatically fair—Busines was good. Holding it a second week (Middle West).

Gloria's latest a wow. Business was excellent throughout the run (West).

The Dressmaker from Paris—
This is a good picture and comment was strong for it. It did a nice week and busines built up steadily (Middle West).

The Spaniard—
Those who liked "The Sheik" liked this one. Fine bull fight, and interesting scenes. Picture has decided entertainment value. Business was fair (Middle West).

This picture has the ingredients of a great sheik feature but misses. The hero is generally liked. The feminine lead, evident-picked for her resemblance to Negri, does not take so well. A lot of them liked it. and a lot of them thought it a wild guess. (Middle West.)

Top of the World—
Interesting melodrama with a good cast. Well received by press and public. (Middle West.)

Devil's Cargo—
A picture that needs to be pushed. (East).

The Charmer—
Among Pola's best. Gives flashes of glory that was her's in "Passion." Nice business with it. (Middle West.)

Coming Through—
Meighan wins new friends with work in this one. Splendidly produced. Business up to standard. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Who Cares—
A good story with good acting and production. Audiences pleased. (Middle West.)

The Early Bird—
Johnny Hines declared to be genuinely funny in this. Well liked locally and played to better than average business. (Middle West.)

One Glorious Night—
A story of sacrifice that took very well. (East.)

Girls Men Forget—
This one made money for a week. (Middle West.)

B. P. SCHULBERG

The Parasite—
A disappointment. Business was off for the week. (West.)

Capital Punishment—
A fair story and production. Business was about average. (West.)

Excellent acting and interesting story based on the faults of capital punishment. Personal appearance of George Hackathorne helped. Business good. (East.)

Loew's Palace ad, over three columns, in the Washington, D. C., Sunday papers, for the opening there of "Proud Flesh (Metro-Goldwyn).

ASSOC. EXHIB.

Introduce Me—
Excellent comedy, splendid entertainment. Everybody liked it a lot. Business was very good. (Middle West.)

Bad Company—
Just an average picture but it has interesting spots. Business, fair. (Middle West.)

METRO-GOLDWYN

Cheaper To Marry—
The title drew them out, the picture doing good business. (Middle West.)

Seven Chances—
Here in real entertainment. Shows Buster at his best. Did excellently with it. (Middle West.)

A succession of laughs and chuckles from Buster Keaton that kept them coming all week (Middle West.)

Daddy's Gone A'Hunting—
A good business getter . Title seemed to arouse curiosity. (Middle West.)

The Snob—
A good society story that pleased them. Box office receipts good . (Middle West.)

The Way of a Girl—
A ogod production that brought good business. (West.)

Man and Maid—
Just another picture but Elinor Glyn's name drew them in for good business. (East.)

This picture is punk. It has nothing especially to redeem it and the fact that Elinor Glynn wrote it attarcts only idle interest. (Middle West.)

This one didn't get over at all. Patrons disliked story. (West.)

The Prairie Wife—
A picture for program houses. Acting fair. Production ordinary. Business off. (East.)

Zander the Great—
A triumph for Miss Davies which played to packed houses. (East.)

Proud Flesh—
Here is an amusing tale and one that is well told. The picture pleased and we did satisfactory business. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Declasse—
Drew excellent business throughout week. Story is made more attractive by a new and happy ending. (Middle West.)

Rather involved, but it gets over in great shape. (East.)

Enticemnt—
A rather poor production with poor story. Box office receipts poor. (West.)

A well told story with a good cast and production. Patrons were well pleased. (West.)

Learning to Love—
This contribution from Constance Talmadge is good for many laughs. They did at this house. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

Dangerous Innocence—
Played to much better than average attendance. (Middle West.)

A rather light story that has its good points. It brought them in. (West.)

Popularity of O'Brien and LaPlante helped on this one which is a fairly entertaining society drama. Business fair. (East.)

The Mad Whirl—
This picture was first rate in the general opinion although there were some who did not care for this type of picture. (Middle West.)

Phantom of the Opera—
No real plot in this production and the high prices charged for setao— etao nnsrlu cmfwyp vbgko admissins combined to make business bad. (West.)

WARNER BROS.

The Narrow Street—
Good comedy film with several interesting features. Not overly good as a drawing card. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Isn't Life Wonderful—
Nothing sensational abouth this, D. W. Griffith's latest. Business was poor. (Middle West.)
Entirely too long and drags, spoiling a poewrful drama. Fair business. (Middle West.)

The Thief of Bagdad—
Played out by long first run. Folpped for second run at popular prices. Wonderful production. (East.)

FOX

Riders of the Purple Sage—
Adds to Tom Mix's laurels in good form. (East.)

Gerald Cranston's Lady—
A society drama with a plot that is not entirely new. Photography is excellent and on the whole should please. (Middle West.)

Deadwood Coach—

PROD. DIST. CORP.

The Crimson Runner—
Priscilla Dean's latest a knockout. It brought them in in droves. (West.)

Charley's Aunt—
Continues to do a great business on an extended run. (West.)

Still going good on the third week of the run. (West.)

Capacity business the first week. Held over another week. (Middle West.

HERE ARE F.B.O.'s TWELVE GOLD BOND SPECIALS

"DRUSILLA WITH A MILLION"

Unquestionably F. B. O.'s finest Gold Bond Special for the season of 1925-26, produced from Elizabeth Cooper's famous book. A magnificent picture with which the finest theatres throughout the world can win added prestige and with which they can set new high box office records. Presented by Mr. O. E. Goebel. An associated Arts picture to be advertised nationally in the SATURDAY EVENING POST with a big campaign to reach and influence more than 20,000,000 people. The players—Kenneth Harlan, Mary Carr, Priscilla Bonner and many others. F. B. O. sincerely believes that the industry will see no finer motion picture this year.

Mrs. Gene Stratton Porter's Latest and Greatest Success

"THE KEEPER OF THE BEES"

It is with a feeling of justifiable pride that we announce our Gold Bond Special, "THE KEEPER OF THE BEES," one of Mrs. Gene Stratton Porter's finest successes. As the most widely read author in all America and with her millions of followers, plus the National Campaign of advertising F. B. O. is now carrying in McCall's magazine with its 2,000,000 circulation per month while the story is running serially, and the big campaign of National advertising being done by Doubleday, Page & Co. on the book edition of the story, this Gold Bond picture is marked for extraordinary results. Watch for release date. Produced by J. Leo Meehan.

2 EMORY JOHNSON
Super Special Productions

This announcement of two Gold Bond Specials from Emory Johnson will be greeted by salvos of applause from thousands of exhibitors. The first Special will be "THE LAST EDITION," a thrilling melodramatic newspaper story starring the great RALPH LEWIS. The second Special will be a tremendous production titled—"HAPPINESS." Both are exceptional productions of big time box office appeal. F. B. O.'s usual high powered exploitation will back both these specials.

"PARISIAN NIGHTS"

A Gothic Picture directed by AL SANTELL starring ELAINE HAMMERSTEIN, LOU TELLIGAN, RENEE ADOREE and exceptional cast. A story of the wickedest city in the world—Paris—surcharged with all the fire and romance, action and drama that can be packed into a featured production. It has class, rare production touches, tremendous appeal both in title and story and gives exhibitors another Gold Bond Special that will register with a resounding smash at the box office.

"IF MARRIAGE FAILS"–?

IN this his latest production Mr. Sullivan gives to F. B. O.'s exhibitors a picture with a great box office title plus a great story. With that lovely young star JACQUELINE LOGAN supported by Clive Brook and JEAN HERSHOLT and other artists, "IF MARRIAGE FAILS" cannot miss, particularly if handled in the manner outlined in our showmans' Press Book. Superbly directed by JOHN INCE.

Laura Jean Libby's Sensational Success

"WHEN HIS LOVE GREW COLD"

Millions of fans will flock to see Laura Jean Libby's romantic story transferred to the screen. And as for title, you can just write your own ticket as to the possibilities of "WHEN HIS LOVE GREW COLD." Just made to order for a mop up for thousands of theatres. Millions have read her books. Millions will want to see this picture. Take advantage of all this special offers you in profits and prestige.

"THE MID-NIGHT FLYER"

Exhibitors from every section of the country have urged us to produce another big time railroad story. Our answer is "THE MID-NIGHT FLYER," a thrilling romance of the rails that will be backed by sensational exploitation, high powered advertising and F. B. O.'s sure fire showmanship. Register this one as one of F. B. O.'s biggest box office winners among our twelve Gold Bond Specials.

"THE FUTURITY WINNER"

Register another sure fire box office winner in F. B. O.'s Gold Bond Special "THE FUTURITY WINNER." Here is a veritable whale of a race track drama surcharged with heart interest, suspense, high powered drama and saturated with thrills. All the lure and color of the turf incorporated into this picture guaranteeing it as a sure fire at the box office as human skill and brains can make of those elements the public always responds to in crowds, mobs and jams. From an original story by John C. Brownell.

"FLAMING WATERS"

One of the biggest screen successes from the box office angle last season was an oil field story. "FLAMING WATERS" will equal or match the record of that picture. It will be spectacular in the extreme, dramatic beyond description and absolutely sure fire at the box office. It's an ASSOCIATED ARTS production, presented by O. E. Goebel. From E. Lloyd Sheldon's famous story, of the lure of the stream of gold. It's another of F. B. O.'s Gold Bond Twelve.

"THE ISLE OF RETRIBUTION"

Stories of the frozen North are as certain in their box office results, perhaps more so, than any other class of production. Your own memory will recall the sensational outstanding successes of this type of release. Edison Marshall's thrilling book "THE ISLE OF RETRIBUTION" is that type of story and embraces every sure fire element of box office appeal. A gripping tale of the Frozen North filmed in the locale of the narrative brings to exhibitors another big time Gold Bond Special of brilliant possibilities.

"A POOR GIRL'S ROMANCE"

Here is another Laura Jean Libby fiction success read by millions during the years this book has been before the public, giving it a ready made audience that not one picture in scores possesses, unless backed by similar advantages. This second Laura Jean Libby Go'd Bond Special will be as sure fire at the box office as anything ever released. It is impossible in this small space to give you all the details. Watch the trade papers for further announcemnts.

YOUR IDEA

IN THE MAIL

LOTS of mail this week, and gosh! how we like it! When you write in, we know what you like and what you don't—and if you send some of your own ads or exploitation, we have a chance to give you a break along with the other fellow, which is as it should be. This is everybody's department, and if you send something to it and it doesn't get in the first time, don't—and we'd put it in extra big type if we could—don't feel that you are being discriminated against or that your stuff didn't make the grade. Space has been limited at times, lately, and it's been impossible to use everything we wanted to. We'd run it all if we could, but the best we can do is pick out an all-around assortment that's as fair as possible to everyone concerned.

Particularly encouraging is the number of newspaper ads coming in from exhibitors, advertising managers and even from newspapers. If you haven't already, pick out some of the best of your recent ads, and shoot 'em in. Make them on new pictures if possible, so they'll be useful to the greatest possible number of other exhibitors. That's one reason we have to run so many big city ads, you know. We'd like to use more small town copy, but by the time we can get them, the picture has often nearly run its course.

NAT L. ROYSTER, managing director of the New Broadway theatre, Charlotte, N. C., sends us clippings of his ads and publicity on "Sandra." It's a neat looking campaign, and perhaps we'll be able to reproduce some of it here shortly. We'll be looking for more copy from Nat.

DON NICHOLS, resident manager for the Durham Amusement Company at Durham, N. C., forwards photos of snappy lobby displays on "Sally," "In Every Woman's Life" and "The Thief." This is the first material we've received from Nichols in some time, but he promises to be a regular contributor again in the future. We hope so, because his displays hit a happy medium between the expensive, over-elaborate display and the inadequate poster paper lobby.

The current issue of The Close-Up, which JOHN F. BARRY edits, and which goes to all the Famous Players theatre employes, is at hand. Since the page size was increased, this is a mighty fine looking publication. The current issue is called a Gloria Swanson Number, and is largely devoted to the "Madame Sans Gene" opening at the Rivoli in New York City.

J. D. HUTCHINSON, manager of the Smalley theatre, Sidney, N. Y., sends us one of his postal card mailings, listing the current programs. It is neatly printed in typewriter type on a regulation government card. These have always seemed to us a first rate advertising medium for the small theatre. Costing only a cent apiece, plus printing, they are inexpensive and get attention.

From the Majestic theatre, Grand Junction, Colo., of which CHARLES DECKER is manager, comes the second issue of the weekly Majestic Revue, published on the Tenth Anniversary of the house. This is an ambitious effort, the current issue being in six full-size newspaper pages, with a roto on "So Big" folded inside. It is filled with interesting publicity material and includes advertising from local merchants. Manager Decker edits it.

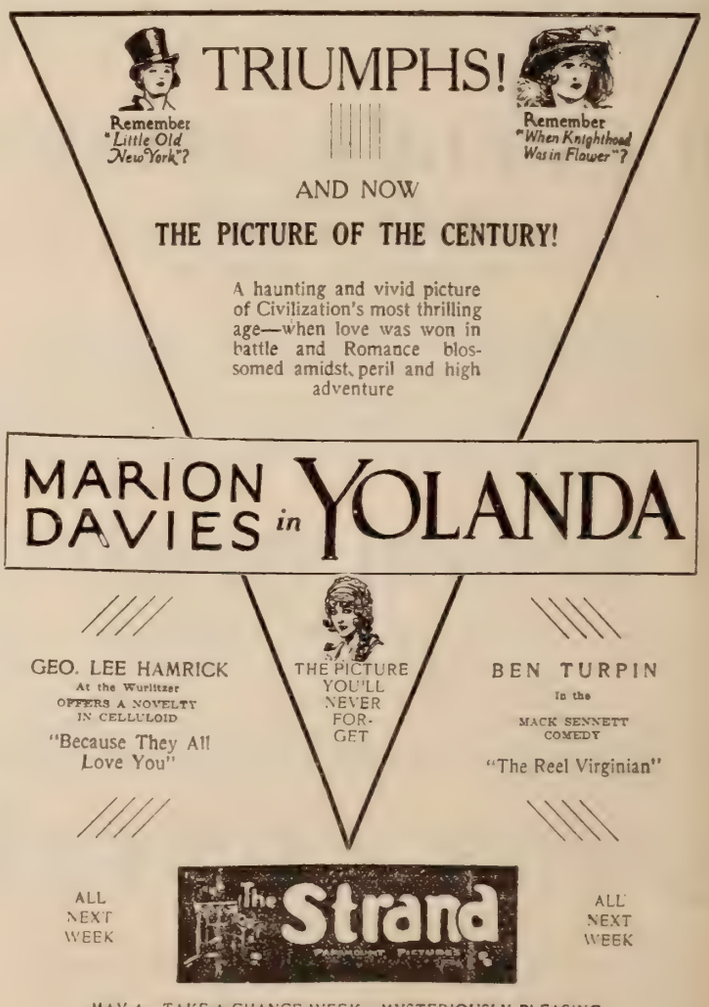
J. A. HUTCHEON of the Strand theatre, Amsterdam, N. Y., mails us a photo of his front and marquee display on "A Thief in Paradise." This was mailed to MOTION PICTURE NEWS at Albany, and by mistake delivered to the State Motion Picture Commission. George S. Hall then forwarded it to us. Thus Mr. Hutcheon has sent us what is probably the first exploitation photo to be "passed by the N. Y. Board of Censors."

The first several issues of the REEL NEWS, published by the Grand theatre, Lincoln, Ill., are at hand. The theatre house organ proposition seems to be booming. The Reel News is four pages, on news print, slightly smaller than the NEWS page. The content is interesting and a good feature is the little weekly editorial on questions of policy. Especially good is the one praising the local newspaper and telling Lincolnians what a good paper it is. Good policy, that.

RALPH W. BRIGHAM, organist of the Orpheum theatre, Rockford, Ill., writes concerning an interesting organ specialty he put across. Motion pictures were taken of Brigham playing a Minuet, and as they were flashed on the screen, he played the number in the dark. It was highly effective.

MANAGER H. BROWNING of the New Haven Olympia comes through with another batch of clippings this week—this time on a Boy Manager contest, concerning which we shall have more to say.

The Binghamton theatre, Binghamton, N. Y., H. M. ADDISON, manager, is celebrating its Fifth Anniversary, and sends us a batch of newspaper clippings on the manner in which this is being observed. More of this later, too.



MORRIS SUSSMAN, manager of Sydney S. Cohen's Empire theatre, in the Bronx, New York City, writes to thank us for telling about his Tom Mix stunt recently. The thanks are all the other way around, Mr. Sussman, and the next time you have something as good we'll be only too glad to pass it on to our readers.

EDWARD L. HYMAN, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand, sends us a mailing card which he is using to acknowledge letters sent to the theatre in connection with its radio broadcasting through WNYC. An attractive photo of Mr. Hyman and the broadcasting artists fills one side, with a message of greeting on the other.

There are many more, but we'll have to hold them until next week. Have you noticed, by the way, that we have increased the "With the First Run Theatres" department to four pages, so as to give room for plenty of ad cuts? This extra page will mean from eight to a dozen more ad specimens each week.

MAKING TYPE WORK

REPRODUCED here, large size, so that it needs slight comment, is a three-column newspaper ad by the Strand theatre, Birmingham, on "Yolanda," which proves our contention that "art ad"

Showing what can be done with type and rule, combined with a little stock material; it was designed by the Strand theatre, Birmingham, on "Yolanda" (Metro-Goldwyn).

AND OURS

effects can be obtained without special artwork, if you're willing (and the printer is willing) to fuss around a little with type and rules and stock cuts.

This "Yolanda" ad would stand out on any page—yet what does it consist of? Three tiny thumbnail cuts—something not as much used as they might be—a little type, a triangle of 4-point rule, a name slug set in a box and broken into the triangle, and the theatre name slug. Consciously or not, the manager has used a basic law of psychology, in that the eye always follows a triangle from base to point—and in this case the point leads right to the Strand name plate. For the rest, the ad speaks for itself.

CUT COMBINATIONS

THE two ads shown here, side by side, on "Madame Sans Gene," both three-column ads, illustrate an idea which we have frequently advocated here. This is the most concrete example we have seen in some time. In the Des Moines theatre ad, Des Moines, the ad mat is used "as is."

The Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, on the other hand, wanting to get a different effect, trimmed off the upper part of the plate and substituted a larger head from another cut, carrying the arm clear across the top of the other cut below it. If you will look closely you will see the point at which they are "spliced." The result, it seems to us, was well worth the bother involved in fitting the two plates together. Anyway, it offers an idea.

WALKING BILLBOARDS

SOMETHING brand new, apparently, in the way of making free tickets serve as walking twenty-four sheets has been worked out by Roland McCurdy, Universal's live exploitation man at Los Angeles. McCurdy used them for the first time in connection with "The Great Circus Mystery" at the Granada and Apolla theatres in Hollywood—and we predict that the stunt will come into wide use.

These tickets are six inches by nine inches in size, printed on colored stock and carrying "The Great Circus Mystery" in large letters. On the back is a line reading, "not good if this ticket is bent," so that when the kids go to the show they have to carry these tickets in their hands. McCurdy suggests that the stunt can be varied by making the tickets in the form of arm bands or hat bands.

ANTIQUES

OLD Fashioned Movies "with atmosphere," as staged at Balaban & Katz's Chicago theatre, were a real laugh getter and treat to the movie fans, and judging from the laughter created by this presentation, many of the audience must have been pioneer movie fans and remember way back when, all for a dime, we served Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin throwing pies, a news reel, an illustrated song, and the privilege of buying crackerjacks and peanuts from strong voiced vender who passed up and down the isles during the intermissions.

The Old Fashioned Movie included a short drama featuring King Baggot, supported by Mary Pickford, and it was thrown on the screen in the good old way, and "thrown" is the right word. The first scene comes out upside down only to be hurriedly stopped and the old familiar slide "the operator is having trouble" replacing it. Throughout the film he continued to have trouble, the picture being out of frame and breaking.

The trouble slides were exact duplicates of those in use many years ago, even to the oily thumb marks on the slide, and each one brought a laugh.

In addition to the feature a male soloist with a cracked voice, sang "You Are The Ideal Of My Dreams," illustrated by old time colored slides, in competition with the crackerjack and peanut vender who, dressed in a white coat, bustled up and down the isles, crying his wares.

While the contrast of the old method of presentation and the last word in modern deluxe theatres added greatly to this specialty, it is one which can be put on in the smaller theatres to advantage.

Also, with the cooperation of Vitagraph, L. R. Barhyelt, managing director of Poli's Palace, Meriden, Conn., arranged an "Old Time Movie Bill" for that theatre recently, with early-day Vitagraph features as the attractions. John Bunny in "Pickwick Papers" and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in "The Professional Scapegoat" were the offerings.

The putting on of an "old time bill" at this particular time was especially appropriate, as Vitagraph, the pioneer among producers and distributors, has just been celebrating its twenty-eighth anniversary. Patrons could not but be impressed by the wonderful progress made in the film art in a few years but, for all that, these arrractions were greatly enjoyed on their own merits, for John Bunny and Sidney Drew are held in affectionate remembrance by many thousands of picture lovers.

Here are some of the posters by amateur artists submitted in the contest used to exploit "The Rag Man" (Metro-Goldwyn) at Loew's State theatre, Cleveland, in connection with the Cleveland News. This shows what sort of a lobby display you can get from such a contest.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Wild Papa"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

AFTER several false starts the "Spat Family" appears to be back in fairly good stride again. The comedy which preceded "Wild Papa" showed considerable improvement over the three or four which went before it, and now this one strikes several high spots in screen diversion.

"Wild Papa" is irresponsible in its construction, and yet there are several moments where the action warrants all the liberties the director has taken with "sequence." It swings about a "heart balm" suit brought against Mr. Spat by a super-vamp who visits his office. He wants to show Ambrose, his brother-in-law that she will flirt with him, and she does in a high-powered fashion. Mrs. Spat enters to see her husband returning caress for caress as the vamp displays her capacity for affection. The suit proves a fun-maker when the vamp tells her story of an innocent girl's betrayal by a crafty philanderer and he spins a yarn about being led astray by an adventuress who lures him into an automobile and then puts him out to walk when he spurns her amorous advances.

Katherine Grant scores conspicuously as the vamp, while Frank Butler, Laure Roessing and Sidney D'Albrook perform with their usual skill in the characters of the "Spats." Jay A. Howe directed the picture, which is one of his best for some time. "Wild Papa" should score as a comedy success.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Queen of Aces"
(Universal—Two Reels)

WANDA WILEY is provided with a pretty good story in this fast moving comedy. Because of her athletic tendencies her father-in-law-to-be has some objections to her as a daughter-in-law and forbids the son the privilege of inviting her to the house party. With the aid of the daughter of the house she dons male attire and attends.

Complaining that the party is not swift enough for her, Wanda is invited to a poker party by father-in-law to-be. The place is raided but the players make their getaway. Wanda then has sufficient on father-in-law to overcome any objections he might have to her and persuades him of the necessity of keeping quiet while the marriage ceremony proceeds. Miss Wiley is as charming and vivacious as ever in the picture, which should be warmly received where these two-reelers are appreciated.—CHESTER J. SMITH

"Fares Please"
(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

AL ST JOHN has another vehicle in which a trick railroad plays an important part in a number of fast-moving comedy incidents. He is willed this dilapidated line by an uncle and proceeds to fix it up so that it will navigate. Just at a time when it is running fairly smoothly an escaped lion becomes a passenger and Al and the colored porter go through some extremely ludicrous evolutions in their endeavor to make their escape.

St. John has every opportunity for the display of his trick bicycle riding and gymnastic ability and they add much to the humorous incidents of the picture. The colored man plays Al a close second and between them they are good for innumerable laughs. The neighborhood houses will undoubtedly thoroughly appreciate this one.—CHESTER J. SMITH

Lucille Kraenick, winner of Jensen & Von Herberg beauty contest at Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore., who will be featured in the J. J. Fleming Production, "The Fighting Parson."

"Dragon Alley"
(Educational-Juvenile—Two Reels)

BEYOND any doubt this is one of the funniest juvenile comedies produced in a long time. It is just one howl from start to finish with more humorous situations and incidents crowded into it than are usually seen in a dozen reels. It is hard to figure how so much gag stuff could be worked successfully into two reels. It is just one humorous situation after another, with no attempt made at a story.

The first reel is fast and furious with the action laid in Chinatown and the youngsters causing general consternation among the excitable Chinese, who become involved in all their pranks. The second reel is even faster than the first. It shows the aggregation at an afternoon dancing class in some of the most ridiculous regalia imaginable. Their antics however, are more humorous than the regalia. As a sure cure for a grouch this one is infallible.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Stereoscopiks"
(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS Ives-Leventhal stereoscopic study offers an excellent and refreshing novelty and it should make new friends for the pictures in this series from Pathe. The subjects have been selected with splendid judgment for their spectacular effects. The scene is an amusement park where there are snake charmers, who push the reptiles out into the audience, and roller-coaster rides which for realism and thrilling effects are the superior of anything this reviewer has seen on the screen. A single reeler that is sure to thrill and amuse your audience is offered here. —T. C. KENNEDY.

"Skinners in Silk"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

WHEN the Sennett forces go in wholeheartedly for slap-stick they can give several cards to their competitors and then finish the game several tricks to the good. There is an instance in "Skinners in Silk." It is slap-stick done on a super scale, with wallops and falls, spills and flying pies and splashings put on in an uncompromising and unrestrained fashion which spells success for them. It has a plot about a husky who wants to buy two shares of stock and sends his wife to inquire for them at a broker's office. One of the partners is something of a flirt, and she tells her husband. He mistakes the other chap for the offender and unbuckles a wallop, declaring that he is going to "slam him on the nose every time he sees him." Since this chap has the coveted shares and they meet many times after that, once at a cabaret where a girl on a swing falls into a huge bowl filled with milk, there are countless "slams" and falls.

Billy Bevan, Natalie Kingston, Thelma Parr, Jack Richardson, and Kewpie Morgan are the principals in a fine cast. Del Lord directed. It is out-and-out slap-stick, well done and, introducing several rather clever gags, we enjoyed it immensely.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Tourists De Luxe"
(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

WILLIAM Hayes and Hilliard Karr have the roles of travelling salesmen. They do a lot of travelling, but no reference is made in the picture as to their salesmanship. They go through a lot of the usual antics in a buck-jumping flivver and succeed in demolishing with it an autoist camp, which they run upon unexpectedly.

All this of course, has little to do with the story which starts in the second reel when the daughter of the proprietor of the camp is abducted by a band of Gypsies. Hayes and Karr give chase in the flivver, overtake the abductors and a lively tussle ensues, during which the horses become unharnessed from the Gypsy vehicle and it dashes wildly down an embankment with all hands aboard.

Rescuers and rescued manage to escape but land on top of a blast just as it is set off. The harrowing finish sees the trio hanging to a highly elevated rock as the debris settles. The picture is rather devoid of laughs and the story could be considerably improved upon. —CHESTER J. SIMTH.

"The Wild West Wallop"
(Universal—Two Reels)

EDMUND COBB is featured in this Western that offers nothing new in the way of story or incident. It's just another Western and fairly interesting as most of them are. Cobb is the young easterner sent by his wealthy father to visit on the western ranch of his friend.

In order to give the visitor a touch of what he really thinks the west is, Sallyann, daughter of the host, frames some real wild west stuff. She is about to be abducted by the ranch foreman at a dance. Cobb rescues her after a desperate fight, only to learn it has all been a trick.

Humiliated and disgusted Cobb decides to return to his eastern home as Sallyann is really abducted by the foreman. She sends word of her plight by her dog and again Cobb effects a thrilling rescue, for which he is rewarded with the love of the girl. Where this type of story is liked there will be no fault found with this one.—CHESTER J. SMITH

Al St. John is starred in "Fare Please," a new Educational-Mermaid Comedy. These scenes are taken from the picture.

Pathe Announces New Releases

Program for Week of May 17 Includes Serial, Comedies and the Usual Fixtures

THE Pathe releasing program for the week of May 17th is headed by the second chapter of "Sunken Silver," the current serial, a Hal Roach "Spat" comedy and the Mack Sennett comedy, "Skinners in Silk."

The second chapter of "Sunken Silver," made from the Albert Payson Terhune novel is titled "On Secret Service." Its action is centered in the Florida Everglades. Walter Miller and Allene Ray are the featured players.

In "Wild Papa," the "Spats," Frank Butler, Laura Roessing and Sidney D'Albrook, are supported by Katherine Grant, George Rowe and Jules Mendel. Jay A. Howe is the director.

"Skinners in Silk," a Mack Sennett comedy, introduces Thelma Parr, Sennett's latest discovery. In the cast are: Billy Kewpie Morgan and Thelma Parr. The comedy was directed by Del Lord.

Another Grantland Rice "Sportlight" is on the Pathe program for May 17th. "All Under One Flag" shows how all the popular sports of summer or winter can be enjoyed without leaving Uncle Sam's domain.

Another of the "Stereoscopiks" series becomes available on the program of May 17th. This number is titled "Luna-cy!" and takes the spectator on a thrilling and highly diverting tour through Luna Park.

Pathe Review No. 20 embodies three interesting subjects. The first is "Black Art," presenting the life-like silhouettes of an Italian artist. The second is another installment of the "Secrets of Nature" series, depicting the life of the May-fly. Savannah is the subject of the Pathecolor installment.

The Aesop Film Fable, "A Fast Worker," Topics of the Day No. 20, and Pathe News Nos. 42 and 43 complete the Pathe program for the week.

Ernie Woods Signed for Sennett Comedy

Ernie Woods, well known on the speaking stage for his light comedy roles, has been signed by Mack Sennett to make his screen debut in the leading role of a new Sennett comedy. Art Rosen will direct and the cast will include Billy Bevan, Madeline Hurlock, Sunshine Hart, Pat Harmon and Barney Hellum.

Another Sennett recruit is Percy Heath, who has deserted the field of dramatic writing to join the Sennett scenario staff, where he will devote his time to thinking up new gags for forthcoming comedies.

Wanda Wiley Comedy Given Release This Week

Century Film Corporation this week announced the release through Universal exchanges of "The Queen of Aces," a two-reel comedy starring Wanda Wiley in the role of an athletic girl, adept at boxing, fencing, horse-back riding and other sports. Al Alt appears opposite the star and other prominent parts are played by George Williams and the Century Follies Girls.

Laurel Completes Tenth of F. B. O. Series

Stan Laurel has completed "The Sleuth," tenth of a series of two reel comedies for F. B. O. and it has been scheduled for release on June 30th. The series is being produced at the studios of the Standard Cinema Corporation in Hollywood.

Jimmy Aubrey Completes "Home Scouts"

Jimmy Aubrey has completed the two reel comedy, "Home Scouts" for F. B. O. and it has been scheduled for release on the company's program for June 15th.

Sennett Bathing Beauty Wins Contract

Eugenia Gilbert is the latest of the Mack Sennett bathing beauties to graduate from the ranks and win her way as a featured player. She was signed to a Sennett contract as the result of her work in Pathe's "A Rainy Knight", and will appear opposite Raymond McKee in his next two reel comedy to be directed by Lloyd Bacon. Others in the cast will be Thelma Parr, Marvin Lobach, Irving Bacon, Sunshine Hart and Miss Gilbert.

Harry Langdon is working in a new Pathe comedy, the title of which is "His First Flame." The comedian plays the role of a fireman and is supported by Ruth Hiatt and Natalie Kingston.

Stills from "The Black Hand Blues," a "Spat Family" comedy produced by Hal Roach for Pathe.

First of "Buster Brown" Comedies Completed

Century Film Corporation announces that the first two-reel comedy in the series of "Buster Brown" pictures, based on the famous comic section character originated by R. F. Outcault, has been completed with Arthur Trimble, juvenile star, in the name role.

The pictures are being made under the direction of Charles Lamont, one of Centurys leading directors.

In all twelve Buster Brown Comedies will be released next season, one a month being scheduled through the Universal exchanges. The present production plan contemplates a series of six to be followed by a second series of six.

For Tige, the dog, Century officials have obtained the services of Petey, a screen dog which resembles Tige to a remarkable degree. Mary Jane, the cute youngster who also is an important character in the Buster Brown comics, is being taken in the Century Comedy adaptations by Doreen Turner. Others cast in the Buster Brown pictures are Katherine Young as the mother, Charles King as the father, Emily Gertes as the maid and Dorothy Vernon as the cook.

All-Comedy Programs Are Popular in San Francisco

San Francisco is the latest stronghold to turn to the all-comedy program. The Egyptian and Aztec, first run houses, recently staged all-Pathe comedy programs which caused Max Graf, managing director of both houses to wire the Pathe office as follows:

"It is the first time an all-comedy week has been tried in this city, and our business is beyond expectations."

The Granada followed the Egyptian and Aztec with a program made up of the Associated Exhibitors feature comedy, "Introduce Me," an "Our Gang" comedy and an Aesop Fable. The short subject comedy offerings were from the Pathe program, with the semi-weekly issues of Pathe News completing the bill.

"Helen and Warren" Series of Eight Short Features

For fifteen years Mable Herbert Urner's magazine page series, "The Married Life of Helen and Warren," has held a leading place in America's journalistic field, and now for the first time under a contract with the author, Fox Film Corporation will produce during 1925-1926 season eight of these stories in two-reel form.

An actor and actress widely-known to picture patrons will appear as the main characters with exceptional supporting casts. The series, the Fox company considers, should prove of immense drawing power to exhibitors.

Hammons Hears England Laud Short Subjects

E. W. HAMMONS, president of Educational Film Exchanges, just back from a six weeks business trip to England, was the guest there at a debate of the Round Table, at which the question of short subjects was much discussed.

Thomas Ormiston, president of the C. E. A. spoke at some length on the value English exhibitors are finding in American made short subjects in lending strength to their programs. He was followed by Major Gale, a leading British exhibitor, who recommended the diversity of short subjects to his fellow exhibitors.

Hammons and Pat Dowling. the latter representing Christie Film Company, spoke on the method of advertising and handling the short product in America.

Walter Hiers in scenes from "Tender Feet," his new starring comedy for Educational.

Larry Kent and Alberta Vaughn to Co-Star

F. B. O has signed Larry Kent, well known juvenile, to a long term contract and he will co-star with Alberta Vaughn in a new series written especially for F. B. O. by H. C. Witwer and Sam Hellman. Kent has appeared in support of a number of prominent women stars of filmdom.

Shooting on the series will start as soon as the last chapter is completed on "The Pacemakers," in which Miss Vaughn and George O'Hara are co-stars. The name of the director of the new series has not yet been made known.

Several Comedy Leads Cast for New Roach Comedy

Jay A. Howe has started production on the second of the new series of two-reel comedies which Hal Roach is making for the Pathe schedule. The cast assembled for the picture is made up of several well known comedy leads, among them Al St. John, Lige Conley, Dot Farley, and Lucien Littlefield recent acquisitions to the Roach stock company.

The players, all of whom are well known for their work as leading players in the short comedies, will be co-featured with Martha Sleeper, Marjorie Whities, James Finlayson, George Rowe and Al Hallett, under the policy laid down for this particular series, in which no single player is selected for staring honors.

Four Century Comedies for May Release

Four two reel Century comedies are scheduled for release through Universal during the month of May. In the order of their release they are, "Itching for Revenge," starring Eddie Gordon; "The Queen of Aces," starring Wanda Wiley; "Love Sick," starring Beth Darlington, and "Slick Articles," in which Harry Engle and Hillard Karr are co-featured.

"Itching for Revenge" was released May 6th. "The Queen of Aces" goes to exhibitors May 13th, "Love Sick" May 20th and "Slick Articles" May 27th.

Fox News Cameramen Win Promotions

Fox News has given promotions to two of its staff cameramen. They are Jack McFarland and Tracy Mathewson. McFarland, a newsreel man of wide experience in the Texas and Mexican territory, and a field representative of the newsreel for the past three years is elevated to the status of staff cameraman for the southwest.

Mathewson is a pioneer in the newsreel field. He relinquishes his standing as a Fox News field cameraman in Atlanta to assume the more responsible duties of staff representative for the south, east of the Mississippi.

Pathe Beauty Contest With Serial

SIMULTANEOUSLY with the release on May 10th of "Sunken Silver," the Pathe ten chapter serial based on Albert Payson Terhune's novel, "Black Ceasar's Clan," a national beauty contest will be inaugurated by Pathe, in which $3,000 in awards will be made, and the winner will have an opportunity to play in the next Pathe serial.

The contest will be advertised in a number of nationally distributed magazines. The winning girl will receive a four week's engagement at $100 a week and a $1,000 cash prize. There will be twenty-four cash prizes in all divided as follows; second prize, $750; third, $500; fourth, $250; fifth, $100; two prizes of $50 each, eight of $25 each, and ten of $10 each. In case of a tie each contestant so tied will receive an equal award. Winning candidates will be selected by a board of judges from photographs and letters submitted.

Regional News from Correspondents

Texas

WILLIAM EPSTEIN, well known theatre man of San Antonio and the president of the Main Realty company, who will erect a million dollar theatre at the corner of Main and McKinney avenue has announced that a hotel structure is contemplated in connection with the theatre. The hotel and theatre will be constructed along the same lines and the same color scheme will be used throughout.

The Folly Theatre, Houston's newest picture playhouse, opened Saturday at 4.00. The Folly is a popular price theatre and will feature three changes weekly. Its equipment is new throughout. P. Crown, former owner of the Crown theatre is owner and manager of the Folly.

Two Hills, Lloyd from San Francisco and Paul A. from Boston are now organists at the new Texan theatre. Neither of the Hill boys had met until early this week when they arrived here to take up their duties at the Texan. Each had heard of the other and his work as an organist.

P. V. Wesseley, Producers representative in south Texas was in town talking with Abrams and Weiner, owners of the Rialto, this week. Mr. Wesseley has just returned from a trip through south Texas and reports that a good rain throughout his entire territory will help business a 100%.

The new cooling system now being connected at the Majestic theatre will be ready for work next week according to Eddie Beamer, manager.

Houston will have vaudeville all summer as announced by the management of the Interstate Amusement Company last week. Top prices will be 50 cents. This includes a picture program also.

Denver

Last Thursday afternoon, a fire broke out in the projection booth of the American Theatre during the showing of the films shortly after five o'clock. Several hundred patrons, mostly women and children, fled to the exits. However, no injuries resulted owing to the quick action on the part of the theatre authorities and the fire-safety appliances of the booth. Considerable smoke poured out of the auditorium, but outside of that most of the damage was confined to the burning of part of the film. The automatic shutters of the booth were instantly closed, and the operator put out the fire with an extinguisher before very extensive damage had occurred. It was reported the damage did not exceed $200.

Mr. Harry Lustig, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn, and R. J. Garland returned yesterday from their general sales convention which was held in New York City. After holding a sales conference with all Metro-Goldwyn salesmen of this territory, Mr. Lustig proceeded to Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, and Seattle, Washington, where he will meet Mr. Feist, the general sales manager of the Metro-Goldwyn organization.

Edward Hearn, making his first starring appearance for Fox in "As No Man Has Loved."

Scenes from "City Bound," Universal one-reel comedy featuring Charles Puffy and Billy Engle.

Max Schubach of the Midwest Theatres Company announces that he has taken over the ownership and management of the Cameron Theatre, one of the most attractive South Denver suburban houses. Earl Kerr, formerly booker for Educational, has been engaged as the active manager of this theatre.

W. H. McDonald, representative for Deluxe, has just returned from a successful sales trip to the Wyoming territory.

C. T. Perrin, one of the leading exhibitors of Casper, Wyoming, was a visitor in the city this week. While here, Mr. Perrin was appointed to act on the Board of Arbitration, substituting for Mr. Ashworth, who was not able to be present.

Lou Gullette of the Paris Theatre, Santa Fe, N. M., suddenly appeared in film row this week. Lou had threatened to fly down to Denver in an aeroplane, but changed his mind on account of unfavorable weather conditions. Mr. Gullette is probably the only exhibitor in this territory who possesses an aeroplane, although no one was much surprised when he secured one, for the reason that Lou is one exhibitor that does a little different.

The Rialto and Victory Theatres in Denver are planning on taking a very important part in Music Week activities in Denver this year. The Rialto Theatre will allow its orchestra to devote a portion of its time with vocal artists to entertain the patrons of this theatre between shows. The Victory Theatre will turn its entire staff over to one of the various organizations taking part in Music Week for a short part of the program.

Few Denver managers were out of the territory during the past week. The fact that an unusual number of exhibitors were in the city probably accounts for this fact.

Among those visiting film row this week are Charles Klein of the Black Hills Amusement Company circuit of theatres of the Black Hills of South Dakota; Paul Krier of the Star Theatre, Walsenburg, and his brother, E. J. Krier, who is manager of the Curran Theatre, Boulder, Colorado; Max Kohn and Frank Fairchild, of the K. & F. Amusement Company, operators of a chain of theatres in Colorado and New Mexico; Johnson and Bangs of the Strand Theatre, Rawlins, Wyoming; Earl Nye, manager for the Carl Ray Amusement Company houses of Cheyenne, Wyoming; M. C. Gerhart of the Empress Theatre, Ft. Collins, Colorado; P. H. Hoppen, operating the America Theatre, Longmont, Colorado, and the Rialto Theatre of Loveland, Colorado; R. J. Murray, manager of the Eaton Theatre, Eaton, Colorado; J. E. (Tommy) Tompkins, owner and manager of the America Theatre, Colorado Springs, and A. F. Allen of Agular, Colorado.

Sid Weisbaum, manager of the F. B. O., and Jack Krum, manager of United Artists, managed to get in a day out of the territory by making a short run up to Longmont, Loveland and Ft. Collins.

Lon T. Fidler, manager for local Warner Brothers' Exchange, has just left for a two weeks' sales trip into the New Mexico territory.

The baseball game between the manages and employees, held last Saturday afternoon, resulted in a track meet and endurance contest. The final score was 29 to 19 in favor of the managers. Jack Krum of United Artists started out as umpire, but before the game was over, five umpires had been used. Nine innings were played, covering a period from 2 P. M. to shortly before dark. Few managers were seen around film row Sunday morning.

Sid Weisbaum, manager of local office of Film Booking Offices of America, has received instructions to leave for Chicago next Wednesday to attend a nation-wide sales convention of his organization.

H. W. Braly and the Paramount sales force have returned from their sales convention just held in Los Angeles, California.

L. D. Hendricks of Mt. Vernon was at the Des Moines exchange settling up his accounts.

Joseph Mansfield, who plays the flute in the Capitol Theatre orchestra, was a "flu" victim, but he's now back at work.

Kansas City

THE new Centre theatre, a suburban house at fifteenth Street and Troost avenue, Kansas City, has been remodeled and refurnished by its new managers, J. D. Lynn and W. D. Vaughan. In addition to new lighting effects, a new Hope-Jones-Wurlitzer pipe organ has been installed. The seating capacity of the remodeled house is 1,500.

"Tell all the film peddlers that I am not at home, so they won't waste time and money," reads a postcard from D. Filizola, manager of the Empress theatre, Fort Scott, Kas., who is in Galveston, Tex.

The Pantages theatre, Kansas City, managed by Walter Finney, is receiving fair returns from a popularity contest. The five best answers forwarded through the mail will be good for tickets to the show.

"If I have to have a man roll a peanut around the block to attract attention to my house I'll get into some other kind of business," said Howard E. Jameyson, advertising manager of the Miller theatres in Wichita, Kas., last week. "I am a firm believer in dignified newspaper advertising. Prestige always pays in the long run."

Henri Ellman, president of Capital Film Exchange in Northern Illinois and Indiana.

Miss Catherine Murdock, secretary-treasurer at the Garden theatre, Kansas City, this week identified a man by the name of Elmer Smith, held at police headquarters, as one of the bandits who on April 13 held up the Garden theatre and robbed Miss Murdock of $800 in checks and cash. She identified some torn $1 bills which she had patched together with a peculiar brand of paper, the money being found on the alleged bandit.

A number of changes in the personnels of Kansas City exchanges were made last week. Ralph Heft, former First National salesman was promoted to the head booker's desk, while Frank Baxter, who has been covering Northeastern Missouri for Fox, has resigned. Bert Edwards has joined the First National sales force and will cover Southeastern Kansas and Southwestern Missouri, Educational having employed Will Sheridan, who will work in the Northern Kansas territory, Gorden Craddock, First National salesman, having been transferred to the Northwestern Missouri territory. Truly B. Wildman, former P. D. C. manager in Omaha, who returned to Kansas City, decided not to enter business for himself, but, instead, took over the management of the Enterprise branch office at Dallas, Tex. H. H. Murdock, formerly with Metro-Goldwyn, joined the Fox staff, while Marty Williams, veteran of the Kansas City, joined the Paramount sales force.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City territory last week were: Herb Thatcher, Lyric, Abilene, Kas.; E. E. Gosline, Sunflower, Peabody, Kas.; S. E. Wilhoit, Jefferson, Springfield, Mo.; Charles Sears, Sears Circuit, Nevada, Mo.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kas.; F. G. Weary, Farris, Richmond, Mo.

E. P. Hill, chief traveling auditor for Fox, and R. G. Wyckoff, supervisor of accessories, were Kansas City visitors last week. M. A. Levy left behind a busy office to make a hurried trip to New York to attend the Fox sales convention, but worse than that was the fate of Stanley Mayor, Fox salesman, who almost wept because he was ill of the "flu" two days and couldn't obtain a single contract.

"Make this summer a hummer," is the new slogan adopted by T. O. Byerle, First National branch manager.

C. F. Senning, Educational branch manager, after fifteen years of work without a vacation, has been granted a ten-day leave of absence.

C. E. Mayberry, district manager for P. D. C., was a busy visitor in Kansas City, as was Louis Reichert, P. D. C. branch manager, who has been spending most of his time in the territory.

E. C. Rhoden, Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., manager, left for a workout in the territory, as did Rube Melcher, one of his salesmen.

Buffalo

HAROLD and Mrs. Lloyd, the latter known to film fans as Mildred Davis, visited Buffalo and Niagara Falls Monday evening, April 27, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy, the former production manager for Lloyd; and Joe Reddy, publicity purveyor. The party came from the west coast via the Canadian Rockies. Harold got a real kick out of the nature beauty at Niagara Falls. It was his first visit there. In the early evening the party returned to Buffalo and were the guests at a dinner in the Buffalo Athletic club, which was attended by Walter Hays, president of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y., Inc., and Mrs. Hays, Michael Shea, head of the Shea interests in Buffalo; Mr. and Mrs. Basil Brady, the former the local Pathe exchange manager; Vincent R. McFaul, managing director of Shea's Hippodrome; Eugene Markens of the Pathe sales staff and the members of the Lloyd party. Following the dinner the party visited Shea's Hippodrome and Shea's Court street theatre. Harold was lured into a box long enough to have Julius Tannen, one of the stars of the bill, introduce him to the audience and the non-goggled Harold blushingly bowed to the customers. The party left late in the evening when they will remain several weeks.

The installation ceremonies of the Film Board of Trade were held Monday evening, May 4 in Stein's Hotel, Orchard Park, N.Y. This place was selected because of the artesian well nearby in deference to the dry stand of President Frank McCarthy. The new officers were installed with due ceremony. Several prominent exhibitors attended the event. The return to Buffalo was made in the wee sma' hours. Among those in attendance were Mr. McCarthy, Henry W. Kahn, Earl Kramer, C. W. Anthony, Marvin Kempner, Sydney Sampson, retiring president; Basil Brady, Eugene Markens, Harry Dixon, Colonel Howard F. Brink, Joe Miller, Ray Powers, Richard C. Fox, Fred M. Zimmerman, William Sherry, Bill Rowell, J. Emerson Dickman, Jimmy Speer and many others. Of course there was some grape juice noted and the banquet was one of which mine host Stein could well boast. The event was one of the most successful in the history of the local Film Board. Mr. Samson was praised for his successful conduct of the affairs of the board for the past three years.

Joan Meredith, signed to a long term contract by Chadwick Pictures Corp.

The Schine Theatrical corporation has invaded Buffalo. This company which has been adding links in its chain of 40 or so houses in the state by acquiring houses all over western New York, has taken over the operation of the Olympic theatre on Lafayette Square. The Olympic has been operated by Universal for the past year. The lease has only a year or so, however, to run, an extension having been granted some time ago because a bank, owning the property, was not ready at the time to extend its building operations. Lewis W. Schine was in Buffalo last week end to confer with Manager Ray S. Averill, who will remain under the new regime. The Olympic has been running double feature bills of late. No change in this policy has as yet been announced.

Carr & Johnson of Jamestown, N. Y., have leased Celeron Park on Chautauqua Lake and commencing May 30 when the park will open, will install pictures and perhaps vaudeville in the large theatre on the ground.

The Capitol theatre in Dunkirk, N. Y., operated by Lally Brothers, has discontinued pictures temporarily and will install a stock company.

Eddie Brunner, managing director of the advertising accessories department at the Buffalo First National Exchange, was the hero of a wild chase after auto thieves the other night. Eddie was driving home in the wee sma' hours of the morning when a cop commandeered him and his machine and told him to catch a flivver which was disappearing in the distance. Eddie stepped on the gas and after doing 50 and 60 through the streets, finally overtook the lizzie and forced it against the curb. Two of the men jumped from the stolen car and the funny part of it is that these two escaped from the cop, while the third was caught by Eddie who took a wallop at the bandit's beezer. The Buffalo papers failed to mention Eddie's part in the midnight ride.

An application for a permit to build a $35,000 picture house at Thurston road and Midvale terrace, Rochester, has been made by Jacob Levy, 16 Rhine street, Kodak Town.

The Schine Theatrical corporation has obtained a long term lease on the O'Malley skating rink in Exchange street, Geneva, N. Y. While the plans have not been officially made public, it is understood that the company plans to enlarge the Temple theatre, by an addition to the rear, and to make it a vaudeville house. The O'Malley rink is to be turned into a theatre with a large seating capacity, and will be used while the work is in progress on the Temple, and in all probability will be continued as a picture theatre afterwards. The building was opened as a skating rink last fall. The Schine company also controls the Regent and Smith Opera House in Geneva.

The Lyceum theatre in Ithaca, N. Y., which has been operated the past season exclusively as a picture house, will close the latter part of May and will reopen in the fall with a permanent stock company, according to an announcement by Joseph F. Hickey, president of the Lyceum company.

While hundreds of people sat in the Regent theatre, 1017 Parade street, Erie, Pa., the other evening, entirely unaware of what was going on, four fire companies battled a stubborn blaze in the adjoining building. As the crowd left the early evening show they were surprised to find fire fighting apparatus in the street and firemen working on the building next to the theatre. Erie is having a fire every week, it seems.

Twenty-seven hundred children gathered in the Eastman theatre last Saturday for the first of the special shows for the boys and girls of Rochester and gave a ringing answer to the question of Will Hays, "What are you going to do about movies for the children?" Major Ward P. Woolridge of the committee on public relations cooperating with the Hays organization, was in town for the event. The major believes this type of show will soon become a country-wide institution. He said that experience had shown that eight reels were about all that would hold a child's interest at one show. At the Eastman the program is arranged to run approximately an hour and a half and includes the main "Story picture," nature study, travel, animal, cartoon and educational subjects.

Sidney C. Allen, owner of the Allen theatre in Medina, N. Y., has taken over the Lyndon theatre in Lyndonville. Lyman Beecher has operated the Lyndon for the past two years. The house was built in 1913 by Frank Starkey who also owned a theatre in Hilton. They were the first of such enterprises in either town. In 1915 the Lyndon was destroyed by fire. Subsequently the site was bought by C. D. Vickers and the new Lyndon was built on the old foundation. Mr. Vickers conducted the business until two years ago when he sold it to Mr. Beecher for $7,000.

Captain Nungesser, the French ace of the air, will make a personal appearance in Rochester the week of May 17, at the Victoria theatre.

On May 4 the Avondale, Flash and Star theatres, owned by Fred M. Zimmerman, John Fennyvessy and Dan Buss, respectively, in Tonawanda and North Tonawanda, were taken over by the Sharondale Corporation. All bookings and pictures bought by the three houses have been taken over by the corporation.

Maurice Cohen, one of Buffalo's veteran film men, has been engaged by Manager Marvin Kempner as a member of the sales force of the Paramount exchange. Maurie will cover the Rochester territory, where he has many exhibitor friends.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Rochester will stage a ball May 20 in the Kodak Town's convention hall. Jules Greenstone has been re-elected president of the league.

Miss Hilda Kazanowski, co-manager with her brother Stanley of the Rivoli, one of Buffalo's east side community theatres, was married the other day to Ben Krystaniak, a prominent attorney.

Fred M. Zimmerman, manager of the Buffalo office of the Producers Distributing corporation, expects to leave soon for the P. D. Co. convention on the west coast.

Manager Charles W. Anthony of the Buffalo Vitagraph or rather Warner Brothers-Vitagraph office, has left for the west coast convention of the new organization. Charlie says when he gets out there he is going to see the sights if it costs him $3.50. C. W. Taylor and Andy Bader have been added to the local sales staff. Leo Murphy, demon salesman, is now in complete control of his flivver once more. He lost part of the carburetor the other day and the dern critter ran away with him. Leo couldn't stop the boat.

The Powers Film company, 230 Ridgeway avenue, reported to the Rochester police that the office of their plant had been entered early the other morning and an unsuccessful attempt made to force the safe. The office was ransacked, but nothing was taken.

Frank Mayo was in Buffalo the past week appearing in person at the Lafayette Square.

Evelyn Brent, who has just started her newest starring vehicle for F. B. O., "The Face on the Air."

Central Penn

KEEN rivalry existed between C. Floyd Hopkins, Harrisburg representative of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres, and Mrs. Hopkins, in the city-wide campaign conducted there in the latter part of April in which $310.000 was raised to support the local welfare organizations in the present year. Mrs. Hopkins headed a team of women in the drive and Mr. Hopkins was captain of a men's team.

Toward the end of the drive Mr. Hopkins, with typical sense of humor, declared at one of the public meetings of the campaign that some of the money he had solicited had been disappearing from his bureau at night and mysteriously appearing next day on the record to the credit of Mrs. Hopkins' team. Mrs. Hopkins made counter charges, all in the spirit of fun, and then challenged her husband's team to raise more money than her team before the close of the canvass. When the final figures were in, Mr. Hopkins' team showed a total of $3,988 collected, and Mrs. Hopkins reported $3,635.80 While Mr. Hopkins thus had a shade the better of the argument, the total number of subscriptions obtained by his wife's team was 219, while Mr. Hopkins' team had induced only 196 persons to subscribe. So it was mutually agreed the honors were even.

Plans for the formal opening of the Regent theatre, Harrisburg, under auspices of Marcus Loew, Inc., of New York City, was planned for May 11, the house having passed to Loew control a week before that date, having been purchased from Peter Magaro who has successfully conducted the theatre for a number of years.

The Loew interests announced elaborate plans for the opening, including the presence of several noted film stars.

The general policy of the house as a motion picture theatre will remain unchanged under the new ownership, except that an orchestra will be installed and all pictures will have a special musical score appropriate to the subject matter of the picture. This will be the first picture house in Harrisburg to have a regularly employed orchestra at all performances.

Extensive renovations and redecorations have been made in the theatre in the last few weeks. It has been confirmed that Jasper F. Turano, who has for several years been assistant manager, will act in the capacity of manager, succeeding Mr. Magaro, the retiring owner. There will be no other changes in the personnel of the staff of employes.

The acquisition of the Regent give the Loew interests their first foothold in the capital city of Pennsylvania. Louis K. Sidney, division manager of the Loew interests, said Harrisburg will be the only Pennsylvania theatre outside of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh where film pictures will be musically scored.

National Music Week, beginning Sunday, May 3, was observed in many motion picture theatres of Central Pennsylvania with special musical programs at all the performances. In Harrisburg there was a city-wide observance of the week, including special music in the churches, theatres, department stores and factories.

A further development of the policy that several Harrisburg churches have adopted in conducting motion picture shows, at which usually silver offerings are lifted, is the plan of Grace Methodist Church of inserting paid advertisement of its picture shows in the amusement columns of the newspapers alongside those of the theatres. A display advertisement in the Harrisburg Evening News on April 27 announced "Flaming Barriers, with Antonio Moreno, Walter Heirs and Jacqueline Logan" would be shown on the screen in the basement of the church on that evening.

A fund of $2,500 has been given to the Reading Hospital building fund as a memorial to the late Claude L. Carr, one of the founders of Carr & Schad, Inc., which conducts a chain of picture theatres in that city and Lebanon. The gift was from Mrs. Beulah Carr Nevin.

The last show to appear in the Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, a Wilmer & Vincent legitimate house which is to be torn down and rebuilt by November 1 for use as a vaudeville and motion picture theatre, was "Blossom Time," which appeared there on May 11. That closed the season for the Orpheum and the following day the work of demolishing the old theatre was begun.

The Chamberlin Amusement Co. were very fortunate in securing the services of W. D. Ascough to manage their Victoria theatre in Mahanoy City. He is a man of high calibre and although a resident of Mahanoy City a comparatively short time, he has interested himself in many things pertaining to the welfare of the community. Recently, Mr. Ascough delivered a very interesting address before the board of the East End Association.

DON STAPLETON, manager of the Centre Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, pulled off a brilliant bit of detective work when the residence of his father, B. F. Stapleton, owner of the Centre Theatre, was entered by burglars late Saturday night, May 2, the goods taken including two ladies handbags containing $164 and two valuable fishing rods. When the robbery was discovered Sunday morning, Don Stapleton made a close examination of the room from which the bags were taken and was rewarded by the finding of a piece of paper bearing a name. This proved to be a valuable clue because the burglars were traced thereby, being arrested by local detectives within a few hours. The thieves confessed and informed the detectives that they had thrown the handbags into the Ottawa river after securing the money. They received heavy sentences. Don Stapleton received front page publicity in The Ottawa Journal because of his success as a sleuth.

Raymond Cavanagh, in charge of publicity, exploitation and advertising for Marshall Neilan productions.

Articles of incorporation have been taken out under the Companies Act in Canada by N. and A. Lawand of Montreal, Quebec, for the two attractive houses which they now operate in that city, the Dominion Theatre and the Laurier Palace. These are handsome neighborhood houses which are conducted on an independent basis.

Miss L. Franklin, the bright young daughter of J. M. Franklin, manager of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, appeared as the star artist before the Women's Canadian Club, composed of the aristocratic clubwomen of the Canadian Capital, at the club meeting in the Chateau Laurier, Thursday, April 30. Miss Franklin is an accomplished violinist even though she is only 14 years of age. She is already a gold medalist.

Ray Peck, director of the Canadian Government Moving Picture Studio at Ottawa, is attending the annual spring convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers of which he is a committee member. Mr. Peck addressed the Gyro Club of Ottawa on April 29 on the subject of "Moving Picture Development," showing several of the latest Government film releases.

John C. Green, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Guelph, Ontario, has been receiving some wonderful publicity in Canada because of the fact that references were made recently to the fact that he was in charge of the first moving picture presentation in the Dominion of Canada some 29 years ago. This presentation, according to Mr. Green, took place at a summer park at Ottawa, Ontario, and the performance consisted of the screening of four 50-foot length "productions." The projection machine used was the invention of Thomas A. Edison, the projector being leased from Mr. Edison on a contract. A short time after the Ottawa innovation, a Frenchman landed at Montreal, Quebec, it is stated by Mr. Green, with short moving pictures made by Lumiere of Lyons, France, and it was there that the second group of films was shown, this also being in 1896.

J. M. Franklin, manager of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, left for New York City on May 2 for his usual semi-annual visit in the United States amusement centre for the purpose of looking over bookings and arranging for various attractions for the Ottawa house.

Bert Lytell who has the leading role in Vitagraph's "Steele of the Royal Mounted."

Salt Lake City

C. F. PARR, manager in this city for Producers Distributing Corporation, returned this week after making a trip of the key centers of Montana, in the interest of the new product that is coming up under the P. D. C. banner following the recent expansion of the activities of this corporation.

Glen H. Allen, assistant manager and booker at the local Producers Distributing Corporation, was the recipient this week of the prize that is striven for valiantly among all of the bookers with Producers all over the division, the Western Division Champion Booker banner. This much coveted award comes to Allen for the securing of the greatest number of play dates in the Western division, he having been victorious in the fourth period. Allen says with a smile on his face as he gayly rattles à portion of the twenty-five berries that accompanies the pennant, that he is going to keep it right where it hangs at the local office.

Mel Wilson, who was recently appointed special representative for P. D. C. out of the Salt Lake City, Denver and Butte offices, leaves Monday for Denver after a two weeks' sojourn in these parts. Wilson was recently manager in Denver for Famous Players-Lasky.

Pete Stewart, now selling on the road out of the United Artists exchange in this city, is heading into headquarters after an extremely satisfactory trip into Idaho. Stewart was formerly short subject salesman for Pathe in this territory. Jack Connors has been covering the state of Montana for United Artists, headed for Butte where he will wind up his trip.

George Mayne, owner of the Preferred Pictures and Super Feature Independent exchange here leaves Saturday night for a swing over the entire state of Idaho. He anticipates being on the road about six weeks. Elwin Peck will have charge of the affairs of the office during his absence.

J. Leonard Tidwell, southern Utah salesman out of the local Fox exchange returned to this city after a mighty successful trip over his territory.

Keith Pack, booker for Fox in this city, is managing the affairs of the exchange in masterful fashion during the absence of Art Schayer, exchange manager who is in New York attending the convention. Charles L. Walker is doing his stuff in the Idaho section this week.

It is announced at the local Universal exchange that effective Monday the office hours will be from eight o'clock in the morning to 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon during the summer season. A placard is posted on the front door announcing to the wary and unwary alike that such will be the case.

Samuel Henley, Universal branch manager, will return to his headquarters tomorrow after a jaunt through Idaho.

L. E. Metzger, special representative for Carl Laemmle, will arrive in this city within a few days according to a letter received at the Universal exchange today.

L. A. Davis, manager in this city for F. B. O., returned this week from Montana.

W. K. Bloom, Montana salesman for the F. B. O. office, has established his headquarters in Butte, and will henceforth travel that state from that city.

Joe Solomon has been added to the sales force out of the local F. B. O. exchange, and has been assigned to the Utah, Nevada, Idaho territory. He resigns from the local Warner Brothers exchange to accept his new position.

Davis leaves next Wednesday for Chicago to attend the F. B. O. convention at Chicago which will convene May 9. Upon the completion of the meeting he will go to his home town Philadelphia for his vacation.

Don McElhinney, who joined the local Universal exchange selling force last week is making his initial trip into the territory this week with Idaho as his objective.

Ed. C. Mix, popular film man here, started in his new capacity as manager for Associated Exhibitors in this city last Monday. He is spending his first week here acquainting himself with the product, and will hit the trail next week into the territory. Mix was recently manager of the Kinema Theatre here, the Universal owned theatre.

R. S. Stackhouse, Vitagraph local manager is highly elated over the consummation of the recent deal by which Warner Brothers acquired the control of Vitagraph. He is enthusiastic over the proposition as presented for this territory, feeling that the wonderful product which will be opened up by the combining of the gigantic holdings of both companies will offer an opportunity of unlimited scope. He just returned from Montana, and will leave shortly for Nevada.

David T. McElhinney, recently manager of the Associated Exhibitors exchange here from which position he resigned to become special representative out of the local Vitagraph office is making his first trip into the territory this week under his new banner. He is working Idaho.

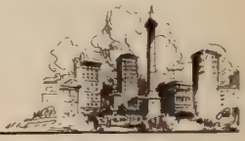
George E. Jensen, Montana salesman for Vitagraph is turning in some great business in that state, according to Manager Stackhouse.

W. G. Seib, manager of the local Pathe office spent two successful weeks in Idaho, returning the first part of this week.

A. G. Pickett, newly appointed manager in this city for Famous Players-Lasky returned home last night with his bunch, from Los Angeles, where they attended the international convention en masse (whatever that might mean). He said that it was the most wonderful convention that it had ever been his pleasure to sit in at, adding that the scope of the business transacted was splendid.

George L. Cloward, Metro-Goldwyn chief in this city, returned Wednesday from New York City where he attended the convention. He said that the meeting was an entire success in every way.

Harry J. Lustig, Manager of the Western Division for Metro-Goldwyn, will arrive in this city tomorrow morning and will conduct a sales conference at the local office tomorrow afternon on subjects relative to distribution policies governing the new product. The salesmen will be in from their territories.



Among the out of town theater men who were conspicuous on the local film mart this week were George Lindsay, owner of the Star Theater, Eureka, Utah; Steve Deal, operating the Star Theater, Springville, Utah; J. J. Gillette, Strand Theater, Tooele, Utah; J. B. Ashton, Columbia Theater, Provo, Utah; S. I. Goodwin, Royal Theater, Lehi, Utah and Frank White, Realart Theater, American Fork, Utah.

The Paramount Theater inaugurated a contest this week whereby contestants will sell season ticket books in different priced lots. With each book sold a certain number of votes are credited the seller. At the end of the contest the one with the most votes will receive a beautiful new automobile, with other attractive prizes going to other participants. Many have entered as contestants.

Carl A. Porter, manager of the Victory Theater, who attended the Famous Players-Lasky convention in Los Angeles last week as an invited theater manager will return to this city next week.

San Francisco

R. R. BOOMER, popular manager of the Cameo Theatre since it was opened, has been appointed general manager of the Clemmer Theatre at Spokane, Washington, which has just been purchased from "Doc" Clemmer by the Universal interests. Leon Doane, prominent assistant manager of the Cameo and well known in local motion picture circles, has been appointed manager of the Cameo.

Theatre and film managers of Northern California, along with civic leaders of the Bay Cities, gave a banquet and dance at the Fairmont Hotel the night of April 28, in honor of A. M. Bowles of this city who was recently appointed general manager of the West Coast Theatres and whose office will be in Los Angeles. Chester H. Rowell acted as toastmaster. Chief among local officials were: E. Rainey and Thos. Murphy, representing the film exchanges; Morgan Walsh, local manager of the Federated Film Exchange; Carol Nathan, local manager of Universal; C. Muehlman, local manager of First National; P. Weinstein, acting manager of Metro-Goldwyn; G. C. Blumenthal, local manager of Educational and Herman Wobber, district manager of Paramount. Charlie Thall, assistant manager under Bowles, who will look after affairs in the local office, was asked to give a speech and many wished him luck. Bowles will be general manager of the Los Angeles and San Francisco offices.

Film celebrities from Hollywood have promised their personal appearance at the annual theatrical revue, pageant and ball of San Francisco chapter No. 3, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, Saturday, May 9.

A big outdoor party for the Tubercular Ward of the County Hospital was recently given in this city and Nat Holt, managing director of the California Theatre, was kind enough to take complete charge of the party and Max Dolin, leader of the incomparable California Orchestra, and his men played for them. All were thanked by the patients.

Frances Fox, usherette, of the California Theatre, has been selected as one of the 25 girls who are to pass on the pulchritude of the men of San Francisco at Castro Parlor's Picnic and Sports Carnival the first part of May, at Fairfax Park.

Charles A. Nathan, local manager for Universal, will leave for Chicago, May 6, where he will attend the Universal sales conference. Fred Gage, district manager for Universal, and D. S. Mitchell, Los Angeles manager, will accompany Mr. Nathan. The men also will visit the film centers of New York.

Seattle

THE dock of the Pacific Steamship Company was a busy place during the sailing of the H. F. Alexander last week, as it was the scene of the departure of a large squad of Famous-Players Lasky officials and employees en route to the international convention at Los Angeles. Included in the party made up of Seattle and Vancouver representatives, under the leadership of George P. Endert, manager of the Seattle exchange, was W. Kelley, A. A. Haley, A. W. Friemel, R. S. Bell, N. Levant, R. C. Brown, J. E. Archer, H. T. Porter, W. Hansher, J. R. Allen, Miss E. B. Haskin, Mrs. H. T. Porter, Miss A. Potter, Miss M. Muir, Miss A. Emminger, Mrs. J. L. Allan and Morris Segal.

A. C. Raleigh, former exploitation and advertising director for a number of Los Angeles film concerns and more recently associated with one of the leading theatrical enterprises in Spokane, last week joined Manager Fred G. Sliter's local First National organization, and now directs all advertising, publicity and exploitation from that office. Mr. Raleigh will make his headquarters in this city, and will make short trips from time to time in order to help suburban and small town exhibitors in the exploitation and publicity on stellar First National attractions. New offices for his use have been fitted up in the local First National exchange.

Herbert Sobottka, former assistant to J. Willis Sayre, advertising manager for the Jensen-VonHerberg theatres in Seattle and more recently assistant general manager of the Jensen-Von Herberg enterprises in Wenatchee, has returned to this city and has taken over the management of the Neptune Theatre. The Neptune is the leading suburban house operated by the same organization, and was formerly managed by J. S. Howard, who left recently to take over further duties in the East.

Al Rosenberg, general manager of the DeLuxe Feature Film Exchange, handling state rights subjects, left last week on a combined business and pleasure trip to San Francisco. He expected to be away for two or three weeks, during which time the DeLuxe office is under the able direction of Jack Rosenberg and his corps of assistants.

No sooner had Anna Q. Nilsson and her party of film celebrities left this city for location near Bellingham than the Seattle residents were treated to a visit from another famous star. The second time it was none other than Harold Lloyd who registered at the new Olympic Hotel, minus the famous spectacles but with the equally-famous little wife, formerly Mildred Davis of Seattle and Tacoma. The Lloyds spent a short time in this city after a visit with Mrs. Lloyds' parents in Tacoma. They were enroute to New York City, via the Canadian Rockies, and were accompanied by John L. Murphy, production manager; and Joe Reddy, publicity man for the Lloyd productions.

Boris Malsky, noted Russian tenor and former star of the Petrograd grand opera, was a featured performer on a recent program offered to patrons of the Strand Theatre by Manager Albert Finkelstein. Mr. Malsky was in this city en route to the East Coast, and was prevailed upon by Mr. Finkelstein to appear for one week at the Strand prior to the beginning of his trip across the continent.

A. H. Huot, manager of the Film Booking Offices exchange, returned to this city recently after an extensive trip into Spokane and the Eastern Washington key centers. During Mr. Huot's visit in Walla Walla, the temperature reached a height of 85 degrees, breaking all heat records in that city for so early in the season. A good year of crops will mean generally improved theatre business in that territory, according to Mr. Huot's reports upon his return.

O. O. Ruth and H. E. Ulsh, owners and proprietors of a number of theatrical enterprises in and around Mt. Vernon, spent a short time on Film Row last week, buying and booking pictures for the next few weeks. Warmer weather has brought a lull in business in that territory, the exhibitors reported to the film magnates.

E. G. Abbott, owner of the Dream Theatre in Sedro Wooley spent a few days in Seattle recently with his house manager, Mr. Renfro. At the present time Mr. Abbott plans elaborate remodeling and renovating of the theatre, including the installation of a new modern motion picture theatre organ and new lighting effects for the auditorium and stage of his house.

Miss Florence Stewart, head usher at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre, recently celebrated her third year's association with that house, where her pleasant smile is becoming recognized by Blue Mouse patrons as one of the theatre's most attractive features.

B. B. Vivien of the Empire Theatre, Anacortes, and Fred B. Walton of the Bellingham Theatres, Inc., of Bellingham were visitors on Film Row last week, where they spent several hours booking film for the next few weeks' programs.

Paul R. Aust, Western division manager for Associated Exhibitors returned to his office in Manager L. A. Samuelson's local Pathe exchange last week, after a tour around the Eastern and Southern Washington territory. He plans a trip into Oregon within the coming few weeks, also.

No reports have been received on Film Row from Frank Jacobin, whose Hamilton Theatre at Hamilton, Wash., was totally destroyed by fire recently, but it is expected that plans will be made shortly for the erection of a new structure, as the Hamilton was the only house in that territory and was the sole source of entertainment for residents of that entire district.

Albany

OUT in Minnesota, where Charlie Stombaugh used to fish before he became manager of the Pathe exchange in Albany, there was no necessity of sneaking up on fish, such as anglers are obliged to do along the trout streams of the Empire State. Perhaps that explains why Mr. Stombaugh didn't have luck last Sunday when he spent a portion of the day along a trout stream near the Massachusetts line. Mr. Stombaugh had all the rods, reels and lures imaginable, but nary a fish did he get. Frank Harris, who is also connected with the Pathe organization, and who was in town for a few days, went along with Mr. Stombaugh. He took several pictures of Mr. Stombaugh whipping the stream.

C. R. Halligan, of the Universal exchange here, never belonged to the fire department in Green Island, but he played the part of fireman to perfection the other day when a large truck caught fire near the office. Seizing a hand extinguisher, Mr. Halligan dashed out and put out the flames before the city's fire department arrived on the scene. Mr. Halligan was showered with praise but up to the present time no one has said anything to him about meeting the expense of refilling the extinguisher.

Lew Fischer of Fort Edward, who has several theatres in New York state, bought the Bradley in Fort Edward last week, and will immediately install new seats and redecorate the interior. The theatre is one of the oldest in this part of the state, having been built a full half century ago.

The Graylin, in Gouverneur, which is a Papayanakos house, scored heavily last week, in connection with a showing under the auspices of the American Legion Post of the town. There was a male quartet and an enlarged orchestra while the members of the local G. A. R., marching to the theatre with the Flag flying at the head, were guests of honor.

Reeves Eason, who will direct exclusively for Columbia Pictures during next two years.

Harry E. Rosenquest, of New York, who is connected with the contract department of the Universal Film company, was in town during the past week, transferring the booking system to the home office.

Sam Scribner, general manager of the Columbia Amusement company, and for whom Oscar Perrin, of the Leland and Clinton Square theatres in Albany, worked for no less than seventeen years, dropped into town last week, and incidentally called on Mr. Perrin, who was as pleased as the proverbial basket of chips, to see his old time boss. Since Mr. Perrin has been obliged to spend three days a week, including Sunday, at the Empire in Glens Falls, he has become an extremely hard man to find.

Charles Marshall, of the Bridge theatre at Ausable Forks, was along Film Row during the past week. Dropping in at the Universal exchange, he left four boxes of candy, two for the inspectors and two for the girls employed in the office. Naturally everyone present told Mr. Marshall that he wouldn't remain away so long the next time.

William Shirley, of Farash Theatres, Inc., of Schenectady, has been chosen as director-general of the Schenectady county Choral Society, which will give a concert at the State theatre in that city on May 22, and which will include a chorus of not less than 100 voices. Mr. Shirley is considerable of a musician, both at the piano and the organ.

The lobby of the Strand in Schenectady is to be considerably improved this summer. The center rail is to be removed and the center portion of the lobby is then to be transformed into a flower garden with a fountain and all the rest that is supposed to make up a first-class garden.

Harry Rose, brother of James Rose who has four theatres to his string now, did not fancy managing the Columbia in Rensselaer, resigning after the second week. He has been succeeded by William Aukett. Mr. Rose is now running serials on each Saturday in all of his houses and declares that they are drawing trade. At his Rensselaer house, he put on his first children's matinee last Saturday and the idea took so well that the house wasn't able to accommodate the kiddies that showed up.

William Shirley, of Schenectady, sports three watches and has a home in which there are six clocks. Just why the number of watches and clocks, he doesn't make clear. One watch he wears on his wrist, another was given him by the film managers of Albany, and a third he bought from whatever change was left over at the end of the week.

Earl Raifstranger, who runs the "Mohaiwe," of Great Barrington, Mass., believes in exercise. The other afternoon was a fair sample. A round of golf or two and close to par at that, and then an evening of bowling. Is it any wonder that he looks the picture of health?

If Charles Walder, local manager of Associated Exhibitors, could have his own way, he would eat every night in Housatonic, Mass. Along with Frank Harris, of the Pathe organization, Mr. Walder struck that town one night last week and while hanging around waiting for an exhibitor to show up, the two men dropped in at a church supper. It was so good that Mr. Walder and Mr. Harris not only took two tickets, but paid for four and never regretted that.

Alec Herman, manager for First National, was in New York city last week, attending the convention. Herman Vineberg, manager of the Mark Strand, in Albany, moved into his new home last week. So did Amos Leonard, Pathe salesman, in Syracuse.

Mrs. Catherine Farrell, and her son Harold, are doing a splendid business in running the Lincoln in Schenectady, a 17 cent house seating 800 persons, and as spick and span as could be desired. Mrs. Farrell has just invested in a new car, and as a result the plan to redecorate the house will have to be postponed for a few months. The Lincoln is sporting a brand new lobby frame that is a perfect beauty and one that Mrs. Farrell takes a great deal of pride in.

George Dwore, of the Cameo and Capitol theatres in Schenectady, is at the wheel of a new car, purchased during the past week. While Mr. Dwore recently received his lawyer's sheepskin, he is still associated with his father in handling the two houses.

When you want to find Claude Fish, of the American, in Schenectady, drop in on some night other than Monday or Tuesday. It so happens that Mr. Fish is lieutenant in the Arab Patrol of the Shrine in Schenectady, and he is also an officer in the local lodge of Elks. A pretty busy man is Mr. Fish and a bit more so nowadays as he is fixing over his home.

Mrs. Benjamin Taylor, an exhibitor in North Adams, Mass., is back on the job after spending a portion of the winter abroad. H. E. Haff, of Adams, Mass., who owns the Photoplay theatre there, is remodeling his home. Mrs. C. K. McCabe, of Lenox, Mass., keeps busy in running a theatre nights and in looking after her father's plumbing business during the daytime.

Elmer R. Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, passed through Albany on the Twentieth Century Limited, last Wednesday on his way west. Charles Henschel, eastern district manager for Pathe, dropped off in Albany on his way from New York to Buffalo.

Allene Ray, Pathe serial star ,and her crossword beauty spot.

Miss Betty Feuer, the twenty-year-old manager of the Crescent theatre in Schenectady, hasn't her driving license yet, due to the fact that she remains at the theatre until nearly midnight and finds it a hard proposition to get up mornings. She is taking lessons, however, and will probably be able to visit Albany soon.

The new organ in the Empire theatre in Glens Falls, was dedicated last Sunday afternoon and evening with a demonstrator sent on by the Robert Morton company. There was a large crowd present. Incidentally, John Garry, manager of the Empire, and former manager of the Clinton Square in Albany, is to be married in June to an Albany girl.

Walter Hays, of Buffalo, president of the New York state M.P.T.O. was in town during the past week. Mr. Hays said that while he naturally expected a slump in business during the next few months, due to daylight saving as well as the hot weather, that the best pictures obtainable would continue to be run at the company's houses and that there would be no let down in the entertainment offered.

Charles Stombaugh, manager of the local Pathe exchange, is authority for the statement that he does not wear loud shirts, and furthermore is not addicted to red ties. Of course last week Mr. Stombaugh sported a shirt that might easily be used for crossword puzzles.

Mrs. Tony Veiller, wife of the manager of the Lincoln theatre, in Troy, is at the Samaritan hospital in that city, following an operation last Monday.

EIGHT years to a day from the date Marcus Loew entered the Birmingham theatrical field with the Bijou, Loew's Temple, renovated at a cost of $100,000 was thrown open to the theatre-going public as a combination vaudeville and picture house. The opening was attended by prominent citizens the managers of other Birmingham theatres and a number of Loew executives from other cities.

Among the executives from other Loew houses here were: Thomas H. James, manager of Loew's Grand theatre, Atlanta, formerly manager of Loew's Bijou here; W. A. Finney, manager of Loew's State theatre, Memphis; K. D. Toup, manager of Loew's Crescent theatre, New Orleans; Earl M. Fain, manager of Loew's Vendome, Nashville, Tenn.; and others including Harry Portman, former manager of Loew's Bijou, now with the Interstate Amusement Company and Keith circuit, Dallas, Texas.

According to Tom James, of Atlanta, the opening of the Temple theatre was a brilliant event. Thousands were turned away, and the attendance included the most prominent and representative members of Birmingham society. The Shrine circus was in progress when the Temple opened, and the Shrine band stopped in front of the theatre and serenaded the assembled thousands. It was a tribute both unique and noteworthy.

At the Palace theatre, suburban house in Inman Park, of which Alpha Fowler is manager, an interesting and unexpected occurrance helped business along last week. Thursday night the pipe organ suddenly went dead, and with the audience fondly expecting a musical performance by Ernest Hartsock, organist, Mr. Fowler was put to it to do some quick thinking. At this precise moment Rudolph Lehman, formerly on film row, who recently made a big hit singing in prologue at the Metropolitan theatre, dropped in to pay a social call. He was accompanied by Signor Volpi, his voice teacher. Instead of a social call, Mr. Lehman and Volpi were presented to the audience as old friends who had dropped by to entertain them—all done with that easy informality which goes over so well in a neighborhood house. And Mr. Lehman's wonderful baritone thrilled his hearers as he sang two popular numbers, accompanied by Signor Volpi at the piano. The audience was so delighted with the unexpected treat that they forgot the organ completely.

Tony Sudekum, President of Crescent Amusement Co. of Nashville.

F. P. Bledsoe, one of the best known and most popular exhibitors in the Alabama territory opened the Beverly theatre in West End, Birmingham, last week. The new theatre seats 295. The occasion was one which centered much interest, and congratulatory telegrams poured in all week. Roy S. Campbell, Alabama representative of the Universal Film Exchanges, reports that a great deal of Universal product will be run in the Beverly theatre.

Greatly to be congratulated is the new Capitol theatre in Salisbury, N. C., owned and operated by J. M. Davis of that city, for its very fortunate coup in obtaining, as organists, Mr. and Mrs. Grant E. Linn. A very happy coincidence is the fact that U. K. Rice, manager of the Capitol theatre, was manager of the Southern theatre in Columbus, at the time that the Linns were playing there. It is largely through this past association that the new Salisbury house was able to obtain the services of this couple.

E. S. Haynes, one of the best known of the Alabama exhibitors, has broken ground for a new theatre at Central Park, near Birmingham. Mr. Haynes is now operating the Liberty Theatre at Pratt City. Roy S. Campbell, Alabama representative for Universal, states that the new house is to open with Universal pictures.

Matt Whitham, manager of the Alamo No. 2 theatre has purchased one hundred new chairs which will be installed within the next few weeks. The Alamo No. 2, recently done over, improved, and enlarged, is one of the coolest houses during the summer months in Atlanta. The new chairs will insure extra comfort for its patrons.

T. C. Coleman, who is at the present time managing the Macon theatres for Famous Players, is coming to Atlanta in May to become a part owner of the Cameo and Alamo No. 1 theatres in Atlanta. It was at first thought that Mr. Coleman would simply manage the Cameo theatre, but reports from R. B. Wilby, manager of the house, state that Mr. Coleman is to be a partner in the ownership of the two theatres. The exact date of the opening of the Cameo is not yet announced.

F. A. Leatherman has sold two handsome reproducing pipe organs for the theatres which R. B. Wilby owns here, the Alamo No. 1 and the Cameo, which will open about the middle of May.

Mike C. Coyne has just completed a very successful tour, and is already making plans for vacation time. He will go to California in a short time, and is now making his headquarters in the office of J. J. McCarty in New York.

The Orpheum theatre at Crawfordsville, Ga., which was opened during March by W. H. Jackson and A. M. Lunceford is enjoying a splendid patronage. They use the best of pictures and show four nights a week.

A. R. McRae will re-open the Airdome theatre in Sheffield, Alabama, Monday. The house closed for the winter and will open with musical stock, headed by Virge Downing and sixteen players, in addition to big picture attractions.

M. A. Lightman will open the Hillsboro theatre in Nashville, Tenn., May 11th. The new house, which will be very complete and attractive, will seat 1200.

Tony Sudekum is building two houses in Nashville, Tennessee, one to seat 3500, which will be finished around the first of the year, and the other to seat 1500, to be completed within four months.

Phelps Sasseen, of the Creole Enterprises sales force, came in town this week, and spent two days on film row. He left again Wednesday, for the North Carolina territory.

Rufus A. Davis, who travels North Carolina for Southern States Film Company, is on his job thoroughly. A great deal of the news of North Carolina exhibitors which appears in these columns would not reach us were it not for Mr. Davis, who knows news when he sees it, and shoots it into us with gratifying rapidity.

Joe Marentette, of the Associated Exhibitors office in Atlanta, left town Wednesday for a short trip through the territory.

Carl Bamford, of the Majestic theatre, Asheville, North Carolina, came in to Atlanta Monday for a few days.

T. F. Thompson, of the Palace theatre, Cedartown, Ga., which burned last week, spent a few days in town following the destruction of his theatre.

Adolphe Samuels, who is in Europe, writes interesting letters from Germany, where he has been visiting relatives. Mr. Samuels will return in June.

Roy S. Campbell, of the Alabama territory; Harry M. Williams, of the Tennessee territory; William H. Fulton, of the South Carolina territory; and C. T. Jordan, of the South Georgia territory, all of Universal's sales force, were in Atlanta Saturday and Sunday for a sales conference, leaving Sunday night for their various territories. The have been instructed to return to Atlanta for a conference with a representative of the New York sales force next Monday.

C. M. Newkirk.

THE city of Manatee is planning a big celebration for May Day, and will conclude the festivities in the evening with a free picture show and community sing. A picture machine has been rented and mounted upon a truck. Several single reel pictures will be shown and between each picture the songs will be introduced, the words being flashed upon the screen by a stereopticon.

Illustrated Songs did a "come back" the past week at the Franklin in Tampa. Manager J. H. McLaughlin tried the stunt out and they made such a hit with his patrons that he as decided to continue them indefinitely.

Port Tampa, with a population of around five thousand hasn't a picture show. This little city is but a short car ride from Tampa, and that is the reason. A community hall has been erected there by Rev. Thompson, and to give the people amusement, he has arranged to give a picture show one night each week. His son, C. A. Thompson, who was connected with the Tampa theatres for several years, is putting on the shows, and he reports that they are quite successful.

More trouble for the movie men of Tampa. The City Commissioners have placed a ban upon the displaying of banners across the streets. This hits the Strand and Victory who have been advertising their features with very attractive banners.

G. L. Bender has opened a picture show at Largo. The new house is called the Royal Palm, and Mr. Bender says he has "dolled it up" in keeping with its name. He opened the house on Thursday April 23rd and business has been quite satisfactory.

Clark and Mathews have leased the Royal at West Tampa from M. Diaz. They will close the house for a week and give it a good overhauling. Mr. Mathews has been in the picture game for fourteen years, and just lately came to this State.

St. Louis

SKOURAS BROTHERS have announced that the Lyric Skydome and Spanish Gardens at Delmar boulevard and Taylor avenues will be opened on May 16. During the off-season the skydome has been completely rebuilt at an estimated cost of $200,000. From the outside it has the appearance of a Spanish garden. The seats and stage occupy the same position as formerly, but along the Taylor avenue and Delmar boulevard side distinctive shops in keeping with the dignity of the gardens have been erected.

Charley Goldman of the Rainbow and Astor theatres, St. Louis, Mo., and Leo Bernstein of Springfield, Ill., plan to motor from Springfield to Milwaukee to attend the convention of exhibitors.

Before a crowd estimated at 500 the Missouri theatre baseball team defeated a nine composed of members of the theatre's stage crew at Fairground Park Tuesday, April 28, score 14 to 13. A rally in the ninth inning which netted five runs saved the day for the theatre team. Leo Werne of the winners proved the star, getting five hits in five trips to the platter.

Cullen Espy, manager of the West End Lyric Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., won second honors in the Universal nation-wide showmanship contest. In addition to a well balanced newspaper advertising campaign he also put it across for the school children of his district by sending out two clown ballyhoos. The clowns visited all the schools within twenty blocks of the theatre, distributing advertising literature.

J. W. Cotter, owner of the Fourth Street Theatre, Moberly, Mo., will be associated with Jim Drake in the operation of the White Way Theatre, St. Louis, which they recently acquired from Mike Murphy and Dr. Price. Cotter will manage the White Way and will employ a manager to look after his Moberly house.

Construction of the handsome new theatre being erected in Kirksville, Mo., by J. M. Kennedy will get under way shortly. Excavation for the foundation has been done. The house will seat about 1200 and will cost upwards of $250,000. Plans were prepared by R. Levine & Company, 822 West 70th street, Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. I. W. Rodgers of Cairo, Ill., expects to start construction of her new house in Carbondale, Ill., within the next few weeks. It is planned to have it ready for the grand opening next September. It will seat about 800 persons according to present plans.

Dominick Fresana of Taylorville, Ill., plans to close his Gem Theatre about May 15 to permit the finishing of the construction of his enlarged house. While the Gem has been in operation workmen have constructed around it the upper portion of a big new house. This was done to avoid closing the house to the very last minute possible. When construction is completed the Greater Gem will seat 1200 persons and be among the finest movie houses in that section.

Burglars broke into the Savoy theatre at Springfield, Ill., on Sunday night, April 26, forced open the safe and secured $600. The house is owned by Kerasotes Brothers.

Tom Creeley plans to re-open the Midland Airdome, 6746 Page avenue, about May 10. He formerly operated the Irma theatre.

The Mikado Airdome, formerly the Hamilton, at Hamilton and Eastern avenue will open for the season on May 9. It will run in conjunction with the Mikado theatre.

Mrs. Frank Beaman of Atlanta, Ga., sister of John Walsh, city salesman for F. B. O. in St. Louis, Mo., died at Atlantic Hospital, Sunday, April 26. The funeral was held in St. Louis on Thursday, April 30.

Wilton Colonna publicity man for Lou Stahl's houses will take over the management of the Union theatre, Easton and Union boulevard when Stahl moves out to the Mikado Airdome, Hamilton and Easton avenues on May 9.

Barney Fegan is now city salesman for Sam Werner's United Film Exchange.

Tom McKean, manager for F. B. O. leaves for Chicago, Friday, May 8, to attend the big sales convention scheduled to be held in the Windy City on Saturday and Sunday of next week. John Franconi, manager at Memphis, Tenn., and F. E. Harrington, Dallas, Tex., both will join McKean in St. Louis for the trip to Chicago.

The Y. M. C. A. theatre, Rosiclaire, Ill., will re-open next week.

Mark Goldman, special representative for Fox News and Varieties was in St. Louis the past week.

Everett Sawyer has taken over the Princess theatre at Piedmont, Mo.

Hector M. E. Pasmezoglu, owner of the Criterion, Congress, Delmar, Plaza and Yale theatres in St. Louis, has plans perfected for a trip to Greece and other parts of Europe. He expects to spend several months abroad. It is rumored along the Rialto that Pasmezoglu has had several flattering offers for his houses and may dispose of them.

W. M. Reeves, owner of the Highland theatre, Little Rock, Ark., has taken over the Amuse-U at England, Ark.

The Bridge theatre, Natural Bridge avenue, St. Louis, has changed hands again.

The Creel Springs, Ill., theatre has been closed.

The Metro-Goldwyn managers and salesmen from the St. Louis, Kansas City, Des Moines and Omaha offices met in convention at the Coronado Hotel, Lindell boulevard at Spring avenue, St. Louis, on Monday and Tuesday, May 4 and 5. J. E. Flynn, district manager, presided.

C. F. Maguire of Milwaukee, Wis., has joined the local Metro-Goldwyn sales organization.

George Ware Northern Illinois salesman for Metro-Goldwyn has resigned from that position.

H. L. Forman, travelling auditor for F. B. O. spent a few days in St. Louis.

Tom Reed of Duquoin, Ill., has entirely recovered from his recent attack of rheumatism.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Open Trail
(Universal—4800 Feet)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THERE are several new ideas incorporated in this Blue Streak Western starring Jack Hoxie that appeal to us, namely that of using white horses for the one tribe of Indians and black for the other which simplified following their manoeuvres, and in the more detailed sequences dealing with the various ceremonies, the War Dance, the Death Dance, etc. which, to our knowledge, have been missing from this type of production.

Though the story, in the main, is familiar, the producers have given a new twist to the plot in that an attack upon the pioneers by one tribe is frustrated by the other under the command of Hoxie who, according to the plot, is a white man stolen by the tribe in his infancy. He falls in love with the daughter of one of the pioneers but this matter is taken care of by the often used "confession" of his foster mother who tells of her theft of him after a massacre of white settlers.

This number of the series certainly excels in one department, that of photography, and the exteriors are very picturesque with towering mountains forming a beautiful background for the tribes in their colorful robes.

Hoxie gives a creditable performance as do Marin Sais as the Indian lover, Mary McAllister as his white sweetheart and Francis Ford as the old Indian Chief. Taken as a whole this should prove an entertaining feature.

THEME. Romance and adventure of Pioneer and Indian days in which a white man, stolen in infancy and reared by Indians, falls in love with white girl with the usual complications.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The beautiful exteriors, some of which are far superior to those ordinarily seen in this type of production. The scenes of the death dance, the war conference and the attack by the Indians on the Pioneers. The prevention of the attack on the Pioneers by Hoxie.

DIRECTION. Has done well with the scenes of the Indian ceremonies. Could have speeded up the action by cutting some of the more lengthy scenes. The Indian attack is well done. Failed to inject comedy relief.

DRAWING POWER. Should draw well in second run and neighborhood houses. Will please devotees of this type of screen fare.

SUMMARY. A pictorially beautiful production but action needs speeding up. The main characters are well portrayed but others give stilted performances. Absence of comedy tends to make it draggy.

THE CAST

White Elk	Jack Hoxie
Lucille Cavanaugh	Mary McAllister
Black Panther	Jack Pratt
Natauka	Natalie Warfield
Silver Waters	Marin Sais
John Cavanaugh	William McCall
Ben Harper	William Welsh
Polly Fleming	Virginia Boardman
Brown Bear	Francis Ford

Written by Isidore Bernstein. Directed by Clifford Smith. Photographed by Harry Neuman.

SYNOPSIS: White Elk, a friendly Indian chief, prevents an attack upon a band of Pioneers led by John Cavanaugh who is accompanied by his daughter, Lucille. Though betrothed to Silver Waters, White Elk is attracted to Lucille and Black Panther, his rival for the hand of Silver Waters plans to win her. Ben Harper tricks White Elk into signing away the Indians land titles; Black Panther learns of this, tells the tribe and White Elk is bound to the stake. A rainstorm puts out the fire. The Indians attack the white men and White Elk goes to their assistance and saves them. Lucille is captured by Black Panther, is tied in a canoe and pushed to the falls, but is rescued by White Elk and Silver Waters. It develops that White Elk is a white man taken by the tribe after a massacre, so he declares his love for Lucille who accepts him. Silver Waters offers herself as a sacrifice to love.

The Night Club
(Paramount—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid

THE debonair Raymond Griffith has finally been promoted to stardom. Having asserted his unique style of comedy expression on various occasions—having afforded some very amusing hours through his individual mannerisms he now comes into his own—and "The Night Club" is a success because of his presence as its chief funmaker, though one cannot dismiss the fact that Wallace Beery and Louise Fazenda lend considerable joy in their antics.

Griffith doesn't employ much pathos, but he does resort to burlesque that is never grossly exaggerated. He frolics and capers through this take-off on sentimental melodrama without once losing his grip on his characterization. He is a dressed-up Chaplin—with considerable of the abandon of Fairbanks.

So we follow him through this farce which carries one comic situation after another. There are moments of too much slapstick, but whenever it shows signs of sagging along comes the comedian with his bag of tricks and it is given new life. To enumerate all the amusing highlights would fill a page, but those which provoked the most laughter at the New York Rialto centered around Griffith rescuing his sweetheart from a charging bull and driving a runaway taxi down a steep road backwards— with Wallace Beery in furious pursuit.

To come down to brass tacks the piece isn't good enough for Griffith. He is as distinctive in his style as Menjou—and his forte in satire. He works hard, yet he scores easily. These is a gravity about him—a mock seriousness which gives him perfect poise. Supported as he is by talented players and a deft title writer he makes "The Night Club" a very enjoyoble slice of humor.

THEME. Farce-comedy of youth who must marry within specified time or lose his fortune. Hero is a woman hater who falls in love and has suicidal impulses when girl turns him down.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The comic situations which develop from the start. The clever portrayal by Raymond Griffith who has unique style of comedy. His easy way of timing the situations. The bull episode. The titles. The work of cast.

DIRECTION. Keeps it keyed in farce tempo throughout. Relies too much on slap-stick for such a polished comedian as Griffith, but never fails to create mirthful situations all the way.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. As the public is crying for more comedy here is your chance to tell them about this one. It pokes fun at a timeworn plot. Play up Griffith who is the most promising comedian to come along in some time. Play up his unique style. Mention the supporting cast.

DRAWING POWER. Griffith should win them for his style is unique. Those who have seen him before will want to see him again. Playing him up with Wallace Beery you should attract patronage. Suitable for any type of theatre.

SUMMARY. Raymond Griffith makes this a real delight. While it is an ordinary plot which features too much slapstick, there is no argument of its ability to promote laughs. Amusing all the way—and particularly hilarious toward the finish. Keyed and acted in the right tempo. Deft subtitles.

THE CAST

Robert White	Raymond Griffith
Edith Henderson	Vera Reynolds
Diablo	Wallace Beery
Carmen	Louise Fazenda

Adapted by Walter Woods from William de Mille's stage play, "After Five." Scenario by Keene Thompson. Directed by Frank Urson and Paul Iribe.

SYNOPSIS. Features youth who must marry within specified time or lose his inheritance. As he is a woman hater he is certain to fall in love. When he discovers that the romance isn't working out as he would have it he tries to commit suicide. Wins happiness in the end.

Zander the Great

(Cosmopolitan-Metro-Goldwyn—6500 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a departure for Marion Davies who, after several seasons of costume drama, makes her debut in the fields of comedy-melodrama, the picture being an adaptation of the play in which Alice Brady starred. It permits Miss Davies the first opportunity to flash her skill as a comedienne since "Little Old New York," and the early scenes offer many amusing moments, when the heroine appears as a young orphan in pigtails. These are her brightest comedy episodes and after her ability to generate laughs she can take her place with the top-notchers. Her forte is comedy—and she need not take a back seat for anyone in expressing it.

There is one vital note of pathos when the governess of the orphanage chastises her. Yet the star finds occasion to temper the scene with humorous sidelights of facial expression. She is taken away from her asylum by a kindly trustee and placed with a lonely woman and her child. It is around this child, Alexander (called Zander) that the plot develops. A time lapse of four years occurs before the governess comes to claim the child as the mother is dying. But the heroine escapes in a flivver, taking the youngster and a pair of rabbits to Arizona to locate the boy's father. By the time Arizona is reached the rabbits have multiplied and multiplied.

The comedy vein is dissipated by this time—to be replaced by melodrama. Yet the action features a few fleeting glimpses of humor when Harry Watson and Harry Myers have their innings. The plot uncovers the efforts of liquor smugglers who use a dilapidated ranch house to carry on their business. And the heroine drives up to it and makes herself at home. What follows concerns the development of the romance between the ringleader (who has posed as the boy's father) and a rescue of the girl from bandits by her new friends. The incident is picturesque—the backgrounds are rich in pictorial appeal—and the acting is always of a high quality.

THEME. Comedy-melodrama of an orphan who, entrusted with the care of a motherless child, goes in search of his father and finds romance.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The comedy moments when heroine is in orphanage. The escape from the governess. The action and incident in the western episodes. The atmosphere. Marion Davies' performance. The excellent work of cast.

DIRECTION. Certainly appreciates star's sense of humor and gives her plenty of opportunity to generate laughs. Builds characterization and plot evenly. Is best with comedy moments.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as star's return to field of modern drama. Play up her fine sense of comedy values. Present stills of her in her comic attire. Bill as adaptation of successful play of same name.

DRAWING POWER. Should do business in most any type of house. Suitable for any theatre.

SUMMARY. This is a departure for Marion Davies and gives her the chance to show herself as a talented comedienne. Best in early scenes as action sags because lacking sustaining incident. There are several bright touches. The picture is competently acted—and well mounted. First rate of its kind.

THE CAST

Mamie Smith	Marion Davies
Juan Fernandez	Holbrook Blinn
Dan Murchison	Harrison Ford
Good News	Harry Watson
Texas	Harry Myers
Bart Black	George Siegmann
The Matron	Emily Fitzroy
The Sheriff	Hobart Bosworth
Mr. Pepper	Richard Carle
Mrs. Caldwell	Hedda Hopper
Elmer Lovejoy	Olin Howland
Zander	Master John Huff

Adapted from play by Salisbury Field. Directed by George William Hill.

SYNOPSIS. Orphan girl is taken away from orphanage because of cruelties of governess and placed in a private home. Wins love of married woman whose husband has left her. When the woman dies the girl takes the child and goes in search of his father. Travels across the continent and falls in love with smuggler. He gives up his nefarious business and the romance furnishes a happy ending for all concerned.

The Ridin' Comet

(Ben Wilson Production-F. B. O.—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

YAKIMA CANUTT, rodeo champ, comes out in the open in this picture. He has shaved off that trick mustache and in this second of a series of western thrillers, puts over some bully good stunts which are calculated to satisfy the admirers of this type of filmplay. Getting away to a rather slow start, "The Ridin' Comet" picks up later on and is going at top speed about the middle of the story.

Like other stars of the western drama, Yakima has taken unto himself a horse which is "Babe," the actor's own sorrel and be it said right here that "Babe" is there with his stuff. For instance in this vehicle Canutt jumps him off a steep bluff into a lake below and then swims across the waters with him. There is also a good scene in which a mountain lion leaps on the horse.

Scenically the feature is a treat, there being a wide variety of backgrounds packed with natural beauty. Of hard ridin' there is more than seen in the usual western and you've got to hand it to Yakima when it comes to "steering" a horse across country. The title is a most appropriate one when applied to the star and his horse.

The plot is rather conventional in theme. Slim Ranthers, resents the advance of civilization in the form of an irrigation plan on his wide range, and tries to fight the idea. But the engineers and their henchman, in turn, try to get Slim branded as a cattle thief and so remove him from the scene of action. But this is more of a job than they expected and works much embarrassment all around for the plotters. The animal stuff in this offering is especially good and will register with most audiences. The supporting cast is adequate, but Yakima is kept in the center of the action throughout the film, which is a wise move.

THEME. A western melodrama in which a young ranchowner and an irrigation engineer place their wits against each other, with their love for a horse as their only point in common.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The attack of the mountain lion on the horse. The jump of "Babe" and Canutt from the cliff into the lake. The swimming of the lake by hero and horse. The climax in which the villain is uncovered. The fight between hero and villain on the racing horse. The many fine shots of hard ridin' ranchers. The work of "Babe," Yakima's wonder horse. The saving of the girl from the steer by the hero.

DIRECTION. Ben Wilson has started this one off rather slowly but he makes up for it toward the end with a whirlwind finish of big scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Have a man dress as a cowboy and ride a white horse about town with your advertising. Play up the name of Canutt as the rodeo champion. Play up the horse stuff. The rodeo feats. Dress your lobby in western style.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for the smaller houses that cater to the western fans. Should also do well in some community houses and in the towns, where the stunts should attract business.

SUMMARY. Good westerns are in favor again and this is one that will please a majority of the fans that desire this kind of entertainment. Yakima Canutt is a real stunt actor and in this picture introduced "Babe," another fine horse that packs a punch with some real stunts. There is a fine climax and the cast is adequate.

THE CAST

Slim Ranthers	Yakima Canutt
Bess Livingston	Dorothy Woods
Austin Livingston	Bob Walker
Max Underly	Bill Donovan
Sheriff	Slim Allen
Bobby Mascot	Archie Ricks
Doctor	William Hackett
Meadowlark, the horse	Babe

Directed by Ben Wilson. Scenario by George Pyper. Photographed by Eddie Linden and Don Cunliff.

SYNOPSIS. Because he is trying to hold up an irrigation project and also trying to "butt in" on Max Underly's girl, the latter and his gang try to "frame" Slim Ranthers. He is lured to a ranch at night and shot in the arm. Livingston, the irrigation engineer, seeks to have him branded as a cattle thief, but Slim foils all their plans and even aids Bess Livingston get help to her brother, injured by a cougar in time to save his life.

Soul-Fire

(Inspiration-First National—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

BECAUSE of the greater scope of the camera this adaptation of a play (which didn't succeed on the stage) becomes an interesting picture.

It is a picture which gives Richard Barthelmess an unusually fine acting part. The star appreciated its range of expression in buying the play and his enactment of the role is just about the best work he has contributed to the screen—and this includes his acting in "Tol'able David." Sympathy is his from the moment that he defies his father and struggles for inspiration. He commands it through the suffering which comes to him as he roves in different climes. He gives a spiritual quality to his performance which lends reality to the characterization. His acting takes on strength too. It is when love comes to him in the South Seas that he finds inspiration to complete the symphony. And like a symphony his life is carried on a major theme—with minor themes embroidering it with color and adventure.

The director, John S. Robertson, has taken a well-knit script and kept its vitals intact. He shows intermittent flashes of the symphony being played while between its movements its themes are explained by a music critic who has knowledge of the hero's struggles. When the plot shifts from one episode to another it is done easily and convincingly. There is plenty of color—plenty of action—the crescendo being reached in the Port Said scenes when the hero becomes a derelict. He drifts to the South Seas—and these scenes furnish a vivid romantic appeal as the hero falls in love with an English waif. The girl teaches him that real achievement can only come through great suffering. This love interest is finely expressed by Bessie Love and the star. There is suspense when the youth imagines he has contracted leprosy. The other acting parts are well emphasized with Helen Ware and Carlotta Monterey providing excellent support.

THEME. Drama of young musician who struggles to express his musical genius. It is only after he has undergone terrific hardships that he is able to write a masterpiece.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The water front incident in Port Said. The South Sea episodes. The potent scene when hero is frightened into beliving himself a leper. The romantic moments with the heroine. The acting by Richard Barthelmess and Bessie Love. The subtitles.

DIRECTION. Knits the four sequences together without losing the thread of the story. Extracts sympathy for central character and provides some potent scenes in hero's hardships. Brings out fine romantic appeal. Gives it good mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as star's most exacting role and play up the idea that genius cannot be expressed until one has experienced suffering and humility. Emphasize the South Sea atmosphere by presenting a prologue of it.

DRAWING POWER. Should do well in first runs. suitable for any type of house.

SUMMARY. While lacking the simple, rugged plot of "Tol'able David," this picture does succeed, however, in holding the interest with its melodramatic and romantic episodes. Characterization well brought out. Is capably acted, well directed and the captions are ably written.

THE CAST

Eric Fane ..... Richard Barthelmess
Teita ..... Bessie Love
The Critics ..... Percy Ames and Charles Esdale
Howard Fane ..... Lee Baker
Mrs. Howard Fane ..... Effie Shannon
The Princess Rhea ..... Carlotta Monterey
San Francisco Sal ..... Helen Ware
Herbert Jones, a sailor ..... Walter Long
Ruau ..... Harriet Sterling
Nuku ..... Richard Harlan
Dr. Travers, of the Leper Island ..... Arthur Metcalfe

Adapted from the play, "Great Music," by Martin Brown. Scenario by Josephine Lovett. Directed by John S. Robertson.

SYNOPSIS. Son of wealthy parents is determined to be a great musician. After his failure to produce any work of consequence in Italy, he refuses his father's offer of money if he will give up his musical ambitions. He sets out for Paris and sinks to the depths in Port Said. It is when he finds a great romance in the South Seas that he becomes a genius. His symphony is widely acclaimed.

Wings of Youth

(Fox—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ANOTHER link has been added to the endless chain of stories dealing with flaming youths in this Fox presentation. It solves nothing new, but it does offer an interesting hour in the manner in which its plot is told. Some will have it that the idea has outlived its usefulness—that there are no wild, young people these days—that the flapper is extinct. Perhaps these skeptics are right though their argument is futile if drama can be served. And it is served here with plenty of color and conflict—the color being expressed in the incident and characterizations, the conflict being expressed between a mother and her three daughters.

So we have the main situation of a mother determined to reform her rebellious daughters by going in for a hectic career herself. She will beat them at their own game. Being a resourceful woman and having plenty of money she eventually shows them the error of their ways. So the girls make an "about face" and determine to reform their mother.

The action takes up the career of each daughter and uncovers a few wild parties and some hectic love affairs. After the girls have their innings it becomes their mother's turn. And she easily eclipses her offspring in "out-partying" their parties. She takes their beaux away from them and brings them to their senses. This is all told in colorful style—and there is a human factor about the treatment of the story that makes it convincing. The director doesn't attempt to preach, but shows the errors of youth with effective dramatic incident. And his humorous highlights are excellently dovetailed to help make it plausible and entertaining. If there is any fault it may be found in the abrupt ending.

Naturally the role of the mother provides the biggest acting opportunity and Ethel Clayton takes advantage of it by indulging in all the accepted emotions. It is a sympathetic performance. Katherine Perry, Marian Harlan and Madge Bellamy endow the daughters with charm and personality. A first rate picture of its kind.

THEME. Drama of the Younger Generation in revolt. When the mother of three daughters discovers what risks they are running in their mad pursuit of pleasure she takes a hand, plays their game and beats them at it.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fine mounting. The parties. The romantic moments. The light comedy incident. The emotional acting by Ethel Clayton. Marian Harlan's performance. The adequate support.

DIRECTION. Has brought out an interesting picture by balancing his scenes and building up his plot progressively. Doesn't attempt to overdo the story or overdress the scenes. Gets results from players. Keys action in first rate tempo.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as a story of life—a story of youth in rebellion. Play up its cast and mention the director. Exploit as a realistic story of modern society—a story of our hectic age.

DRAWING POWER. Title hasn't much magnetism, being rather vague. But if well exploited it should attract patronage. Suitable for all houses. Should go well in small towns, neighborhood houses and community theatres.

SUMMARY. This is another picture of the flapper who becomes rebellious against parental rule—or rather a story of three flappers. It is treated in a feverish tempo—which is the proper key for it. There is good mounting and good acting. And it tells its story and its moral without preaching a sermon.

By Harold P. Montayne. Scenario by Bernard McConville. Directed by Emmett Flynn.

SYNOPSIS. A mother of three daughters discovers them in rebellion against parental restrictions and the conventions of the day. Two of the girls have hectic careers with men who do not mean well by them, while the third carries on a clandestine affair with a married man. The mother decides to play their game and show them the folly of their ways. She brings them to their senses and they give up their careers.

Equipment Exposition Big Feature at Milwaukee

Improved Apparatus of Various Types on Display

MILWAUKEE, on May 12th, becomes the motion picture center of the United States, for a week, with the national conventions of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Independent Producers and Distributors, and Motion Picture Equipment Dealers in progress, and the eyes of the entire industry will be focused upon this city.

The exposition of the Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America, which opens on this date to run until May 17th, in the Milwaukee Auditorium, the same building in which the conventions will be housed, will be one of the great focal points of interest.

With more than sixty manufacturers and distributors of equipment, theatre furnishings and supplies, exhibiting their wares in beautifully decorated booths, the exposition will be the great educational feature of the week.

Progress in equipment and furnishing, as well as theatre design and decoration, has more than kept pace with the onward march of the motion picture. It is a far cry from 1904, with its hand-cranked Mutoscopes, exhibiting the first crude form of pictures in motion, at a penny a look, to 1925 with its magnificent picture palaces in every key center, where patrons may sit in luxuriously upholstered chairs and watch million dollar feature pictures thrown on the screen by splendid motor driven projectors, witness stage presentations which outdo those of the Follies, and enjoy a complete and perfect performance made possible by the latest developments of science.

Many of the articles of equipment which have made possible the de luxe motion picture house, as we see it today, as well as the cozy smaller theatres, are being shown at the exposition, as well as new articles of equipment, which will make still further advance in showmanship possible.

The sixty booths which will house the exhibits will be located in the Kilbourn, Juneau and Walker Halls, all on the first floor of the Auditorium, and the Engleman Hall on the second floor will be used for the various business sessions of the Motion Picture Equipment Dealers and the Manufacturer's Division of the Association.

Among exhibits which will attract attention from visiting exhibitors and supply dealers, will be that of the E. J. Vallen Electric Company of Akron, Ohio, which will have an instructive and attention arresting display of their products, including the Automatic Curtain Machine, of which this company builds three types; a heavy duty machine automatically operated by electricity which will handle any curtain in any manner desired when it is installed to work with proper equipment; the Vallen Junior, a light duty machine which will handle the average curtain; also the Vallen Remote Control Switch which enables the operator to start, stop or reverse the curtain when traveling in either direction, at any point. All types of machines have the gears and working parts entirely enclosed in cast iron housing, which enables them to run in a light grease, insuring indefinite wear. Another interesting exhibit will be the Vallen Noiseless Curtain Track.

In Booth 222 of the Auditorium, will be the interesting exhibit of the Precision Machine Company, Inc., New York, which will display the Simplex Projector equipped with "HC" High Intensity Lamp, Cinephor Incandescent Lamp, "HC" Reflector Lamp, and the Peerless Reflector Lamp. In addition to this the Liberty Electric Company of Stamford, Connecticut, will display and demonstrate their Rotary Rectifier. This device is being shown for the first time. The Janette Manufacturing Company of Chicago, also will display their recently developed motor blower units.

The Brenkert Light Projection Company of Detroit will have a comprehensive and attractive display at the exposition. The new double dissolver, which projects effects such as clouds over stage, showers of roses and many other remarkable effects will be shown for the first time, as well as a line of Brenkert Projection appliances and supplies. President Joseph Brenkert will be in charge of his company's exposition headquarters.

The Da-Lite Screen and Scenic Company of Chicago will have their exhibit in Booth 7 and will be represented by Mrs. DeBerri, who, by the way, is the only woman director of the Manufacturers' Division of the M. P. E. D. and by Mr. Hecht. A full line of the finest Da-Lite Screens will be shown, as well as many new ideas in screens and equipment.

The J. E. McAuley Manufacturing Company of Chicago will show for the first time at any exposition, their new Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp, which is arousing wide

What users say about Incandescent Lamp Projection

The outstanding advantage of Incandescent Lamp Projection is its great economy.

But it has many other important advantages. It improves the appearance of pictures on the screen by supplying an intense light that is free from flicker, glare and shadows.

It improves operating conditions by eliminating fumes, carbon dust, and excessive heat.

It is simple to operate and once adjusted requires no further attention. And it costs less to install.

The following letters will interest you:

Just a word about the Incandescent Lamp Projection that we installed in November. Our electric saving is about 60%. Our lamps have given good service and our projection is much better than when we used the arcs. I feel that Incandescent Projection is the only thing to use.—F. W. Meade, Meade Theatre, Kingman, Kas.

We are thoroughly satisfied with Incandescent Lamp Projection. Our screen is 12 x 16 ft. with a throw of 119 ft. We consider the light we are now getting superior to our 70 amp. arc. The actual saving accomplished amounts to over $60 a month on the light and over $13 on lamps over cost of the carbons.—W. D. Fulton, De Luxe Theatre, Hutchinson, Kansas.

After several months' use we are more than satisfied with MAZDA Lamp Projection. Our equipment is not only paying for itself but is also giving us the best projection we have ever had. We are sorry now that we hesitated so long.—I. E. Runyon, Iris Theatre, Hutchinson, Kas.

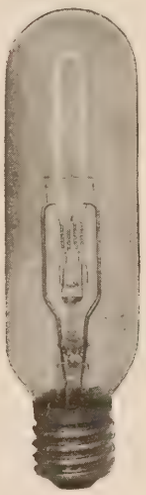
MAZDA Projection has cut our power cost about 45%. There is also quite an added improvement in projection and we find the equipment satisfactory in every way.—R. R. Gladish, Rex Theatre, Higginsville, Mont.

* * *



We are delighted with Incandescent Lamp Projection. Our power bill has been reduced from $32 a month to $7.—Strand Theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

These letters are typical of hundreds we have received that tell why Incandescent Lamp Projection is becoming universally favored.

Ask yourself, in the light of these facts, if you would not profit by installing Incandescent Lamp Projection in your theatre.

Booklets on Incandescent Lamp Projection, the most complete treatise ever published on this subject, will be sent free to any theatre owner.

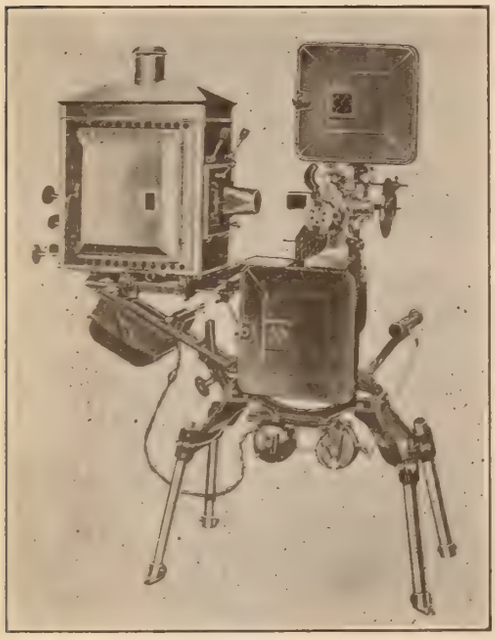
interest throughout the trade, and J. E. McAuley will be on hand to explain his new device.



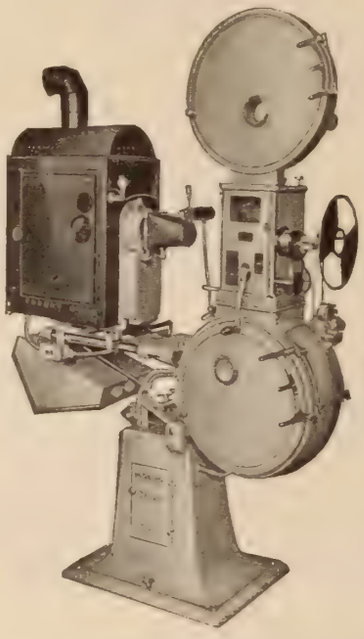
The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company of Chicago will be located in Booth 18 and President O. F. Spahr, as well as other representatives of the company including Assistant Sales Manager Hahn and Traveling Representative Earl J. Farney, will be on hand. The principal feature of the display will be a splendid Motiograph De Luxe Projector and all its accessories.

Exhibitors Supply Company will give a practical demonstration of their Aislelite and other theatre equipment. The exhibit is made by the Milwaukee branch of Exhibitors Supply Company, but President H. A. R. Dutton will attend the convention and exposition and will be on hand at the booth.

The Rockbestos Products Corp. of New Haven, Conn., makers of Rockbestos—the asbestos covered wire, will be at the convention with an exhibit in Booth 208. They will show all types of asbestos covered wire suitable for theatre use, motion picture cable, arc and spot light cable, fixture wire for large wattage lights and special cable three conductor type for arcs, spots and all movable stage light.

O. D. Allen in charge of the Chicago office of the Rockbestos Products Corp. will be in charge of this exhibit.

The Nicholas Power Company of New York will occupy Booth 212 with the Fulco Sales Company, Chicago distributors of Powers Projectors, and will have on display a Power's 6B Projector complete with new type high intensity lamp, a Power's 6B Improved Projector complete with Power's Incandescent Unit, equipped with B. & L. relay lens system and a Power's 6B Improved Projector equipped with the new "Powerlite" low intensity reflector lamp. There will also be a large display case which will show all the parts which when assembled make the complete Power's mechanism, and a speed indicating unit with speed indicator panel will be shown. The G. E. Quartz condensing lens manufactured by the General Electric Company and distributed by Nicholas Power Company, will be a feature of the display.



Powers type E projector completely equipped that will be on exhibition.

Power's Projector with G. E. Incandescent equipment will be used in Booth 23 of the Edison Lamp Works of the General Electric Company.

The Howells Cine Equipment Company of New York City will have on exhibition in booth 209 the new Balluna Spot Lamp for which many unusual claims are made and also a line of welded wire reels.

Frank E. Plowman Company, Chicago, will have a fine exhibit of directorial signs for lobby and other theatre use. The Glo-

Letr with its handsome bronze frame, harmonizes with all decorative schemes and the softly glowing letters are pleasing and easy to read. Frank E. Plowman, himself, will be in charge of the exhibit.

The Automatic Devices Co. of Allentown, Pa. in space No. 224 will exhibit the A.D.C. Automatic Curtain Control equipment including the A.D.C. Roll-E.Z. Curtain Track.

A new product recently developed and shown for the first time by the same concern is the Two-In-One Arm Rest which provided two arm rests for every one in the audience.

The National Lamp Works of the General Electric Company, Cleveland, Ohio, will have an exhibit showing the importance of the interior marquee and sign lighting of theatres and will be a striking illustration of the real tangible asset of this in building a new theatre or remodeling an old one. Projection with Mazda Lamps and chart showing comparative costs will be interesting features of the exhibit. There will also be a display of standard theatre equipment of several manufacturers and display showing progress made in development of lenses and the advantages which the latest types afford.

The Brenkert Spot-Flood Lamp, Model "C3."

The Radio Mat Slide Corp. will have on display the various publicity and service campaigns that various exhibitors have used employing Radio Mat Slides. These campaigns cover a surprising number of subjects both on exploitation and theatre policy. All the material on display has been in use on the screens of this country during the past year.

The exploitation subjects covered are catch lines, teaser campaigns, weather reports, picture reviews, want ads, local and news tie-ups. The theatre policy campaigns cover the unusual points of the individual houses.

The Operators Piano Company of Chicago will show its Reproducto, which has found a wide market among the smaller theatres. Sales Manager Livingston will head the delegation from the Operators Piano Company which will attend the exposition.

The Raven Screen Corporation of New York will show its well known Raven Half-Tone Screens and other screen equipment in booth 211.

The Holmes Projector Company of Chicago, will occupy Booth 21 with a comprehensive display of their portable and semi-portable projectors, the latter of which is being used by many of the smaller type

A Great Achievement of Projection Engineering

THE Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp has increased the screen brilliancy from two to three times in hundreds of theatres in every part of this country. Theatres that required 100 amperes and more are now securing vastly greater screen illumination with Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps, using but 25 amperes and less. And this doubled illumination is obtained at less than one-third previous current and carbon costs.

Into the Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp have been built the most advanced principles of optics and mechanical design. Its rugged and massive construction insures absolute reliability of performance and durability.

Built by a factory engaged for years in the construction of precision projection equipment, the Peerless lamp has established a new high standard for reflector arc lamps.

Peerless Reflector Arc Has Many New and Unique Features

A NEW reflector arc lamp has been placed on the market by the J. E. McAuley Manufacturing Company of Chicago, under the trade name of the Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp. This lamp which, it is claimed, has proven exceptionally successful in theatres where it has been installed was designed by J. E. McAuley, who is well known in this industry as an inventor and manufacturer of projection apparatus.

Previous articles in this Department have outlined in detail the advantages claimed for reflector arc lamps, especially with regard to their economy of operation, in that they require only from 15 to 30 amperes of current to provide a screen illumination, it is said, equal to from 75 to 100 amperes, with the old style carbon arcs. It will therefore be of great interest to our readers in learning of the many new features incorporated in the Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp, inasmuch as these styles of projection arcs are receiving serious consideration by many exhibitors and projectionists.

One of the predominating features of the Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp lies in its optical system as an eight inch plano-convex condensor lens is used (See Fig 4) as well as a true parabolic reflector. (See Fig 1) These two units make possible the placing of the arc at the true focus of the mirror which, it is claimed, increases the illumination from 30 to 40 per cent over the cases where the arc is placed at an out of focus position. Condensor breakage is practically eliminated in this lamp as the condenser is positioned approximately ten inches from the arc, while the arc itself operates at a very low amperage.

As the accurate alignment of the various units in the optical system of reflector arcs is of the utmost importance, special provisions have been made in the Peerless lamps to insure and facilitate these adjustments. (See Fig. 1)

A unique feature is incorporated in the condenser and mount which is made a part of the burner mechanism itself rather than a part of the lamp house (See Figs. 1 and 4). Due to this construction, the optical alignment of the mirror, the arc and the condenser is more constant, and these parts may be moved vertically and laterally as an entire unit for alignment with the aperture (See Fig. 1). This should prove a very important feature in the efficient operation of this lamp.

The burner itself is of massive construction and all adjustments for the arc are the same as in the old style arcs, i. e.: through handles on the outside of the housing (See Fig. 2). A full-trim of carbons is accommodated by the burner.

The carbon clamps are ingeniously and substantially designed and provide positive contact, the negative permitting a view at all times of the length of the negative trim (See Fig. 1). The positive carbon clamp is actuated through a cam and lever mounted on an eccentric screw which may be readily adjusted to accommodate all sizes of carbons. The carbon holders themselves are insured against being burned through the use of stops.

Figure Four

An arc control of the intermittent feed type is standard equipment on Peerless lamps (See Fig. 3). The control is mounted on two supporting rods extending from the base of the lamp housing and is mounted alongside of the housing itself. A snap switch to control the motor is carried in its base and all gears are completely enclosed. The actuating alignment of the arc control is modification of the Peerless Arc Control.

A lamp housing is constructed of double lined sheet steel, excepting for the front and the rear which parts are made of cast aluminum. The housing is of a general cylindrical shape and is slightly longer than the ordinary arc housing. The lamp house door on the operating side opens the full length and height of the housing, while on the far side a sliding door is designed (See Figs. 2 and 3) to facilitate close quarter working conditions. The Peerless lamp is made to attach to all makes of standard projections.

A unique design is followed in the stereopticon attachment (See Fig. 3). It is claimed that an evenly illuminated field is projected to the screen as only one side of the reflector mirror is used, which eliminates the possibilities of imaging the arc, carbons or hole in the reflector, on the screen. In operating this stereopticon attachment the large condenser lens, which is hinged to the burner (See Fig. 4) is drawn out of position by means of a handle which extends through the outside of the lamp housing, thereby uncovering half of the reflector (See Fig. 4). At the same time, a small condenser mounted with the slide carrier is moved into a position to focus the light into a beam which will pass through the stereopticon objective lens. The movement of the large condensing lens to permit the operation of the stereopticon is accomplished entirely within the lamp house.

$300,000 Gainesville Fire Destroys Theatres

The State theatre, Gainesville, Ga., a comparatively new house, managed by Frank Plaginos, was completely destroyed by fire which broke out Sunday morning early, and did about $300,000 worth of damage. A whole city block was practically destroyed.

An S. O. S. call brought aid from Cornelia, Buford, Winder, and Atlanta, Ga., but the equipment arrived too late to be of great assistance. There were no casualties, but the destruction of the Hunt opera house and the State theatre were counted as the greatest losses to Gainesville.

The State was rebuilt a short time ago, after a fire, and had been open to the public only a few months. A handsome new pipe organ was completely destroyed, together with practically all the theatre equipment. It is not yet known what plans Mr. Plaginos has for the State.

To You Who Want Better Projection

WHAT would you say of a lamp that gives the best possible steadiness and evenness of screen illumination, and yet reduces your operating cost from one-fourth to three-fourths?

In more than 3,000 instances the answer of theatre managers and owners has been: "That is the lamp for us"—and in their theatres the MAZDA Motion Picture Projection Lamp is demonstrating its superiority to the exhibitor, the projectionist and the audience. In many of these theatres the 900-watt size of this lamp is replacing older illuminants having twice and even three times the current consumption.

Most of these theatres and thousands of others depend on National MAZDA lamps for their signs, their marquees, and their interior lighting. Ask your dealer about the contract basis of purchasing lamps, which assures you of the best lamps made at a decided saving in cost. Or write direct to National Lamp Works of General Electric Co., Nela Park, Cleveland, Ohio.

The National MAZDA Motion Picture Lamp not only improves projection, but reduces operating cost from ¼ to ¾.

Inquiries and Comments

Analysis of Flicker

ONE of the important points brought out by Dr. Kennelly in the report on his investigation of flicker was that large screen surfaces possessed higher vanishing-flicker frequencies than small ones, other things being equal.

The reason for this is believed to be found in the larger area of retina which is subjected to flicker stimulation. The retina (ret'-in-a) by the way, is itself a screen on which the images formed by the eye lens are protected and rendered visible to the brain.

For any constant illumination on a screen of given color and reflective quality, located at a given distance from the eye, the greater the area of the screen, the greater will be the area of the image of this screen on the retina.

In other words, the eye is a lens which automatically changes its focal length so that all images formed by it are thrown on the retina. This retina is located at a fixed distance from the eye lens and the eye lens unconsciously becomes thicker and thinner to meet the conditions of changing forms.

When a larger screen is used, at any fixed distance from the eye, the area of the image on the retina will also be correspondingly larger, so that when the illumination on the screen flickers, a larger area of retina surface is excited.

Although the total excitation of the retina appears to increase with the area of image on the retina over which flicker stimulus is applied, it does not increase in proportion to the areas involved.

In other words, if a screen has twice the area of another, for the same illumination, type of screen and distance from observer, it will not give twice the flicker effect, but rather less.

Summary of Flicker

A summarization of all the various points pertaining to flicker in general, is given below. They are taken direct from the original report on the subject.

1. The frequency of flicker at which flicker ceases to be visible is approximately the same for different observers with normal sight.

2. The maximum frequency of vanishing-flicker, with stationary retinal image (stationary screen and stationary eye) is in the neighborhood of 66 cycles per second.

In other words, the vanishing-flicker frequency increases with increase in screen illumination but at approximately 66 cycles per second, a further increase in screen intensity will result in no change in the vanishing-flicker frequency.

3. Vanishing-flicker frequency increases in all cases when the illumination on the screen is increased, but in nothing like the same proportion. The increase of vanishing-flicker frequency is rapid for increasing illuminations below 0.5 foot-candle and 100 per cent flicker range; and increases but slowly for intensities exceeding 1 foot candle. (See Fig. 1, preceding articles).

4. Vanishing-flicker frequencies are less with colored screens (other than white), for equal illuminations and sizes of retinal image. (Fig. 1).

5. The vanishing-flicker frequency does not depend upon the average illumination on the target; or at least only to a relatively small degree. It depends on the maximum and minimum cyclic illuminations.

6. The vanishing-flicker frequency does not depend appreciably upon the wave shape of flicker; that is, upon the manner in which the illumination varies in passing between the maximum and minimum cyclic values.

7. The vanishing-flicker frequency increases somewhat with the area of the screen for a given surface quality of the latter, distance from the eye, and incident illumination.

8. The vanishing-flicker frequency increases somewhat as the screen is approached, for a given size of screen and intensity of illumination.

9. The last two foregoing deductions may be jointly expressed by saying that the larger the area of the retina stimulated by flicker, the higher is the vanishing-flicker frequency; but in nothing like the same proportion.

10. The greater the range of flicker (the ratio of difference in cyclic illumination to the maximum) the greater the vanishing-flicker frequency, but in nothing like the same proportion.

11. The smallest range of flicker that was found to be recognizable with certainty was 1.4 per cent, observable only at a low frequency.

12. The most sensitive flicker frequency for small ranges of flicker was in the neighborhood of 2.5 cycles per second.

13. Flickering ceased to be objectionable with ranges less than 7.5 per cent.

14. The conditions favoring disagreeable flickering with stationary retinal images (fixed screen and fixed eye) are, powerful illumination, large flicker range, bright surfaces of large area, and low flicker frequency.

15. The conditions tendering to produce unobjectionable flickering with stationary retinal images, are, feeble illuminations, small ranges of flicker, small screens, dark colors of reflecting surfaces and high frequencies of flicker.

The mathematical part of subject is summed up briefly as follows:

16. The sensation of flicker may be gauged in intensity by the vanishing-flicker frequency, or the frequency necessary to make the flicker disappear.

17. Constant ratios of increase in flickering illumination were accompanied by equal increments of vanishing-flicker frequency.

Doubling the intensity of flickering illumination, everything else being unchanged, added approximately 3.3 cycles per second to the vanishing-flicker frequency, no matter what the die, color or condition of the objects viewed; provided that their images on the retina were fixed (stationary objects and stationary eye).

18. The vanishing-flicker frequency was 11 times the common logarithm of K times the illumination viewed by the eye; where K is numerical constantly depending upon the size. color, quality and distance of the object illuminated, as well as on the range of flicker. With one exception, K was found approximately proportional to the flicker range, other things being equal. (See Curve 3, preceding article).

This completes the analysis of flicker in general and leaves only the detailed analysis of the special case of alternating current arcs to be covered. This phase of the subject will be treated in the following article.

Last House Erected by Col. Varner Opens at Concord

Miller Merriwether will manage the new Concord theatre, Concord, N. C., the last house to be erected by Colonel H. B. Varner, who died Monday, April 27th. The opening of the new house will probably take place without delay, for plans for its opening were laid at the time when Mr. Varner was seriously ill, and there has been no report that the opening would be put off.

The theatre has a seating capacity of 700, is equipped with two new Motiograph DeLuxe projectors and a Hope-Jones pipe organ. J. Lewis will serve as official organist. The theatre is modern in every detail, being built entirely of concrete and steel, absolutely fireproof.

The decorations are very artistic, with a five color lighting circuit and a color scheme of gold and old ivory. In the center of the house is a big dome having 66 lamps of five colors concealed in banking arrangement, the entire circuit controlled from the picture booth.

Miller Merriwether, the manager, is well known throughout this territory as a capable and experienced showman. He was with R. D. Craver for a number of years and more recently managed the Ideal theatre in Winston Salem.

Greenville, S. C., Has Egyptian Architecture in Theatre

The new Egyptian theatre, operated by General Enterprises, Inc., of which Arthur Lucas is president and Harry K. Lucas general manager, opened in Greenville, South Carolina, Wednesday of this week. Mr. Lucas took over the old Casino theatre, had it improved, enlarged, remodeled, and turned it into the handsome Egyptian theatre.

In naming the reconstructed house, it was decided to call it the Egyptian as a fitting name for the style of architecture and the decorating scheme used for both exterior and interior designs. The lobby gives the impression of being made of solid granite, with a color motif of black and white. The doors are gilded to resemble heavy bronze. Within, the theatre presents the appearance of an Egyptian palace, having the straight lines and multi-colored decorations characteristic of Egyptian art. The seats are heavily upholstered and both comfortable and handsome.

The projection room is equipped with the Simplex machines. Everything in the way of modern equipment and convenience has been supplied the Egyptian theatre.

The house is located on Main and North streets. When the doors opened at three o'clock Wednesday afternoon all Greenville was in attendance, and the Piedmont, Greenville's daily, devoted generous space to an elaborate description of the theatre.

ANDREW L. HAINLINE OWNER

MAY 1925 Compli-

United Scenic Studio.
28 W. Lake St..
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

I have been thinking for sometime that I should write you complimenting you on the service you performed me in decorating, equipping and overseeing the construction of my new Illinois Theatre. This letter is entirely unsolicited. But when I look back over my building project and realize the amount of help you were to me, I felt that you were certainly entitled to a word of praise, and that a statement of my experience might be helpful to other builders whose situation was similar to mine.

While I had been in the show business for a number of years and had learned by experience the many features necessary for a successful modern show house, yet I was building my first house and found I had a good deal to learn in construction planning. Your company checked over the plans of my architect and found we had both made many fatal mistakes that would have caused us serious trouble and great expense had they not been rectified. I also found it to be a great help in the purchase of the entire equipment throughout my house to have the advice of your company.

Your scheme of decoration, the draperies furnished by you as well as the stage settings and stage equipment being from one concern were all made to harmonize, and the completed theatre is a beautiful piece of work. Your treatment of it has produced an effect that in every appearance represents an expenditure of twice the money that it actually cost.

I earnestly feel that one circumstanced as I was would do well to turn over their equipment problems to your company. The workmen were all able, efficient and conscientious. Your company lived up to the spirit of their contract, and even added more elaborate decorations than the contract called for. You may feel perfectly free at any time to refer any prospects you may have to me and I will be glad in more detail to explain the kind of high class business firm I found you to be.

Yours very truly,
Andrew L. Hainline

The new Granada theatre recently opened in La Jolla, California.

Skouras Bros. Start Construction on $5,500,000 St. Louis Project

SKOURAS Brothers Enterprises of St. Louis, Mo., has announced officially that construction of their $5,500,000 Ambassador Theatre and 24-story office building at Seventh and Locust streets, St. Louis, will get underway on May 1. Leading contractors of St. Louis and elsewhere have been invited to submit bids in accordance with the plans and specifications prepared by the architects, C. W. and George L. Rapp of Chicago, Ill. It is expected the new theatre will open in July, 1926.

In anticipation of the erection of this structure which will be one of the outstanding buildings of down-town St. Louis, Skouras Brothers Enterprises has made arrangements to increase their capital stock from $1,000,000 to $8,000,0000. It is a Delaware corporation.

Skouras Brothers are also owners of the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Down Lyric theatres and Lyric Skydome, pricipal owners of the Capitol Theatre, and control a half interest in the St. Louis Amusement Company which owns the Grand-Florissant, Lindell, North Grand, Novelty, Shenandoah, Lafayette, Gravois, Russell airdome, Shaw, Pageant, Pershing, Manchester Arco, Arsenal, Maffitt, Tivoli, and several airdomes operated in conjunction with the theatres. In addition they control the Missouri franchise of First National Pictures and operate the St. Louis Motion Picture Exchange which has territorial rights for many prominent independent productions.

The Ambassador theatre building will front 164 feet on Seventh street and 131 feet on Locust street. The main building will rise seventeen stories but there will be a tower structure that will contain seven additional stories. The tower will have a height of 300 feet above the street level. The building will be of modern construction with a steel framework resting on concrete caissons extending 70 feet below the basement level to bedrock.

The theatre entrance will be angular so that patrons can come in conveniently from either Seventh or Locust street. The office building entrance will be on Seventh street at the nothern end of the structure.

On the first floor there will be nine commodious shops, while in the upper floors there will be 500 office rooms. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 3500. Of course it will be the most prominent feature of the structure and Skouras Brothers promise that it will rank with the finest amusement palaces in the country.

Canadian Fire Associations Discuss Film Dangers

Moving picture films came in for a share of discussion at the joint annual convention in Ottawa, Ontario, on April 20 to 22 of the Dominion Fire Prevention Association and the Association of Canadian Fire Marshals and the subject was freely discussed during one whole session under various headings, such as transportation, storage, sale, manufacture, importation and use of moving picture films. The two associations adopted one recommendation which is to be forwarded to the Canadian Parliament and to all Provincial Legislatures in the Dominion. Further, a Film Hazard Committee was organized for the purpose of studying the numerous angles of the use of films in theatres and otherwise.

Raymond S. Peck, Ottawa, director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau, was elected chairman of the committee on film hazard. Mr. Peck is also an officer of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, whose conventions he attends twice yearly. Other members of the new committee include Tom Moore of Ottawa, president of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, representing the Projection Machine Operators Union; Capt. Orr, M. C., Toronto, director of the Ontario Provincial Moving Picture Theatre License Bureau, and G. T. Lewis of Toronto.

The resolution as adopted in the form of a recommendation was as follows: "That moving picture films be so labelled when being transported from one point to another that ample warning will be given as to their degree of inflammability."

The cost of not cooling your house

Even with the high price of coal, you would never think of running your house in winter without heat, would you?

It would not pay. To heat your theatre costs less than not to heat it. In other words, comfort pays you better than discomfort.

Now, candidly, isn't that exactly the way you ought to look at the matter of cooling during hot weather?

Real comfort will make more money for you than it costs—in summer as well as in winter.

Shall we send you our Booklet N-10?

"Sally"—First National, Loew's State, Los Angeles

Times: "I think I may safely say that 'Sally' is everybody's type of show,—a happy idea. It promises to bring additional prestige and poularity to Colleen Moore, its star. Throngs are crowding Loew's State Theatre to see it, and are enjoying themselves to the very utmost from all indications. The picture is full of humor. Colleen earns her rights to the premiere honors."

Record: "If you want to see one of the most satisfying shows that you have seen in a long, long time, just travel to Loew's this week. For 'Sally' has been found in the movies and she is making laughs enough to carry you over for several weeks more. Colleen is excellent as Sally. She gives the role a rare piquancy and a touch of pathos."

Herald: "'Sally' is one of the most delightful productions that has come to the screen. The impression of the story is a lasting one. Without a doubt, it is Colleen Moore's best contribution to films to date. Errol is just as funny on the screen as he was on the stage. He is a show in himself."

Rupert Julian now directing for Cecil B. De Mille Pictures Corporation.

Examiner: "Colleen Moore makes Sally as captivating as she was a few years ago in Marilyn Miller's interpretation. Her Sally is a saucy little gamin who keeps things moving at top speed—irrepressible, volatile and wholly winning. She is a comedienne with a real sense of humor—therefore, all the better in occasional moments of pathos. Leon Errol takes naturally to screen technique, registering every effect with absolute surety. The film moves swiftly and convincingly."

Express: "That transitory thing called human appeal may be found in large quantities in 'Sally,' due, largely, to the vivacious personality of Colleen Moore. By her performance in 'Sally' Miss Moore adds more glory to her rapidly ascending star in the movie firmament. The cast is well chosen. Leon Errol creates a series of laughs from the moment he walks into the restaurant."

"The Triflers," Schulberg, California, Los Angeles

Times: "The picture is interesting, amusing and fulfills its function as a satire on the men and women of today. Mae Busch is quite charming in the leading role."

Record: "Very satisfying entertainment. Mae Busch does some excellent acting in her part. She is given fine opportunities and makes the most of all of them. Elliot Dexter gives a wonderful characterization in the role of the blind lover."

Express: "Smart house parties are introduced in profusion. Mae Busch's sartorial splendor makes a distinct appeal."

Examiner: "Miss Busch has a part that permits of fine emotional acting and takes full advantage of every opportunity. It is a virile love story lifted out of the ordinary vein with an unique opening."

Ken G. Hall, Australian publicity for First National, now visiting in New York.

"Soul-Fire"—First National, Strand, N. Y.

Telegram & Mail: "A fine motion picture. Barthelmess does some superb acting. His work in this picture is as good as that in 'Tol'ble David'—in some respects it is better, for it has more variety."

Telegraph: "The crowds at the Strand show that this is going to be one of Mr. Barthelmess' most popular pictures. John Robertson has done a masterful piece of work in directing this picture. Bessie Love is a beguiling heroine and Carlotta Monterey a magnetic adventuress. 'Soul-Fire' is a picture which ought to draw crowds to the box office. It has sincerity, good taste and originality."

Mirror: "Richard Barthelmess has again given the screen a characterization worthy of him who made 'Tol'ble David.' But he shares honors with Bessie Love in a role gay, infectious, emotional. A fine picture. Put 'Soul-Fire' on your list."

Daily News: "Ranks with the better pictures. Ably directed and photographed. You must see this picture. Carlotta Monterey is well cast, Helen Ware gives a marvelous interpretation and Bessie Love is too winsome for words."

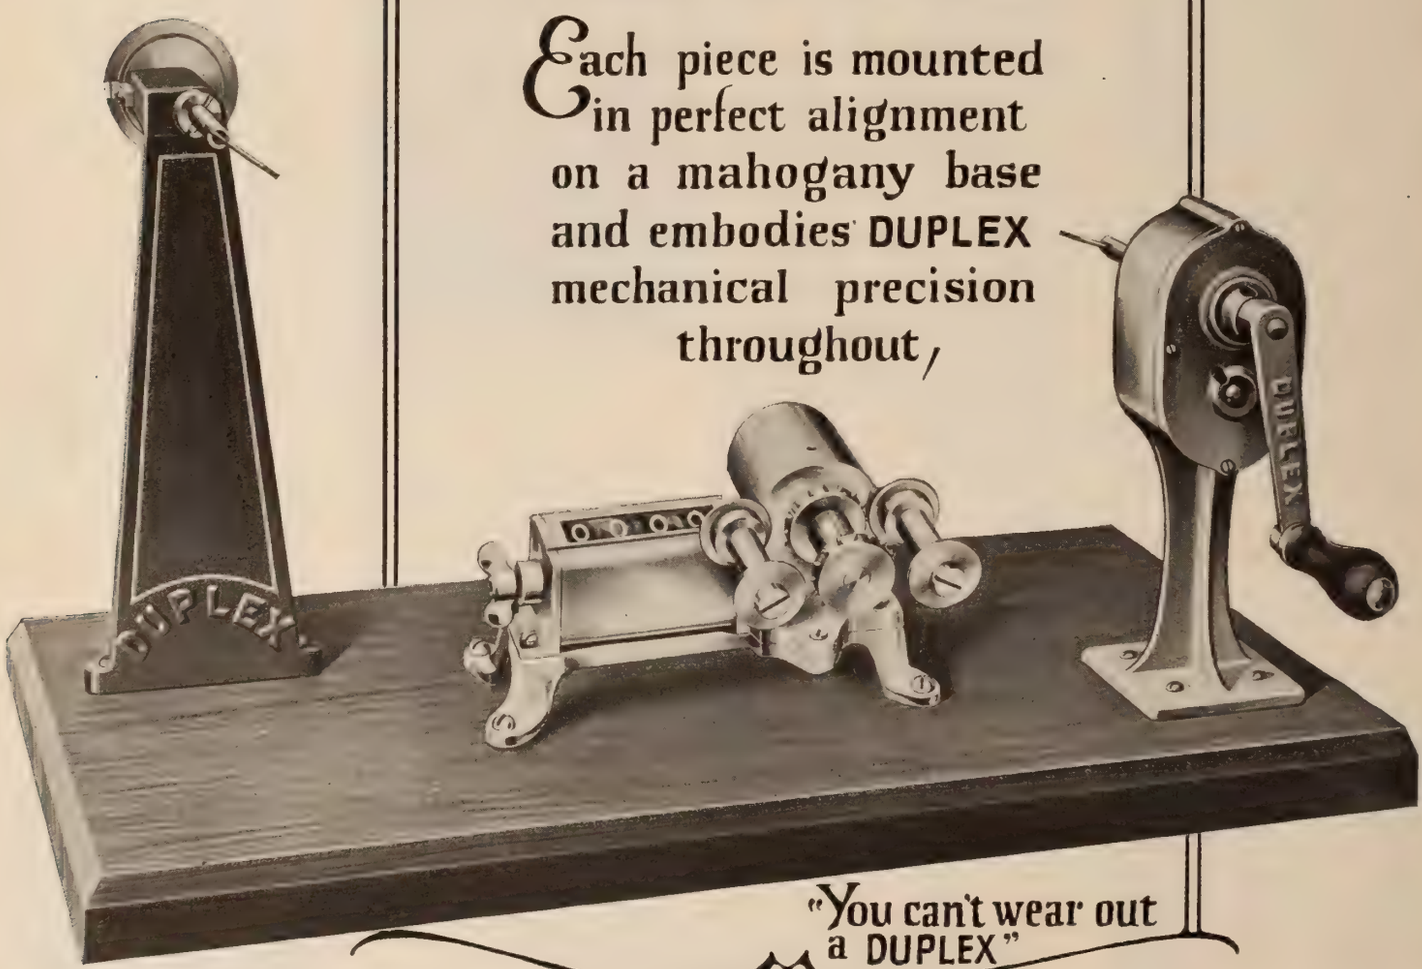
American: "'Soul-Fire' is an infinitely better motion picture than it ever was as a spoken play. Mr. Barthelmess is better in this than he has been in some lighter, less consequential pictures. Bessie Love all but steals the picture. Her Teita registers with a vengeance. Her big dramatic scene may best be described as a knockout."

Evening Post: "Effectively presented. Richard Barthelmess does some excellent work and we are inclined to think it is one of his best efforts."

Sun: "A generally effective photoplay. Has enough love interest to make it popular."

"Balto's Race To Nome"—Educational, Loew's State, Los Angeles

Examiner: "I do not know when I have seen anything more fascinating than the film that depicts the terror haunted, hardship-fraught journey across the trackless wastes. To miss this portion of the program will be to overlook a thrill that is more unusual than any ordinarily provided by entertainment, because of its vivid and powerful reality."



B. Berger, general manager Gerson Pictures Corp.

MOTIOGRAPH DeLuxe TRADE MARK

1. Success in putting over your big features depends entirely on your booth equipment.

2. The Motiograph DeLuxe—The Projector Predominant—is equipped with all the latest features necessary to enable your operator to project his picture on the screen in a way to prompt your audience to say "Isn't that a wonderful picture!".

3. Direct Motor Drive gives constant speed, and eliminates loss of time from slippage of belts and stops from breakage of belts.

4. Run your big features on Motiograph DeLuxe Projectors and satisfy your patrons.

Gentlemen:-

The two Motiograph DeLuxe that you recently shipped have been installed and are now in operation. I want to say that I have a brighter picture and better definition than I have ever had before.

Judging from the way the projectors are built and the way they operate, I believe that you have the best projector on the market. There is one point in particular and that is the beltless motor drive. The speed of the machine never varies from the speed that it is set. I am quite sure that the trouble of dark screens due to motor belt breakages is a thing of the past.

I will be pleased to speak personally to any one you may refer to me who might be interested in buying projectors.

Yours very truly,

Dear Mr. Rothacker:

At this time when OUR COMPANY HAS RENEWED OUR PRINT CONTRACT WITH YOU FOR THREE YEARS it seems only proper that I should give expression of my appreciation for the SPLENDID SERVICE that your company and you yourself have given us.

GOOD PRINTS form a material part of GOOD FILM SERVICE and I feel that you yourself and your entire organization have satisfactorily solved this important matter for us.

I wish you continued success.

Yours very truly,

VOL. XXXI NEW YORK, MAY 23, 1925 NO. 21

The Trade Paper

ALONG with the racking problem of production and the equally disturbing problem of distribution, there's another major industrial operation which today is getting more and more the attention it deserves —and that's advertising.

Advertising to the trade and to the public.

Some of the big concerns this year are greatly expanding their advertising campaigns. These campaigns will be heavy factors in the strenuous competition which will prevail this season.

Last week MOTION PICTURE NEWS carried the largest piece of advertising in all its history; and that announcement, like those elaborate ones that preceded and will follow it, will, we confidently predict, have a heavy effect upon the exhibitors' booking plans.

In this connection I want to say a few words about trade papers—a subject which is not always clearly understood.

Given a good trade paper—independent, comprehensive, serviceable, run by men who are in that business alone and understand it—that paper is an economy to its industry.

The producer and distributor must communicate just so much with the exhibitor. They must constantly announce product and give full service on that product—via the printed word.

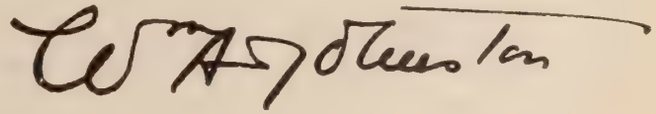
If trade papers did not exist, each concern would probably maintain a house organ of its own; at least, each would have to send a lot of printed matter right along to the customer by direct mail—all this at a total expense ever so much greater than the advertising expense of trade papers adequate in number to serve their field.



For instance, a page advertisement in MOTION PICTURE NEWS costs the advertiser only about one cent per theatre. Obviously this cannot be done so economically by mail—which is the only other way it can be done. Again, every mail list is chuckful of waste, and constantly so because of the fast fluctuating situation in the theatre field.

So the trade paper—the right kind of trade paper—is never a charge upon its industry, nor any branch of it; on the contrary, it is, beyond any argument, a service and an economy. The more it is used by the advertiser, the greater its economy.

As to the suspicion that advertising dictates a paper's editorial policy, that idea, if held at all, belongs to the dark ages. It is too baseless to admit of discussion. I am speaking, of course, of the right kind of business paper, which simply means one run in the right kind of business way; and no paper not of that character exists very long. No reputable industry—and no reputable concern in it, would expect to dictate a paper's policy through advertising; advertising is not a bribe, it is a service to a customer. And no reputable paper would expect such an attempt, or accede to it if it were made. Furthermore, any such practice would be so obvious to the reader that it would kill itself, let alone the paper foolish enough to indulge in it.

A trade paper, we repeat, aside from its vast opportunity to construct, to represent creditably, to keep a balance in the interests of trade fairness, progress and prosperity, is from its advertising standpoint simply and only a service and an economy.

AN EDITOR

The Convention in Review

I HAVE attended exhibitors' conventions since 1913, some dozen in all, and in every instance, except Cleveland, I went forth hopefully and returned despondently. Milwaukee is the big exception, so big in fact that I believe at last that there will be a large national body of exhibitors, one of such undoubted strength that an exhibitor cannot afford not to belong.

And if this can be brought about, it will put a solid underpinning in the industry that will prove the best possible thing for all factors alike.

From the time our train left New York, I have tried seriously to do a lot of listening so that I might tell the absent exhibitor just what the convention was about, and I have heard a hundred different appraisals and suggestions, many of them flatly contradictory.

There is a trust—there is no trust; exhibitors are prosperous—exhibitors are just holding on by their fingers to a dark and hopeless future; and independent to this and that and the other thing, and so forth.

But it all seems to simmer down to this. There are a lot of independent exhibitors left in the country. By "independent" I mean those outside of the producer-owned or affiliated circuits. Their investment is a big one, altogether. In most instances the local banks are in with them. All in all, it's a pretty serious business situation. Now, what these men want to know and what their bankers want to know is whether or not they are going to get pictures which they can successfully retail to the public. Of course, I am assuming that all these exhibitors are able and energetic men. For those who are lame or lazy ducks, nothing can be done by an organization or by any other support. When an exhibitor is running a house that doesn't meet the needs of his community that's his lookout.

But these other men have all the right that any good retailer of any line of goods has and that is fair treatment by the manufacturer, the right to buy goods in an open market. They have, I say, the right and if it is withheld from them, their local banks and newspapers are going to raise a howl from coast to coast that will quickly enough call for a showdown. But this should not be necessary. The industry is big enough and sane enough to settle it's own family rows and cure its own growing pains, and undoubtedly it will.

What is the solution? Is there any one solution? A lot of plans whereby product may be had are being offered. But the exhibitor is somewhat chary of co-operative schemes. Not that he should be if the scheme is sound. Let him consider First National. The exhibitors who formed and upheld this concern have dug down into their pockets to the tune of millions of dollars; and still they need more capital. It takes a lot of money to operate these days. And an exhibitor who is really worried over the permanency of a supply of pictures ought not hesitate to invest money to ensure a supply. Could another First National be formed today? Yes; I believe so. If the exhibitor himself is backward about the money needed probably his banker might be taught to see the matter in a broader light.

But you reply, there are plenty of pictures today. That's just what a lot of producers are yelling about. They say they have pictures and no theatre outlets. So why encourage the making of more pictures?

This is not the point at all. There are plenty of pictures today, too many, a number of distributors are having the devil's own time squeezing their twenty to sixty a year into the few play dates left them by the high-powered big fellows. But no one will argue that there are enough good pictures. Far from it. And it's a serious matter. The house that takes in six thousand one week and three thousand the next, is exactly the same house, orchestra, comfort, management and overhead. But the picture is different—different by a matter of three thousand dollars. That's how important the picture is. And the exhibitor has got to realize that the making of better pictures is his concern as well as the producers and that he must encourage better product if necessary by investing. It is not just permanency of product he wants. It is permanency of good product.

The show is what counts in this business. The vital thing therefore is pictures. And it's time that we concentrated more on production. It is the weakest point in the industry today. We have too many pictures and too few artists. Too much sausage and too little tenderloins; too many schemes to foist pictures upon the public and too little merit in the pictures themselves. But to return to the convention issue. There are, as we say, several ways to break the lockout of product to the exhibitor and the lockout of outlet to the producer—commercial ways and maybe legal ways. But at this writing it looks like the convention would adopt what seems to be the best plan of all and that is the use of local arbitration wherever it is needed.

These boards will operate as to the allocation of pictures, if unfair tactics prevail. There is a lot of division of opinion on this proposition but it is thought well of by a lot of good men.

Our own belief is that the joint problem of independent exhibitors and independent producers today is a buying and selling one. This continued talk about trusts is a boomerang upon the independent companies. The exhibitor sees the strength of the so-called trust concerns and so powerfully advertised that he decides he had better side in with strength. There are plenty of pictures on the other side of the fence but they don't get the advertising. They are not made so impressive. So it's a matter of better selling, and therefore more understanding in the way of buying. Let the exhibitor buy well and the independent companies will sell well.

AT MILWAUKEE

By William A. Johnston

The convention highlights so far were: Carl Laemmle's earnest speech; Chadwick's oration; the polished address of Gavazzi King, chairman of the British delegation of exhibitors; the reunion of the exhibitors organization; Toastmaster Woodhull; Tom Saxe and his splendid Wisconsin theatre.

Perhaps I may add, with pardonable pride, the convention issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS which everyone grabbed eagerly, and kept and read. It was one of the biggest issues of a trade paper ever published —in any field. It had a great reception. The descent of the Universal caravan on Milwaukee tied traffic in knots and brought great crowds to the curbs to see the parade pass. Headed by Carl Laemmle the party, ninety strong, arrived in Milwaukee from Chicago just after noon Tuesday, having traveled by special train. Accompanying President Laemmle were a number of Universal officials including Vice President R. H. Cochrane, R. L. Shrock, Manager of Universal City, Treasurer E. H. Goldstein, Paul Gulick, head of the publicity department, Personal Representative Harry Zehner and others. To gladden the hearts of the crowds of movie fans some of the Universal stars also were included in the party; they were Miss Virginia Valli, Miss Louise Dresser, Jack Daugherty and two of the Universal ranch riders. Joe Murphy in his Andy Gump makeup also delighted the crowds.

A parade was formed at the station and headed by two bands and with the sales managers and salesmen marching as infantry the march to the hotel was begun. Later the marchers invaded the convention hall and gave the delegates a brief serenade. All Milwaukee knew it when the Los Angeles delegation arrived and all delegates to the convention knew that Los Angeles wants the convention of the M. P. T. O. of A. A fleet of gaily decorated automobiles met the Californians at the station and headed by a band paraded the principal streets to the Wisconsin hotel. Perched on the hood of each car was an attractively costumed girl, a real Hollywood touch, and every car carried banners bearing the legend, M. P. T. O. of A. 1926 convention, Los Angeles. Glenn Harper was leading the party which included about twenty southern Californians.

President Woody of Associated Exhibitors was honor guest at a surprise dinner at the Medford hotel on Tuesday night, and was presented with a splendid diamond ring as a token of the good will and admiration felt for him by his entire staff of special representatives and exchange managers and to mark their good wishes on Mr. Woody's becoming president of Associated. The occasion was a delightful one and warm tributes were paid to Mr. Woody by the men who know him best. As it was impossible for all the special and branch managers joining in the gift to be present at the Milwaukee dinner the following represented the entire staff at the dinner and in making the presentation. Special Representatives Lewis and Oren Woody, Exchange Managers Harris, Chicago; Lipson, Des Moines; Howard, Minneapolis; Shourow, Milwaukee, and Meyers, New York. A number of other guests were on hand to pay Mr. Woody honor, including M. Morris Cohen and Producers' Representative Conklin, prominent exhibitors, representatives of the trade press and others.

Optimism over the accomplishments of the convention which went into eclipse on Thursday when it seemed hope of merging the Allied organizations with the M. P. T. O. A. was ended, became pronounced again on Friday morning when all difficulties were ironed out with the result that the two organizations became one. Credit for moderation, self control and a determination to sink personal feeling for the benefit of the whole is due the leaders of the organization.

As the convention adjourns smiles and hope permeate the atmosphere and all hands say it was worth while.

The Saxe theatres were visited by many of the delegates during odd hours and the shows put on by Director Eddie Weisberg were given high commendation by the brethren. Milwaukee is some distance from Broadway or State Street but not far away when it comes to showmanship. A saunter through the equipment exposition was interesting and educational —seventy-one exhibits—each one offering something in the way of better equipment or furnishing for the theatre. The booths, too, were tastefully decorated and all in all the show was a valuable adjunct to the convention.

In the Chicago delegation was Big Bill Sweeney, office manager of that organization and one of the pioneers in organization work. Bill started going to conventions when the first one was held and his reminiscenes always keep a crowd around him.

Pete Woodhull's agile mind was functioning at top speed and his witty quips and sallies kept the banqueters in high spirits—he was the right man for toastmaster of the convention banquet which was held on Wednesday night at Gimbel's Grill. Mike O'Toole was also a hit and the crowd relished flashes of wit greatly.

And while we are speaking of orators there is Ray Lewis of Canada who made a strong impression with her speech on the floor of the convention.

That was a great convention welcome that was given Tom Mix and his announcement that he would stage a grand barbecue at his ranch for the delegates if the 1926 convention met in Los Angeles was acclaimed.

A Progressive Step

THE other Sunday more than a hundred exhibitors and exchangemen attended a service in the Linwood Christian Church, Kansas City, and heard censorship condemned and Sunday picture performances highly commended by the pastor, the Rev. Burris A. Jenkins.

The sermon was especially for film men, although the church was filled with citizens from all walks of life. The industry's representatives met at the Apollo Theatre and attended the church in a body. For years, Mr. Jenkins has been a champion of the industry, and the film men in Kansas City took this means to show their appreciation. The sermon was broadcasted.

This is constructive work of a very high order and MOTION PICTURE NEWS is glad to give it special mention. Mr. Jenkins' vigorous remarks on censorship and Sunday shows follow in part:

"Censorship usually is sponsored by a group of narrow-minded persons who desire to do all the censoring themselves. I never have favored the censorship of films and never will. It has been said many times before, but I will say it again—the public is the censor.

"There seems to be a lot of opposition to Sunday motion picture shows of late. I am heartily in favor of Sunday shows. They not only are good entertainment, but they are necessary in our civic life. The trouble with the world today is that there is too much petty 'reforming'."

Wanted—A Superman

THE British film industry, in connection with the considerable anxiety concerning the present state of production in England, is doing a lot of talking about the advisability of securing the services of a "dictator," or, as the Kinematograph Weekly dubs it, "Superman," who, it is argued, will be able to deliver them from their troubles.

Just the sort of a man the British end of the industry desires, if at all, is set forth in the April 30th issue of Kine under the caption of "Superman Theories."

"On one hand," says Kine, rather sarcastically, it seems to us, "a more or less decorative Will Hays is sought, with the function of making the Trade 'respectable' and of securing for it the support of the better public by better methods of exploitation and so forth; on the other, a sort of St. George, in active service equipment, and most frankly set on the destruction of those very amiable people who make Will Hays their ideal."

Kine appears to be worried about who will pay the bills if the "superman" is discovered, as is evidenced by quoting from the same article:

"Now, if the exhibitor is to be asked to foot the bill for the superman's salary,—and ultimately he will almost certainly be called upon to do so—he is entitled to ask the advocates of the theory to let him know exactly the type of superman they really want and, until he gets a satisfactory answer, to leave the selection—and payment—of such a Trade figurehead to those who are calling for him.

"There is even a possibility that we may get not one, but two supermen, and that the major part of their energies may be devoted to opposing each other's efforts and in that possibility the exhibitor has a real, if somewhat apprehensive, interest.

"Altogether, the situation is so complicated that if the C. E. A. council can spare an hour to its discussion and can definitely state the exhibitor's attitude—just what type of trade leader he will support and what he will oppose—it will be doing a service to many members of the Trade outside its own rank."

Diagnosing the ills of British production, Kine continues:

"The chief needs of the British industry are, first, a general knowledge on the part of the public of the handicap under which it labours, and, secondly, the re-establishment of its prestige, as a result of any encouragement the Government may give it."

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

"TRYING IT ON THE BEAST TO ANOTHER

"TRYING it on the lion" is a new way of saying—"Trying it on the dog" as far as the First National exploiteers are concerned. They picked on Philadelphia—which is a lion town—not a dog town. They went down to the Zoo accompanied by a group of big game hunters, scientists, animal psychologists and zoologists to discover the reaction (if any) of the lion toward the Saurus twins, Dino and Allo, of "The Lost World."

That it proved a good publicity stunt is noticeable in the feature space given it in a hundred newspapers or more. That it proved an education for the scientists is testified to by the reactions of Sultan, the king of the Philly jungle. Would memories of the ancient fears existing back in the dim Messozoic (there's a five dollar word, for you) past be transmitted to our modern animal life? To find this out the exploiteers had shut out the light from the carnivora house; had mounted on rollers a special stand for the projection machine and had run a half mile of cable to tap the necessary electric current—all to make a theatre de luxe for Sultan. A screen was rolled before each of the cages in turn.

Half hidden in the darkness, but still close to the caged subjects, crouched the watchful scientists. They had learned the art of crouching in following the habits of the cat family. The exploiteers learned it from incessant typewriter exercise.

Well, Dino didn't interest Sultan. He was too soft, too pudgy—too intent on being a vegetarian. But Allo, the meat-eater, got him terribly excited. He stepped back two paces to the rear when Allo's frightful head came into his vision. Sultan was all set to go. He clearly registered that what Allo could get away with he could. What a broad back to leap upon and such a long neck! Why Dino was so much apple-sauce!

Sultan paced up and down his cage—eager, anxious and alert—as all lions, except the milk-fed Hollywood beasts, are eager, anxious and alert. His eyes never left the film. He gripped the arms of his chair in tense excitement. When Allo opened his gigantic jaws and displayed his massive molars, Sulty leaped to the front of the cage and stood on his hind legs and snarled. What a battle it would have been if the lion could have left his prison and Allo walked out of the screen!

Lois Moran, the 16-year-old girl whom Samuel Goldwyn discovered in Paris, where she was studying, and who will play "Laurel" in "Stella Dallas" (First Nat'l).

Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is tendered a royal reception on his visit to his old home town, Boston. Left to right: Vic Morris, Loew representative, Tom Spry, Mrs. Mayer, Mr. Mayer and the Misses Edith and Irene Mayer.

He snarled a "Fie!" or two "Fies" at the whir of the machine and the voices of the spectators. They did not exist for him. The screen held his undivided attention just as Jimmy Walker and Will Rogers hold our undivided attention at a fillum banquet.

And this is the verdict of the scientists.

"He appeared to know that a terrible and unfamiliar form menaced him. He was watchful, but unfrightened."

CAREER FOR KADA

KADA-ABD-EL-KADER, the little Arab protege of Rex Ingram, who was brought to America by the director and his wife last year after they finished work at Tunis, is to have a brief film career. He will be cast for the part of the hero of "Mare Nostrum" —playing the boy in the prologue of the Ibanez story. The little son of the desert created something of a sensation in New York where his native garb made him a center of attraction.

WHEN ANOTHER BOSTON TEA PARTY

WHEN they celebrate in the native home of the cod and the bean they do it on a large scale. If they board a British frigate they don't stop with tossing one box of tea overboard they toss all the boxes overboard. They turn out for their ball teams even when these teams are way down in the ruck. When you want real Boston enthusiasm you have to wait for the return of a native son.

Louis B. Mayer, who knows Boston Common as well as he does his own studio lots, was given a big reception by his New England friends when he stepped off at South Station. Of course a thing of this kind is not authentic unless the happy prodigal is presented with a floral horseshoe. Mr. Mayer got his and beamed with smiles as he stepped into a car which carried him to the Copley-Plaza.

It was a triumphal parade—and that was regular too. First came a police escort, then a brass band, then a fleet of autos. The next day they gave the producer a luncheon at which several hundred exhibitors, exchange men, city officials and members of the press attended. After various speakers had paid their eulogies Mr. Mayer had his say. He spoke of his Boston days and reviewed his company's product for the past year, and like a good business man, paid tribute to M-G-M's ambitious program for the new season.

WATCH YOUR LIPS

IF Priscilla Dean had her way she would see to it that every studio in America had the sign—"Watch Your Lips" pasted up in each dressing room—the reason being the skill of the deaf and dumb fans as lip readers. Most of the players these days indulge in dialogue that is written into the script. But it wasn't so many years ago that they said anything which came into their heads. The deaf and dumb fans called their bluff and they said what they were supposed to say.

Miss Dean believes that the sign would keep them on their mettle and prevent them from muttering—"Curse you, Cliff Heathcote—you have ruined my dress!"—or some similar blah remark. You can't fool these afflicted people.

The other day Priscilla addressed an audience of 1500 pupils of the Indiana School for the Deaf and Dumb while making a personal appearance at the Indianapolis Circle theatre. She said it was the most attentive audience she ever faced, the star being impressed by the manner in which the children, seemingly, anticipated many of the scenes before the conversational titles gave them the necessary explanation.

Which is another way of saying that the special showing of "The Crimson Runner" did not have its characters talking contrary to the dialogue in the captions.

Miss Dean has realized the importance of speaking definite lines when scenes are being filmed—and she, for one, will pay particular attention to this angle of picture making in her future productions.

LINIMENT FOR LEFTY

LEFTY FLYNN thought he was hearing football signals the other day—or perhaps he imagined himself back in the Yale Bowl with the trainer running out on the field with a bucket of water and the faithful liniment. He sprained his knee while executing a stunt that compelled him to ride a motor cycle. He was thrown for a ten yard loss and considerable pain. For a time it was feared he was injured internally, but the liniment did its work. So Lefty is as good as ever. Inasmuch as there was no crowd around at the time to give him three long Flynns and a "locomotive"—we'll pass them along to him.

MARY BRIAN, DELEGATE

MARY BRIAN, who bounded into the movies and into fame at the same time along with Betty Bronson in "Peter Pan," has been elected the delegate of the picture industry in the Thomas Jefferson Centennial contest being sponsored by the New York World. This contest is being conducted for the purpose of raising enough money to pay off the debt on the Monticello home of Thomas Jefferson, in Virginia, and to make the home a permanent memorial to the author of the Declaration of Independence.

Well, as George Cohan said: "So Long Mary, don't forget to come back home."

Gloria Swanson receives an ovation upon her arrival in Hollywood which extends from the station to the studio. She will make "The Coast of Folly" (Paramount) before returning east.

BUSINESS OF EXPLAINING

WE HAD no intention of starting something when we pleaded the case of Emil Jannings as deserving of the Valentino Medal for Screen Acting for his performance in "The Last Laugh." The prize was given John Barrymore for his work in the title role of "Beau Brummel." Paul Gulick, the astute publicity purveyor of Universal naturally upheld our plea since his company controls the Ufa picture.

But Joe Jackson, publicity director for Rudy (Joe can out-sheik the sheik himself on occasions) writes over his signature and asks—"May I not—as Woodrow Wilson used to say—point out that "The Last Laugh" was not generally released during 1924? In fact, I hardly think it was shown anywhere until 1925. It is therefore eligible for the next medal which will be presented for the present year. The vote of the critics will be taken next January for the expiring year."

Our plea is naturally thrown out of court—and the case dismissed. So we'll toss in our vote for Barrymore and help toward making it unanimous.

"GET 'EM YOUNG, TRAIN 'EM EARLY."

THERE used to be a very apt wisecrack for the guidance of the young men who would conquer the ladies. It was "Pick 'Em Young, and Treat 'Em Rough." Those busy Paramount officials have paraphrased it to read "Get Them Young, and Train Them Early." It applies to the new screen faces who will enroll in the Paramount School of Acting. The eligibility rules have something in common with those that govern crashing into the U. S. Army. The girls must be between the ages of 16 and 25, and the young men between 18 and 30.

To get the boys and girls interested the Paramount officials tease them with the ages of several of our leading luminaries when they busted into the films. Thus, Gloria Swanson was 16 when she stepped onto the set for the first time, while Mary Pickford, Lillian and Dorothy Gish were mere children when they answered D. W's call. Others who were less than 20 when they put on the make-up include Norma and Constance Talmadge, Lila Lee, Mary Miles Minter, Bebe Daniels and Pola Negri.

JUVENILE APPEAL

THEY are registering all kinds of joy in the home of the Herbert Lubins. The secretary of Associated Pictures Corporation is the glad father of an eight-pound boy born April 11th. Arthur H. Sawyer of the Sawyer-Lubin firm is godfather to the new arrival who was named Herbert Arthur Lubin, in honor of his dad and Mr. Sawyer, who states he is as proud of the youngster as though he were a Sawyer-Lubin production.

James R. Quirk, editor of Photoplay, and Mae Busch, Metro-Goldwyn player, broadcast from station WHN during her stay in New York City. It was Quirk's first radio talk.

THROWING A PARTY

IT has become the sporting thing for Charlie Burr and Johnny Hines to throw a party for their friends of the movie world whenever they have a picture on hand. Last Friday night they held forth at the Plaza, showing "The Crackerjack" in the grand ball-room and adjourning to a smaller and more intimate ball-room when the picture was over. Those who wanted to appear as the Well-Dressed Clubfellow sported their evening clothes. Those who wanted to appear as the Well-Dressed Young Man About Town sported their Klassy-Kut-Klothes.

Everybody had a good time. The dancing started right after the showing and continued until long after curfew. Everyone was acquainted—which gave it a pleasant, impromptu flavor. To add a symbolic touch the god, Good Fellowship, ruled. Charlie and Johnny beamed on the throng. The thronged returned the beams. There was plenty to eat—and the—and the— and the coffee was fine.

THE TENSION LIFTED

MICHAEL ARLEN, the Anglicized Armenian author of "These Charming People," and "The Green Hat," must have breathed a sigh of relief when he sailed on the Mauretania Wednesday. Cries of "Author! Author!"—talks with film executives, appearances at the speaker's table, night after night, the wear and tear of having his back slapped, his hand shaken from breakfast hour to bedtime, the effort of listening to such salutations as "Oh, are you Michael Arlen?"—" I simply adored your 'Green Hat' "—"Oh, Mr. Arlen, I'm so glad to meet you, you're my favorite author," etc., must have made him long to be banished to solitary confinement on a desert isle.

So he sailed away to return in the Fall—when he will hie himself to the Coast and get busy on the Negri scripts. He will hear "Author! Author!!" again when the the dramatization of "The Green Hat" is presented in New York.

THREE PARTIES IN ONE

THE Talmadge sisters got together recently and did away with their individual birthday parties by having a general three-cornered celebration. Since Constance first saw the light of day on an April 19, and Natalie on April 29, and Norma on May 2; they've been holding their birthday parties within the space of two weeks.

"This year we decided to do away with the confusion of three parties," said Norma and Constance and Natalie, "and concentrated all our efforts on one big blow-out."

Aside from a few intimate friends the party was more or less a family affair—which included Mrs. Margaret Talmadge, mother of the girls, Buster Keaton and the Keaton kids, Joe and Bob.

Priscilla Bonner, the charming young player who will be seen on Broadway shortly as one of the stars in "Drusilla With a Million" (F. B. O.).

A new addition to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer directorial staff, already embracing a brilliant group, is J. E. Williamson, one of the Williamson brothers.

A new Dan Cupid, of ebony hue, has been introduced at the Fox West Coast studios. Benny Stoloff is the director of the Alabammy Eros.

Helene Denizon, appearing over the Famous Players-Lasky circuit of theatres with the Gilda Grey company, and who attracted the notice of the Los Angeles writers

Florence Gilbert, who has won favor as the feminine lead in the Van Bibber series for Fox, and who will appear in another series during the coming season.

Mary Carr, the famous mother of the screen, and one of the stars in "Drusilla With a Million" (F. B. O.) which is to have its New York premiere shortly.

Eleventh Hour Harmony Brings Rousing Convention Close

Woodhull, President; Cohen, Chairman; Allied Unites

By Oscar Cooper

THE sun shines on the independent exhibitors. The clouds have cleared away, and Milwaukee signalizes a united front of the exhibitor body for the first time in many years.

This is one of the two outstanding developments of the most remarkable convention since Cleveland. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and the Allied state organizations, composed of Michigan, Illinois, Minnesota, Texas, Indiana, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, North and South Dakota and North Carolina, buried the hatchet on the final day of the convention, ironed out their differences and are ready to go forward on the program of independence.

The other great development was the cementing of an alliance with the independent producers and distributors, yet in a formative stage, but which the convention leaders declared would be quickly consummated at an early date.

The program of independence is to be put into operation through the trade and commerce bureau and the playdate bureau, toward the support of which Universal contributed $50,000 and the I. M. P. P. D. A. $150,000. Other contributions, it was announced, would bring the total up to $400,000.

Exhibitors union was seriously threatened on Thursday by the inability of the M. P. T. O. A. and Allied leaders to agree on the Allied representation of the board of directors. Allied asked ten places; they were offered two, and declined. Late Thursday night W. A. Steffes, H. M. Richey and H. A. Cole issued a statement to the effect that Allied would call a convention of its own on Friday and get ready to organize branches in every state in the union.

But the forces of conciliation went into action, and just when it appeared that Milwaukee would go down in history as a magnificent failure, common sense won, and the situation was saved.

Sydney S. Cohen of New York took the platform on the final day and stated that he had offered to withdraw from candidacy for the board of directors in the interest of harmony. This evoked a demonstration and it was quickly followed by the official announcement that a settlement had been reached with Allied. Twenty-five M. P. T. O. A. directors would be elected, of these five had pledged themselves to resign and their places would be given to Allied. Then the new board would increase its membership to thirty and these would go to the Allied forces.

A motion was unanimously passed to elect the first twenty five on the ballot. And the secretary cast 327 votes while the convention cheered.

The constitution was amended so that the increase in the board membership would be legal and regular.

The new board withdrew to name the officers, and in the interim the convention adopted resolutions demanding a new arbitration agreement with producers and distributors, a resolution of condolence on the death of Col. H. B. Varner, adopted with a rising vote, and a resolution proffering assistance to the department of justice in an investigation which that governmental agency is said to be making into the operation of the film boards of trade.

Arbitration, next to affiliation with independents, won the largest share of the convention's attention, following a report by Mr. Seider of New Jersey. Charles L. O'Reilly of New York, whose appearance in the convention was warmly greeted, gave the delegates some wholesome truths of how to get their rights under the uniform contract and the arbitration system, and urged cooperation with the American arbitration society.

The following were elected to the new board of directors: Glenn Harper, California; A. A. Elliott, New York; Sydney S. Cohen, New York; Harry Davis, Pittsburg; L. M. Sagal, Connecticut; John A. Schwalm, Ohio; A. Julian Brylawski, District of Columbia; Frank A. Keeney, Pennsylvania; Nathan Yamins, Massachusetts; Joseph M. Seider, New Jersey; Eli Whitney Collins, Arkansas; J. J. Harwood, Ohio; J. H. Whitehurst, Maryland; Fred C. Seegert, Wisconsin; E. M. Fay, Rhode Island; Fred Dolle, Kentucky; M. E. Comerford, Pennsylvania; L. B. Wilson, Kentucky; Jake Wells, Virginia; W. W. Watts, Illinois; and the following from the Allied state organizations, who now become members of the board of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America—A. A. Kaplan, Minnesota; J. Miller, Illinois; Charles N. Than, Illinois; J. C. Ritter, Michigan; W. A. Steffes, Minnesota; R. R. Biechele, Kansas; H. A. Cole, Texas; Glenn Cross, Michigan; G. C. Rice, Iowa and A. C. Zering, Indiana.

Then the announcement was made that R. F. Woodhull had been chosen president of the unified organization and Sydney S. Cohen chairman of the board of directors.

There was tremendous enthusiasm when the delegates learned that all disunion and bickering had been swept away. President-elect Woodhull was escorted to the rostrum by Mr. Steffes of Minnesota; Mr. Ritter of Michigan and Mr. Fay of Rhode Island. The appearance of Messrs. Steffes and Ritter on the platform was the symbol of the united front which the independent exhibitors of the country now present to the industry.

In a convention in which this great development was outstanding there were many remarkable features. For the first time definite action was taken to mobilize play dates in behalf of independent pictures through the creation of the play date bureau. This does not mean that the organization will buy or book films for its members but it asks them to sign pledge cards, stating how many play dates they will give independent pictures next season.

For the first time also producers and exhibitors form an alliance backed financially by the former. This in itself is a far-reaching development, though the producer contributions, it was stated, will go only toward the support of the trade and commerce and play date bureaus, and will not in any sense supersede the payment of dues to the organization. Louis M. Sagal of New Haven, Conn., was named to succeed himself as treasurer, but the four vice-presidencies remain unfilled because no slate had been made up. It is understood that the Allied group will be well taken care of in filling these and other places in the officialdom of the exhibitor body. Next year's convention goes to Los Angeles.

As this dispatch is filed, the convention is rapidly turning into a love feast and the prediction is being made on all sides that a new day has dawned for the independent exhibitor.

Convention Train Delayed

Owing to the fact that the special train with the New York delegation on board was two hours late, the first session of the convention did not get under way until about three o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Glenn Harper of California introduced an official welcome from the city of Milwaukee, after which Fred Seegert, head of the Wisconsin M. P. T. O. presented National President O'Toole, who immediately launched into the reading of his annual report, in which he reviewed the past year's record. Mr. O'Toole at the outset of his remarks, called attention to the "coalescing of all exhibitor forces" as typified by the presence of the leaders of the Allied State organizations, chief among them the Michigan, Texas, Kansas-Missouri, and Minnesota delegation

He also declared that the theatre owners chamber of commerce of New York City, headed by President Charles L. O'Reilly, had merged their cause with the others, and that the Independent Theatre Owners were now presenting a united front.

He paid a compliment to the work of the National Board of Directors and the National Officers, and touched upon the various phases of the work undertaken by National Headquarters during the year. He urged the publishing of an official bulletin, quoted a speech made by Will H. Hays in Philadelphia on the subject of non-theatrical showings in which Mr. Hays declared specifically that entertainment pictures belonged in the theatres, and only religious pictures in the churches and pedagogic films in the schools, reviewed the censorship and Sunday opening situation, and sketched the recent negotiations with the Hays organization on the uniform contract.

He also dealt at great length with the situation of the independent exhibitor and denounced what he termed attempts at monopoly by certain interests in the industry.

Mr. O'Toole also devoted considerable attention to public service work and the cultivation of good will.

R. F. Woodhull, of New Jersey, then presented the report of the board of directors. He directed attention to the removal of the seat tax, the creation of the administrative committee and the meetings with various independent producers and distributors, who he said had pledged their support to the program proposed for the convention.

Chairman Woodhull also pointed to the flourishing condition of the state organizations and declared that the service feature of the national organization should be enlarged. He got warm applause from the crowd at the conclusion of his speech.

Then Sydney Cohen made his way from the center of the hall to the platform, and got the first real ovation of the convention as he faced the delegates to offer the report of the administrative committee. He prefaced the reading of his written report with emphatic declarations that the time had come for the putting into effect of a real mutuality of interest between independent exhibitors and independent producers. Principles and not personalities, were the important things, he said, and urged the independent theatre owners to stand together.

"If we continue to support the producers who are attempting to destroy us," he declared, "we shall be destroyed and we deserve to be."

This evoked a demonstration from the crowd.

Mr. Cohen then read his report which was titled "The Struggle for Independence."

Mr. Cohen said in part:

"Monopolization has been and is being attempted in the Motion Picture Industry. In the past it has failed, and we must see that in the present it fails. If a partial or complete monopoly could be established by certain large producing-distributing and theatre-owning companies, a gradual standardization would result—it is resulting in some quarters, possibly in anticipation of this monopoly.

"We command respect for the front we present. Lets increase that respect and lets deserve it. Let us leave such a record of achievement and accomplishment behind us, that Milwaukee will forever stand emblazoned in the thoughts of all as the Waterloo of Oppression and Monopoly. We have serious business problems to discuss, let's discuss them in a serious way."

Questionnaire Valuable

Mr. Cohen referred to the questionnaire recently sent out to producers relative to the product available for the coming season as "a valuable little document" and also stated that from it he deduced that there is to be no shortage of pictures. He also expressed the opinion that the quality of the independent product would be higher in the future.

"Trade marks are not going to count for so much next season," he prophesied in the course of the address. "Individual box office attractions of merit will be our biggest hits."

The Bureau of Trade and Commerce of which considerable has been printed as one of the live topics of the convention, was referred to by Mr. Cohen as follows:

"We are establishing a bureau of trade and commerce—not merely as an euphonious name, but for business dealings—for the giving out of information to theatre owners regarding everything pertaining to pictures—and to afford to producers and distributors an opportunity for actual trade and commerce. An opportunity to have buyers and sellers meet face to face on a platform of fair play. We have received many definite pledges and assurances from the heads of independents (producers and distributors as well) in person that they would give not only moral but the all-essential financial support to this constructive move."

Mr. Cohen called the present a "golden opportunity" for the independent producer. "Because of this golden opportunity," he said, "I trust the independent distributor will not mistake it for the goose that lays the golden eggs and kill it, as did the foolish man in the fable. Nor must any theatre owner take any undue advantage of the situation. You have the pictures—we the theatres and the play dates. These three elements properly fused form a perfect Combination. A vast volume of play dates which are truly pay dates spells prosperity—Prosperity for the theatre owner because the independent producers will by this volume of business be enabled to maintain a high standard of product, and because of this volume of business the independent distributor will be enabled to rent worthwhile product at let-live prices—Prosperity for the independent producer and distributor, because never before in his history, has the opportunity for securing so huge a volume of business been his."

Mr. Cohen said he has also been advocating and recommending a bureau of fair play—a department of conciliation and adjustment, which should harmonize and amicably adjust film situations between theatre owners and all independent producers and distributors. As you have heard me say, "many times" he continued, as you all know from experience to be the case—'Dividends are not paid from quarrels.' Now since we are all of us in business for business and not sentimental reasons, it behooves us to weigh carefully all the ways and means towards this desired end."

Independence is Keynote

The evident key note of the convention, independence, was again referred to by the speaker as he continued. "Independence," he repeated, "is our big issue, and we must consider it in a big way, facing it squarely as all momentous issues should be faced. Independence for the theatre owner, that he may be free to run his theatre according to its individual needs, free from the bugbear of worry as from whence he is to secure his pictures, free from the fear of unfair competition. Independence for the producer and distributor through the assurance of an ample supply of the life fluid of the industry—Play dates.

"This happy consummation of our struggles can only be achieved by genuinely united effort, and I cannot too strongly urge this effort.

"Go home from this convention with the consciousness that you have used the brains and sense that God gave you in your own best interests. Go home in the conviction that what you have done here at this convention will keep you free men in your business life. Don't be too prone to criticise. Remember we are all just human and for every criticism you make be ready with a constructive remedy. That's the thing we want—a constructive plan of protecting what we have invested in this industry. Other things are but lesser issues because unless you can be assured that your theatre will stay yours, of what interest are the other problems. Be sensible, be sane.

"Again let me say with all the earnestness at my command—don't be stampeded, conserve your play dates, they are your most powerful ammunition. Don't buy mere trade marks, but product that in your judgment will make you money and please your public. Don't be flattered by the too ornamental press books sent you; for they are not what you sell to your public. Buy what you need at prices you can afford to pay—prices which will yield you a profit on your investment. Give the other fellow the same square deal you expect from him—and demand that he do as he promises. 'Live and let live' must be one of your mottoes; and since we are frankly in this business for gold let the Golden Rule be our rule—'Do unto others as you would they should do unto you.' Then, brother theatre owners, we can look back upon this gathering and feel that Milwaukee is spelled millenium."

The delegates gave Mr. Cohen a prolonged demonstration as he concluded.

President O'Toole then recognized Julian Brylawski of Washington, on behalf of the special committee of the board of directors which was working on the alliance with the independent producers.

Mr. Brylawski said that the committee wishes to report progress and that it was still deliberating on the plan.

"I can tell you this much," he continued, "that the plan will have teeth in it. I believe it will be a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night to lead us out of the wilderness of producer oppression."

He then urged the mobilization of play dates, which he characterized as soldiers which the independent exhibitors could make fight in their behalf instead of against them.

"It is not our intention to book or buy films for you," he informed the convention. "That is your God-given right. Neither is this a scheme for production or distribution on our part. But we urge you to keep your dates open, and be ready for the call."

The next speaker was Frank Keeney, theatre owner of Brooklyn who also has houses in Pennsylvania. He told the convention that sixty percent of the pictures played by his houses last year were from independent sources. This year, he said, he would use between eighty and ninety percent. Mr. Keeney advocated the appointment of a committee on play dates, and thought the big problem before the delegates would be solved if Independent Exhibitors would give to Independent Producers an increase of thirty-five percent in bookings over last year.

Up to this point the proceedings had not been characterized by any great display of fire works, but the situation changed when Harry Davis of Pittsburgh went to the rostrum and delivered a fiery speech, which turned out to be an attack on First National.

He declared that he was booking First National pictures at his Grand Opera house. The value per picture once was a thousand dollars for his theatre, he asserted, but it had risen to twenty-five hundred dollars or more. Some of these films, he continued, he could not use as first runs, and therefore he had to lay them on the shelf, and pay for them while he was also expending additional money for pictures to replace them.

He declared that some of the factors in First National, among them Sam Katz, were combining circuits or threatening to build theatres in competition with independent exhibitors, and charged them with a desire to absorb the whole industry.

"I tell you this means they are trying to put the other fellow out of business," he shouted. "That's all it can mean. You men will have to get together. Don't fear Mr. Katz. You are stronger than any of them if you will use your playdate Power." He strenuously advocated the proper financing of the organization and the employment of paid officers and counsel and the publishing of a magazine. Then he interjected:

"I'm not satisfied with First National. Are you satisfied with the pictures you are getting?

The delegates shouted, "No."

Mr. Davis urged that the independent exhibitors must put up an offensive fight. "The only way you can do it is with your play dates," he declared.

It was six o'clock when the convention recessed until one-thirty o'clock Wednesday afternoon, at which time, Mr. Brylawski announced, the big plan for alliance with the independent producers would be told to the delegates.

Leading Film Executives at Milwaukee

IN the corridors of the Wisconsin, Plankinton and other of the leading Milwaukee hotels, during convention week, were seen many of the leading figures in production and distribution of pictures.

Among those noted were E. A. Eschman, of First National; W. R. Sheehan, Clyde Eckhart, and James Grainger, of Fox Film Corporation; Ed. Smith, of F. B. O.; Harvey Day, of Kinograms; Fred Quimby, of Fox Short Subject Department; Jack Woody, Orin Woody and Floyd Lewis of Associated Exhibitors; Carl Laemmle, R. H. Cochrane, E. H. Goldstein of Universal; John Flinn, and Cecil Mayberry, of Producers Distributing Corporation; Herman Robbins, and S. C. Young, of National Screen Service; George Blair of Eastman, Hiram Abrams, United Artists, Samuel Warner, Lewis J. Selznick, J. D. Williams and others.

Night Conferences

tinuous series of conferences with all groups participating to perfect the plan of alliance with the independent producers. The Wednesday session was scheduled to start at 1:30 o'clock, but the leaders did not finish conferring until nearly an hour later.

In the interim, the California delegation, under the happy leadership of William J. Quinn, head of the Los Angeles unit, entertained the delegates as they slowly gathered in the convention hall. They were "Californiany boosting" for the 1926 convention for Los Angeles and drafted a band to help the propaganda along. Mr. Quinn appointed himself song-leader, with the result that the crowd was in great good humor when Mr. O'Toole pounded for order at 2:45 o'clock.

He immediately introduced the British delegation, and they got a great greeting. Rene Batigne and Guy de Vilmorin were then presented as the representatives of France, and pandemonium broke loose. The old war spirit burst forth, and over in the Indiana delagation, where Frank Rembusch and E. H. Bingham were sitting, somebody started singing "The Marseillaise." The crowd roared its approval and joined in while Batigne and De Vilmorin bowed repeatedly. When order was restored after some difficulty, a surprise was sprung when Solomon Levitan, State Treasurer of Wisconsin, was introduced. It devolved that he was interested in a theatre in Madison, said to be threatened by the aggression of a producer-distributor. Mr. Levitan prefaced his remarks by a series of witty sallies, and then launched into an attack on what he called the Motion Picture Trust. He assailed "theatre grabbing" by producers and block-booking, and in very forceful fashion urged the convention to use its power through play dates to curb the activities of a "small group of men."

There was a demonstration at the conclusion of his speech, only a little less pronounced than that which had greeted Batigne and De Vilmorin. The next speaker was W. Irving Glover, third assistant postmaster general, who brought the thanks of the Post-office Department to the organization for its help in recent slide campaigns.

"The Postmaster General has said that the theatre owners have done more than any other single agency for the postal service," he declared.

A. J. Brylawski of Washington took the floor to enlarge on his statement of the previous day with regard to the alliance with independent producers. He announced that a playdate bureau would be established as the result of meetings held by the M. P. T. O. A. board with nearly thirty independent producers in the last few days.

$100,000 Pledged

"Over $100,000 has been pledged in cash, and $300,000 more will follow," he said "for the preservation of the independent producer and exhibitor."

The plan, according to Mr. Brylawski, was to employ a high powered executive, appoint a representative in every zone, and hire field men to establish contact with independent exhibitors in the campaign to line them up for independent product.

"We are already hearing echoes," he continued. "Moves are being made now to stop our declaration of independence. There are lots of moves on foot now," he declared, "but we will win."

I. E. Chadwick, president of the I. M. P. P. D. A., came to the platform and spoke officially for his association. The growth of centralization was wrong, it was stifling to artistic endeavor, he told the delegates. Freedom of expression was vitally necessary and the independent exhibitors had it in their power to assure it, if they would.

There were three things to be done, Mr. Chadwick urged. First, organize one hundred percent; deputize confidence and power to exhibitor organization officials, and supervise by seeing to it that the leaders carried out the mandates of the exhibitor body.

The hundred independent exchanges which Mr. Chadwick said were now lined up with his association could then act as militant messengers to increase the membership of the M. P. T. O. A.

"All the independent producers ask," he declared, "is that the avenues of trade in this industry be kept open. We want a fair field and no favor and equal opportunity for every picture.

"Through the playdate bureau I urge you to double your independent playdates and to show that we are in earnest I announce that the playdate bureau will have not only our sympathy but our financial support."

He closed his speech with a plea to the exhibitor to harmonize all their internal differences, and as he left the rostrum a third demonstration was held.

A wire was read from H. E. Huffman, president of the Colorado and Intermountain M. P. T. O. A. advocating the passage of a resolution against non theatrical showings. It was referred to the committee on resolutions.

Sydney Cohen took the floor to explain to the convention the full significance of the speech made by State Treasurer Levitan. "He and his associate theatre owners in Madison have been threatened by a producer distributor exhibitor," said Mr. Cohen, "and he told them that if they ruined him he would ruin them by appealing to the Legislature. We don't want this sort of thing to happen, but I issue the warning. We don't want to go to Congress, the courts or the Federal Trade Commission. All we want is fair opportunity, but we must have it."

Richey Creates Stir

There was a stir in the convention when it was announced that H. M. Richey, general manager of the Michigan M. P. T. O., would deliver a message to the delegates. Michigan has not appeared in a M. P. O. A. national meeting since Chicago and the effect of Mr. Richey's dramatic entry was electric.

He held in his hand a small card which he called a new declaration of independence. Without further ado, he read it to the delegates and it proved to be the first concrete indication of what the convention leaders had in mind when they talked of the "plan."

The card read as follows:

"Realizing as I do that my playdates are the most valuable asset of my theatre, and that only by allocating a fair number of these to the recognized independent distributors can I be assured of my continued independence, and be assured of an ample supply of quality product, I hereby pledge for the season 1925-26 that I will reserve for them ——— play dates or ——— percentage of the playdates of my theatre or theatres."

Then followed space for the number of theatres; the number of playdates per year; percentages now given to independents; name of exhibitor, with theatre, city and date.

Mr. Richey announced that cards would be distributed through the convention and urged delegates to fill them out. There were at least five hundred theatre owners at the convention, from whom ten thousand playdates ought to come, he declared.

Sydney Cohen came to the front of the platform and conferred a moment with Mr. Richey, after which the latter said: "I just learned that I have six thousand playdates back of me now, and my God, men, how many have I in front of me? The Michigan general manager appealed to the crowd not to be afraid their theatre business would suffer if they gave playdates to independents. "It will take a little more showmanship," he said, "but it will be the same kind of showmanship you have already used when you made the stars for the companies who are now trying to put you out of business."

C. E. Williams, president of the Nebraska unit, demanded the floor while the convention buzzed with excitement at this latest development. He wanted to know who the independent producers were.

The question was answered by Mr. Brylawski in a statement which represented the official view of the M. P. T. O. A. board of directors and officers who said:

"An independent producer is a producer who does not buy, build or acquire theatres against his customers," he declared, and the excitement subsided.

Joseph Phillips of the Rialto theatre, Fort Worth, Texas, urged that the number of playing days should be construed as the definition of a playdate, but Mr. Brylawski said the official view was that a playdate meant the booking of a picture, whether for one day or a week.

"We expect to mobilize one hundred thousand playdates and offer them to the independent producers," he explained. "That will mean at least two hundred and fifty thousand playing days."

The stage had been carefully set for the next event of the session—the speech of Carl Laemmle, president of Universal. Mr. Laemmle started from the rear of the hall and his progress to the platform was greeted by a demonstration which increased in volume until it reached big proportions when Mr. Laemmle stepped on the stage, greeted the group of leaders and faced the delegates.

O'Toole wielded the gavel vigorously and gave way to Brylawski, who formally introduced Mr. Laemmle.

The Universal head thanked the convention for their reception and then put his manuscript down on the table, adjusted his glasses, and read slowly and seriously a series of sledge hammer sentences.

The salient points were these: "I'm an independent and I don't care who knows it. You've got to stand by me and I'll stand by you. One or two or three men cannot monopolize this business or force you to buy their product.

"I want my fair share and no more. The wise exhibitor believes in splitting his business.

"I don't want to build theatres and compete with my customers but I insist on my share in every worthwhile city even if I have to buy or build theatres.

Must Have Outlet

"I must have an outlet. The poorer the outlet, the poorer the pictures will be. Practically all the theatres we bought we were forced to buy. In the case of the Schine holdings, we bought a minority interest. The Schine people are managing the theatres exactly as before. We had to buy the Hostettler circuit or close our Omaha office.

"I am perfectly willing to sell every theatre we control, but we must have long time contracts with independent theatres to protect us.

"Imagine this industry without the independents, without Warner, Fox, Universal, Producers Distributing and the others. You might all make good managers, but you wouldn't be theatre owners very long."

Mr. Laemmle then attacked booking combines. "Forcing down rental prices is the same thing as forcing down quality," he said. "Present rental prices are nothing short of disastrous. If we have to continue next season at the same ruinous prices as we got this season, I'll be willing to quit.

"Universal this year did the greatest foreign business in its history. But we had to fight in our own country to keep our head above water.

"All I'm asking for next season is a profit of ten per cent and I have so instructed our salesmen at the convention in Chicago.

"The little exhibitors are the bulwark of this industry, and to show that we are for him, we are going to sell to the small theatre next season way below cost.

"We will sell him our entire output, except the super specials, at the price formerly paid for one single feature."

Mr. Laemmle evidently meant that the small exhibitor would be able to get a Jewel or other feature, a serial, or a comedy, etc., in one program for the price he now pays for a single feature.

This announcement started another buzz of suppressed excitement among the delegates, and it increased when Mr. Laemmle declared that the cost per reel under the new arrangement would be a dollar or less.

The Universal chief was cheered at the conclusion of his speech, but there was another sensation to come. After Virginia Valli, Louise Dresser, Jack Daugherty and Hoot Gibson, Universal players, had been introduced, E. H. Goldstein, treasurer, came forward and announced that Universal had subscribed fifty thousand dollars in cold cash "to promote the independent exhibitor." This started another demonstration.

Mr. Brylawski, as Mr. Laemmle nodded approval, stated the Universal policy on theatre acquisition as follows:

"We understand that you will build or acquire theatres only in closed territories." "That's correct," Mr. Laemmle said, and Mr. Brylawski added, "Mr. Laemmle's theatres will always be strongholds of independent pictures. He plays his own pictures in his theatres but he also plays pictures of other independents."

"Andy Gump" was then introduced to the convention.

Plea for Unity

Chairman Woodhull made an important announcement in the shape of an olive branch and plea for unity to the members of the Allied State organizations. He urged them to come back into the organization, and announced the following committee on harmony: Mr. Cohen of New York; Mr. Comerford of Pennsylvania; Mr. Brylawski of the District of Columbia; Mr. Schwalm of Ohio; Mr. Walsh of Connecticut.

This committee, Mr. Woodhull stated, was ready to meet and co-operate with any committee that the states outside the M. P. T. O. A. might appoint.

The following committee on resolutions was named: Mr. Fay of Rhode Island; Mr. Walsh of Connecticut; Mr. Seegart of Wisconsin; Mr. Horstmann of Massachusetts; Mr. Schwalm of Ohio; Mr. Collins of Arkansas.

But it was noon on Thursday before the convention again got under way. Nominations for the board of directors were called for and the following were nominated from the floor.

Dave Bershon, Los Angeles; Nathan Yamins, Fall River, Mass.; J. H. Silliman, Milwaukee; L. B. Wilson, Covington, Ky.; Sydney S. Cohen, New York; Jack Wells, Richmond, Va.; Harry Davis, Pittsburg; Fred C. Seegert, Milwaukee; Lee A. Ochs, New York; J. J. Harwood, Cleveland; Harry M. Crandall, Washington, D. C.; A. Julian Brylawski, Washington, D. C.; W. W. Watts, Springfield, Ills.; John A. Schwalm, Hamilton, Ohio; M. E. Commerford, Scranton, Pa.; Fred J. Dolls, Louisville, Ky.; Joseph Mogler, St. Louis; R. F. Woodhull, Dover, N. J.; M. J. O'Toole, Scranton, Pa.; Frank A. Keeney, Williams-

I.M.P.P.D.A. Make Progress at Milwaukee Convention

Pledge $200,000 Fund to Launch Joint Organization

THE I. M. P. P. D. A., at its convention held in Milwaukee at the same time as that of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, made marked progress in what its active members feel is a struggle for the continued existence of the Independent Producers of Pictures and of their distributors. First, through establishment of close and harmonious relations with the exhibitors of the United States and Canada, and the development of plans in conjunction with the latter for the formation of a "Bureau of Trade and Commerce," an organization for the promotion of play dates; second for pledging of $50,000 as first payment on a $200,000 fund which will be the I. M. P. P. D. A. contribution to the proposed joint organization; third the Independent Distributors and Producers also made an important change in their by-laws whereby state right exchanges may now become members of the organization and approximately thirty of these exchanges promptly became members, with the probability according to Executive Director Hoy, that the state right exchanges of the country will be 100 per cent members of the association within 30 days. John Lowell Russell was elected temporary chairman and delivered the keynote speech of the convention. He said in part—"the Independent Producers and Distributors of Motion Pictures, representing 91 per cent of all the Independents in the industry, have gathered in Milwaukee at the invitation of the exhibitors. They have responded to a call which has reached and moved to action all elements of this industry—a call for business freedom, a summons to resist monopoly, a protest in action against the forces which threaten the future of the motion picture as the amusement of the people and the greatest avenue of human expression. We agree thoroughly with the independent exhibitors that play dates are the solution of the problem of business freedom. Play dates in the hands of the exhibitor make it possible for him to choose his product to fit his industrial needs and give his patrons the benefits accruing from open competition.
